valley,

The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek,

His smiles,

The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger;

And thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it

So like to him that got it, if thou hast

The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colours

No yellow in 't, lest she suspect, as he does,

Her children not her husband's!

Leon. A gross hag!

And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,

That wilt not stay her tongue.

Ant. Hang all the husbands

That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself

Hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.

Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.

Leon. I'll ha' thee burnt.

Paul. I care not;
It is an heretic that makes the fire, ¹¹⁵
Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant;

But this most cruel usage of your queen,
Not able to produce more accusation
Than your own weak-hing'd fancy, something savours

Of tyranny and will ignoble make you, ¹²⁰
Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? She durst not call me

^{so,}
If she did know me one. Away with her!

Paul. I pray you, do not push me; I'll be gone. ¹²⁵

Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours. Jove send her

A better guiding spirit! What needs these hands?

You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.

So, so; farewell; we are gone. [Exit. ¹³⁰

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to
this.

My child? Away with't! Even thou, that hast

A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence
And see it instantly consum'd with fire;
Even thou and none but thou. Take it up straight. ¹³⁵

Within this hour bring me word 't is done,
And by good testimony, or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse

And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire; ¹⁴¹
For thou set'st on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, sir.
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

Lords. We can. My royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither. ¹⁴⁵

Leon. You're liars all.

1. Lord. Beseech your Highness, give us better credit.

We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech
So to esteem of us, and on our knees we beg,
As recompense of our dear services ¹⁵⁰
Past and to come, that you do change this purpose,

Which being so horrible, so bloody, must
Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel.

Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows.

Shall I live on to see this bastard kneel ¹⁵⁵

And call me father? Better burn it now

Than curse it then. But be it; let it live.

It shall not neither. You, sir, come you hither;

You that have been so tenderly officious

With Lady Margery, your midwife there, ¹⁶⁰

To save this bastard's life, — for 't is a bastard,

So sure as this beard's gray, — what will you adventure

To save this brat's life?

Ant. Anything, my lord,

That my ability may undergo

And nobleness impose; at least thus much: ¹⁶⁵

I'll pawn the little blood which I have left

To save the innocent. Anything possible.

Leon. It shall be possible. Swear by this sword

Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant. I will, my lord.

Leon. Mark and perform it; see'st thou?
for the fail ¹⁷⁰

Of any point in't shall not only be

Death to thyself but to thy lewd-tongu'd wife,

Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin
thee,

As thou art liege-man to us, that thou carry

This female bastard hence, and that thou bear it ¹⁷⁵

To some remote and desert place quite out

Of our dominions, and that there thou leave it,

Without more mercy, to its own protection

And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune

It came to us, I do in justice charge thee, ¹⁸⁰

On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture,

That thou commend it strangely to some place

Where chance may nurse or end it. Take it up.

Ant. I swear to do this, though a present
death

Had been more merciful. Come on, poor babe. ¹⁸⁵

Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens

To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say,

Casting their savageness aside, have done

Like offices of pity. Sir, be prosperous

In more than this deed does require! And blessing ¹⁹⁰

Against this cruelty fight on thy side,

Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!

[Exit [with the babe].

Leon. No, I'll not rear

Another's issue.

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. Please your Highness, posts
From those you sent to the oracle are come

An hour since. Cleomenes and Dion, ¹⁹⁵

Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed,

Hasting to the court.

[Z. Lord. So please you, sir, their speed
Hath been beyond accompt.

Leon. Twenty-three days

They have been absent; 't is good speed; foretells

The great Apollo suddenly will have ²⁰⁰

The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords;

Summon a session, that we may arraign

Our most disloyal lady, for, as she hath

Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have

A just and open trial. While she lives ²⁰⁵

My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me,

And think upon my bidding. [Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I. [A street in a Sicilian town.]Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

Cleo. The climate's delicate, the air most sweet,

Fertile the isle, the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits,
Methinks I so should term them, and the reverence

Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice!
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was i' the offering!

Cleo. But of all, the burst
And the ear-deaf'ning voice o' the oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense, 10
That I was nothing.

Dion. If the event o' the journey Prove as successful to the Queen, — O be 't
so! —

As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on 't.

Cleo. Great Apollo
Turn all to the best! These proclamations, 15
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it
Will clear or end the business. When the oracle,
Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up,
Shall the contents discover, something rare 20
Even then will rush to knowledge. Go; fresh horses!

And gracious be the issue! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Sicilia. A place of justice.]Enter LEONTES, LORDS, and OFFICERS.

Leon. This sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)

Even pushes 'gainst our heart, — the party tried
The daughter of a king, our wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly 5
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course
Even to the guilt or the purgation.
Produce the prisoner.

Off. It is his Highness' pleasure that the Queen

Appear in person here in court. Silence! 10

[Enter HERMIONE (as to her trial); PAULINA and LADIES attending.]

Leon. Read the indictment.

Off. [Reads.] "Hermione, Queen to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take [15] away the life of our sovereign lord the King, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night." 22

Her. Since what I am to say must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and

The testimony on my part no other 25
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me

To say "Not guilty." Mine integrity
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv'd. But thus: — If powers divine
Behold our human actions, as they do, 30
I doubt not then but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience. You, my lord, best know, (Whom least will seem to do so,) my past
life

Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true, 35
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devis'd
And play'd to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter, 40

The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life and honour 'fore Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it

As I weigh grief, which I would spare; for
honour,

'Tis a derivative from me to mine, 45
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurent I 50
Have strain'd to appear thus; if one jot beyond

The bound of honour, or in act or will
That way inclining, hard'ned be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry fie upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet 55
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did
Than to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough;
Though 't is a saying, sir, not due to me.

Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of Which comes to me in name of fault, I must
not 61

At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,
With whom I am accus'd, I do confess
I lov'd him as in honour he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become 65
A lady like me, with a love even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded;
Which not to have done I think had been in me

Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you and toward your friend, whose love had spoke, 70
Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely

That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes; though it be dish'd
For me to try how. All I know of it
Is that Camillo was an honest man; 75

And why he left your court, the gods themselves,

Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.

Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know

What you have underta'en to do in 's absence.

Her. Sir, 60

You speak a language that I understand not.

My life stands in the level of your dreams,

Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams;

You had a bastard by Polixenes,

And I but dream'd it. As you were past all shame, — 65

Those of your fact are so, — so past all truth,

Which to deny concerns more than avails;
for as

Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,

No father owning it, — which is, indeed,

More criminal in thee than it, — so thou 90

Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage

Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats.

The bug which you would fright me with I seek;

To me can life be no commodity.

The crown and comfort of my life, your favour, 95

I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,

But know not how it went. My second joy

And first-fruits of my body, from his presence

I am barr'd, like one infectious. My third comfort,

Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast, 100

The innocent milk in it most innocent mouth,

Hal'd out to murder; myself on every post

Proclaim'd a strumpet; with immodest hatred

The child-bed privilege deny'd, which longs

To women of all fashion; lastly, hurried 105

Here to this place, i' the open air, before

I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,

Tell me what blessings I have here alive,

That I should fear to die? Therefore proceed.

But yet hear this: mistake me not; no life, 110

I prize it not a straw, but for mine honour,

Which I would free, — if I shall be condemn'd

Upon surmises, all proofs sleeping else

But what your jealousies awake, I tell you

'T is rigour and not law. Your honours all, 115

I do refer me to the oracle:

Apollo be my judge!

[L. Lord. This your request

Is altogether just; therefore bring forth,

And in Apollo's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt certain Officers.]

Her. The Emperor of Russia was my father:

O that he were alive, and here beholding 121

His daughter's trial! that he did but see

The flatness of my misery, yet with eyes

Of pity, not revenge!

[Re-enter OFFICERS, with CLEOMENES and DION.]

Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice, 125

That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have

Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought

This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd

Of great Apollo's priest, and that since then

You have not dar'd to break the holy seal 130

Nor read the secrets in 't.

Cleo. Dion. All this we swear.

Leon. Break up the seals and read.

Off. [Reads.] "Hermione is chaste; Polixenes blameless; Camillo a true subject; Leontes a jealous tyrant; his innocent babe truly begotten; and the King shall live without an heir,

if that which is lost be not found." 137

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo!

Her. Praised!

Off. Hast thou read truth?

As it is here set down. Ay, my lord; even so 140

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle.

The sessions shall proceed; this is mere falsehood.

[Enter a SERVANT.]

Serv. My lord the King, the King!

Leon. What is the business?

Serv. O sir, I shall be hated to report it!

The Prince your son, with mere conceit and

fear 145

Of the Queen's speed, is gone.

Leon. How! gone?

Serv. Is dead.

Leon. Apollo's angry; and the heavens themselves

Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione swoons.]

How now there!

Paul. This news is mortal to the Queen.

Look down 149

And see what Death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence;

Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover.

I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion.

Beseech you, tenderly apply to her

Some remedies for life.

[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies, with Hermione.]

Apollo, pardon

My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle! 155

I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,

New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,

Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;

For, being transported by my jealousies

To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose 160

Camillo for the minister to poison

My friend Polixenes; which had been done,

But that the good mind of Camillo tardied

My swift command, though I with death and with

Reward did threaten and encourage him, 165

Not doing 't and being done. He, most humane

And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest

Unclasp'd my practice, quit his fortunes here,

Which you knew great, and to the hazard

Of all incertainties himself commended, 170

No richer than his honour. How he glisters

Through my [dark] rust! And how his piety

Does my deeds make the blacker!

[Re-enter PAULINA.]

Paul. Woe the while!
O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too!

[1.] Lord. What fit is this, good lady? 175

Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?

What wheels? racks? fires? What flaying?
boiling

In leads or oils? What old or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny 180

Together working with thy jealousies,
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine, O, think what they have done
And then run mad indeed, stark mad! for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it. 185
That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 't was nothing;

That did but show thee of a fool, inconstant
And damnable ingrateful: nor was 't much,
Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's
honour,

To have him kill a king; poor trespasses, 190
More monstrous standing by; whereof I reckon
The casting forth to crows thy baby-daughter
To be or none or little, though a devil

Would have shed water out of fire ere done 't:
Nor is 't directly laid to thee, the death 195
Of the young Prince, whose honourable thoughts, Thoughts high for one so tender, cleft the

heart

That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish'd his gracious dam; this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: but the last, — O lords, 200
When I have said, cry "Woe!" — the Queen, the Queen,

The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead, and vengeance for 't

Not dropp'd down yet.

[1.] Lord. The higher powers forbid!

Paul. I say she's dead; I'll swear 't. If word nor oath

Prevail not, go and see. If you can bring 205
Tincture or lustre in her lip, her eye,

Heat outwardly or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the gods. But, O thou tyrant!

Do not repent these things, for they are heavier Than all thy woes can stir; therefore betake 210
thee

To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,

Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods

To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on; 215
Thou canst not speak too much. I have de-serv'd

All tongues to talk their bitt'rest.

[1.] Lord. Say no more.
Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault

I' the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for 't.
All faults I make, when I shall come to know 220
them,

I do repent. Alas! I have show'd too much
The rashness of a woman; he is touch'd
To the noble heart. What's gone and what's past help

Should be past grief. Do not receive affliction
At my petition; I beseech you, rather 225

Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my

liege,
Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman.

The love I bore your queen — lo, fool again! —
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your chil- 230
dren;

I'll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too. Take your patience to you,
And I'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but well
When most the truth; which I receive much better

Than to be pitied of thee. Prithee, bring me 235

To the dead bodies of my queen and son.
One grave shall be for both; upon them shall

The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit

The chapel where they lie, and tears shed
there 240

Shall be my recreation. So long as nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long

I daily vow to use it. Come and lead me
To these sorrows. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Bohemia. A desert country near the sea.]

Enter ANTIGONUS, with the Babe, and a MAR-TINER.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath touch'd upon

The deserts of Bohemia?

Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly

And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,

The heavens with that we have in hand are angry 5

And frown upon 's.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done! Go, get aboard;

Look to thy bark. I'll not be long before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste, and go not 10
Too far i' the land; 't is like to be loud weather.

Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon 't.

Ant. Go thou away;

I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o' the business. [Exit.]

Ant. Come, poor babe,
I have heard, but not believ'd, the spirits o' 15
the dead

May walk again. If such thing be, thy mother
Appear'd to me last night, for ne'er was dream

So like a waking. To me comes a creature,

See, how he punishes himself to satisfy himself & the reader.

Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
 I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,²¹
 So fill'd and so becoming; in pure white robes,
 Like very sanctity, she did approach
 My cabin where I lay; thrice bow'd before me,
 And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes²⁵
 Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon
 Did this break from her: "Good Antigonus,
 Since fate, against thy better disposition,
 Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
 Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,³⁰
 Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
 There weep and leave it crying; and, for the babe

Is counted lost for ever, Perdita,
 I prithee, call 't. For this ungentle business,
 Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see³⁵
 Thy wife Paulina more." And so, with shrieks,
 She melted into air. Affrighted much,
 I did in time collect myself and thought
 This was so, and no slumber. Dreams are toys;
 Yet for this once, yea, superstitiously,⁴⁰
 I will be squar'd by this. I do believe Hermione hath suffer'd death, and that Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
 Of King Polixenes, it should here be laid,
 Either for life or death, upon the earth⁴⁵
 Of its right father. Blossom, speed thee well!
 There lie, and there thy character; there
 these,

Which may, if Fortune please, both breed thee, pretty

[Laying down the babe, with a paper and a bundle.]

And still rest thine. The storm begins, poor wretch,

That for thy mother's fault art thus expos'd⁵⁰
 To loss and what may follow! Weep I cannot,
 But my heart bleeds; and most accurs'd am I
 To be by oath enjoin'd to this. Farewell!
 The day frowns more and more; thou 'rt like to have

A lullaby too rough. I never saw⁵⁵
 The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour!
 Well may I get aboard! This is the chase;
 I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.]

[Enter a SHEPHERD.]

Shep. I would there were no age between⁶⁰ and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wrong-ing the ancients, stealing, fighting—[Horns.]
 Hark you now! Would any but these boild brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather? They have scar'd away two of⁶⁵ my best sheep, which I fear the wolf will sooner find than the master. If anywhere I have them,
 't is by the seaside, browsing of ivy. Good luck, an 't be thy will! what have we here? Mercy on 's, a barne; a very pretty barne! A boy⁷⁰ or a child, I wonder? A pretty one; a very pretty one: sure, some scape. Though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewo-man in the scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-⁷⁵ work; they were warmer that got this than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity: yet I'll tarry till my son come; he halloo'd but even now. Whoa, ho, ho!

Enter CLOWN.

Clo. Hilloa, loa!

Shep. What, art so near? If thou 'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ail'st thou, man?⁸⁰

Clo. I have seen two such sights, by sea and by land! But I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky; betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, boy, how is it?⁸⁵

Clo. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! But that 's not to the point. O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls! Sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon swallowed with yeast and froth, as you 'd thrust a cork into a hog'shead. And then for the land-ser-⁹⁰ vice, to see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone; how he cried to me for help and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman. But to make an end of the ship, to see how the sea flap-dragon'd it; but, first, how the poor souls¹⁰⁰ roared, and the sea mock'd them; and how the poor gentleman roared and the bear mock'd him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.¹⁰⁴

Shep. Name of mercy, when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now; I have not wink'd since I saw these sights. The men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half din'd on the gentleman. He 's at it now.¹⁰⁹

Shep. Would I had been by, to have help'd the old man!

Clo. I would you had been by the ship side, to have help'd her; there your charity would have lack'd footing.¹¹⁴

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! But look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou met'st with things dying, I with things newborn. Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a bearing-cloth for a squire's child! Look thee here; take up, take up, boy; open't. So, let's see. It was told me I should be rich by the faeries. This is some changeling; open't.
 What's within, boy?¹¹⁹

Clo. You're a made old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!¹²⁵

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 't will prove so. Up with't, keep it close. Home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still requires nothing but secrecy. Let my sheep go. Come, good boy, the next way home.¹³¹

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings. I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman and how much he hath eaten. They are never curst but when they are hungry. If there be any of him left, I'll bury it.¹³⁶

Shep. That's a good deed. If thou mayest discern by that which is left of him what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him i' the ground. ¹⁴¹

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on 't. ¹⁴² [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I.

Enter TIME, the Chorus.

Time. I, that please some, try all, both joy and terror

Of good and bad, that makes and unfolds error,
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime
To me or my swift passage, that I slide ⁵
O'er sixteen years and leave the growth untri'd
Of that wide gap, since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass
The same I am, ere ancient'st order was ¹⁰
Or what is now receiv'd. I witness to
The times that brought them in; so shall I do
To the freshest things now reigning, and make stale

The glistering of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing, ¹⁵
I turn my glass and give my scene such growing

As you had slept between. Leontes leaving,
The effects of his fond jealousies so grieving
That he shuts up himself, imagine me, ²⁰
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia; and remember well,
I mentioned a son o' the King's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wond'ring. What of her ensues ²⁵
I list not prophesy; but let Time's news
Be known when 'tis brought forth. A shepherd's daughter,

And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is the argument of Time. Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now; ³⁰
If never, yet that Time himself doth say
He wishes earnestly you never may. [Exit.]

SCENE II. [Bohemia. The palace of Polixenes.]

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILLO.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate. 'Tis a sickness denying thee anything; a death to grant this. ⁵

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my country; though I have for the most part been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me; to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so, which is another spur to my departure. ¹⁰

Pol. As thou lov'st me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services by leaving me now. The need I have of thee thine own goodness hath made. Better not to have had thee than thus to want thee. Thou, having made me ¹⁵ businesses which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered, (as too much I cannot,) to be more thankful to thee shall be my study, ²⁰ and my profit therein the heaping friendships. Of that fatal country, Sicilia, prithee speak no more; whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother; ²⁵ whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the Prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues. ³⁰

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the Prince. What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have missingly noted, he is of late much retired from court and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared. ³⁵

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far that I have eyes under my service which look upon his removedness; from whom I have this intelligence, that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd, a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate. ⁴⁰

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note. The report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage. ⁴⁵

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence; but, I fear, the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place; where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to ⁵⁰ get the cause of my son's resort thither. Prithee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command. ⁵⁵

Pol. My best Camillo! We must disguise ourselves. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A road near the Shepherd's cottage.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS [very ragged], singing.

"When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh! the doxy ever the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

"The white sheet bleaching on the hedge, ⁵
With heigh! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

"The lark, that tirra-lyra chants,
With heigh! [with heigh!] the thrush and the jay, ¹⁰
Are summer songs for me and my aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay."

I have serv'd Prince Florizel, and in my time wore three-pile; but now I am out of service.

"But shall I go mourn for that, my dear? 15
The pale moon shines by night;
And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.

"If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin budget, 20
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it."

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father nam'd me Autolycus, who being, as I am, litter'd under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of uncon sider'd 25 trifles. With die and drab I purchas'd this caparison, and my revenue is the silly cheat. Gallows and knock are too powerful on the highway; beating and hanging are terrors to me; for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. A prize! a prize! 33

Enter CLOWN.

Clo. Let me see: every 'leven wether tods; every tod yields pound and odd shilling; fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the wool to?

Aut. [Aside.] If the springe hold, the cock's mine. 37

Clo. I cannot do't without counters. Let me see: what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar, five pound of currants, rice, — what will this sister of 40 mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearers, three-man song-men all, and very good ones; but they are most of them 45 means and bases; but one puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron to colour the warden pies; mace; dates — none, that's out of my note; nutmegs, seven; a race or two of ginger, but that I may beg; four pounds of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun. 53

Aut. O that ever I was born!

[Groveling on the ground.]

Clo. I' the name of me —

Aut. O, help me, help me! Pluck but off these rags, and then, death, death! 56

Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O sir, the loathsomeness of them offend me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions. 61

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robb'd, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me. 66

Clo. What, by a horseman, or a footman?

Aut. A footman, sweet sir, a footman.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman by the garments he has left with thee. If this be a horseman's coat, it hath seen very hot service.

Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee. Come, lend me thy hand. 73

Aut. O, good sir, tenderly, O!

Clo. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O, good sir, softly, good sir! I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out. 77

Clo. How now! canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir; [picking his pocket] good sir, softly. You ha' done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee. 83

Aut. No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you, sir. I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going. I shall there have money, or anything I want. Offer me no money, I pray you; that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that robb'd you? 90

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with troll-my-dames. I knew him once a servant of the Prince. I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipp'd out of the court. 95

Clo. His vices, you would say; there's no virtue whipp'd out of the court. They cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide. 99

Aut. Vices, I would say, sir. I know this man well. He hath been since an ape-bearer; then, a process-server, a bailiff; then he compass'd a motion of the Prodigal Son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue. Some call him Autolycus. 107

Clo. Out upon him! prig, for my life, prig. He haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he. That's the rogue that put me into this apparel. 111

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia. If you had but look'd big and spit at him, he'd have ruin.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter. I am false of heart that way; and that he knew. I warrant him. 117

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I was; I can stand and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's. 121

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-fac'd sir; no, sweet sir.

Clo. Then fare thee well. I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing. [Exit.] 125

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir! — Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too. If I make not this cheat bring out another and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unroll'd and my name put in the book of virtue! 131

(Sings.) "Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,

And merrily hent the stile-a;

A merry heart goes all the day

Your sad tires in a mile-a." [Exit.] 135

SCENE IV. [Bohemia. The Shepherd's cottage.]Enter FLORIZEL and PERDITA.

Flo. These your unusual weeds to each part of you

Does give a life; no shepherdess, but Flora,
Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shearing

Is as a meeting of the petty gods,
And you the queen on 't.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord,
To chide at your extremes it not becomes me. O, pardon, that I name them! Your high self, The gracious mark o' the land, you have obscur'd

With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly maid,
Most goddess-like prank'd up. But that our feasts

In every mess have folly, and the feeders
Digest it with a custom, I should blush
To see you so attir'd; sworn, I think,
To show myself a glass.

Flo. I bless the time
When my good falcon made her flight across Thy father's ground.

Per. Now Jove afford you cause!
To me the difference forges dread; your great-

ness
Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I tremble

To think your father, by some accident,
Should pass this way as you did. O, the Fates!

How would he look, to see his work so noble Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrowed flaunts, behold
The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend
Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love, have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them. Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellow'd; the green Neptune

A ram, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste, since my desires
Run not before mine honour, nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O, but, sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the King.

One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak, that you must change
this purpose,

Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these fore'd thoughts, I prithee, darken
not

The mirth o' the feast. Or I'll be thine, my fair,

Or not my father's. For I cannot be Mine own, nor anything to any, if

I be not thine. To this I am most constant,
Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle!
Strangle such thoughts as these with anything That you behold the while. Your guests are coming.

Lift up your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptial which
We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious!

Flo. See, your guests approach.
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

[Enter SHEPHERD, CLOWN, MOPSA, DORCAS, and others, with POLIXENES and CAMILLO disguised.]

Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon

This day she was both pantler, butler, cook,
Both dame and servant; welcom'd all, serv'd
all;

Would sing her song and dance her turn; now
here,

At upper end o' the table, now i' the middle;
On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire
With labour; and the thing she took to quench
it,

She would to each one sip. You are retired,
As if you were a feasted one and not
The hostess of the meeting. Pray you, bid

These unknown friends to 's welcome, for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known.
Come, quench your blushes, and present yourself

That which you are, mistress o' the feast.
Come on,

And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. [To Pol.] Sir, welcome.
It is my father's will I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' the day. [To Cam.] You're welcome, sir.

Give me those flowers there, Dorcas. Reverend sirs,

For you there's rosemary and rue; these keep Seeming and savour all the winter long.
Grace and remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess, --
A fair one are you -- well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth Of trembling winter, the fairest flowers o' the season

Are our carnations and streak'd gillyflowers, Which some call Nature's bastards. Of that kind

Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them?

Per. For I have heard it said
There is an art which in their pinedness shares
With great creating Nature.

Pol. Say there be;

Yet Nature is made better by no mean
But Nature makes that mean; so, over that art

Which you say adds to Nature, is an art That Nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry

A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race. This is an art Which does mend Nature, change it rather, but
The art itself is Nature.

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in gillyflowers,
And do not call them bastards.

Per. I'll not put
The dibble in earth to set one slip of them; 100
No more than were I painted I would wish
This youth should say 't were well, and only therefore

Desire to breed by me. Here 's flowers for you;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun 105
And with him rises weeping. These are flowers
Of middle summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. You're very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,

And only live by gazing.

Per. Out, alas! 110
You'd be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through. Now, my fair'st friend,
I would I had some flowers o' the spring that might

Become your time of day; and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your virgin branches yet 115
Your maidenheads growing. O Proserpina,
For the flowers now, that frightened thou let'st
fall

From Dis's waggon! daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes 121

Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength—a malady
Most incident to maids; bold oxlips and 125
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one! O, these I lack,
To make you garlands of, and my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er!

Flo. What, like a corse?

Per. No, like a bank for love to lie and play
on; 130

Not like a corse; or if, not to be buried,
But quick and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers.

Methinks I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun pastorals. Sure this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do 135
Still betters what is done. When you speak,
sweet,

I'd have you do it ever; when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so, so give alms,
Pray so; and for the ord'ring your affairs,

To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish
you 140

A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move still, still so,
And own no other function. Each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present
deeds, 145

That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large. But that your youth,

And the true blood which peeps [so] fairly through 't,

Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles, 150
You woo'd me the false way.

Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear as I have purpose
To put you to 't. But come; our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita. So turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.

Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass that ever 155

Ran on the green-sward. Nothing she does or seems

But smacks of something greater than herself,
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something That makes her blood look out. Good sooth, she is 160

The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, strike up!

Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress; marry, garlic,

To mend her kissing with!

Mop. Now, in good time!

Clo. Not a word, a word; we stand upon our manners.

Come, strike up! 165

[Music.] Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is
this

Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles; and boasts himself

To have a worthy feeding; but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it. 170

He looks like sooth. He says he loves my daughter.

I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water as he'll stand and read,

As 't were, my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiss to choose 175

Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances fealty.

Shep. So she does anything, though I report
it,

That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that

Which he not dreams of. 180

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. O master, if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe ; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you 'll tell money. He utters them as he had eaten ballads and all men's ears grew to his tunes. 186

Clo. He could never come better ; he shall come in. I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed and sung lamentably. 190

Serv. He hath songs for man or woman, of all sizes ; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves. He has the prettiest love-songs for maids ; so without bawdry, which is strange ; with such delicate burdens of dildos and fadings, " jump her and thump her ; " and [195] where some stretch-mouth'd rascal would, as it were, mean mischief and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, " Whoop, do me no harm, good man ; " puts him off, slights him, with " Whoop, do me no harm, good man." 201

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow. Has he any unbraid- wares ? 204

Serv. He hath ribbons of all the colours i' the rainbow ; points more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross ; inkles, caddises, cambrics, lawns. Why, he sings 'em over as they were gods or goddesses ; you would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-hand and the work about the square on 't. 212

Clo. Prithee bring him in ; and let him ap- proach singing.

Per. Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in 's tunes. [Exit Servant.] 218

Clo. You have of these pedlars, that have more in them than you 'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

" Lawn as white as driven snow ; 220
Cypress black as e'er was crow ;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses ;
Masks for faces and for noses ;
Bugle bracelet, necklace amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber ; 225
Golden quoifs and stomachers
For my lads to give their dears ;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel ;
What maids lack from head to heel.
Come buy of me, come ; come buy, come buy ; 230
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.
Come buy."

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me ; but being en- thrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribbons and gloves. 236

Mop. I was promis'd them against the feast ; but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more than that, or there be liars. 240

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis'd you.

May be he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again. 245

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids ? Will they wear their plackets where they should bear their faces ? Is there not milking-time, when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole, to whistle off these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests ? 'Tis well they are whisp'ring. Clamour your tongues, and not a word more. 251

Mop. I have done. Come, you promis'd me a tawdry-lace and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way and lost all my money ? 255

Aut. And indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad ; therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here. 259

Aut. I hope so, sir ; for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here ? Ballads ?

Mop. Pray now, buy some. I love a ballad in print, o' life, for then we are sure they are true. 264

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, how a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden, and how she long'd to eat adders' heads and toads carbonado'd.

Mop. Is it true, think you ?

Aut. Very true, and but a month old. 270

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer !

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to 't, one Mistress Tale-porter, and five or six honest wives that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad ? 275

Mop. Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by, and let's first see moe ballads. We'll buy the other things anon. 278

Aut. Here's another ballad of a fish that ap- peared upon the coast on Wednesday the four- score of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids. It was thought she was a woman and was turned into a cold fish for she would not exchange flesh with one that lov'd her. The ballad is very pitiful and as true. 286

Dor. Is it true too, think you ?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it, and wit- nesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too. Another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one. 292

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing merry one and goes to the tune of " Two maids wooing a man." There's scarce a maid westward but she sings it. 'Tis in request, I can tell you. 297

Mop. We can both sing it. If thou 'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear. 'Tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on 't a month ago. 306

Aut. I can bear my part ; you must know 't is my occupation. Have at it with you.

SONG.

A. Get you hence, for I must go
Where it fits not you to know.

D. Whither? M. O, whither? D. Whither?
M. It becomes thy oath full well, 306
 Thou to me thy secrets tell.
D. Me too, let me go thither.
M. Or thou goest to the grange or mill.
D. If to either, thou dost ill. 310
A. Neither. D. What, neither? A. Neither.
D. Thou hast sworn my love to be.
M. Thou hast sworn it more to me.
 Then whither goest? Say, whither? 314

Clo. We'll have this song out anon by ourselves. My father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them. Come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I'll buy for you both. Pedlar, let's have the first choice. Follow me, girls, 320

[Exit with Dorcas and Mopsa.]

Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em.

"Will you buy any tape,
 Or lace for your cape,
 My dainty duck, my dear-a?
 Any silk, any thread, 325
 Any toys for your head,
 Of the new'st and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
 Come to the pedlar;
 Money's a meddler,
 That doth utter all men's ware-a." 330

[Exit.]

[Re-enter SERVANT.]

Serv. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all men of hair. They call themselves Saltiers; and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in't; but 335 they themselves are o' the mind, if it be not too rough for some that know little but bowling, it will please plentifully. 339

Shep. Away! we'll none on't. Here has been too much homely foolery already. I know, sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us. Pray, let's see these four threes of herds-men. 344

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danc'd before the King; and not the worst of the three but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.

Shep. Leave your prating. Since these good men are pleas'd, let them come in; but quickly now. 351

Serv. Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.]

Here a dance of twelve Satyrs.

Pol. O, father, you'll know more of that hereafter.

[To Cam.] Is it not too far gone? 'Tis time to part them.

He's simple and tells much. [To Flor.] How now, fair shepherd! 355

Your heart is full of something that does take

Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young

And handed love as you do, I was wont

To load my she with knacks. I would have ransack'd

The pedlar's silken treasury and have pour'd it 360

To her acceptance; you have let him go And nothing marted with him. If your lass Interpretation should abuse and call this Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited For a reply; at least if you make a care 365 Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old sir, I know

She prizes not such trifles as these are.

The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and lock'd

Up in my heart; which I have given already, But not deliver'd. O, hear me breathe my life 370

Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem, Hath sometime lov'd! I take thy hand, this hand,

As soft as dove's down and as white as it, Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow that's bolted 374

By the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this?

How prettily the young swain seems to wash The hand was fair before! I have put you out. But to your protestation; let me hear

What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more

Than he, and men, the earth, the heavens, and all: 381

That, were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,

Thereof most worthy, were I the fairest youth That ever made eye swerve, had force and knowledge

More than was ever man's, I would not prize them 385

Without her love; for her employ them all; Commend them and condemn them to her service

Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Cam. This shows a sound affection.

Shep. But, my daughter,

Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak 390

So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better. By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands, a bargain!

And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't:

I give my daughter to him, and will make 395 Her portion equal his.

Flo. O, that must be

I' the virtue of your daughter. One being dead, I shall have more than you can dream of yet.

Enough then for your wonder. But, come on, Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand; 400

And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, a while, beseech you.

Have you a father?

9 sons
67 father

Flo. I have; but what of him ?

Pol. Knows he of this ?

Flo. He neither does nor shall.

Pol. Methinks a father

Is at the nuptial of his son a guest 405

That best becomes the table. Pray you once more,

Is not your father grown incapable

Of reasonable affairs ? Is he not stupid

With age and alt'ring rheums ? Can he speak ?

hear ?

Know man from man ? dispute his own estate ? 410

Lies he not bed-rid ? and again does nothing

But what he did being childish ?

Flo. No, good sir ;

He has his health, and ampler strength indeed Than most have of his age.

Pol. By my white beard, You offer him, if this be so, a wrong 415

Something unfilial. Reason my son

Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason

The father, all whose joy is nothing else

But fair posterity, should hold some counsel

In such a business.

Flo. I yield all this ; 420

But for some other reasons, my grave sir,

Which 't is not fit you know, I not acquaint

My father of this business.

Pol. Let him know 't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Prithee, let him.

Flo. No, he must not.

Shep. Let him, my son. He shall not need to grieve 425

At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must not.

Mark our contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir,
 [Discovering himself.]

Whom son I dare not call. Thou art too base

To be acknowledg'd. Thou a sceptre's heir,

That thus affects a sheep-hook ! Thou old traitor, 430

I am sorry that by hanging thee I can

But shorten thy life one week. And thou, fresh piece

Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know

The royal fool thou cop'st with, —

Shep. O, my heart !

Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made 435

More homely than thy state. For thee, fond boy,

If I may ever know thou dost but sigh

That thou no more shalt see this knack, as never

I mean thou shalt, we'll bar thee from succession,

Not hold thee of our blood, no, not our kin, 440

Far than Deucalion off. Mark thou my words, Follow us to the court. Thou churl, for this time,

Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee From the dead blow of it. And you, enchantment, —

Worthy enough a herdsman, yea, him too, 445

That makes himself, but for our honour therein,

Unworthy thee, — if ever henceforth thou

These rural latches to his entrance open,

Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,

I will devise a death as cruel for thee

As thou art tender to 't. 450 [Exit.]

Per. Even here undone !

I was not much afeard ; for once or twice

I was about to speak, and tell him plainly

The self-same sun that shines upon his court

Hides not his visage from our cottage, but 455

Looks on alike. Will 't please you, sir, be gone ?

I told you what would come of this. Beseech you,

Of your own state take care. This dream of mine, —

Being now awake, I 'll queen it no inch farther, But milk my ewes and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, father ! 460

Speak ere thou diest.

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,

Nor dare to know that which I know. O sir !

You have undone a man of fourscore three,

That thought to fill his grave in quiet, yea,

To die upon the bed my father died, 465

To lie close by his honest bones ; but now

Some hangman must put on my shroud and lay me

Where no priest shovels in dust. O cursed wretch,

That knew'st this was the Prince, and wouldst adventure

To mingle faith with him ! Undone ! undone !

If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd 470

To die when I desire. [Exit.]

Flo. Why look you so upon me ?

I am but sorry, not afeard ; delay'd,

But nothing alt' red. What I was, I am ;

More straining on for plucking back, not following 475

My leash unwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my lord,

You know your father's temper. At this time

He will allow no speech, which I do guess

You do not purpose to him ; and as hardly

Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear. 480

Then, till the fury of his Highness settle,

Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.

I think, Camillo ?

Cam. Even he, my lord.

Per. How often have I told you 't would be thus !

How often said, my dignity would last 485

But till 't were known !

Flo. It cannot fail but by

The violation of my faith ; and then

Let Nature crush the sides o' the earth together

And mar the seeds within ! Lift up thy looks.

From my succession wipe me, father ; I 490

Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am, and by my fancy. If my reason

Will thereto be obedient, I have reason ;

If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,

Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, sir. 495

Flo. So call it, but it does fulfil my vow ;
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be thereat gleaned, for all the sun sees or
The close earth wombs or the profound seas hides 500

In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair belov'd ; therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's honour'd
friend,

When he shall miss me, — as, in faith, I mean
not

To see him any more, — cast your good counsels
Upon his passion ; let myself and Fortune 506
Tug for the time to come. This you may know
And so deliver : I am put to sea

With her who here I cannot hold on shore ;
And most opportune to our need I have 510
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O my lord !
I would your spirit were easier for advice, 515
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita !
[Drawing her aside.]
I'll hear you [to Cam.] by and by.

Cam. He's irremovable, Resolv'd for flight. Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn,
Save him from danger, do him love and honour, 520

Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo ;
I am so fraught with curious business that
I leave out ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I think 525
You have heard of my poor services, i' the love
That I have borne your father ?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd. It is my father's music
To speak your deeds, not little of I pray
To have them recompens'd as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the King 531
And through him what 's nearest to him, which is

Your gracious self, embrace but my direction.
If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration, on mine honour, 535
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving

As shall become your Highness ; where you may

Enjoy your mistress, from the whom, I see,
There's no disjunction to be made, but by —
As heavens forefend ! — your ruin ; marry
her, 540

And, with my best endeavours in your absence,

Your discontenting father strive to qualify
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done ?

That I may call thee something more than
man 545
And after that trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place whereto you'll go ?

Flo. Not any yet :
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies 550

Of every wind that blows.
Cam. Then list to me.
This follows : if you will not change your purpose

But undergo this flight, make for Sicilia,
And there present yourself and your fair princess,

For so I see she must be, 'fore Leontes. 555
She shall be habitéd as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks I see Leontes opening his free arms and weeping
His welcomes forth ; asks thee, the son, for-givenness,

As 'twere i' the father's person ; kisses the
hands 560

Of your fresh princess ; o'er and o'er divides
him

'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness ; the one

He chides to hell and bids the other grow
Faster than thought or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him ? 565

Cam. Sent by the King your father
To greet him and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you as from your father shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you
down ; 570

The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say ; that he shall not perceive
But that you have your father's bosom there
And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you.
There is some sap in this.

Cam. A cause more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves 575
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores, most certain

To miseries enough ; no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one to take another ;
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who 580
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'll be loath to be. Besides, you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of love,
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together

Affliction alters.
Per. One of these is true. 585

I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so ?
There shall not at your father's house these seven years

Be born another such-

Flo. My good Camillo,

She is as forward of her breeding as
She is i' the rear o' our birth. 590

Cam. I cannot say 't is pity
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir; for this
I'll blush you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita!
But O, the thorns we stand upon! Camillo, 595
Preserver of my father, now of me,
The medicine of our house, how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear in Sicilia.

Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this. I think you know my fortunes 600

Do all lie there. It shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed as if
The scene you play were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want, one word. [They talk aside.] 604

Re-enter AUTOLYCUS.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery; not a counterfeit stone, not a ribbon, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack 610 from fasting. They throng who should buy first, as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer; by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture, and what I saw, to my good use I rememb'ed.
My clown, who wants but something to be 615 a reasonable man, grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his pettitoes till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me that all their other senses stuck in ears. You might have 620 pinched a placket, it was senseless; 't was nothing to geld a codpiece of a purse; I would have fill'd keys off that hung in chains. No hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it. So that in this time of lethargy I pick'd and cut most of their 625 festival purses; and had not the old man come in with a whoo-bub against his daughter and the King's son and scar'd my choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army. [Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita come forward.]

Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there 631

So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from King Leontes?

Cam. Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you!
All that you speak shows fair.

Cam. Who have we here?
[Seeing Autolycus.]

We'll make an instrument of this, omit 636
Nothing may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now, why, hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow! why shak'st thou so? Fear not, man; here 's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir. 643

Cam. Why, be so still; here 's nobody will steal that from thee. Yet for the outside of thy poverty we must make an exchange; therefore dissolve thee instantly,—thou must think there 's a necessity in 't,—and change garments with this gentleman. Though the penny-worth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there 's some boot. 650

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir. [Aside.] I know ye well enough.

Cam. Nay, prithee, dispatch. The gentleman is half flay'd already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir? [Aside.] I smell the trick on 't. 656

Flo. Dispatch, I prithee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle. 660

[Florizel and Autolycus exchange garments.]

Fortunate mistress,—let my prophecy
Come home to ye!—you must retire yourself
Into some covert. Take your sweetheart's hat
And pluck it o'er your brows, muffle your face,
Dismantle you, and, as you can, disliken 665
The truth of your own seeming; that you
may—

For I do fear eyes over—to shipboard
Get undescri'd.

Per. I see the play so lies
That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy. 669

Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my father,
He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have no hat.
[Giving it to Perdita.]

Come, lady, come. Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir.
Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot!

Pray you, a word.

Cam. [Aside.] What I do next, shall be to tell the King 675

Of this escape and whither they are bound;
Wherein my hope is I shall so prevail
To force him after; in whose company
I shall re-view Sicilia, for whose sight
I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!
Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side. 681

Cam. The swifter speed the better.

[Exeunt Florizel, Perdita, and Camillo.]

Aut. I understand the business, I hear it.
To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse; a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the 686 other senses. I see this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! What a boot is here with this exchange! Sure the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do anything ex- 691 tempore. The Prince himself is about a piece of iniquity, stealing away from his father with his clog at his heels. If I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the King withal, I would not do 't. I hold it the more knavery [905] to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my profession.

Re-enter CLOWN and SHEPHERD.

Aside, aside; here is more matter for a hot brain. Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work. 701

Clo. See, see; what a man you are now! There is no other way but to tell the King she's a changeling and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clo. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to, then. 708

Clo. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the King; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punish'd by him. Show those things you found about her, those secret things, all but what she has with her. This being done, let the law go whistle, I warrant you. 715

Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his father nor to me, to go about to make me the King's brother-in-law. 720

Clo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the farthest off you could have been to him, and then your blood had been the dearer by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aside.] Very wisely, puppies! 725

Shep. Well, let us to the King. There is that in this fardel will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clo. Pray heartily he be at palace. 730

Aut. [Aside.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance. Let me pocket up my pedlar's excrement. [Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustics! whither are you bound? 735

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? What, with whom, the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and anything that is fitting to be known, discover? 741

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Aut. A lie; you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying. It becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they do not give us the lie. 748

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir? 753

Aut. Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? Hath not my gait in it the measure of the court? Receives not thy nose court-odour from me? Reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or touse from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier cap-a-pie, and one that will either push on or pluck [751] back thy business there; whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the King.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him? 756

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant. Say you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen. 770

Aut. How blessed are we that are not simple men!

Yet Nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I will not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely. 778

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical. A great man, I'll warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there? What's i' the fardel? Wherefore that box? 781

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel and box, which none must know but the King; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him. 785

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The King is not at the palace. He is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy and air himself; for, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know the King is full of grief. 791

Shep. So 'tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly. The curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir? 798

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy and vengeance bitter, but those that are germane to him, though remov'd fifty times, shall all come under the hangman; which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram- [803] tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say he shall be ston'd; but that death is too soft for him, say I. Draw our throne into a sheep-cote! All deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an't like you, sir? 810

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flay'd alive; then 'noited over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recover'd again with aqua-vitæ or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hot- [815] test day prognostication proclaims, shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose mis- [820]

eries are to be smil'd at, their offences being so capital? Tell me, for you seem to be honest plain men, what you have to the King. Being something gently consider'd, I'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and if it be in man besides the King to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority. Close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember "ston'd," and "flay'd alive."

Shep. An't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have. I'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety. Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir; but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flay'd out of it.

Aut. O, that's the case of the shepherd's son. Hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort! We must to the King and show our strange sights. He must know 'tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does when the business is performed, and remain, as he says, your pawn till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea-side; go on the right hand. I will but look upon the hedge and follow you.

Clo. We are blest in this man, as I may say, even blest.

Shep. Let's before as he bids us. He was provided to do us good.

[Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.]

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer me; she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion, gold and a means to do the Prince my master good; which who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him. If he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the King concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title and what shame else belongs to't. To him will I present them. There may be matter in it.

[Exit.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [A room in Leontes' palace.]

Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, and Servants.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd

A saint-like sorrow. No fault could you make,

Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down

More penitence than done trespass. At the last Do as the heavens have done, forget your evil;

With them forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember

Her and her virtues, I cannot forget

My blemishes in them, and so still think of

The wrong I did myself; which was so much

That heirless it hath made my kingdom, and

Destroy'd the sweet'st companion that e'er man

Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord.

If, one by one, you wedded all the world,

Or, from the all that are, took something good

To make a perfect woman, she you kill'd

Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd!

She I kill'd! I did so; but thou strik'st me

Sorely, to say I did. It is as bitter

Upon thy tongue as in my thought. Now, good,

now,

Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady.

You might have spoken a thousand things that would

Have done the time more benefit and grac'd

Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those

Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so,

You pity not the state, nor the remembrance

Of his most sovereign name; consider little

What dangers, by his Highness' fail of issue,

May drop upon his kingdom and devour

Uncertain lookers on. What were more holy

Than to rejoice the former queen is well?

What holier than, for royalty's repair,

For present comfort and for future good,

To bless the bed of majesty again

With a sweet fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy,

Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods

Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes;

For has not the divine Apollo said,

Is't not the tenour of his oracle,

That King Leontes shall not have an heir

Till his lost child be found? which that it shall,

Is all as monstrous to our human reason

As my Antigonus to break his grave

And come again to me; who, on my life,

Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel

My lord should to the heavens be contrary,

Oppose against their wills. [To Leontes.] Care not for issue;

The crown will find an heir. Great Alexander

Left his to the worthiest; so his successor

Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,

Who hast the memory of Hermione,

I know, in honour, O, that ever I

Had squar'd me to thy counsel! then, even

now,

I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips —

Paul. And left them
More rich for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak'st truth.
No more such wives; therefore, no wife. One worse,

And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corpse, and on this stage,
(Where we offenders now appear) soul-vex'd,
Begin, "And why to me —?"

Paul. Had she such power, 60
She had just cause.

Leon. She had; and would incense me
To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so.
Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you
mark

Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in 't
You chose her; then I'd shriek, that even your ears

Should rift to hear me; and the words that follow'd

Should be "Remember mine."

Leon. Stars, stars,
And all eyes else dead coals! Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry but by my free leave? 70

Leon. Never, Paulina; so be blest my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.

Cleo. You tempt him over-much.

Paul. Unless another, 74
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Affront his eye.

Cleo. Good madam, —

Paul. I have done.

Yet, if my lord will marry, — if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will, — give me the office
To choose you a queen. She shall not be so young

As was your former; but she shall be such As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy 80

To see her in your arms.

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry till thou bid'st us.

Paul. That Shall be when your first queen's again in breath;

Never till then.

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. One that gives out himself Prince Flo-rizel, 85

Son of Polixenes, with his princess, she
The fairest I have yet beheld, desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? He comes not Like to his father's greatness. His approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us 90
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need and accident. What train?

Serv. But few,
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess. say you, with him?

Serv. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth,
I think,

That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione,
As every present time doth boast itself 95
Above a better gone, so must thy grave Give way to what's seen now! Sir, you yourself

Have said and writ so, but your writing now 99
Is colder than that theme, "She had not been,
Nor was not to be equal'd;" — thus your verse Flow'd with her beauty once. 'Tis shrewdly ebb'd,

To say you have seen a better.

Serv. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot, — your pardon, —
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye, 105
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors else, make proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.

Paul. How? Not women!

Serv. Women will love her, that she is a woman 110

More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.

Leon. Go, Cleomenes;
Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends,
Bring them to our embracement. Still, 'tis strange 114

[Exeunt [Cleomenes and others].]

He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince,
Jewel of children, seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord. There was not full a month
Between their births.

Leon. Prithee, no more; cease. Thou
know'st

He dies to me again when talk'd of. Sure, 120
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that which may Unfurnish me of reason. They are come.

Re-enter CLEOMENES and others, with FLORIZEL and PERDITA.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your royal father off, 125
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother, 128
As I did him, and speak of something wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome!
And your fair princess, — goddess! — O, alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth Might thus have stood begetting wonder as
You, gracious couple, do; and then I lost — 135
All mine own folly — the society,
Amity too, of your brave father, whom,
Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look on him.

Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Give you all greetings that a king, at friend,
Can send his brother; and, but infirmity 144
Which waits upon worn times hath something seiz'd

His wish'd ability, he had himself

The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his 144
Measur'd to look upon you; whom he loves —
He bade me say so — more than all the sceptres
And those that bear them living.

Leon. O my brother,
Good gentleman! the wrongs I have done thee stir

Afresh within me, and these thy offices,
So rarely kind, are as interpreters 150
Of my behind-hand slackness. Welcome hither,
As is the spring to the earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage,
(At least ungentle,) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much less 155

The adventure of her person?

Flo. Good my lord,
She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble honour'd lord, is fear'd and lov'd?

Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter

His tears proclaim'd his, parting with her;
thence, 160

A prosperous south-wind friendly, we have cross'd,

To execute the charge my father gave me
For visiting your Highness. My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify 165
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival and my wife's in safety
Here where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air whilst you
Do climate here! You have a holy father, 170
A graceful gentleman, against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin;
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's blest,
As he from heaven merits it, with you 175
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd
on,

Such goodly things as you?

Enter a LORD.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great
sir, 180

Bohemia greets you from himself by me;
Desires you to attach his son, who has —
His dignity and duty both cast off —
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia? Speak.
Lord. Here in your city; I now came from
him. 185

I speak amazedly; and it becomes
My marvel and my message. To your court
Whiles he was hast'ning, in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple, meets he on the way 190
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whose honour and whose honesty till now 194
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay't so to his charge:
He's with the King your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?
Lord. Camillo, sir; I spake with him; who
now

Has these poor men in question. Never saw I Wretches so quake. They kneel, they kiss the earth,

Forswear themselves as often as they speak. 200
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.

Per. O my poor father!
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?
Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be. 205
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first;
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Leon. That "once," I see by your good father's speed, 210

Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking
Where you were tied in duty, and as sorry
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up.
Though Fortune, visible an enemy, 215

Should chase us with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves. Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now. With thought of such affections, 220

Step forth mine advocate. At your request
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mistress,

Which he counts but a trifle.

Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't. Not a month 225

'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such gazes

Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made. [To Florizel.] But your petition

Is yet unanswer'd. I will to your father.
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires, 230

I am friend to them and you; upon which errand

I now go toward him; therefore follow me
And mark what way I make. Come, good my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Before Leontes' palace.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS and a GENTLEMAN.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

1. Gent. I was by at the opening of the far-del, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it; whereupon, after a little amazement, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

1. Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the King and Camillo were very notes of admiration. They seem'd almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes. There was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they look'd as they had heard [15] of a world ransom'd, or one destroyed. A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say if the importance were joy or sorrow; but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another GENTLEMAN.

Here comes a gentleman that haply knows more. The news, Rogero?

2. Gent. Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfill'd; the King's daughter is found; such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter a third GENTLEMAN.

Here comes the Lady Paulina's steward: [25] he can deliver you more. How goes it now, sir? This news which is call'd true is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the King found his heir?

3. Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance. That which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of Queen Hermione's, her jewel about the neck of it, the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character, the majesty of the creature in resemblance of the mother, the affection of [35] nobleness which nature shows above her breeding, and many other evidences proclaim her with all certainty to be the King's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2. Gent. No.

3. Gent. Then have you lost a sight which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another, so and in such manner that it seem'd sorrow wept to take leave of them, for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, [50] holding up of hands, with countenances of such distraction that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a [55] loss, cries, "O, thy mother, thy mother!" then asks Bohemia forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with clipping her; now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by like a weather-bitten conduit of many kings' reigns. I [60] never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it and undoes description to do it.

2. Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3. Gent. Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear; this avouches the shepherd's son, who has not only his innocence, which seems much, to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings of his that Paulina knows.

1. Gent. What became of his bark and his followers?

3. Gent. Wreck'd the same instant of their [75] master's death and in the view of the shepherd; so that all the instruments which aided to expose the child were even then lost when it was found. But O, the noble combat that 'twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one [80] eye declin'd for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfill'd. She lifted the Princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart that she might no more be in danger of losing.

1. Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes; for by such was it acted.

3. Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angl'd for mine eyes, caught [90] the water though not the fish, was when, at the relation of the Queen's death, with the manner how she came to 't bravely confess'd and lamented by the King, how attentiveness wounded his daughter; till, from one sign of dolour to another, she did with an "Alas," I would [95] fain say, bleed tears, for I am sure my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed. If all the world could have seen 't, the woe had been universal.

1. Gent. Are they returned to the court?

3. Gent. No. The Princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina, — a piece many years in doing and now newly perform'd by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano, who, had he him- [105] self eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile Nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape. He so near to Hermione hath done Hermione that they say one would speak to her and stand in hope of answer. Thither with all greediness of affection are they gone, and there they intend to sup.

2. Gent. I thought she had some great matter there in hand; for she hath privately twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither and with our company piece the re-joining?

1. Gent. Who would be thence that has the benefit of access? Every wink of an eye some new grace will be born. Our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge. Let's along.

[Exeunt Gentlemen.]

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the Prince, told him I heard them talk of a far-del and I know not what; but he at that [125 time, overfond of the shepherd's daughter, so he then took her to be, who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscover'd. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have relish'd among my other discredits. 128

Enter SHEPHERD and CLOWN.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

Shep. Come, boy; I am past moe children, but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born. 138

Clo. You are well met, sir. You deni'd to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born. See you these clothes? Say you see them not and think me still no gentleman born. You were best say these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman
born. 145

Aut. I know you are now, sir, a gentleman
born.

Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shep. And so have I, boy. 149

Clo. So you have; but I was a gentleman born before my father. For the King's son took me by the hand, and call'd me brother; and then the two kings call'd my father brother; and then the Prince my brother and the Princess my sister call'd my father father;
and so we wept, and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed. 156

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else 't were hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are. 159

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the Prince my master.

Shep. Prithee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen. 165

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the Prince thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia. 170

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman?
Let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son? 175

Clo. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend; and I'll swear to the Prince thou art a tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt not be drunk;
but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt be drunk; but I'll swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands. 183

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow.
If I do not wonder how thou dar'st venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not.

Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the Queen's picture. Come, follow us; we'll be thy good masters. 189

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A chapel in Paulina's house.]

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PER-DITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, Lords, etc.

Leon. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort

That I have had of thee!

Paul. What, sovereign sir,
I did not well I meant well. All my services
You have paid home; but that you have vouchsaf'd,

With your crown'd brother and these your contracted 5

Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit,
It is a surplus of your grace, which never
My life may last to answer.

Leon. O Paulina,
We honour you with trouble. But we came
To see the statue of our queen. Your gallery 10
Have we pass'd through, not without much content

In many singularities; but we saw not
That which my daughter came to look upon,
The statue of her mother.

Paul. As she liv'd peerless,
So her dead likeness, I do well believe, 15
Excels whatever yet you look'd upon
Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart. But here it is. Prepare
To see the life as lively mock'd as ever Still sleep mock'd death. Behold, and say 't is well. 20

[Paulina draws a curtain, and discovers Hermione standing like a statue.]

I like your silence; it the more shows off Your wonder; but yet speak. First, you, my
liege;

Comes it not something near?

Leon. Her natural posture!
Chide me, dear stone, that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she 25
In thy not chiding, for she was as tender
As infancy and grace. But yet, Paulina,
Hermione was not so much wrinkled, nothing
So aged as this seems.

Pol. O, not by much.

Paul. So much the more our carver's excellence, 30

Which lets go by some sixteen years and makes her

As she liv'd now.

Leon. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O, thus she stood,
Even with such life of majesty, warm life, 35
As now it coldly stands, when first I woo'd
her!

I am asham'd; does not the stone rebuke me
For being more stone than it? O royal piece There's magic in thy majesty, which has
My evils conjur'd to remembrance, and 40

From thy admiring daughter took the spirits,
 Standing like stone with thee.

Per. And give me leave,
 And do not say 't is superstition, that
 I kneel and then implore her blessing. Lady,
 Dear queen, that ended when I but began, 45
 Give me that hand of yours to kiss.

Paul. O, patience!
 The statue is but newly fix'd, the colour's
 Not dry.

Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid
 on,

Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, 50
 So many summers dry. Scarce any joy
 Did ever so long live; no sorrow
 But kill'd itself much sooner.

Pol. Dear my brother,
 Let him that was the cause of this have power
 To take off so much grief from you as he 55
 Will piece up in himself.

Paul. Indeed, my lord,
 If I had thought the sight of my poor image
 Would thus have wrought you, — for the stone is mine —

I'd not have show'd it.

Leon. Do not draw the curtain.

Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't, lest your fancy 60

May think anon it moves.

Leon. Let be, let be.
 Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already —

What was he that did make it? See, my lord,
 Would you not deem it breath'd, and that those veins

Did verily bear blood?

Pol. Masterly done! 65
 The very life seems warm upon her lip.

Leon. The fixure of her eye has motion in't,
 As we are mock'd with art.

Paul. I'll draw the curtain.
 My lord's almost so far transported that He'll think anon it lives.

Leon. O sweet Paulina, 70
 Make me to think so twenty years together!
 No settled senses of the world can match
 The pleasure of that madness. Let 't alone.

Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you; but
 I could afflict you farther.

Leon. Do, Paulina; 75
 For this affliction has a taste as sweet
 As any cordial comfort. Still, methinks,
 There is an air comes from her. What fine chisel

Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock
 me,

For I will kiss her.

Paul. Good my lord, forbear. 80
 The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
 You'll mar it if you kiss it, stain your own
 With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?

Leon. No, not these twenty years.

Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker on.

Paul. Either forbear, 85
 Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you

For more amazement. If you can behold it,
 I'll make the statue move indeed, descend
 And take you by the hand; but then you'll think —

Which I protest against — I am assisted 90
 By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
 I am content to look on; what to speak,
 I am content to hear; for 't is as easy
 To make her speak as move.

Paul. It is requir'd
 You do awake your faith. Then all stand still;
 Or, those that think it is unlawful business 95
 I am about, let them depart.

Leon. Proceed;

No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music, awake her; strike!
 [Music.]

'T is time; descend; be stone no more;
 approach. 99

Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come,
 I'll fill your grave up. Stir, nay, come away, Bequeath to death your numbness; for from
 him

Dear life redeems you. You perceive she stirs.
 [Hermione comes down.]

Start not; her actions shall be holy as
 You hear my spell is lawful. Do not shun her Until you see her die again, for then 105
 You kill her double. Nay, present your hand.
 When she was young you woo'd her; now in age

Is she become the suitor?

Leon. O, she's warm!
 If this be magic, let it be an art 110
 Lawful as eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his neck.

If she pertain to life let her speak too.

Pol. Ay, and make 't manifest where she has liv'd,

Or how stolen from the dead.

Paul. That she is living,
 Were it but told you, should be hooted at 115

Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
 Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.

Please you to interpose, fair madam; kneel
 And pray your mother's blessing. Turn, good lady; 120

Our Perdita is found.

Her. You gods, look down
 And from your sacred vials pour your graces Upon my daughter's head! Tell me, mine own,

Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd?
 how found

Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear that I,
 Knowing by Paulina that the oracle 125
 Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
 Myself to see the issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that;
 Lest they desire upon this push to trouble
 Your joys with like relation. Go together, 130
 You precious winners all; your exultation
 Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
 Will wing me to some wither'd bough and
 there

My mate, that 's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.

Leon. O, peace, Paulina! 135

Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a wife; this is a match,
And made between 's by vows. Thou hast found mine;

But how, is to be question'd; for I saw her, 139
As I thought, dead, and have in vain said many
A prayer upon her grave. I'll not seek far—
For him, I partly know his mind—to find thee
An honourable husband. Come, Camillo, And take her by the hand, whose worth and honesty

Is richly noted and here justified 145
By us, a pair of kings. Let 's from this place.
What! look upon my brother. Both your pardons,

That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion. This your son-in-law
And son unto the King, whom heavens direct-
ing, 150

Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina, Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand and answer to his part Perform'd in this wide gap of time since first
We were dissever'd. Hastily lead away. 155

[Exeunt.]

THE TEMPEST

THE TEMPEST first appeared in print as the opening play in the First Folio. This fact has, curiously enough, been taken as a reason for considering it Shakespeare's last drama; but more substantial evidence exists for placing it thus late. One limit is fixed by its presence in a list of plays performed during the marriage festivities of King James's daughter Elizabeth in the early spring of 1613. The other is less definite, but is approximately indicated by the author's use of details from various accounts of the wreck of Sir George Somers in 1609. Within these limits, 1610 to 1613, opinion varies. Metrical evidence associates The Tempest with Cymbeline and The Winter's Tale, but does not decide their relative order. Those who place the play in 1612 regard it as having been specially written for the betrothal or the marriage of the Princess, adding in support the large spectacular element and the nature of the masque in the fourth act. Further attempts to strengthen the argument by finding in Prospero a portrait of King James, and in the supposed drowning of Ferdinand references to the death of Prince Henry, are not convincing; nor does the mere fact of performance at the wedding prove anything, since the numerous other plays then acted were revivals. The Revels accounts contain an entry stating that The Tempest was presented at Whitehall on Hallowmas night, 1611, and though this is now known to have been forged, it may have been well founded, since sixty years before the forgery Malone had stated, on evidence no longer accessible, that he knew the play existed in the autumn of 1611. On the whole, there is no evidence quite strong enough to counterbalance the standing presumption in favor of Malone's accuracy, so that 1611 remains the most probable date. There is thus nothing to hinder us from regarding the play as the last completed by Shakespeare alone.

For the main thread of the plot no source has been discovered. The resemblance to Die Schöne Sidea of Jakob Ayrer of Nuremberg, who died in 1605, is much less striking when the whole of Ayrer's play is read than when the points of likeness are extracted. In both plays we have a prince given to magic, and driven into exile with a daughter who marries the son of his enemy; an attendant spirit; and — most striking of all — the imposition of log-carrying upon the captive prince, and the fixing of his sword in his scabbard. But there is absolutely no similarity in character, and Ayrer's devil has nothing in common with Ariel, save his function as a supernatural servant. The fixing of the sword is a commonplace of magic, and even the carrying or splitting of logs is found as a task imposed by a magician on a captive prince in folk-tales having no connection with the present plays. The most that can be said is that both dramas may go back to a common origin, which, however, may have been far from immediate. "A fellow-actor's description" of the German play is of course a possibility, especially since English comedians are known to have been in Nuremberg in 1604 and 1606; but a positive statement is not warranted by the evidence.

Of the origin of minor details we can speak with more assurance. Shakespeare was well read in the literature of travel of his time, and evidences of this abound in the present case. In his descriptions of the island and of the storm he drew especially from the narratives of Sylvester Jourdan and William Strachey, who wrote accounts of the wreck on the Bermudas of one of the ships belonging to the expedition to Virginia led by Somers and Gates in 1609. Information with regard to this and similar adventures may well have reached him from oral sources also. Gonzalo's commonwealth (II. i. 147 ff.) was suggested by two passages in Florio's translation of Montaigne (1603). Prospero's abjuration speech (v. i. 33 ff.) is influenced by a passage in Golding's Ovid. Setebos is taken from Eden's History of Travaile (1577), where the name occurs as that of the devil-god of the Patagonian giants. Ariel occurs in Isaiah, and is the name of a prince of spirits in cabalistic literature. Miranda is evidently a significant coinage, like Perdita and Marina; and Caliban may be merely an anagram for "cannibal." The island is clearly not meant to be identified with Bermuda or any other.

SCENE: [A ship at sea;] an uninhabited island.

ACT I

SCENE I. [On a ship at sea:] a tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard.

Enter a SHIP-MASTER and a BOATSWAIN.

Master. Boatswain!

Boats. Here, master; what cheer?

Master. Good; speak to the mariners. Fall to 't, yarely, or we run ourselves aground. Bestir, bestir. [Exit. 5]

Enter MARINERS.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare! Take in the topsail. Tend to the master's whistle.— Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, FERDINAND, GONZALO, and others.

Alon. Good boatswain, have care. Where 's the master? Play the men. 11

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, boatswain?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour. Keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient. 16

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What cares these roarers for the name of king? To cabin! silence! trouble us not.

Gon. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard. 21

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have liv'd so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.— Cheerly, good hearts!— Out of our way, I say. [Exit. 24]

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow.

Methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good Fate, to his hanging; make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage. If he be not born to be hang'd, our case is miserable. [Exit. 26]

Re-enter BOATSWAIN.

Boats. Down with the topmast! yare! lower, lower! Bring her to try wi' the main-course. A plague [A cry within.]

Enter SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, and GONZALO.

upon this howling! They are louder than the weather or our office.— Yet again! What do you here? Shall we give o'er and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then. 45

Ant. Hang, cur! hang, you whoreson, insolent noisemaker! We are less afraid to be drown'd than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him for drowning though the ship were no stronger than a nut-shell and as leaky as an unstanch'd wench. 51

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses off to sea again! Lay her off.

Enter MARINERS wet.

Mariners. All lost! To prayers, to prayers! All lost! 55

Boats. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The King and Prince at prayers! Let 's assist them,

For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I'm out of patience.

Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.

This wide-chapp'd rascal— would thou mightst lie drowning 60

The washing of ten tides!

Gon. He'll be hang'd yet,

Though every drop of water swear against it
And gape at wid'st to glut him.

[A confused noise within.]

Mercy on us!

We split, we split! Farewell, my wife and children!

Farewell, brother! We split, we split, we split!

Ant. Let's all sink wi' the King.

Seb. Let's take leave of him. [Exit.]

Gon. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground, long heath, brown furze, anything. The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The island. Before Prospero's cell.]

Enter PROSPERO and MIRANDA.

Mir. If by your art, my dearest father, you have

Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking
pitch,

But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's
cheek,

Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffered
With those that I saw suffer! A brave vessel,
Who had, no doubt, some noble creature in her,
Dash'd all to pieces! O, the cry did knock Against my very heart. Poor souls, they per-ish'd.

Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth or ere
It should the good ship so have swallow'd and
The fraughting souls within her.

Pros. Be collected;
No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

Mir. O, woe the day!

Pros. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee,
Of thee, my dear one, thee, my daughter, who Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing

Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

Mir. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pros. 'T is time
I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand,
And pluck my magic garment from me. So.

[Lays down his mantle.]

Lie there, my art. Wipe thou thine eyes;
have comfort.
The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd

The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely ordered that there is no soul —
No, not so much perdition as an hair
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;

For thou must now know farther.

Mir. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopp'd

And left me to a bootless inquisition,
Concluding, "Stay, not yet."

Pros. The hour's now come;

The very minute bids thee ope thine ear.
Obey and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?

I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast
not

Out three years old.

Mir. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pros. By what? By any other house or person?

Of anything the image tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mir. 'T is far off

And rather like a dream than an assurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not Four or five women once that tended me?

Pros. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. But how is it

That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else

In the dark backward and abysm of time?
If thou rememb'rest aught ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here thou may'st.

Mir. But that I do not.

Pros. Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since,

Thy father was the Duke of Milan and
A prince of power.

Mir. Sir, are not you my father?

Pros. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father

Was Duke of Milan, and his only heir
And princess no worse issued.

Mir. O the heavens!
What foul play had we, that we came from thence?

Or blessed was 't we did?

Pros. Both, both, my girl.
By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heav'd
thence,

But blessedly help hither.

Mir. O, my heart bleeds
To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance! Please you, farther.

Pros. My brother and thy uncle, call'd Antonio —

I pray thee, mark me — that a brother should
Be so perfidious! — he whom next thyself
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put

The manage of my state; as at that time
Through all the signories it was the first,

And Prospero the prime duke, being so reputed
In dignity, and for the liberal arts

Without a parallel; those being all my study,
The government I cast upon my brother

And to my state grew stranger, being transported

And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle —
Dost thou attend me?

Mir. Sir, most heedfully.

Pros. Being once perfected how to grant suits,

How to deny them, who to advance and who so

To trash for overtopping, new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd
'em,

Or else new form'd 'em; having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts i' the state
To what tune pleas'd his ear; that now he was 85

The ivy which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck'd my verdure out on 't. Thou attend'st not.

Mir. O, good sir, I do.

Pros. I pray thee, mark me.
I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closeness and the bettering of my mind 90
With that which, but by being so retir'd,
O'er-priz'd all popular rate, in my false brother
Awak'd an evil nature; and my trust,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood, in its contrary as great 95
As my trust was; which had indeed no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He being thus lorded,
Not only with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might else exact,—like
one

Who having into truth, by telling of it, 100
Made such a sinner of his memory
To credit his own lie,—he did believe
He was indeed the Duke. Out o' the substitution,

And executing the outward face of royalty,
With all prerogative, hence his ambition growing— 105
Dost thou hear?

Mir. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.

Pros. To have no screen between this part he play'd

And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan. Me, poor man!—my library
Was dukedom large enough—of temporal royalties 110

He thinks me now incapable; confederates—
So dry he was for sway—wi' the King of Naples

To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend
The dukedom yet unbow'd—alas, poor Milan!— 115

To most ignoble stooping.

Mir. O the heavens!

Pros. Mark his condition and the event, then tell me

If this might be a brother.

Mir. I should sin

To think but nobly of my grandmother.

Good wombs have borne bad sons.

Pros. Now the condition.

This King of Naples, being an enemy 121
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit;
Which was, that he, in lieu o' the premises,
Of homage and I know not how much tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine 125
Out of the dukedom, and confer fair Milan
With all the honours on my brother; whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight
Fated to the purpose did Antonio open
The gates of Milan; and, i' the dead of dark-
ness, 130

The ministers for the purpose hurried thence
Me and thy crying self.

Mir. Alack, for pity!

I, not rememb'ring how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again. It is a hint 134
That wrings mine eyes to 't.

Pros. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business Which now's upon's, without the which this story

Were most impertinent.

Mir. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?

Pros. Well demanded, wench;
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not 140

(So dear the love my people bore me) set
A mark so bloody on the business; but
With colours fairer painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepared 145

A rotten carcass of a butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively have quit it. There they hoist us,
To cry to the sea that roar'd to us, to sigh
To the winds whose pity, sighing back again, 150
Did us but loving wrong.

Mir. Alack, what trouble

Was I then to you!

Pros. O, a cherubin
Thou wast that did preserve me. Thou didst smile,

Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt, 155

Under my burden groan'd; which rais'd in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mir. How came we ashore?

Pros. By Providence divine.
Some food we had and some fresh water
that 160

A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, who being then appointed Master of this design, did give us, with Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessities, Which since have steaded much; so, of his gentleness, 165

Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me
From mine own library with volumes that I prize above my dukedom.

Mir. Would I might

But ever see that man!

Pros. Now I arise.

[Puts on his robe.]

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow. 170
Here in this island we arriv'd; and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit

Than other princess can that have more time
For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mir. Heavens thank you for 't! And now, I pray you, sir,
For still 't is beating in my mind, your reason
For raising this sea-storm? 175

Pros. Know thus far forth.

By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune,
Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore; and by my pre-
science

I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions.

Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dul-
ness,
And give it way. I know thou canst not choose.

[Miranda sleeps.]
Come away, servant, come; I am ready now.
Approach, my Ariel; come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail!
I come

To answer thy best pleasure, be't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds. To thy strong bidding task

Ariel and all his quality.

Pros. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade
thee?

Ari. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship; now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flam'd amazement. Sometime I'd divide,
And burn in many places. On the topmast,
The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distin-tly,

Then meet and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors

O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary

And sight-outrunning were not; the fire and cracks

Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves
tremble,

Yea, his dread trident shake.

Pros. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason?

Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation. All but mariners Plung'd in the foaming brine and quit the vessel,

Then all afire with me. The King's son, Ferdinand,

With hair up-staring, — then like reeds, not hair, —

Was the first man that leap'd; cried, "Hell is empty,

And all the devils are here."

Pros. Why, that's my spirit!
But was not this nigh shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pros. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd;

On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and, as thou bad'st
me,

In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle.

The King's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pros. Of the King's ship
The mariners say how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o' the fleet.

Ari. Safely in harbour
Is the King's ship; in the deep nook, where once

Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she's hid;

The mariners all under hatches stow'd,
Who, with a charm join'd to their suff'ring labour,

I have left asleep; and for the rest o' the fleet,
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean float

Bound sadly home for Naples, Supposing that they saw the King's ship
wreck'd

And his great person perish.

Pros. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work.
What is the time o' the day?

Ari. Past the mid season,
Pros. At least two glasses. The time 'twixt six and now

Must by us both be spent most precious.

Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,

Let me remember thee what thou hast prom-is'd,

Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pros. How now? moody?
What is't thou canst demand?

Ari. My liberty.

Pros. Before the time be out? No more!

Ari. I prithee,
Remember I have done thee worthy service,
Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakings,

serv'd

Without or grudge or grumbings. Thou did promise

To bate me a full year.

Pros. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?

Ari. No.

Pros. Thou dost, and think'st it much to tread the ooze

Of the salt deep,
To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
To do me business in the veins o' the earth

When it is bak'd with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir.

Pros. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot

The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy

Was grown into a hoop? Hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.

Pros. Thou hast. Where was she born?
Speak; tell me.

Ari. Sir, in Argier.

Pros. O, was she so? I must Once in a month recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch
Sycorax,

For mischiefs manifold and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier, ²⁶⁵
Thou know'st, was banish'd; for one thing she did

They would not take her life. Is not this true?

Ari. Ay, sir.

Pros. This blue-ey'd hag was hither brought with child,

And here was left by the sailors. Thou, my slave, ²⁷⁰

As thou report'st thyself, was then her servant;

And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorr'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers ²⁷⁵

And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine; within which rift
Imprison'd thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died
And left thee there, where thou didst vent thy groans ²⁸⁰

As fast as mill-wheels strike. Then was this island —

Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckl'd whelp, hag-born, — not honour'd with

A human shape.

Ari. Yes, Caliban her son.

Pros. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban ²⁸⁵

Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st

What torment I did find thee in; thy groans Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts

Of ever angry bears. It was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax ²⁹⁰
Could not again undo. It was mine art,
When I arriv'd and heard thee, that made
gape

The pine, and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master.

Pros. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak

And peg thee in his knotty entrails till ²⁹⁵
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Pardon, master;

I will be correspondent to command

And do my spiriting gently.

Pros. Do so, and after two days

I will discharge thee.

Ari. That's my noble master!

What shall I do? say what. What shall I do? ³⁰⁰

Pros. Go make thyself like a nymph o' the sea; be subject

To no sight but thine and mine, invisible

To every eyeball else. Go take this shape

And hither come in 't. Go, hence with diligence! [Exit Ariel.]

Awake, dear heart, awake! Thou hast slept well; ³⁰⁵

Awake!

Mir. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

Pros. Shake it off. Come on,
We'll visit Caliban my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Mir. 'T is a villain, sir,

I do not love to look on.

Pros. But, as 't is, ³¹⁰

We cannot miss him. He does make our fire,

Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices

That profit us. What, ho! slave! Caliban!

Thou earth, thou! speak.

Cal. (Within.) There's wood enough within.

Pros. Come forth, I say! there's other business for thee. ³¹⁵

Come, thou tortoise! when?

Re-enter ARIEL like a water-nymph.

Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel,

Hark in thine ear.

Ari. My lord, it shall be done. [Exit.]

Pros. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself

Upon thy wicked dam, come forth! ³²⁰

Enter CALIBAN.

Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd

With raven's feather from unwholesome fen
Drop on you both! A south-west blow on ye
And blister you all o'er!

Pros. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps, ³²⁵

Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up; urchins

Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,

All exercise on thee; thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more sting-
ing

Than bees that made 'em.

Cal. I must eat my dinner.
This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother, ³³¹

Which thou tak'st from me. When thou cam'st first,

Thou strok'dst me and made much of me,
wouldst give me

Water with berries in 't, and teach me how

To name the bigger light, and how the less, ³³⁵
That burn by day and night; and then I lov'd
thee

And show'd thee all the qualities o' the isle,
The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place and fertile.

Curs'd be I that did so! All the charms
Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you!

For I am all the subjects that you have, ³⁴¹
Which first was mine own king; and here you sty me

In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from
me

The rest o' the island.

Pros. Thou most lying slave,

Whom stripes may move, not kindness ! I have us'd thee, 346

Filth as thou art, with human care, and lodg'd
thee

In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Cal. O ho, O ho ! would 't had been done !
Thou didst prevent me ; I had peopl'd else 350
This isle with Calibans.

[Pros.] Abhorred slave,
Which any print of goodness wilt not take,
Being capable of all ill ! I pitied thee, Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee
each hour

One thing or other. When thou didst not, savage, 355

Know thine own meaning, but wouldst gabble like

A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes With words that made them known. But thy vile race,

Though thou didst learn, had that in 't which good natures

Could not abide to be with ; therefore wast
thou 360

Deserv'dly confin'd into this rock,
Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison.

Cal. You taught me language ; and my profit on 't

Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid
you 364

For learning me your language !
Pros. Hag-seed, hence !

Fetch us in fuel ; and be quick, thou 'rt best,
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice ?

If thou neglect'st or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps, 369

Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee.

[Aside.] I must obey. His art is of such power
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,

And make a vassal of him.

Pros. So, slave ; hence ! 375
[Exit Caliban.]

Re-enter ARIEL, invisible, playing and singing ;
FERDINAND [following].

ARIEL'S SONG.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands.

Curtied when you have, and kiss'd
The wild waves whist,

Foot it feathery here and there, 380
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.

Burden (dispersedly). Hark, hark !
Bow-wow.

The watch-dogs bark !
Bow-wow.

Ari. Hark, hark ! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer 385

Cry, " Cock-a-diddle-dow."

Fer. Where should this music be ? I' the air or the earth ?

It sounds no more ; and, sure, it waits upon
Some god o' the island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the King my father's wreck, 390
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With its sweet air ; thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather. But 't is gone.
No, it begins again. 395

ARIEL'S SONG.

Full fathom five thy father lies ;
Of his bones are coral made ;
Those are pearls that were his eyes :
Nothing of him that doth fade 400
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell :

Burden. Ding-dong.
[Ari.] Hark ! now I hear them, — ding-dong,
bell.

Fer. The ditty does remember my drown'd
father. 405

This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes. I hear it now above
me,

Pros. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance

And say what thou seest yond.

Mir. What is 't ? A spirit ?
Lord, how it looks about ! Believe me, sir, 410
It carries a brave form. But 't is a spirit.

Pros. No, wench ; it eats and sleeps and hath such senses

As we have, such. This gallant which thou seest

Was in the wreck ; and, but he's something
stain'd

With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st call him 415

A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows
And strays about to find 'em.

Mir. I might call him
A thing divine ; for nothing natural

I ever saw so noble.

Pros. [Aside.] It goes on, I see,
As my soul prompts it. Spirit, fine spirit ! I'll free thee 420

Within two days for this.

Fer. Most sure, the goddess On whom these airs attend ! Vouchsafe my prayer

May know if you remain upon this island,
And that you will some good instruction give

How I may bear me here. My prime request, 425
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder !
If you be maid or no ?

Mir. No wonder, sir,
But certainly a maid.

Fer. My language ! heavens !
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 't is spoken.

Pros. How ? the best ?
What wert thou, if the King of Naples heard
thee ? 430

Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders

To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear me;
And that he does I weep. Myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes, never since at ebb, beheld
The King my father wreck'd.

Mir. Alack, for mercy!
Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the Duke of Milan

And his brave son being twain.

Pros. [Aside.] The Duke of Milan
And his more braver daughter could control
thee,

If now 't were fit to do 't. At the first sight
They have chang'd eyes. Delicate Ariel, I'll set thee free for this. [To Fer.] A word,
good sir;

I fear you have done yourself some wrong; a
word.

Mir. Why speaks my father so ungently?
This

Is the third man that e'er I saw, the first
That e'er I sigh'd for. Pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Fer. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make
you

The Queen of Naples.

Pros. Soft, sir! one word more.
[Aside.] They are both in either's powers; but this swift business

I must uneasy make, lest too light winning
Make the prize light. [To Fer.] One word more; I charge thee

That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on 't.

Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mir. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple.

If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

Pros. Follow me.
Speak not you for him; he's a traitor.

Come,
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together.
Sea-water shalt thou drink; thy food shall be The fresh-brook mussels, wither'd roots and hushks

Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow.

Fer. No;
I will resist such entertainment till
Mine enemy has more power.

[He draws, and is charmed from moving.]

Mir. O dear father,
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle and not fearful.

Pros. What! I say;
My foot my tutor? Put thy sword up, traitor,
Who mak'st a show but dar'st not strike, thy conscience

Is so possess'd with guilt. Come from thy ward,
For I can here disarm thee with this stick
And make thy weapon drop.

Mir. Beseech you, father.

Pros. Hence! hang not on my garments.
Mir. Sir, have pity;
I'll be his surety.

Pros. Silence! one word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee.

What!
An advocate for an impostor! hush!
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,

Having seen but him and Caliban. Foolish
wench!

To the most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

Mir. My affections
Are then most humble; I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pros. Come on; obey.
Thy nerves are in their infancy again
And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are.
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wreck of all my friends, nor this man's threats,

To whom I am subdu'd, are but light to
me,

Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid. All corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pros. [Aside.] It works. [To Fer.] Come on.
— Thou hast done well, fine Ariel! [To Fer.]
Follow me.

[To Ari.] Hark what thou else shalt do me.
Mir. Be of comfort;
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech. This is unwonted
Which now came from him.

Pros. [To Ari.] Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds; but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ari. To the syllable.
Pros. [To Mir. and Fer.] Come, follow.
Speak not for him. [Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Another part of the island.]

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GON-
ZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

Gon. Beseech you, sir, be merry; you have cause,

So have we all, of joy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss. Our hint of woe
Is common; every day some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant, and the merchant

Have just our theme of woe; but for the miracle,

I mean our preservation, few in millions
Can speak like us. Then wisely, good sir, weigh

Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Prithee, peace.
Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.
Seb. Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit; by and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir, —

Seb. One. Tell. —

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd that's offer'd,

Comes to the entertainer —

Seb. A dollar.

Gon. Dolour comes to him, indeed; you have spoken truer than you purpos'd.

Seb. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord, —

Ant. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!

Alon. I prithee, spare.

Gon. Well, I have done. But yet, —

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?

Seb. The old cock.

Ant. The cockerel.

Seb. Done. The wager?

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match!

Adr. Though this island seem to be desert, —

Seb. Ha, ha, ha! Antonio! So you're paid.

Adr. Uninhabitable and almost inaccessible, —

Seb. Yet, —

Adr. Yet, —

Ant. He could not miss 't.

Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly deliver'd.

Adr. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.

Seb. As if it had lungs and rotten ones.

Ant. Or as 't were perfum'd by a fen.

Gon. Here is everything advantageous to life.

Ant. True; save means to live.

Seb. Of that there's none, or little.

Gon. How lush and lusty the grass looks! How green!

Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of green in 't.

Ant. He misses not much.

Seb. No; he doth but mistake the truth totally.

Gon. But the rarity of it is, — which is indeed almost beyond credit, —

Seb. As many vouch'd rarities are.

Gon. That our garments, being, as they were, drench'd in the sea, hold notwithstanding their freshness and glosses, being rather new-dy'd than stain'd with salt water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies?

Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.

Gon. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the King's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Adr. Tunis was never grac'd before with such a paragon to their queen.

Gon. Not since widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow! a pox o' that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said "widower Æneas" too? Good Lord, how you take it!

Adr. "Widow Dido" said you? You make me study of that. She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.

Adr. Carthage?

Gon. I assure you, Carthage.

Ant. His word is more than the miraculous harp.

Seb. He hath rais'd the wall and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket and give it his son for an apple.

Ant. And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.

Gon. Ay.

Ant. Why, in good time.

Gon. Sir, we were talking that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queen.

Ant. And the rarest that e'er came there.

Seb. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Ant. O, widow Dido! ay, widow Dido.

Gon. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?

Alon. You cram these words into mine ears against

The stomach of my sense. Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence,

My son is lost and, in my rate, she too,

Who is so far from Italy removed

I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir

Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish

Hath made his meal on thee?

Fran. Sir, he may live.

I saw him beat the surges under him,

And ride upon their backs. He trod the water,

Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted The surge most swoln that met him. His bold head

'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oared Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke

To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bowed,

As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt

He came alive to land.

Alon. No, no, he's gone.

Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,

That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,

But rather lose her to an African;

Where she at least is banish'd from your eye,
Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

Alon. Prithee, peace.
Seb. You were kneel'd to and importun'd otherwise

By all of us, and the fair soul herself
Weigh'd between loathness and obedience, at Which end o' the beam should bow. We have lost your son, 131

I fear, for ever. Milan and Naples have Moe widows in them of this business' making
Than we bring men to comfort them.
The fault's your own.

Alon. So is the dear'st o' the loss. 136
Gon. My lord Sebastian,
The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness
And time to speak it in. You rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.

Seb. Very well. 140
Ant. And most chirurgeonly.

Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good sir,
When you are cloudy.

Seb. Foul weather? 140
Ant. Very foul.

Gon. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord, —
Ant. He'd sow't with nettle-seed.

Seb. Or docks, or mallows. 145
Gon. And were the king on't, what would I do?

Seb. Scape being drunk for want of wine.
Gon. I' the commonwealth I would by contraries

Execute all things; for no kind of traffic
Would I admit; no name of magistrate; 149
Letters should not be known; riches, poverty,
And use of service, none; contract, succession,
Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none;
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;
No occupation; all men idle, all;
And women too, but innocent and pure; 155
No sovereignty; —

Seb. Yet he would be king on't.
Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common nature should produce 159

Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have; but nature should bring
forth,

Of it own kind, all foison, all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his subjects? 165

Ant. None, man; all idle; whores and knaves.

Gon. I would with such perfection govern,
sir,

To excel the golden age.

Seb. Save his Majesty!
Ant. Long live Gonzalo!

Gon. And, — do you mark me, sir?

Alon. Prithee, no more; thou dost talk nothing to me. 171

Gon. I do well believe your Highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs that they always use to laugh at nothing. 175

Ant. 'T was you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you. So you may continue and laugh at nothing still.

Ant. What a blow was there given! 180
Seb. An it had not fallen flatlong.

Gon. You are gentlemen of brave mettle;
you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter ARIEL [invisible], playing solemn music.

Seb. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry. 186

Gon. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?

Ant. Go sleep, and hear us. 190

[All sleep except Alon., Seb., and Ant.]

Alon. What, all so soon asleep! I wish mine eyes

Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts.
I find

They are inclin'd to do so.

Seb. Please you, sir,

Do not omit the heavy offer of it.

It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth, 195
It is a comforter.

Ant. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person while you take your rest,

And watch your safety.

Alon. Thank you. Wondrous heavy.
[Alonso sleeps. Exit Ariel.]

Seb. What a strange drowsiness possesses
them! 196

Ant. It is the quality o' the climate.

Seb. Why

Doth it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.

Ant. Nor I; my spirits are nimble.

They fell together all, as by consent;
They dropp'd, as by a thunder-stroke. What might,

Worthy Sebastian, O, what might —? No
more: — 205

And yet methinks I see it in thy face,
What thou shouldst be. The occasion speaks thee, and

My strong imagination sees a crown
Dropping upon thy head.

Seb. What, art thou waking?

Ant. Do you not hear me speak?

Seb. I do; and surely

It is a sleepy language, and thou speak'st 211

Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say?

This is a strange repose, to be asleep

With eyes wide open; standing, speaking,

moving,

And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian, 215

Thou let'st thy fortune sleep — die, rather;

wink'st

Whiles thou art waking.

Seb. Thou dost snore distinctly;

There's meaning in thy snores.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom; you Must be so too, if heed me ; which to do 220

 Trebles thee o'er.

Seb. Well, I am standing water.

Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so. To ebb

Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Ant. O,

If you but knew how you the purpose cherish

Whiles thus you mock it ! how, in stripping it, 225

You more invest it ! Ebbing men, indeed,

Most often do so near the bottom run

By their own fear or sloth.

Seb. Prithee, say on.

The setting of thine eye and cheek proclaim

A matter from thee, and a birth indeed 230

Which throes thee much to yield.

Ant. Thus, sir :

Although this lord of weak remembrance, this,

Who shall be of as little memory

When he is earth'd, hath here almost persuaded —

For he's a spirit of persuasion, only 235

Professes to persuade — the King his son's alive,

'T is as impossible that he's undrown'd

As he that sleeps here swims.

Seb. I have no hope

That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no-hope

What great hope have you ! No hope that way is 240

Another way so high a hope that even

Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,

But doubt discovery there. Will you grant

with me

That Ferdinand is drown'd ?

Seb. He's gone.

Ant. Then, tell me,

Who's the next heir of Naples ?

Seb. Claribel. 245

Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis ; she that

dwells

Ten leagues beyond man's life ; she that from

Naples

Can have no note, unless the sun were post —

The man i' the moon's too slow — till newborn chins

Be rough and razorable ; she that — from whom 250

We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast

again,

And by that destiny to perform an act

Whereof what's past is prologue, what to come

In yours and my discharge.

Seb. What stuff is this ! How say you ?

'T is true, my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis ; 255

So is she heir of Naples ; 'twixt which regions

There is some space.

Ant. A space whose every cubit

Seems to cry out, "How shall that Claribel

Measure us back to Naples ? Keep in Tunis,

And let Sebastian wake." Say, this were

death 260

That now hath seiz'd them ; why, they were no worse

Than now they are. There be that can rule

Naples

As well as he that sleeps ; lords that can prate

As amply and unnecessarily

As this Gonzalo ; I myself could make 265

A chough of as deep chat. O, that you bore

The mind that I do ! what a sleep were this

For your advancement ! Do you understand

me ?

Seb. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your content

Tender your own good fortune ?

Seb. I remember 270

You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True.

And look how well my garments sit upon me ;

Much feater than before. My brother's servants

Were then my fellows ; now they are my men.

Seb. But, for your conscience ? 275

Ant. Ay, sir, where lies that ? If't were a kibe,

'T would put me to my slipper ; but I feel not

This deity in my bosom. Twenty consciences,

That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be

they

And melt ere they molest ! Here lies your brother, 280

No better than the earth he lies upon

If he were that which now he's like, that's

dead ;

Whom I, with this obedient steel, three inches of it,

Can lay to bed for ever ; whiles you, doing thus,

To the perpetual wink for aye might put 285

This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,

They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk ;

They'll tell the clock to any business that 290

We say befits the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear friend,

Shall be my precedent ; as thou got'st Milan,

I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword. One stroke

Shall free thee from the tribute which thou

payest,

And I the King shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together ;

And when I rear my hand, do you the like, 295

To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O, but one word.

[They talk apart.]

Re-enter ARIEL [invisible], with music and song.

Ari. My master through his art foresees the danger

That you, his friend, are in ; and sends me

forth —

For else his project dies — to keep them living.

[Sings in Gonzalo's ear.]

While you here do snoring lie, 305

Open-ey'd Conspiracy

His time doth take.

If of life you keep a care,

Shake off slumber, and beware ;

Awake, awake ! 305

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good angels
Preserve the King. [Wakes Alon.]

Alon. Why, how now? Ho, awake! Why are you drawn?

Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose, 310

Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellow-
ing

Like bulls, or rather lions. Did't not wake
you?

It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 't was a din to fright a monster's
ear,

To make an earthquake! Sure, it was the roar 315

Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming,

And that a strange one too, which did awake
me.

I shak'd you, sir, and cried. As mine eyes
open'd,

I saw their weapons drawn. There was a noise, 320

That's verily. 'Tis best we stand upon our guard,

Or that we quit this place. Let's draw our weapons.

Alon. Lead off this ground; and let's make further search

For my poor son.

Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts!
For he is, sure, i' the island.

Alon. Lead away. 325

Ari. Prospero my lord shall know what I have done.

So, King, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Another part of the island.]

Enter CALIBAN with a burden of wood. A noise of thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall and make
him

By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor pinch,

Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me i' the
mire, 3

Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em; but

For every trifle are they set upon me, Sometime like apes that mow and chatter at
me

And after bite me, then like hedgehogs which 10

Lie tumbling in my barefoot way and mount
Their prick at my footfall; sometime am I

All wound with adders who with cloven tongues

Do hiss me into madness.

Enter TRINCULO.

Lo, now, lo!

Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me ¹⁵
For bringing wood in slowly. I'll fall flat;
Perchance he will not mind me.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing i' the wind. Yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a ²⁰ foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder as it did before, I know not where to hide my head; yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls. What have we here? A man or a fish? Dead or alive? A ²⁵ fish; he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of not-of-the-newest Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now, as once I was, and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a ³⁰ piece of silver. There would this monster make a man; any strange beast there makes a man.
When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legg'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm o' my troth! I do now let ³⁵ loose my opinion, hold it no longer: this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas, the storm is come again! My best way is to creep under his gaberdine; there is no other shelter ⁴⁰ hereabout. Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter STEPHANO, singing [a bottle in his hand].

Ste. "I shall no more to sea, to sea,

Here shall I die ashore —" 45

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral. Well, here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

(Sings.) "The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,

The gunner and his mate

Lov'd Moll, Meg, and Marian, and Margery, ⁵⁰

But none of us car'd for Kate;

For she had a tongue with a tang,

Would cry to a sailor, Go hang!

She lov'd not the savour of tar nor of pitch,

Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch; 55

Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang!"

This is a scurvy tune too; but here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

Cal. Do not torment me! Oh!

Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon 's with savages and men of Ind, ha? I have not scap'd drowning to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been said, "As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground"; and it shall be said so again while Stephano breathes at nostrils. 65

Cal. The spirit torments me! Oh!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague.
Where the devil should he learn our language?

I will give him some relief, if it be but for that. If I can recover him and keep him tame and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather. 73

Cal. Do not torment me, prithee; I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle; if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly. 81

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling. Now Prosper works upon thee. 84

Ste. Come on your ways. Open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat. Open your mouth; this will shake your shaking; I can tell you, and that soundly. You cannot tell who's your friend. Open your chaps again. 89

Trin. I should know that voice; it should be—but he is drown'd; and these are devils. O defend me! 93

Ste. Four legs and two voices; a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come. Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth. 99

Trin. Stephano!

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a devil, and no monster. I will leave him; I have no long spoon. 103

Trin. Stephano! If thou beest Stephano, touch me and speak to me; for I am Trinculo,—be not afraid — thy good friend Trinculo. 106

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth. I'll pull thee by the lesser legs. If any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo indeed! How cam'st thou to be the siege of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos? 111

Trin. I took him to be kill'd with a thunder-stroke. But art thou not drown'd, Stephano? I hope now thou art not drown'd. Is the storm over-blown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans escap'd! 117

Ste. Prithee, do not turn me about; my stomach is not constant.

Cal. [Aside.] These be fine things, an if they be not sprites.

That's a brave god and bears celestial liquor. I will kneel to him. 123

Ste. How didst thou scape? How cam'st thou hither? Swear by this bottle how thou cam'st hither,—I escap'd upon a butt of sack which the sailors heaved o'erboard — by this bottle, which I made of the bark of a tree with mine own hands since I was cast ashore. 128

Cal. I'll swear upon that bottle to be thy true subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here; swear then how thou escap'dst.

Trin. Swam ashore, man, like a duck. I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn. 133

Ste. Here, kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

Ste. The whole butt, man. My cellar is in a rock by the seaside where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf! how does thine ague? 139

Cal. Hast thou not dropp'd from heaven?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee. I was the man i' the moon when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her and I do adore thee.

My mistress show'd me thee and thy dog and thy bush. 144

Ste. Come, swear to that; kiss the book. I will furnish it anon with new contents. Swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster! I afraid of him! A very weak monster! The man i' the moon! A most poor credulous monster! Well drawn, monster, in good sooth! 150

Cal. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the island;

And I will kiss thy foot. I prithee, be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster! When 's god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle. 155

Cal. I'll kiss thy foot. I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on then; down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him—

Ste. Come, kiss. 161

Trin. But that the poor monster's in drink. An abominable monster!

Cal. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries;

I'll fish for thee and get thee wood enough. 165

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!

I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

Cal. I prithee, let me bring thee where crabs grow;

And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts;

Show thee a jay's nest and instruct thee how To snare the nimble marmoset. I'll bring thee To clust'ring filberts and sometimes I'll get thee 175

Young scameles from the rock. Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I prithee now, lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King and all our company else being drown'd, we will inherit here. Here! bear my bottle. Fellow

Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again. 181

Cal. (Sings drunkenly.) Farewell, master; farewell, farewell!

Trin. A howling monster; a drunken monster!

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish;

Nor fetch in firing 185

At requiring;

Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish.

'Ban, 'Ban, Cacaliban
Has a new master, get a new man.
Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom, hey-day, freedom! 191
Ste. O brave monster! Lead the way.
[Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [Before Prospero's cell.]

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour
Delight in them sets off; some kinds of base-
ness

Are nobly undergone, and most poor matters
Point to rich ends. This my mean task
Would be as heavy to me as odious, but The mistress which I serve quickens what's
dead

And makes my labours pleasures. O, she is Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed,

And he's compos'd of harshness. I must remove
Some thousands of these logs and pile them up,
Upon a sore injunction. My sweet mistress 11 Weeps when she sees me work, and says such baseness

Had never like executor. I forget;
But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours, 14

Most busy least, when I do it.

Enter MIRANDA; and PROSPERO [at a distance, unseen].

Mir. Alas, now, pray you,
Work not so hard. I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs that you are enjoin'd to pile!

Pray, set it down and rest you. When this burns,

'T will weep for having wearied you. My father

Is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself; 20
He's safe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear mistress,
The sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to do.

Mir. If you'll sit down,
I'll bear your logs the while. Pray, give me
that; 24

I'll carry it to the pile.

Fer. No, precious creature;
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Than you should such dishonour undergo,
While I sit lazy by.

Mir. It would become me
As well as it does you; and I should do it With much more ease, for my good will is to
it, 30

And yours it is against.

Pros. Poor worm, thou art infected!
This visitation shows it.

Mir. You look wearily.

Fer. No, noble mistress; 't is fresh morning
with me

When you are by at night. I do beseech you—
Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers— 35
What is your name?

Mir. Miranda. — O my father,
I have broke your hest to say so!

Fer. Admir'd Miranda!
Indeed the top of admiration! worth

What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady
I have ey'd with best regard, and many a
time 40

The harmony of their tongues hath into bond-
age

Brought my too diligent ear; for several virtues

Have I lik'd several women, never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd 45
And put it to the foil; but you, O you,
So perfect and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best!

Mir. I do not know
One of my sex; no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen 50

More that I may call men than you, good
friend,

And my dear father. How features are abroad,
I am skillless of; but, by my modesty,
The jewel in my dower, I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you, 55

Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself, to like of. But I prattle Something too wildly, and my father's precepts

I therein do forget.

Fer. I am in my condition
A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king; 60
I would, not so! — and would no more endure
This wooden slavery than to suffer
The flesh-fly blow my mouth. Hear my soul speak.

The very instant that I saw you, did
My heart fly to your service; there resides, 65
To make me slave to it; and for your sake
Am I this patient log-man.

Mir. Do you love me?
Fer. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,

And crown what I profess with kind event
If I speak true! if hollowly, invert 70
What best is boded me to mischief! I
Beyond all limit of what else 't the world
Do love, prize, honour you.

Mir. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.

Pros. Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain
grace 75

On that which breeds between 'em!

Fer. Wherefore weep you?
Mir. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer

What I desire to give, and much less take
What I shall die to want. But this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide itself, 80
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!

And prompt me, plain and holy innocence !
 I am your wife, if you will marry me ;
 If not, I'll die your maid. To be your fellow
 You may deny me ; but I'll be your servant, ⁸⁵
 Whether you will or no.

Fer. My mistress, dearest ;
 And I thus humble ever.

Mir. My husband, then ?
Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing

As bondage e'er of freedom. Here's my hand.

Mir. And mine, with my heart in 't. And now farewell ⁹⁰

Till half an hour hence.
Fer. A thousand thousand !

[Exeunt [Fer. and Mir. severally].]

Pros. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
 Who are surpris'd withal ; but my rejoicing
 At nothing can be more. I'll to my book,
 For yet ere supper-time must I perform ⁹⁵
 Much business appertaining. [Exit.]

SCENE II. [Another part of the island.]

Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO.

Ste. Tell not me. When the butt is out, we will drink water ; not a drop before ; therefore bear up, and board 'em. Servant-monster, drink to me. ⁴

Trin. Servant-monster ! the folly of this island ! They say there's but five upon this isle ; we are three of them ; if the other two be brain'd like us, the state totters. ⁸

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee. Thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else ? He were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail. ¹³

Ste. My man-monster hath drown'd his tongue in sack. For my part, the sea cannot drown me ; I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five and thirty leagues off and on. By this light, thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard. ¹⁸

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list ; he's no standard.

Ste. We'll not run, Monsieur Monster.
Trin. Nor go neither ; but you'll lie like dogs and yet say nothing neither. ²³

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour ? Let me lick thy shoe.

I'll not serve him ; he's not valiant. ²⁷

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster ! I am in case to juggle a constable. Why, thou debosh'd fish, thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day ?
 Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster ? ³³

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me ! Wilt thou let him, my lord ?

Trin. "Lord" quoth he ! That a monster should be such a natural !

Cal. Lo, lo, again ! Bite him to death, I prithee. ³⁸

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head. If you prove a mutineer, — the next tree ! The poor monster's my subject and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd to hearken once again to the suit I made to thee ? ⁴⁵

Ste. Marry, will I ; kneel and repeat it. I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter ARIEL, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant, a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the island. ⁵⁰

Ari. Thou liest.
Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou.

I would my valiant master would destroy thee !
 I do not lie. ⁵⁴

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.
Ste. Mum, then, and no more. Proceed.

Cal. I say, by sorcery he got this isle ; ⁶⁰
 From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him, — for I know thou dar'st,

But this thing dare not, —
Ste. That's most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it and I'll serve thee. ⁶⁵

Ste. How now shall this be compass'd ? Canst thou bring me to the party ?

Cal. Yea, yea, my lord. I'll yield him thee asleep.

Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest ; thou canst not. ⁷⁰

Cal. What a pied ninny's this ! Thou scurvy patch !

I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows
 And take his bottle from him. When that's gone

He shall drink nought but brine ; for I'll not show him

Where the quick freshes are. ⁷⁵

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger.
 Interrupt the monster one word further, and,
 by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out o' doors and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I ? I did nothing. I'll go farther off. ⁸¹

Ste. Didst thou not say he lied ?

Ari. Thou liest.
Ste. Do I so ? Take thou that. [Beats Trin.]

As you like this, give me the lie another time. ⁸⁵

Trin. I did not give the lie. Out o' your wits and hearing too ? A pox o' your bottle ! this can sack and drinking do. A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers !

Cal. Ha, ha, ha ! ⁹⁰

Ste. Now, forward with your tale. Prithee, stand farther off.

Cal. Beat him enough. After a little time
 I'll beat him too.

Ste. Stand farther. Come, proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him, ⁹⁵

I' the afternoon to sleep. There thou mayst brain him,

Having first seiz'd his books, or with a log

Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy knife. Remember
First to possess his books; for without them 100
He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not
One spirit to command. They all do hate him
As rootedly as I. Burn but his books.
He has brave utensils, — for so he calls them, —
Which, when he has a house, he'll deck withal.
And that most deeply to consider is 106
The beauty of his daughter. He himself
Calls her a nonpareil. I never saw a woman
But only Sycorax my dam and she;
But she as far surpasseth Sycorax
As greatest does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a lass?

Cal. Ay, lord; she will become thy bed, I warrant, 113

And bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man. His daughter and I will be king and queen, — save our Graces! — and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys. Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent. 118

Ste. Give me thy hand. I am sorry I beat thee; but, while thou liv'st, keep a good tongue in thy head. 121

Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep.

Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. Yes, on mine honour.

Ari. This will I tell my master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry; I am full of pleasure. 125

Let us be jocund. Will you troll the catch

You taught me but while-ere?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason. Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. 129

[Sings.

Flout 'em and scout 'em 130

And scout 'em and flout 'em;

Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

[Ariel plays the tune on a tabor and pipe.

Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody. 136

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness. If thou be'st a devil, take 't as thou list.

Trin. O, forgive me my sins!

Ste. He that dies pays all debts. I defy thee. Mercy upon us! 141

Cal. Art thou afraid?

Ste. No, monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afraid. The isle is full of noises, Sounds and sweet airs, that give delight and hurt not. 145

Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears, and sometime voices
That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again; and then, in dream-
ing,

The clouds methought would open and show
riches 150

Ready to drop upon me, that, when I wak'd,
I cried to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroy'd. 155

Ste. That shall be by and by. I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away. Let's follow it, and after do our work.

Ste. Lead, monster; we'll follow. I would
I could see this taborer; he lays it on. 161

Trin. Wilt come? I'll follow Stephano.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. [Another part of the island.]

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GON-ZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, etc.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir;
My old bones ache. Here's a maze trod indeed

Through forth-rights and meanders! By your patience,

I needs must rest me.

Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am myself attach'd with weariness 5

To the dulling of my spirits. Sit down, and rest.
Even here I will put off my hope and keep it

No longer for my flatterer. He is drown'd
Whom thus we stray to find, and the sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go. 10

Ant. [Aside to Seb.] I am right glad that he's so out of hope.

Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose
That you resolv'd to effect.

Seb. [Aside to Ant.] The next advantage
Will we take thoroughly.

Ant. [Aside to Seb.] Let it be to-night;
For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they 15
Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance

As when they are fresh.

Solemn and strange music; and PROSPERO on the top invisible. Enter several strange shapes, bringing in a banquet; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutation; and, inviting the King, etc., to eat, they depart.

Seb. [Aside to Ant.] I say, to-night. No
more.

Alon. What harmony is this? My good friends, hark!

Gon. Marvellous sweet music!

Alon. Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these? 20

Seb. A living drollery. Now I will believe
That there are unicorns, that in Arabia
There is one tree, the phoenix' throne, one phoenix

At this hour reigning there.

Ant. I'll believe both;
And what does else want credit, come to me, 25
And I'll be sworn 'tis true. Travellers ne'er did lie,

Though fools at home condemn 'em.

Gon. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe
me?

If I should say, I saw such islanders —

For, certes, these are people of the island —
Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet,
note, 31

Their manners are more gentle, kind, than of
Our human generation you shall find Many, nay, almost any.

Pros. [Aside.] Honest lord,
Thou hast said well; for some of you there present 35

Are worse than devils.

Alon. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing,

Although they want the use of tongue, a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pros. [Aside.] Praise in departing.

Fran. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since
They have left their viands behind, for we have stomachs. 41

Will't please you taste of what is here?

Alon. Not I.

Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys,

Who would believe that there were mountaineers

Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em 45

Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find

Each putter-out of five for one will bring us
Good warrant of.

Alon. I will stand to and feed,
Although my last. No matter, since I feel 50
The best is past. Brother, my lord the Duke, Stand to and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter ARIEL, like a harpy; claps his wings upon the table; and, with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.

Ari. You are three men of sin, whom Destiny,

That hath to instrument this lower world
And what is in 't, the never-surfeited sea 55
Hath caus'd to belch up you; and on this island

Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst
men

Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad;

And even with such-like valour men hang and drown

Their proper selves.

[Alon., Seb., etc., draw their swords.]

You fools! I and my fellows
Are ministers of Fate. The elements, 61

Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as
well

Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs

Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish

One dowe that's in my plume. My fellow-ministers 65

Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,

Your swords are now too massy for your strengths

And will not be uplifted. But remember —
For that's my business to you — that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero; 70
Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it,
Him and his innocent child; for which foul
deed

The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incens'd the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures,

Against your peace. Thee of thy son, Alonso, 75
They have bereft; and do pronounce by me
Ling'ring perdition, worse than any death
Can be at once, shall step by step attend
You and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from —

Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls 80

Upon your heads — is nothing but heart's sorrow

And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder; then, to soft music, enter the shapes again, and dance, with mocks and mows, and carrying out the table.

Pros. Bravely the figure of this harpy hast
thou

Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devour-
ing.

Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated 85
In what thou hast to say; so, with good life
And observation strange, my meaner ministers
Their several kinds have done. My high charms work,

And these mine enemies are all knit up In their distractions. They now are in my power; 90

And in these fits I leave them, while I visit Young Ferdinand, whom they suppose is drown'd,

And his and mine lov'd darling. [Exit above.]

Gon. I? the name of something holy, sir, why stand you 94

In this strange stare?

Alon. O, it is monstrous, monstrous!
Methought the billows spoke and told me of
it;

The winds did sing it to me, and the thunder,
That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd
The name of Prosper; it did bass my trespass.
Therefore my son i' the ooze is bedded, and 100
I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded
And with him there lie mudded. [Exit.]

Seb. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er.

Ant.

I'll be thy second.

[Exeunt [Seb. and Ant.].]

Gon. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt,

Like poison given to work a great time
after, 105

Now gins to bite the spirits. I do beseech
you

That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly
And hinder them from what this ecstasy

May now provoke them to.

Adr.

Follow, I pray you.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [Before Prospero's cell.]

Enter PROSPERO, FERDINAND, and MIRANDA.

Pros. If I have too austere punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live; who once again
I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test. Here, afore
Heaven,

I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise 10
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it Against an oracle.

Pros. Then, as my gift and thine own acquisition Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter. But If thou dost break her virgin-knot before 15

All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be ministr'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barren Hate,
Sour-eyed Disdain and Discord shall bestrew 20
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly
That you shall hate it both. Therefore take heed,

As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Fer. As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
With such love as 't is now, the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion 25

Our worse genius can, shall never melt
Mine honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that day's celebration
When I shall think or Phœbus' steeds are founder'd 30

Or Night kept chain'd below.

Pros. Fairly spoke.
Sit then and talk with her; she is thine own.
What, Ariel! my industrious servant, Ariel!

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. What would my potent master? Here
I am.

Pros. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service 35

Did worthily perform; and I must use you
In such another trick. Go bring the rabble, O'er whom I give thee power, here to this place.

Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple 40
Some vanity of mine art. It is my promise,
And they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently?

Pros. Ay, with a twink.

Ari. Before you can say "come" and "go,"
And breathe twice and cry "so, so," 45
Each one, tripping on his toe,
Will be here with mop and mow.
Do you love me, master? No?

Pros. Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not approach
Till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well, I conceive. [Exit.]

Pros. Look thou be true; do not give dalliance Too much the rein. The strongest oaths are straw

To the fire i' the blood. Be more abstemious,
Or else, good night your vow!

Fer. I warrant you, sir;
The white cold virgin snow upon my heart 55
Abates the ardour of my liver.

Pros. Well,
Now come, my Ariel! bring a corollary,
Rather than want a spirit. Appear, and pertly!
No tongue! all eyes! Be silent. [Soft music.]

Enter IRIS.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas 60

Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease;
Thy turf mountains, where live nibbling
sheep,

And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep;

Thy banks with pion'd and twilled brims,
Which spongy April at thy best betrims 65

To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy brown groves,

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being lass-lorn; thy pole-clipp'd vineyard;
And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard,
Where thou thyself dost air;—the queen o'
the sky, 70

Whose watery arch and messenger am I,
Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace, [Juno descends.]

Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport; here peacocks fly amain.
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain. 75

Enter CERES.

Cer. Hail, many-coloured messenger, that ne'er

Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who with thy saffron wings upon my flowers
Diffusest honey-drops, refreshing showers,
And with each end of thy blue bow dost
crown 80

My bosky acres and my unshrub'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth; why hath thy
queen

Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate;
And some donation freely to estate 85
On the blest lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the Queen? Since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company 90
I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid. I met her deity

Cutting the clouds towards Paphos, and her son
 Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done
 Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
 Whose vows are, that no bed-right shall be paid
 Till Hymen's torch be lighted; but in vain.
 Mars's hot minion is return'd again;
 Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
 Swears he will shoot no more, but play with sparrows
 And be a boy right out.

Cer. Highest queen of state,
 Great Juno, comes; I know her by her gait.

[Enter JUNO.]

Juno. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me
 To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be
 And honour'd in their issue.

[They sing. 105
Juno. Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
 Long continuance, and increasing,
 Hourly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.

[Cer. 110
 Earth's increase, foison plenty,
 Barns and garners never empty,
 Vines with clustering bunches growing,
 Plants with goodly burden bowing.
 Spring come to you at the farthest
 In the very end of harvest!
 Scarcity and want shall shun you;
 Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Fer. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly. May I be bold
 To think these spirits?

Pros. Spirits, which by mine art
 I have from their confines call'd to enact
 My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever;
 So rare a wond'ring father and a wise
 Makes this place Paradise.

Pros. Sweet, now, silence!
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously. 125
 There's something else to do; hush, and be mute,
 Or else our spell is marr'd.

[Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.]

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the winding brooks,
 With your sedg'd crowns and ever-harmless
 looks,
 Leave your crisp channels, and on this green
 land

Answer your summons; Juno does command.
 Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
 A contract of true love; be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary,
 Come hither from the furrow and be merry. 135
 Make holiday; your rye-straw hats put on
 And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
 In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited; they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Pros. [Aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy

Of the beast Caliban and his confederates 140
 Against my life. The minute of their plot
 Is almost come. [To the Spirits.] Well done!
 avoid. No more!

Fer. This is strange. Your father's in some passion

That works him strongly.

Mir. Never till this day 144
 Saw I him touch'd with anger, so distemper'd.

Pros. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
 As if you were dismay'd. Be cheerful, sir,
 Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
 As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
 Are melted into air, into thin air; 150

And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
 The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
 The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
 Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve
 And, like this insubstantial pageant faded, 155
 Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
 As dreams are made on, and our little life
 Is rounded with a sleep. Sir, I am vex'd,— Bear with my weakness—my old brain is troubled.

Be not disturb'd with my infirmity. 160
 If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell
 And there repose. A turn or two I'll walk,
 To still my beating mind.

Fer. Mir. We wish your peace.
 [Exeunt.]

Pros. Come with a thought. I thank thee,
 Ariel; come.

Enter ARIEL.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure?

Pros. Spirit, 165
 We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. Ay, my commander. When I presented Ceres,
 I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
 Least I might anger thee.

Pros. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking;

So full of valour that they smote the air
 For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
 For kissing of their feet; yet always bending
 Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor;
 At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd
 their ears, 175

Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses
 As they smelt music. So I charm'd their ears
 That calf-like they my lowing follow'd through Tooth'd briars, sharp furzes, pricking gorse, and thorns, 180

Which ent'red their frail shins. At last I left
 them

I' the filthy-mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake
O'erstunk their feet.

Pros. This was well done, my bird.
Thy shape invisible retain thou still. ¹⁸⁵
The trumpery in my house, go bring it hither,
For stale to catch these thieves.

Ari. I go, I go. ^[Exit.]

Pros. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost; ¹⁹⁰
And as with age his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
Even to roaring.

Re-enter ARIEL, laden with glittering apparel, etc.

Come, hang them on this line.

[Prospero and Ariel remain, invisible.] Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all wet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not

Hear a foot fall; we now are near his cell. ¹⁹⁵

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than play'd the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss, at which my nose is in great indignation. ²⁰⁰

Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you, look
you, —

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still.
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to ²⁰⁵ Shall hoodwink this mischance; therefore speak softly.

All's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool, —
Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss. ²¹⁰

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting;
yet this is your harmless fairy, monster!

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour.

Cal. Prithee, my king, be quiet. See'st thou here, ²¹⁵

This is the mouth o' the cell. No noise, and enter.

Do that good mischief which may make this island

Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts. ²²¹

Trin. O King Stephano! O peer! O worthy Stephano! look what a wardrobe here is for
thee!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool; it is but trash.

Trin. O, ho, monster! we know what belongs to a frippery. O King Stephano! ²²⁶

Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo; by this hand, I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy Grace shall have it.

Cal. The dropsy drown this fool! what do you mean ²³⁰

To dote thus on such luggage? Let's alone
And do the murder first. If he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches,

Make us strange stuff. ²³⁴

Ste. Be you quiet, monster. Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line. Now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do; we steal by line and level,
an't like your Grace. ²⁴⁰

Ste. I thank thee for that jest; here's a garment for 't. Wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country. "Steal by line and level" is an excellent pass of pate; there's another garment for 't. ²⁴⁵

Trin. Monster, come, put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on 't. We shall lose our time,

And all be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes
With foreheads villanous low. ²⁵⁰

Ste. Monster, lay-to your fingers. Help to bear this away where my hog'shead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom. Go to, carry this.

Trin. And this.

Ste. Ay, and this. ²⁵⁵

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of dogs and hounds, hunting them about, Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pros. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver!

Pros. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there!
hark! hark!

[Cal., Ste., and Trin. are driven
out.]

Go charge my goblins that they grind their joints

With dry convulsions, shorten up their sinews

With aged cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them ²⁶¹

Than pard or cat o' mountain.

Ari. Hark, they roar!

Pros. Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour

Lies at my mercy all mine enemies.
Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou ²⁶⁴
Shalt have the air at freedom. For a little Follow, and do me service. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [Before Prospero's cell.]

Enter PROSPERO in his magic robes, and ARIEL.

Pros. Now does my project gather to a head.
My charms crack not; my spirits obey; and
Time

Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day?

Ari. On the sixth hour; at which time, my lord,

You said our work should cease.

Pros. I did say so,
When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the King and 's followers?

Ari. Confin'd together
In the same fashion as you gave in charge,
Just as you left them; all prisoners, sir,
In the line-grove which weather-fends your cell;

They cannot budge till your release. The
King,
His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted,

And the remainder mourning over them,
Brimful of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly Him that you term'd, sir, "The good old lord, Gonzalo,"

His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds. Your charm so strongly works 'em

That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pros. Dost thou think so, spirit?
Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pros. And mine shall.
Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling

Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art?

Though with their high wrongs I am struck to the quick,

Yet with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury
Do I take part. The rarer action is In virtue than in vengeance. They being penitent,

The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further. Go release them. Ari.
My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir.
[Exit.]

Pros. Ye elves of 'hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves,

And ye that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him
When he comes back; you demi-puppets that
By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make, Whereof the ewe not bites; and you whose pastime

Is to make midnight mushrooms, that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid,
Weak masters though ye be, I have bedimm'd
The noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,

And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault
Set roaring war; to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
With his own bolt; the strong-bas'd promontory

Have I made shake, and by the spurs pluck'd
up

The pine and cedar; graves at my command
Have wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em
forth

By my so potent art. But this rough magic
I here abjure, and, when I have requir'd
Some heavenly music, which even now I do,
To work mine end upon their senses that
This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And deeper than did ever plummet sound
I'll drown my book. [Solemn music.]

Here enters ARIEL before: then ALONSO, with a frantic gesture, attended by GONZALO; SEBAS-TIAN and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco. They all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed; which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn air and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy cure thy brains,
Now useless, boil'd within thy skull! There stand,

For you are spell-stopp'd.

Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even sociable to the shew of thine,
Fall fellowly drops. The charm dissolves apace,
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalo,

My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st! I will pay thy graces
Home both in word and deed. Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter.

Thy brother was a furtherer in the act.
Thou art pinch'd for 't now, Sebastian. Flesh and blood,

You, brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature, whom, with Sebastian,

Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong,

Would here have kill'd your king, I do forgive
thee,

Unnatural though thou art. Their understanding

Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore

That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me!
Ariel,

Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell;
I will discase me, and myself present
As I was sometime Milan. Quickly, spirit;
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariel sings and helps to attire him.

Ari. "Where the bee sucks, there suck I.
In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I couch when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer merrily.

Merrily, merrily shall I live now Under the blossom that hangs on the bough."

Pros. Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee;
But yet thou shalt have freedom. So, so, so.

To the King's ship, invisible as thou art ;
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches. The master and the boatswain

Being awake, enforce them to this place, 100
And presently, I prithee.

Art. I drink the air before me, and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat. [Exit.]

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement, 104

Inhabits here. Some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country !

Pros. Behold, sir King,
The wronged Duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body ;
And to thee and thy company I bid 110
A hearty welcome.

Alon. Whe'er thou be'st he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know. Thy pulse Beats as of flesh and blood ; and, since I saw
thee,

The affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave, 116
An if this be at all, a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs. But how should Prospero

Be living and be here ?

Pros. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour can-
not 121

Be measur'd or confin'd.

Gon. Whether this be
Or be not, I'll not swear.

Pros. You do yet taste
Some subtleties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain. Welcome, my friends
all ! 125

[Aside to Seb. and Ant.] But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,
I here could pluck his Highness' frown upon
you

And justify you traitors. At this time
I will tell no tales.

Seb. [Aside.] The devil speaks in him.
Pros. No.

For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive 131
Thy rankest fault ; all of them ; and require
My dukedom of thee, which perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.

Alon. If thou be'st Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation, 135
How thou hast met us here, whom three hours since

Were wreck'd upon this shore, where I have lost —

How sharp the point of this remembrance is ! —
My dear son Ferdinand.

Pros. I am woe for 't, sir.
Alon. Irreparable is the loss, and Patience 140
Says it is past her cure.

Pros. I rather think
You have not sought her help, of whose soft
grace

For the like loss I have her sovereign aid
And rest myself content.

Alon. You the like loss !
Pros. As great to me as late ; and, supportable 145

To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker

Than you may call to comfort you, for I
Have lost my daughter.

Alon. A daughter ?
O heavens, that they were living both in Naples,

The King and Queen there ! That they were, I wish 150

Myself were mudded in that oozy bed Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter ?

Pros. In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords

At this encounter do so much admire
That they devour their reason and scarce think
Their eyes do offices of truth, their words 156
Are natural breath ; but, howsoe'er you have Been jostled from your senses, know for certain
That I am Prospero and that very duke Which was thrust forth of Milan, who most strangely 160

Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd, was landed,

To be the lord on 't. No more yet of this ;
For 't is a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir ; 165
This cell's my court. Here have I few attendants,

And subjects none abroad. Pray you, look in.
My dukedom since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing ;
At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye 170
As much as me my dukedom.

Here Prospero discovers FERDINAND and MI-RANDA playing at chess.

Mir. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Fer. No, my dearest love,
I would not for the world.

Mir. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrange,

And I would call it fair play.

Alon. If this prove 175
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle !
Fer. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful ;

I have curs'd them without cause. [Kneels.]

Alon. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about ! 180

Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

Mir. O, wonder !
How many goodly creatures are there here !
How beauteous mankind is ! O brave new world,

That has such people in 't !

Pros. 'Tis new to thee.
Alon. What is this maid with whom thou wast at play ? 185

Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three hours.
Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us,
And brought us thus together?

Fer. Sir, she is mortal,
But by immortal Providence she's mine.
I chose her when I could not ask my father 190
For his advice, nor thought I had one. She Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before; of whom I have Receiv'd a second life; and second father 195
This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am hers.
But, O, how oddly will it sound that I Must ask my child forgiveness!

Pros. There, sir, stop.
Let us not burden our remembrances with
A heaviness that's gone.

Gon. I have inly wept, 200
Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you gods,

And on this couple drop a blessed crown!
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither.

Alon. I say, Amen, Gonzalo!
Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue 205

Should become Kings of Naples? O, rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars: in one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife 210
Where he himself was lost, Prospero his dukedom

In a poor isle, and all of us ourselves
When no man was his own.

Alon. [To Fer. and Mir.] Give me your hands.

Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy!

Gon. Be it so! Amen!

Re-enter ARIEL, with the Master and BOAT-SWAIN amazedly following.

O, look, sir, look, sir! here is more of us. 215
I prophesied, if a galleys were on land,
This fellow could not drown. Now, blasphemy,
That swear'st grace o'erboard, not an oath on shore?

Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news? 220

Boats. The best news is, that we have safely found

Our king and company; the next, our ship —
Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split —

Is tight and yare and bravely rigg'd as when
We first put out to sea.

Ari. [Aside to Pros.] Sir, all this service 225
Have I done since I went.

Pros. [Aside to Ari.] My tricky spirit!
Alon. These are not natural events; they strengthen

From strange to stranger. Say, how came you hither?

Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well
awake,

I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
And — how we know not — all clapp'd under hatches; 231

Where but even now with strange and several noises

Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And moe diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awak'd; straightway, at liberty; 235
Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant ship, our master Cap'ring to eye her. On a trice, so please
you,

Even in a dream, were we divided from them
And were brought moping hither.

Ari. [Aside to Pros.] Was't well done?

Pros. [Aside to Ari.] Bravely, my diligence. Thou shalt be free. 241

Alon. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod;

And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct of. Some oracle
Must rectify our knowledge.

Pros. Sir, my liege, 245
Do not infest your mind with beating on The strangeness of this business. At pick'd leisure,

Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you,
Which to you shall seem probable, of every These happen'd accidents; till when, be cheerful 250

And think of each thing well. [Aside to Ari.]
Come hither, spirit.

Set Caliban and his companions free;
Untie the spell. [Exit Ariel.] How fares my gracious sir?

There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads that you remember not. 255

Re-enter ARIEL, driving in CALIBAN, STE-PHANO and TRINCULO, in their stolen apparel.

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself; for all is but fortune. Coragio, bully-monster, coragio!

Trin. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight. 260

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits indeed!

How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha!
What things are these, my lord Antonio?

Will money buy 'em?

Ant. Very like; one of them
Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable. 265

Pros. Mark but the badges of these men,
my lords,

Then say if they be true. This mis-shapen
knave,

His mother was a witch, and one so strong That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs, 270

And deal in her command without her power.
These three have robb'd me; and this demi-
devil —

For he's a bastard one — had plotted with
them

To take my life. Two of these fellows you Must know and own; this thing of darkness I 275

Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch'd to death.
Alon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?

Seb. He is drunk now. Where had he wine?

Alon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe. Where should they

Find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'st thou in this pickle? 281

Trin. I have been in such a pickle since I saw you last that, I fear me, will never out of my bones. I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Seb. Why, how now, Stephano! 285

Ste. O, touch me not; I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Pros. You'd be king o' the isle, sirrah?

Ste. I should have been a sore one then.

Alon. This is a strange thing as e'er I look'd on. [Pointing to Caliban.]

Pros. He is as disproportion'd in his manners 290

As in his shape. Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions. As you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Cal. Ay, that I will; and I'll be wise hereafter

And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god 295

And worship this dull fool!

Pros. Go to; away!

Alon. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

Seb. Or stole it, rather.

[Exeunt Cal., Ste., and Trin.]

Pros. Sir, I invite your Highness and your train 300

To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night; which, part of it, I'll waste

With such discourse as, I not doubt, shall make it

Go quick away, — the story of my life
And the particular accidents gone by 305
Since I came to this isle. And in the morn
I'll bring you to your ship and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-belov'd solemnized;
And thence retire me to my Milan, where 310
Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alon. I long
To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Pros. I'll deliver all;
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious that shall catch 315
Your royal fleet far off. [Aside to Ari.] My Ariel, chick,

That is thy charge. Then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well! Please you, draw near. [Exeunt omnes.]

EPILOGUE

SPOKEN BY PROSPERO.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,
Which is most faint. Now, 't is true,
I must be here confin'd by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island by your spell;
But release me from my bands
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want
Spirits to enforce, art to enchant,
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be reliev'd by prayer,
Which pierces so that it assaults
Mercy itself and frees all faults.

As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence set me free. [Exit. 20

Antioch's power is to please.

HISTORIES

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING JOHN

KING JOHN is the only undoubtedly Shakespearean play not entered in the Stationers' Register, nor is there any trace of its having been printed before there appeared in the First Folio the text on which the present edition is based. A mention in Meres's list in 1598 gives a later limit for the date of production; and an earlier limit is approximately fixed by the date of its source, which was published in 1591, and cannot have been written earlier than about 1587. Within this range of ten years we have no good external evidence. Attempts to find allusions to current politics are negatived by the existence of the supposed allusions in the source also. Modern critics vary in their judgments between 1593 and 1596, and considerations of metre and style point rather to the earlier of these dates, and make it probable that the play was written between Richard III and Richard II.

About the middle of the sixteenth century Bishop Bale had made the reign of John the subject of an historical morality with a virulently Protestant purpose; but it does not appear that this piece was used in any of the later dramatic treatments of the theme. In 1591 was published The Troublesome Raigne of John, King of England, an anonymous historical play in two parts, written in blank verse of considerable power. On this Shakespeare founded the present drama, without seeking either to corroborate or to correct, by reference to the chronicles, the very legendary history of his source. The earlier author not only disregarded chronology, but invented, altered, or ignored the facts with the greatest freedom. Like Bale, though to a less degree, he gave his work an anti-Papal bias. He invented the part played by the Bastard Faulconbridge; he combined in one person the Archduke of Austria, who had imprisoned Richard I and was dead at the time of the play, with the Viscount of Limoges, before whose castle Cœur-de-lion had received his mortal wound; he made Arthur younger than he was, and kept Constance a widow, for purposes of dramatic effectiveness; and he omitted all mention of Magna Charta, and with it of the constitutional element in the quarrel between John and his barons. Such are only a few of the violations of historical accuracy which mark almost every scene.

Shakespeare's method of treating the work of his predecessor was peculiar. He re-wrote practically every line, and he condensed the two parts into five acts of moderate length. He selected some scenes and rejected others, but to the action he added almost nothing. On several occasions he economized by representing an action as just completed (e. g., the second coronation), instead of showing it on the stage. He cut out the long comic scene in which Faulconbridge exposes the immorality of the monasteries; and in general he gave up the attempt to picture John as a Protestant hero.

With much gain in compactness and rapidity of action, these changes involved also some loss. The play was left without a leading motive or a truly central character, and some details are not wholly intelligible. Thus the reasons of the Bastard's hatred of Austria, and of his ill-natured speech on the betrothal of Lewis and Blanch (II. i. 504 ff.), are not clear without the prominence given in The Troublesome Raigne to the legendary view of Cœur-de-lion's death at Austria's hands in the one case, and in the other to Eleanor's scheme for marrying Faulconbridge himself to Blanch. More serious is the loss of motive in the poisoning of the King by the monk, — a deed easily intelligible in the older play on account of the prominence given throughout to the hostility between John and the Church.

Shakespeare's additions consist chiefly in the elaboration of character. Most notable are the cases of Constance and the Bastard. The speeches of both are greatly increased in number and length; and the passion of Constance is developed from a slight indication in The Troublesome Raigne, to a representation, which, though verging on the sentimental and hysterical, has been taken as the supreme utterance of motherly love in literature. Faulconbridge is made more consistent and more important, being given the rôle embodying the sturdy sense and patriotism of the loyal Englishman, and voicing, especially in his last speech, what comes as near being a central theme as the play possesses.

ACT I

SCENE I. [King John's palace : a room of state.]

Enter KING JOHN, QUEEN ELEANOR, PEMBROKE, ESSEX, SALISBURY [and others], with CHATILLON.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the King of France

In my behaviour to the majesty,

The borrowed majesty, of England here.

El. A strange beginning: "borrowed majesty!"

K. John. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf

Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son,

Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim

To this fair island and the territories,

To Ireland, Poictiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,

Desiring thee to lay aside the sword

Which sways usurpingly these several titles,

And put the same into young Arthur's hand,

Thy nephew and right royal sovereign.

K. John. What follows if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war,

To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war and blood for blood,

Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth,

The farthest limit of my embassy.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace.

Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;
For ere thou canst report I will be there,
The thunder of my cannon shall be heard.
So hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath
And sullen presage of your own decay.
An honourable conduct let him have.
Pembroke, look to 't. Farewell, Chatillon.

[Exeunt Chatillon and Pembroke.]

El. What now, my son! have I not ever said

How that ambitious Constance would not cease
Till she had kindled France and all the world
Upon the right and party of her son?

This might have been prevented and made whole

With very easy arguments of love,
Which now the manage of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession and our right for us.

El. Your strong possession much more than your right,

Or else it must go wrong with you and me.
So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
Which none but heaven and you and I shall hear.

Enter a Sheriff [and whispers to Essex].

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy

Come from the country to be judg'd by you
That e'er I heard. Shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach.
—Our abbays and our priories shall pay
This expedition's charge.

Enter ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE and PHILIP.

What men are you?

Bast. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,

A soldier by the honour-giving hand
Of Cœur-de-lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou? 85

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?

You came not of one mother then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king;

That is well known; and, as I think, one father; 90

But for the certain knowledge of that truth

I put you o'er to heaven and to my mother.

Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

El. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother

And wound her honour with this diffidence. 95

Bast. I, madam? No, I have no reason for it.

That is my brother's plea and none of mine;

The which if he can prove, 'a pops me out

At least from fair five hundred pounds a year.

Heaven guard my mother's honour and my land! 100

K. John. A good blunt fellow. Why, being younger born,

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land;

But once he slander'd me with bastardy.

But whe'er I be as true begot or no, 105

That still I lay upon my mother's head;

But that I am as well begot, my liege,—

Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!—

Compare our faces and be judge yourself.

If old Sir Robert did beget us both 110

And were our father, and this son like him,

O old Sir Robert, father, on my knee

I give heaven thanks I was not like to thee!

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us here!

El. He hath a trick of Cœur-de-lion's face; 115

The accent of his tongue affecteth him.

Do you not read some tokens of my son

In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts

And finds them perfect Richard. Sirrah, speak, 120

What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father.

With half that face would he have all my land,—

A half-fac'd groat five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd, 125

Your brother did employ my father much,—

Bast. Well, sir, by this you cannot get my land.

Your tale must be how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an embassy

To Germany, there with the Emperor 130

To treat of high affairs touching that time.

The advantage of his absence took the King.
And in the meantime sojourn'd at my father's;
Where how he did prevail I shame to speak.
But truth is truth. Large lengths of seas and shores 135

Between my father and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this same lusty gentleman was got.

Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me, and took it on his death. 140

That this my mother's son was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world

Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.

Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will. 145

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate.

Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him,
And if she did play false, the fault was hers;

Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands

That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son, 150

Had of your father claim'd this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept

This calf bred from his cow from all the world;

In sooth he might; then, if he were my brother's, 155

My brother might not claim him, nor your father,

Being none of his, refuse him. This concludes:
My mother's son did get your father's heir;

Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force 160

To dispossess that child which is not his?
Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, sir,

Than was his will to get me, as I think.

El. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge

And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land, 165

Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-lion,
Lord of thy presence and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,

And I had his, Sir Robert's his, like him;

And if my legs were two such riding-rods, 170

My arms such eel-skins stuff'd, my face so thin
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose

Lest men should say, Look, where three-farthings goes!

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,—
Would I might never stir from off this place!—

I would give it every foot to have this face; 175

I would not be Sir Nob in any case.

El. I like thee well. Wilt thou forsake thy fortune,

Bequeath thy land to him and follow me?
I am a soldier, and now bound to France. 180

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance.

Your face hath got five hundred pound a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence and 't is dear.

Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

El. Nay, I would have you go before me thither. 185

Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.

K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip, my liege, so is my name begun; Philip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest. 160

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great, Arise Sir Richard and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother by the mother's side, give me your hand;

My father gave me honour, yours gave land. Now blessed be the hour, by night or day, 165

When I was got, Sir Robert was away!

El. The very spirit of Plantagenet!

I am thy grandam, Richard; call me so.

Bast. Madam, by chance but not by truth; what though?

Something about, a little from the right, 170

In at the window, or else o'er the hatch.

Who dares not stir by day must walk by night,

And have is have, however men do catch.

Near or far off, well won is still well shot,

And I am I, howe'er I was begot. 175

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge, now hast thou thy desire;

A landless knight makes thee a landed squire. Come, madam, and come, Richard, we must speed

For France, for France, for it is more than need.

Bast. Brother, adieu; good fortune come to thee! 180

For thou wast got i' the way of honesty.

[Exeunt all but Bastard.]

A foot of honour better than I was;

But many a many foot of land the worse.

Well, now can I make any Joan a lady.

"Good den, Sir Richard!" "God-a-mercy, fellow!" 185

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;

For new-made honour doth forget men's names;

'Tis too respective and too sociable

For your conversion. Now your traveller,

He and his toothpick at my worship's mess, 190

—And when my knightly stomach is suffic'd,

Why then I suck my teeth and catechise

My picked man of countries. "My dear sir,"

Thus, leaning on mine elbow, I begin,

"I shall beseech you"—that is question

now; 195

And then comes answer like an Absey book.

"O sir," says answer, "at your best command;

At your employment; at your service, sir."

"No, sir," says question, "I, sweet sir, at

yours." 200

And so, ere answer knows what question would,

Saving in dialogue of compliment,

And talking of the Alps and Apennines,

The Pyrenean and the river Po,

It draws toward supper in conclusion so.

But this is worshipful society 205

And fits the mounting spirit like myself,

For he is but a bastard to the time

That doth not smack of observation.

And so am I, whether I smack or no;

And not alone in habit and device, 210

Exterior form, outward accoutrement,
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth;
Which, though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn; 215
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising.
But who comes in such haste in riding-ropes?
What woman-post is this? Hath she no husband

That will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter LADY FAULCONBRIDGE and JAMES GURNEY.

O me! 't is my mother. How now, good lady! What brings you here to court so hastily? 220

Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother?

Where is he,

That holds in chase mine honour up and down?

Bast. My brother Robert? Old Sir Robert's son?

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man? 225

Is it Sir Robert's son that you seek so?

Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou un-reverend boy,

Sir Robert's son. Why scorn'st thou at Sir Robert?

He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou.

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave a while? 230

Gur. Good leave, good Philip.

Bast. Philip! sparrow! James, There's toys abroad; anon I'll tell thee more.

[Exit Gurney.]

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son.

Sir Robert might have eat his part in me

Upon Good-Friday and ne'er broke his fast. 235

Sir Robert could do well; marry, to confess,

Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it;

We know his handiwork. Therefore, good mother,

To whom am I beholding for these limbs?

Sir Robert never help to make this leg. 240

Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,

That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?

What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother, Basilisco-like.

What! I am dubb'd! I have it on my shoulder. 245

But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;

I have disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land;

Legitimation, name, and all is gone.

Then, good my mother, let me know my father;

Some proper man, I hope. Who was it, mother? 250

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?

Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.

Lady F. King Richard Cœur-de-lion was thy father.

By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd To make room for him in my husband's bed. 255

Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge !
Thou art the issue of my dear offence,
Which was so strongly urg'd past my defence.

Bast. Now, by this light, were I to get again,

Madam, I would not wish a better father. 260
Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth yours ; your fault was not your folly.

Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subjected tribute to commanding love,
Against whose fury and unmatched force 265
The aweless lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.

He that perforce robs lions of their hearts
May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father ! 270

Who lives and dares but say thou didst not well

When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.

Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin ;

And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin. 275

Who says it was, he lies ; I say 't was not.

[Exeunt.]

[ACT II]

SCENE [I. France.] Before Angiers.

Enter AUSTRIA [and forces, drums, etc., on one side : on the other] KING PHILIP of France [and his power] ; LEWIS, ARTHUR, CONSTANCE [and attendants].

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.

Arthur, that great forerunner of thy blood,
Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart
And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave ; 5
And for amends to his posterity,
At our importance hither is he come
To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf,
And to rebuke the usurpation
Of thy unnatural uncle, English John. 10

Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-lion's death

The rather that you give his offspring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of war.

I give you welcome with a powerless hand, 15
But with a heart full of unstained love.

Welcome before the gates of Angiers, Duke.

Lew. A noble boy ! Who would not do thee right ?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss
As seal to this indenture of my love 20

That to my home I will no more return

Till Angiers and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,

Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides

And coops from other lands her islanders, 25
Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main,
That water-walled bulwark, still secure
And confident from foreign purposes,
Even till that utmost corner of the west
Salute thee for her king ; till then, fair boy, 30
Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O, take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks,

Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength

To make a more requital to your love !

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords 35

In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phi. Well then, to work ! Our cannon shall be bent

Against the brows of this resisting town.

Call for our chiefest men of discipline

To cull the plots of best advantages, 40

We'll lay before this town our royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,

But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy,
Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood. 45

My Lord Chatillon may from England bring
That right in peace which here we urge in war,
And then we shall repent each drop of blood
That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter CHATILLON.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady ! Lo, upon thy wish, 50

Our messenger Chatillon is arriv'd !

What England says, say briefly, gentle lord ;

We coldly pause for thee ; Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege

And stir them up against a mightier task. 55

England, impatient of your just demands,

Hath put himself in arms. The adverse winds,

Whose leisure I have stay'd, have given him time

To land his legions all as soon as I ;

His marches are expedient to this town, 60

His forces strong, his soldiers confident.

With him along is come the mother-queen,

An Ate, stirring him to blood and strife ;

With her her niece, the Lady Blanch of Spain ;

With them a bastard of the king's deceas'd ; 65

And all the unsettled humours of the land,

Rash, inconsiderate, fiery volunteers

With ladies' faces and fierce dragons' spleens,

Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,

Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs, 70

To make a hazard of new fortunes here.

In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits

Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er

Did never float upon the swelling tide,

To do offence and scath in Christendom. 75

The interruption of their churlish drums

Cuts off more circumstance. They are at hand,

[Drum beats.]

To parley or to fight ; therefore prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much 80

We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion.
Let them be welcome then; we are prepar'd.

Enter KING JOHN, ELEANOR, BLANCH, the BASTARD, PEMBROKE, and others.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France in peace permit

Our just and lineal entrance to our own; 85
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven,

Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
Their proud contempt that beats His peace to heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England, if that war return

From France to England, there to live in peace. 90

England we love; and for that England's sake
With burden of our armour here we sweat.
This toil of ours should be a work of thine;
But thou from loving England art so far,
That thou hast under-wrought his lawful king, 95

Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Out-faced infant state, and done a rape
Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.
Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face.
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his; 100

This little abstract doth contain that large
Which died in Geoffrey; and the hand of Time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.
That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,
And this his son; England was Geoffrey's right, 105

And this is Geoffrey's: in the name of God
How comes it then that thou art call'd a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France, 110

To draw my answer from thy articles?

K. Phi. From that supernal judge, that stirs good thoughts

In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right.
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy; 115

Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong
And by whose help I mean to chastise it.

K. John. Alack, thou dost usurp authority.

K. Phi. Excuse; it is to beat usurping down.

El. Who is it thou dost call usurper, France? 120

Const. Let me make answer; thy usurping son.

El. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king
That thou mayst be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true

As thine was to thy husband; and this boy 125
Liker in feature to his father Geoffrey
Than thou and John in manners, being as like
As rain to water, or devil to his dam.
My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think
His father never was so true begot. 130
It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.

El. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Aust. Peace!

Bast. Hear the crier.

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, sir, with you, 135

An 'a may catch your hide and you alone.
You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard.
I'll smoke your skin-coat, an I catch you right.

Sirrah, look to 't; i' faith, I will, i' faith. 140

Blanch. O, well did he become that lion's robe,

That did disrobe the lion of that robe!

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him
As great Alcides' shows upon an ass.

But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back, 145

Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same that deafs our ears

With this abundance of superfluous breath?

King Philip, determine what we shall do straight.

K. Phi. Women and fools, break off your conference. 150

King John, this is the very sum of all:
England and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee.

Wilt thou resign them and lay down thy arms?

K. John. My life as soon. I do defy thee, France. 155

Arthur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand,
And out of my dear love I'll give thee more
Than e'er the coward hand of France can win.
Submit thee, boy.

El. Come to thy grandam, child.

Const. Do, child, go to it grandam, child; 160
Give grandam kingdom, and it grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig.
There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace.

I would that I were low laid in my grave;
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

El. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps. 165

Const. Now shame upon you, whe'er she does or no!

His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,

Draws those heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,

Which Heaven shall take in nature of a fee; 170

Ay, with these crystal beads Heaven shall be brib'd

To do him justice and revenge on you.

El. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth,

Call not me slanderer! Thou and thine usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights ¹⁷⁶
Of this oppressed boy. This is thy eldest son's
son,

Infortunate in nothing but in thee.

Thy sins are visited in this poor child;

The canon of the law is laid on him, ¹⁸⁰

Being but the second generation

Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

K. John. Bedlam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,

That he is not only plagued for her sin,

But God hath made her sin and her the plague

On this removed issue, plagued for her ¹⁸⁶

And with her plague; her sin his injury,

Her injury the beadle to her sin,

All punish'd in the person of this child,

And all for her. A plague upon her! ¹⁹⁰

El. Thou unadvised scold, I can produce

A will that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? A will! a wicked will;

A woman's will; a cank'ered grandam's will!

K. Phi. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate. ¹⁹⁵

It ill beseems this presence to cry aim

To these ill-tuned repetitions.

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls

These men of Angiers. Let us hear them speak

Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's. ²⁰⁰

Trumpet sounds. Enter a CITIZEN upon the walls [attended].

Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the walls?

K. Phi. 'Tis France, for England.

K. John. England, for itself.
You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,—

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,

Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle—

K. John. For our advantage; therefore hear us first. ²⁰⁶

These flags of France, that are advanced here

Before the eye and prospect of your town,

Have hither march'd to your endamage.

The cannons have their bowels full of wrath, ²¹⁰

And ready mounted are they to spit forth

Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls.

All preparation for a bloody siege

And merciless proceeding by these French ²¹⁴

Confronts your city's eyes, your winking gates;

And but for our approach those sleeping stones,

That as a waist doth girdle you about,

By the compulsion of their ordinance

By this time from their fixed beds of lime

Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made ²²⁰

For bloody power to rush upon your peace.

But on the sight of us your lawful king,

Who painfully with much expedient march

Have brought a countercheck before your gates,

To save unscratch'd your city's threat'ned cheeks, ²²⁵

Behold, the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle;

And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,

To make a shaking fever in your walls,

They shoot but calm words folded up in smoke,

To make a faithless error in your ears; ²³⁰

Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,

And let us in, your king, whose labour'd spirits,

Forwearied in this action of swift speed,

Crave harbourage within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer to us both. ²³⁵

Lo, in this right hand, whose protection

Is most divinely vow'd upon the right

Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,

Son to the elder brother of this man,

And king o'er him and all that he enjoys. ²⁴⁰

For this down-trodden equity, we tread

In warlike march these greens before your town,

Being no further enemy to you

Than the constraint of hospitable zeal

In the relief of this oppressed child ²⁴⁵

Religiously provokes. Be pleased then

To pay that duty which you truly owe

To him that owes it, namely this young prince;

And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,

Save in aspect, hath all offence seal'd up: ²⁵⁰

Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent

Against the invulnerable clouds of heaven;

And with a blessed and unvex'd retire,

With unhack'd swords and helmets all un-bruis'd,

We will bear home that lusty blood again ²⁵⁵

Which here we came to spout against your town,

And leave your children, wives, and you in peace.

But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer,

'Tis not the roundure of your old-fac'd walls

Can hide you from our messengers of war, ²⁶⁰

Though all these English and their discipline

Were harbour'd in their rude circumference.

Then tell us, shall your city call us lord,

In that behalf which we have challeng'd it?

Or shall we give the signal to our rage ²⁶⁵

And stalk in blood to our possession?

Cit. In brief, we are the King of England's subjects.

For him, and in his right, we hold this town.

K. John. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.

Cit. That can we not; but he that proves the King, ²⁷⁰

To him will we prove loyal. Till that time

Have we ramm'd up our gates against the world.

K. John. Doth not the crown of England prove the King?

And if not that, I bring you witnesses,

Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed,—

Bast. Bastards, and else.

K. John. To verify our title with their lives.

K. Phi. As many and as well-born bloods as those—

Bast. Some bastards too.

K. Phi. Stand in his face to contradict his claim. 380

Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,

We for the worthiest hold the right for both.

K. John. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls

That to their everlasting residence,

Before the dew of evening fall, shall fleet 385
In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

K. Phi. Amen, amen! Mount, chevaliers!
To arms!

Bast. Saint George, that swinged the dragon, and e'er since

Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,

Teach us some fence! [To Aust.] Sirrah, were
I at home, 390

At your den, sirrah, with your lioness,

I would set an ox-head to your lion's hide,
And make a monster of you.

Aust. Peace! no more.

Bast. O, tremble, for you hear the lion
roar.

K. John. Up higher to the plain, where we'll set forth 395

In best appointment all our regiments.

Bast. Speed then, to take advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so; and at the other hill Command the rest to stand. God and our right! [Exeunt.]

Here after excursions, enter the HERALD OF FRANCE, with trumpets, to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your
gates, 300

And let young Arthur, Duke of Bretagne, in,
Who by the hand of France this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an English mother,

Whose sons lie scattered on the bleeding ground.
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies, 305

Coldly embracing the discoloured earth;

And victory, with little loss, doth play

Upon the dancing banners of the French,

Who are at hand, triumphantly displayed,

To enter conquerors and to proclaim 310

Arthur of Bretagne England's king and yours.

Enter ENGLISH HERALD, with trumpet.

E. Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells,

King John, your king and England's, doth approach,

Commander of this hot malicious day.
Their armours, that march'd hence so silver-
bright, 315

Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.

There stuck no plume in any English crest

That is removed by a staff of France.

Our colours do return in those same hands

That did display them when we first march'd
forth; 320

And, like a jolly troop of huntsmen, come

Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,

Dy'd in the dying slaughter of their foes.

Open your gates and give the victors way.

Cit. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold, 325

From first to last, the onset and retire

Of both your armies, whose equality

By our best eyes cannot be censured.

Blood hath bought blood and blows have an-swer'd blows;

Strength match'd with strength, and power confronted power. 330

Both are alike; and both alike we like.

One must prove greatest. While they weigh so even,

We hold our town for neither, yet for both.

Re-enter the two KINGS, with their powers, at severeral doors.

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right run on? 335

Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,

Shall leave his native channel and o'erswell

With course disturb'd even thy confining shores,

Unless thou let his silver water keep

A peaceful progress to the ocean. 340

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood,

In this hot trial, more than we of France;

Rather, lost more. And by this hand I swear,

That sways the earth this climate overlooks,

Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,

We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms
we bear, 345

Or add a royal number to the dead,

Gracing the scroll that tells of this war's loss

With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers, 350

When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!

O, now doth Death line his dead chaps with steel;

The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;

And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men,

In undetermin'd differences of kings. 355

Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?

Cry, havoc! kings. Back to the stained field,

You equal potents, fiery-kindled spirits!

Then let confusion of one part confirm

The other's peace. Till then, blows, blood, and
death! 360

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England, who's your king?

Cit. The King of England, when we know
the King.

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here, 365

Lord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

Cit. A greater power than we denies all this;

And till it be undoubted, we do lock

Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates,

Kings of our fear, until our fears, resolv'd, 370

Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings,

And stand securely on their battlements
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point 375
At your industrious scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be rul'd by me:
Do like the mutines of Jerusalem,
Be friends a while, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town. 380
By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon charged to the mouths,
Till their soul-fearing clamours have brawld
down

The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city.
I'd play incessantly upon these jades, 385
Even till unfenced desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.
That done, dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;
Turn face to face and bloody point to point; 390
Then, in a moment, Fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion,
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy? 395

K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above
our heads,

I like it well. France, shall we knit our powers
And lay this Angiers even with the ground;
Then after fight who shall be king of it? 400

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peevish town,
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these saucy walls;
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground, 405

Why then defy each other, and pell-mell
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven or hell.

K. Phi. Let it be so. Say, where will you assault?

K. John. We from the west will send destruction

Into this city's bosom. 410

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phi. Our thunder from the south
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. O prudent discipline! From north to south,

Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth.
I'll stir them to it. Come, away, away! 415

Cit. Hear us, great kings! Vouchsafe a while to stay,

And I shall show you peace and fair-fac'd league,

Win you this city without stroke or wound,
Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,

That here come sacrifices for the field. 420
Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on with favour; we are bent to hear.

Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the Lady
Blanch,

Is niece to England. Look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin and that lovely maid. 425

If lusty Love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?

If zealous Love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?

If Love ambitious sought a match of birth, 430
Whose veins bound richer blood than Lady
Blanch?

Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete;
If not complete of, say he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to name want, 435
If want it be not that she is not he.
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such as she;
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him. 440

O, two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in;
And two such shores to two such streams made
one,

Two such controlling bounds shall you be,
kings,

To these two princes, if you marry them. 445
This union shall do more than battery can
To our fast-closed gates; for at this match,
With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but without this match, 450

The sea enraged is not half so deaf,
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion, no, not Death himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory,
As we to keep this city.

Bast. Here's a stay 455

That shakes the rotten carcass of old Death
Out of his rags! Here's a large mouth, indeed,
That spits forth death and mountains, rocks
and seas,

Talks as familiarly of roaring lions
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs! 460

What cannoner begot this lusty blood?
He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke, and bounce;

He gives the bastinado with his tongue:
Our ears are cudgell'd; not a word of his
But buffets better than a fist of France. 465
Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words
Since I first call'd my brother's father dad.

El. Son, list to this conjunction, make this match;

Give with our niece a dowry large enough;
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie 470

Thy now unsur'd assurance to the crown,
That yon green boy shall have no sun to ripe

The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.
I see a yielding in the looks of France;

Mark, how they whisper. Urge them while their souls 475

Are capable of this ambition,
Lest zeal, now melted by the windy breath

Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.

Cit. Why answer not the double majesties 480

This friendly treaty of our threat'ned town?
K. Phi. Speak England first, that hath been forward first

To speak unto this city. What say you?

K. John. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely son,

Can in this book of beauty read, "I love," 485
 Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen;
 For Anjou and fair Touraine, Maine, Poitiers,
 And all that we upon this side the sea,
 Except this city now by us besieg'd,
 Find liable to our crown and dignity, 490
 Shall gild her bridal bed, and make her rich
 In titles, honours, and promotions,
 As she in beauty, education, blood,
 Holds hand with any princess of the world.

K. Phi. What say'st thou, boy? Look in the lady's face. 495

Lew. I do, my lord; and in her eye I find
 A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
 The shadow of myself form'd in her eye;
 Which, being but the shadow of your son,
 Becomes a sun and makes your son a shadow. 500

I do protest I never lov'd myself
 Till now infixed I beheld myself
 Drawn in the flattering table of her eye.

[Whispers with Blanch.
Bast. Drawn in the flattering table of her eye!
 Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow! 505

And quarter'd in her heart! he doth espy
 Himself love's traitor. This is pity now,
 That, hang'd and drawn and quarter'd, there should be

In such a love so vile a lout as he.

Blanch. My uncle's will in this respect is mine. 510

If he see aught in you that makes him like,
 That anything he sees, which moves his liking,
 I can with ease translate it to my will;
 Or if you will, to speak more properly,
 I will enforce it easily to my love. 515

Further I will not flatter you, my lord,
 That all I see in you is worthy love,
 Than this, that nothing do I see in you, Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your judge,

That I can find should merit any hate. 520

K. John. What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?

Blanch. That she is bound in honour still to do

What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

K. John. Speak then, Prince Dauphin. Can you love this lady?

Lew. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from
 love; 525

For I do love her most unfeignedly.

K. John. Then do I give Volquessen, Touraine, Maine,

Poitiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,
 With her to thee; and this addition more,
 Full thirty thousand marks of English coin. 530
 Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withal,
 Command thy son and daughter to join hands.

K. Phi. It likes us well. Young princes, close your hands.

Aust. And your lips too; for I am well assur'd

That I did so when I was first assur'd. 535

K. Phi. Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your
 gates,

Let in that amity which you have made;
 For at Saint Mary's Chapel presently
 The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd.
 Is not the Lady Constance in this troop? 540
 I know she is not, for this match made up
 Her presence would have interrupted much.
 Where is she and her son? Tell me, who knows.

Lew. She is sad and passionate at your Highness' tent.

K. Phi. And, by my faith, this league that we have made 545

Will give her sadness very little cure.
 Brother of England, how may we content
 This widow lady? In her right we came,
 Which we, God knows, have turn'd another way,

To our own vantage.

K. John. We will heal up all; 550
 For we'll create young Arthur Duke of Bre-
 tagne

And Earl of Richmond; and this rich fair
 town

We make him lord of. Call the Lady Constance;

Some speedy messenger bid her repair
 To our solemnity. I trust we shall, 555
 If not fill up the measure of her will,
 Yet in some measure satisfy her so
 That we shall stop her exclamation.
 Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
 To this unlook'd for, unprepared pomp. 560

[Exeunt [all but the Bastard].

Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!

John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
 Hath willingly departed with a part;
 And France, whose armour conscience buckled
 on,

Whom zeal and charity brought to the field 565
 As God's own soldier, rounded in the ear
 With that same purpose-changer, that sly
 devil,

That broker that still breaks the pate of faith,
 That daily break-vow, he that wins of all,
 Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men,
 maids, 570

Who, having no external thing to lose
 But the word "maid," cheats the poor maid of
 that,

That smooth-faced gentleman, tickling Commodity,

Commodity, the bias of the world, —
 The world, who of itself is peised well, 575

Made to run even upon even ground,
 Till this advantage, this vile-drawing bias,
 This sway of motion, this Commodity,
 Makes it take head from all indifferency,
 From all direction, purpose, course, intent; 580
 And this same bias, this Commodity,

This bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
 Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
 Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aim,
 From a resolv'd and honourable war 585

To a most base and vile-concluded peace.

And why rail I on this Commodity?
 But for because he hath not woo'd me yet;

Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
 When his fair angels would salute my palm; ⁶⁰⁰
 But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
 Like a poor beggar, raieth on the rich.
 Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail
 And say there is no sin but to be rich;
 And being rich, my virtue then shall be ⁵⁹⁵
 To say there is no vice but beggary.
 Since kings break faith upon commodity,
 Gain, be my lord, for I will worship thee.

[Exit.]

ACT [III]

[SCENE I. The French King's pavilion.]

Enter CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and SALISBURY.

Const. Gone to be married! Gone to swear a peace!

False blood to false blood join'd! Gone to be friends!

Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?

It is not so; thou hast misspoke, misheard.

Be well advis'd, tell o'er thy tale again. ⁵

It cannot be; thou dost but say 't is so.

I trust I may not trust thee, for thy word

Is but the vain breath of a common man.

Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;

I have a king's oath to the contrary. ¹⁰

Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frightening me,

For I am sick and capable of fears,

Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears,

A widow, husbandless, subject to fears,

A woman, naturally born to fears; ¹⁵

And though thou now confess thou didst but jest,

With my vex'd spirits I cannot take a truce,

But they will quake and tremble all this day.

What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?

Why dost thou look so sadly on my son? ²⁰

What means that hand upon that breast of thine?

Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,

Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?

Be these sad signs confirmers of thy words?

Then speak again; not all thy former tale, ²⁵

But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I believe you think them false

That give you cause to prove my saying true.

Const. O, if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,

Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die, ³⁰

And let belief and life encounter so

As doth the fury of two desperate men

Which in the very meeting fall and die.

Lewis marry Blanch! O boy, then where art thou?

France friend with England, what becomes of me? ³⁵

Fellow, be gone! I cannot brook thy sight.

This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I, good lady, done,

But spoke the harm that is by others done?

Const. Which harm within itself so heinous is ⁴⁰

As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arth. I do beseech you, madam, be content.

Const. If thou that bid'st me be content wert grim,

Ugly, and slanderous to thy mother's womb,

Full of unpleasing blots and sightless stains, ⁴⁵

Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,

Patch'd with foul moles and eye-offending marks,

I would not care, I then would be content;

For then I should not love thee, no, nor thou

Become thy great birth nor deserve a crown. ⁵⁰

But thou art fair, and at thy birth, dear boy,

Nature and Fortune join'd to make thee great.

Of Nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast

And with the half-blown rose. But Fortune, O,

She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee; ⁵⁵

She adulterates hourly with thine uncle John;

And with her golden hand hath pluck'd on France

To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,

And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.

France is a bawd to Fortune and King John, ⁶⁰

That strumpet Fortune, that usurping John!

Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?

Envenom him with words, or get thee gone

And leave those woes alone which I alone

Am bound to under-bear.

Sal.

Pardon me, madam,

I may not go without you to the kings. ⁶⁵

Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt; I will not go with thee.

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;

For Grief is proud and makes his owner stoop.

To me and to the state of my great grief ⁷⁰

Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great

That no supporter but the huge firm earth

Can hold it up. Here I and sorrow sit;

Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

[Sits herself on the ground.]

Enter KING JOHN, KING PHILIP, LEWIS, BLANCH, ELEANOR, the BASTARD, AUSTRIA [and Attendants].

K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed day ⁷⁵

Ever in France shall be kept festival.

To solemnize this day the glorious sun

Stays in his course and plays the alchemist,

Turning with splendour of his precious eye

The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold. ⁸⁰

The yearly course that brings this day about

Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day!

[Rising.]

What hath this day deserv'd? What hath it done,

That it in golden letters should be set Among the high tides in the calendar? ⁸⁵

Nay, rather turn this day out of the week,

This day of shame, oppression, perjury.

Or, if it must stand still, let wives with child

Pray that their burdens may not fall this day, ⁹⁰

Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd ;
But on this day let seamen fear no wreck ;
No bargains break that are not this day made.
This day, all things begun come to ill end,
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change ! 155

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause

To curse the fair proceedings of this day.
Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty ?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit Resembling majesty, which, being touch'd and tried, 100

Proves valueless. You are forsworn, forsworn !
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours.
The grappling vigour and rough frown of war
Is cold in amity and painted peace, 105
And our oppression hath made up this league.
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjur'd kings !

A widow cries ; be husband to me, heavens !
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the day in peace ; but, ere sunset, 110
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd kings !
Hear me, O, hear me !

Aust. Lady Constance, peace !

Const. War ! war ! no peace ! Peace is to me a war.

O Lymoges ! O Austria ! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil. Thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward ! 115

Thou little valiant, great in villainy !
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side !

Thou Fortune's champion that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by

To teach thee safety ! thou art perjur'd too, 120
And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag and stamp and swear

Upon my party ! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side,

Been sworn my soldier, bidding me depend 125
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength,
And dost thou now fall over to my foes ?

Thou wear a lion's hide ! Doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me ! 130

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

K. John. We like not this ; thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the Pope. 135

Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven !

To thee, King John, my holy errand is.
I Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,

And from Pope Innocent the legate here, 140
Do in his name religiously demand

Why thou against the Church, our holy mother,

So wilfully dost spurn ; and force perforce
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen Archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see ?

This, in our foresaid Holy Father's name, 145
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthy name to interrotories

Can task the free breath of a sacred king ?
Thou canst not, Cardinal, devise a name

So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous, 150
To charge me to an answer, as the Pope.

Tell him this tale ; and from the mouth of England

Add thus much more, that no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions ;

But as we, under Heaven, are supreme head, 155
So under Him that great supremacy,

Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without the assistance of a mortal hand.

So tell the Pope, all reverence set apart
To him and his usurp'd authority. 160

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

K. John. Though you and all the kings of Christendom

Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out ;

And by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust, 165
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man

Who in that sale sells pardon from himself,
Though you and all the rest so grossly led

This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish,
Yet I alone, alone do me oppose 170

Against the Pope and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power that I
have,

Thou shalt stand curs'd and excommunicate ;
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt

From his allegiance to an heretic ; 175
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,

Canonized and worshipp'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course

Thy hateful life.

Const. O, lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse a while !

Good father Cardinal, cry thou amen 181
To my keen curses ; for without my wrong

There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for my curse.

Const. And for mine too. When law can do no right, 185

Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here,

For he that holds his kingdom holds the law ;
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,

How can the law forbid my tongue to curse ? 190
Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,

Let go the hand of that arch-heretic ;
And raise the power of France upon his head,

Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

El. Look'st thou pale, France ? Do not let go thy hand. 195

Const. Look to that, devil, lest that France repent,
And by disjoining hands, hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the Cardinal.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs, 200

Because —

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the Cardinal?

Const. What should he say, but as the Cardinal?

Lew. Bethink you, father; for the difference Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome, 205
Or the light loss of England for a friend.
Forego the easier.

Blanch. That 's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast! The devil tempts thee here

In likeness of a new untrimmed bride.

Blanch. The Lady Constance speaks not from her faith, 210

But from her need.

Const. O, if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need must needs infer this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need.
O then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up; 215

Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down!

K. John. The King is mov'd, and answers not to this.

Const. O, be remov'd from him, and answer well!

Aust. Do so, King Philip; hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet lout. 220

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say but will perplex thee more,

If thou stand excommunicate and curs'd?

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person yours,

And tell me how you would bestow yourself. 225

This royal hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls

Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows.

The latest breath that gave the sound of words 230

Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love
Between our kingdoms and our royal selves;

And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands

To clap this royal bargain up of peace, 235
Heaven knows, they were besmear'd and over-

stain'd
With slaughter's pencil, where revenge did paint

The fearful difference of incensed kings:
And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,

So newly join'd in love, so strong in both, 240
Unyoke this seizure and this kind regret?

Play fast and loose with faith? So jest with heaven,

Make such unconstant children of ourselves,

As now again to snatch our palm from palm,
Unswear faith sworn, and on the marriage-bed
Of smiling Peace to march a bloody host, 245

And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true Sincerity? O, holy sir,

My reverend father, let it not be so!
Out of your grace devise, ordain, impose 250

Some gentle order; and then we shall be blest
To do your pleasure and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.

Therefore to arms! Be champion of our Church,
Or let the Church, our mother, breathe her

curse, 255

A mother's curse, on her revolting son.
France, thou mayst hold a serpent by the

tongue,
A chafed lion by the mortal paw,

A fasting tiger safer by the tooth, 260
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost

hold.
K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;

And like a civil war set'st oath to oath,

Thy tongue against thy tongue. O, let thy vow
First made to heaven, first be to heaven per-

form'd, 265
That is, to be the champion of our Church!

What since thou swor'st is sworn against thy-

self
And may not be performed by thyself,

For that which thou hast sworn to do amiss 270
Is most amiss when it is truly done,

And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it.

The better act of purposes mistook
Is to mistake again; though indirect, 275

Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood cures, as fire cools

fire
Within the scorched veins of one new-burn'd.

It is religion that doth make vows kept;
But thou hast sworn against religion, 280

By what thou swear'st against the thing thou

swear'st,
And makest an oath the surety for thy truth

Against an oath. The truth thou art unsure
To swear, swears only not to be forsworn;

Else what a mockery should it be to swear! 285
But thou dost swear only to be forsworn;

And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost

swear.
Therefore thy later vows against thy first

Is in thyself rebellion to thyself;
And better conquest never canst thou make 290

Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions;

Upon which better part our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them. But if not, then know

The peril of our curses light on thee 295
So heavy as thou shalt not shake them off,

But in despair die under their black weight.
Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion!

Bast. Will 't not be?
Will not a calf's-skin stop that mouth of thine?

Lew. Father, to arms!

Blanch. Upon thy wedding-day?
Against the blood that thou hast married? 301
What, shall our feast be kept with slaughtered men?

Shall braying trumpets and loud churlish drums,

Clamours of hell, be measures to our pomp?
O husband, hear me! Ay, alack, how new 305
Is husband in my mouth! Even for that name,
Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,

Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms
Against mine uncle.

Const. O, upon my knee,
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee, 310
Thou virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom Forethought by Heaven!

Blanch. Now shall I see thy love. What motive may

Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?

Const. That which upholdeth him that thee upholds, 315

His honour. O, thine honour, Lewis, thine honour!

Lew. I muse your Majesty doth seem so cold,

When such profound respects do pull you on.

Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.

K. Phi. Thou shalt not need, England, I will fall from thee. 320

Const. O fair return of banish'd majesty!

El. O foul revolt of French inconstancy!

K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast. Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton Time,

Is it as he will? Well then, France shall rue.

Blanch. The sun's o'ercast with blood; fair day, adieu! 326

Which is the side that I must go withal?

I am with both; each army hath a hand;

And in their rage, I having hold of both,

They whirl asunder and dismember me. 330

Husband, I cannot pray that thou mayst win;

Uncle, I needs must pray that thou mayst lose;

Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;

Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive.

Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose; 335

Assured loss before the match be play'd.

Lew. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.

Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together. [Exit Bastard.] 341

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath,

A rage whose heat hath this condition,

That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,

The blood, and dearest-valued blood, of France.

K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire.

Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy. 346

K. John. No more than he that threatens. To arrais let's hie! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The same. Plains near Angiers.]

Alarums, excursions. Enter the BASTARD, with Austria's head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot.

Some airy devil hovers in the sky
And pours down mischief. Austria's head lie there,

Enter KING JOHN, ARTHUR, and HUBERT.

While Philip breathes.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy. Philip, make up. 3

My mother is assailed in our tent,
And ta'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I rescued her;

Her Highness is in safety, fear you not.

But on, my liege; for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end. 10

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The same.]

Alarums, excursions, retreat. Enter KING JOHN, ELEANOR, ARTHUR, the BASTARD, HUBERT, and Lords.

K. John. [To Eleanor.] So shall it be; your Grace shall stay behind

So strongly guarded. [To Arthur.] Cousin, look not sad.

Thy grandam loves thee; and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was.

Arth. O, this will make my mother die with grief! 5

K. John. [To the Bastard.] Cousin, away for England! haste before;

And, ere our coming, see thou shake the bags

Of hoarding abbots; imprisoned angels

Set at liberty. The fat ribs of peace

Must by the hungry now be fed upon. 10

Use our commission in his utmost force.

Bast. Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back,

When gold and silver beckons me to come on.

I leave your Highness. Grandam, I will pray,

If ever I remember to be holy, 15

For your fair safety; so, I kiss your hand.

El. Farewell, gentle cousin.

K. John. Coz, farewell. [Exit Bastard.]

El. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,

We owe thee much! Within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her creditor, 21

And with advantage means to pay thy love;

And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath

Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.

Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say, 25

But I will fit it with some better time.

By heaven, Hubert, I am almost asham'd

To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your Majesty.

K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet, 30

But thou shalt have; and creep time ne'er so slow,
 Yet it shall come for me to do thee good.
 I had a thing to say, but let it go.
 The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
 Attended with the pleasures of the world, 35
 Is all too wanton and too full of gawds
 To give me audience. If the midnight bell
 Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
 Sound on into the drowsy ear of night, —
 If this same were a churchyard where we stand, 40

And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs,
 Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
 Had bak'd thy blood and made it heavy, thick,
 Which else runs tickling up and down the veins,
 Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes
 And strain their cheeks to idle merriment, 45
 A passion hateful to my purposes,
 Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
 Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
 Without a tongue, using conceit alone, 50 Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words;

Then, in despite of brooded watchful day,
 I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts.
 But, ah, I will not! yet I love thee well;
 And, by my troth, I think thou lov'st me
 well. 55

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,

Though that my death were adjunct to my act
 By heaven, I would do it.

K. John. Do not I know thou wouldst?
 Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye On yon young boy. I'll tell thee what, my friend, 60

He is a very serpent in my way;
 And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,
 He lies before me. Dost thou understand me?
 Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I'll keep him so,
 That he shall not offend your Majesty.

K. John. Death. 65

Hub. My lord?

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough.

I could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee.

Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee.

Remember. Madam, fare you well.

I'll send those powers o'er to your Majesty. 70

El. My blessing go with thee!

K. John. For England, cousin, go.

Hubert shall be your man, attend on you

With all true duty. On toward Calais, ho!
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE [IV. The same. The French king's tent.]

Enter KING PHILIP, LEWIS, PANDULPH, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,

A whole armada of convicted sail
 Is scattered and disjoin'd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.

K. Phi. What can go well, when we have run so ill? 5

Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?

Arthur ta'en prisoner? Divers dear friends slain?

And bloody England into England gone,
 O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lew. What he hath won, that hath he fortified. 10

So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,
 Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
 Doth want example. Who hath read or heard
 Of any kindred action like to this?

K. Phi. Well could I bear that England had this praise, 15

So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter CONSTANCE.

Look, who comes here! a grave unto a soul;

Holding the eternal spirit, against her will,

In the vile prison of afflicted breath.

I prithee, lady, go away with me. 20

Const. Lo, now! now see the issue of your peace.

K. Phi. Patience, good lady! comfort, gentle Constance!

Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress,
 But that which ends all counsel, true redress, 25

Death, death. O amiable lovely death!

Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!

Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,

Thou hate and terror to prosperity,

And I will kiss thy detestable bones

And put my eyeballs in thy vaulty brows. 30

And ring these fingers with thy household worms

And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust

And be a carrion monster like thyself.

Come, grin on me, and I will think thou smil'st

And buss thee as thy wife. Misery's love, 35

O, come to me!

K. Phi. O fair affliction, peace!

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry.

O, that my tongue were in the thunder's
 mouth!

Then with a passion would I shake the world;

And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy 40

Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,

Which scorns a modern invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Const. Thou art not holy to belie me so;

I am not mad. This hair I tear is mine; 45

My name is Constance; I was Geoffrey's wife;

Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost.

I am not mad; I would to heaven I were!

For then, 't is like I should forget myself.

O, if I could, what grief should I forget! 50

Preach some philosophy to make me mad,

And thou shalt be canoniz'd, Cardinal;

For being not mad, but sensible of grief,

My reasonable part produces reason

How I may be deliver'd of these woes, 55

And teaches me to kill or hang myself.

If I were mad, I should forget my son,
Or madly think a babe of clouts were he.
I am not mad; too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses. O, what love
I note

In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends
Do glue themselves in sociable grief,
Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

K. Phi. Bind up your hairs.

Const. Yes, that I will; and wherefore will
I do it?

I tore them from their bonds and cried aloud, 70
"O that these hands could so redeem my son
As they have given these hairs their liberty!"
But now I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Because my poor child is a prisoner.

And, father Cardinal, I have heard you say 75
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy again;
For since the birth of Cain, the first male
child,

To him that did but yesterday aspire, 80
There was not such a gracious creature born.
But now will canker sorrow eat my bud
And chase the native beauty from his cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a ghost,
As dim and meagre as an ague's fit,
And so he'll die; and, rising so again, 85
When I shall meet him in the court of heaven
I shall not know him: therefore never, never Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.

Const. He talks to me that never had a son.

K. Phi. You are as fond of grief as of your child.

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent
child,

Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words, 95
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form;
Then, have I reason to be fond of grief?
Fare you well! Had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you do. 100
I will not keep this form upon my head,
When there is such disorder in my wit.
O Lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world!
My widow-comfort, and my sorrows' cure! 105

[Exit.]

K. Phi. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.

[Exit.]

Lew. There's nothing in this world can make me joy.

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man;
And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's taste, 110
That it yields nought but shame and bitterness.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest; evils that take leave,
On their departure most of all show evil. 115
What have you lost by losing of this day?

Lew. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.

Pand. If you had won it, certainly you had.
No, no; when Fortune means to men most good,

She looks upon them with a threat'ning eye. 120
'Tis strange to think how much King John hath
lost

In this which he accounts so clearly won.

Are not you griev'd that Arthur is his prisoner?
Lew. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.

Pand. Your mind is all as youthful as your
blood. 125

Now hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
For even the breath of what I mean to speak
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub,
Out of the path which shall directly lead Thy foot to England's throne; and therefore
mark. 130

John hath seiz'd Arthur; and it cannot be
That, whiles warm life plays in that infant's veins,

The misplac'd John should entertain an hour,
One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest.

A sceptre snatch'd with an unruly hand 135
Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd;
And he that stands upon a slippery place
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up.

That John may stand, then Arthur needs must
fall:

So be it; for it cannot be but so. 140

Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?

Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,

May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are and fresh in this old world! 145

John lays you plots; the times conspire with
you;

For he that steeps his safety in true blood
Shall find but bloody safety and untrue.

This act so evilly borne shall cool the hearts
Of all his people and freeze up their zeal, 150
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it;

No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,

No common wind, no customary event, 155
But they will pluck away his natural cause
And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,

Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lew. May be he will not touch young Arthur's
life, 160

But hold himself safe in his prisonment.

Pand. O, sir, when he shall hear of your
approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts

Of all his people shall revolt from him, 165
And kiss the lips of unacquainted change,

And pick strong matter of revolt and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.
Methinks I see this hurly all on foot ;
And, O, what better matter breeds for you 170
Than I have nam'd ! The bastard Faulconbridge

Is now in England, ransacking the Church,
Offending charity. If but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side, 175
Or as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,
Go with me to the King. 'T is wonderful
What may be wrought out of their discontent,
Now that their souls are topful of offence. 180
For England go ; I will whet on the King.

Lew. Strong reasons make strong actions ;
let us go.

If you say ay, the King will not say no.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [A room in a castle.]

Enter HUBERT and EXECUTIONERS.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot, and look thou stand

Within the arras. When I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth,
And bind the boy which you shall find with me Fast to the chair. Be heedful. Hence, and watch. 5

I. Exec. I hope your warrant will bear out
the deed.

Hub. Uncleanly scruples ! fear not you.
Look to 't. [Exeunt Executioners.]
Young lad, come forth ; I have to say with you.

Enter ARTHUR.

Arth. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince, having so great a title

To be more prince, as may be. You are sad. 11

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me !
Methinks nobody should be sad but I.

Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night, 15
Only for wantonness. By my christendom,
So I were out of prison and kept sheep,
I should be merry as the day is long ;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practises more harm to me. 20
He is afraid of me and I of him.

Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son ?

No, indeed, is 't not ; and I would to heaven
I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. [Aside.] If I talk to him, with his innocent prate 25

He will awake my mercy which lies dead ;

Therefore I will be sudden and dispatch.

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert ? You look pale
to-day.

In sooth, I would you were a little sick,

That I might sit all night and watch with you.

I warrant I love you more than you do me. 31

Hub. [Aside.] His words do take possession of my bosom.

Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.]

[Aside.] How now, foolish rheum !
Turning dispiteous torture out of door !

I must be brief, lest resolution drop 35

Out at mine eyes in tender womanish tears.

Can you not read it ? Is it not fair writ ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect.

Must you with hot irons burn out both mine
eyes ?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Arth. And will you ?

Hub. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart ? When your head did but ache, 41

I knit my handkercher about your brows,
The best I had, a princess wrought it me,

And I did never ask it you again ;

And with my hand at midnight held your head,

And like the watchful minutes to the hour, 45

Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time,

Saying, " What lack you ? " and " Where lies your grief ? "

Or " What good love may I perform for you ? "

Many a poor man's son would have lien still 50

And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you ;

But you at your sick service had a prince.

Nay, you may think my love was crafty love

And call it cunning. Do, an if you will ;

If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,

Why then you must. Will you put out mine
eyes, 55

These eyes that never did nor never shall
So much as frown on you ?

Hub. I have sworn to do it ;
And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arth. Ah, none but in this iron age would do it ! 60

The iron of itself, though heat red-hot,
Approaching near these eyes, would drink my
tears,

And quench his fiery indignation

Even in the matter of mine innocence ;

Nay, after that, consume away in rust, 65

But for containing fire to harm mine eye.

Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron ?

An if an angel should have come to me

And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,

I would not have believ'd him, — no tongue
but Hubert's. 70

Hub. Come forth. [Stamps.]

[Re-enter EXECUTIONERS, with a cord, irons, etc.]

Do as I bid you do.

Arth. O, save me, Hubert, save me ! My eyes are out

Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.

Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him
here. 75

Arth. Alas, what need you be so boisterous-rough ?

I will not struggle, I will stand stone-still.

For heaven sake, Hubert, let me not be bound !

Nay, hear me, Hubert, drive these men away,

And I will sit as quiet as a lamb ; 80

I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
Nor look upon the iron angrily.
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive
you,

Whatever torment you do put me to.

Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with
him.

1. Exec. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed. [Exeunt Executioners.]

Arth. Alas, I then have chid away my friend!

He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart.
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven, that there were but a mote in yours,

A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense!
Then feeling what small things are boisterous
there,

Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Hub. Is this your promise? Go to, hold your tongue.

Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues

Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes.

Let me not hold my tongue, let me not,
Hubert;

Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes. O, spare mine eyes,
Though to no use but still to look on you!

Lo, by my troth, the instrument is cold

And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with
grief,

Being create for comfort, to be us'd

In undeserv'd extremes. See else yourself;

There is no malice in this burning coal;

The breath of heaven has blown his spirit out

And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it,
boy.

Arth. An if you do, you will but make it blush

And glow with shame of your proceedings,
Hubert.

Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eyes;

And like a dog that is compell'd to fight,

Snatch at his master that doth tarre him on.

All things that you should use to do me wrong

Deny their office; only you do lack

That mercy which fierce fire and iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.

Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine eye

For all the treasure that thine uncle owes.

Yet am I sworn and I did purpose, boy,

With this same very iron to burn them out.

Arth. O, now you look like Hubert! all this while

You were disguis'd.

Hub. Peace; no more. Adieu.

Your enemy must not know but you are dead.

I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports;
And, pretty child, sleep doubtless and secure
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven! I thank you, Hubert.

Hub. Silence; no more. Go closely in with
me.

Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [King John's palace.]

Enter KING JOHN, PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and other Lords.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again
crown'd,

And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pem. This "once again," but that your Highness pleas'd,

Was once superfluous. You were crown'd before,

And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off,
The faiths of men ne'er stained with revolt;

Fresh expectation troubled not the land
With any long'd-for change or better state.

Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,

To guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,

To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue

Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,

Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.

Pem. But that your royal pleasure must be done,

This act is as an ancient tale new told,
And in the last repeating troublesome,

Being urged at a time unseasonable.

Sal. In this the antique and well noted face

Of plain old form is much disfigured;
And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,

It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles and frights consideration,

Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected

For putting on so new a fashion'd robe.

Pem. When workmen strive to do better than well,

They do confound their skill in covetousness;
And oftentimes excusing of a fault

Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse,
As patches set upon a little breach

Discredit more in hiding of the fault
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sal. To this effect, before you were new
crown'd,

We breath'd our counsel; but it pleas'd your Highness

To overbear it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all and every part of what we would

Doth make a stand at what your Highness will.

K. John. Some reasons of this double coronation

I have possess'd you with, and think them
strong;

And more, more strong, when lesser is my
fear,

I shall indue you with. Meantime but ask
What you would have reform'd that is not
well,

And well shall you perceive how willingly ⁴⁵
I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pem. Then I—as one that am the tongue of these

To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for myself and them, but, chief of all,
Your safety, for the which myself and them ⁵⁰
Bend their best studies, — heartily request
The enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint

Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument:

If what in rest you have in right you hold, ⁵⁵
Why then your fears, which, as they say, attend

The steps of wrong, should move you to mew
up

Your tender kinsman and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise. ⁶⁰

That the time's enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our suit
That you have bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no further ask
Than whereupon our weal, on you depending, ⁶⁵

Counts it your weal he have his liberty.

Enter HUBERT.

K. John. Let it be so; I do commit his youth
To your direction. Hubert, what news with you? [Taking him apart.]

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody
deed;

He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine. ⁷⁰
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his
Does show the mood of a much troubled breast;
And I do fearfully believe 't is done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do. ⁷⁵

Sal. The colour of the King doth come and go

Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like heralds 'twixt two dreadful battles set.
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And when it breaks, I fear will issue thence ⁸⁰

The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand.

Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead.
He tells us Arthur is deceas'd to-night. ⁸⁵

Sal. Indeed we fear'd his sickness was past cure.

Pem. Indeed we heard how near his death he was

Before the child himself felt he was sick.
This must be answer'd either here or hence.

K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me? ⁹⁰

Think you I bear the shears of Destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?

Sal. It is apparent foul play; and 't is shame

That greatness should so grossly offer it.
So thrive it in your game! and so, farewell. ⁹⁵

Pem. Stay yet, Lord Salisbury; I'll go with
thee,

And find the inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdom of a forced grave.

'That blood which ow'd the breadth of all this
isle,

Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while! ¹⁰⁰

This must not be thus borne. This will break
out

To all our sorrows, and ere long I doubt.
[Exeunt [Lords].]

K. John. They burn in indignation. I repent.

Enter a MESSENGER.

There is no sure foundation set on blood,
No certain life achiev'd by others' death. ¹⁰⁵

A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?

So foul a sky clears not without a storm;
Pour down thy weather. How goes all in France?

Mess. From France to England. Never such a power ¹¹⁰

For any foreign preparation
Was levied in the body of a land.

The copy of your speed is learn'd by them;
For when you should be told they do prepare,

The tidings comes that they are all arriv'd. ¹¹⁵

K. John. O, where hath our intelligence been drunk?

Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care,

That such an army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?

Mess. My liege, her ear
Is stopp'd with dust; the first of April died ¹²⁰

Your noble mother: and, as I hear, my lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzy died

Three days before; but this from Rumour's
tongue

I idly heard; if true or false I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion! ¹²⁵

O, make a league with me, till I have pleas'd
My discontented peers! What! mother dead!

How wildly then walks my estate in France!
Under whose conduct came those powers of France ¹³⁰

That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?
Mess. Under the Dauphin.

Enter the BASTARD and PETER of Pomfret.

K. John. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tidings. — Now, what says the world

To your proceedings? Do not seek to stuff
My head with more ill news, for it is full. ¹³⁵

Bast. But if you be afraid to hear the worst,
Then let the worst unheard fall on your head.

K. John. Bear with me, cousin, for I was amaz'd

Under the tide; but now I breathe again

Aloft the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will. 140

Bast. How I have sped among the clergy-
men,

The sums I have collected shall express.
But as I travell'd hither through the land,
I find the people strangely fantasied;
Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams, 145
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear.
And here 's a prophet, that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found

With many hundreds treading on his heels;
To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes, 150

That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,
Your Highness should deliver up your crown.
K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.

K. John. Hubert, away with him; imprison
him; 155

And on that day at noon, whereof he says
I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd.
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee.

[Exit Hubert with Peter.]

O my gentle cousin,

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?
Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it. 161

Besides, I met Lord Bigot and Lord Salisbury,
With eyes as red as new-unkindled fire,
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, whom they say is kill'd to-night 165
On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle kinsman, go
And thrust thyself into their companies.
I have a way to win their loves again.
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.
K. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot before. 170

O, let me have no subject enemies
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion!
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels,
And fly like thought from them to me again. 175

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. [Exit.]

K. John. Spoke like a sprightly noble gentleman.

Go after him; for he perhaps shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers;
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege.
[Exit.] 181

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter HUBERT.

Hub. My lord, they say five moons were seen
to-night;
Four fixed, and the fifth did whirl about
The other four in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons!

Hub. Old men and beldams in the streets

Do prophesy upon it dangerously. 186
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths;

And when they talk of him, they shake their heads

And whisper one another in the ear;
And he that speaks doth gripe the hearer's wrist, 190

Whilst he that hears makes fearful action
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling
eyes.

I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool, 194
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,
Told of a many thousand warlike French
That were embattailed and rank'd in Kent. 200
Another lean unwash'd artificer
Cuts off his tale and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?

Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murd'red him. I had a mighty cause 205

To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill
him.

Hub. No had, my lord! Why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings to be attended

By slaves that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life, 210
And on the winking of authority
To understand a law, to know the meaning Of dangerous majesty, when perchance it frowns

More upon humour than advis'd respect.

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I
did. 215

K. John. O, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth

Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation!

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds
Make deeds ill done! Hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd, 221

Quoted, and sign'd to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind;
But taking note of thy abhor'd aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villainy, 225

Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be endeared to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord, — 230
K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head or made a pause

When I spake darkly what I purposed,
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,
As bid me tell my tale in express words,
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off, 235

And those thy fears might have wrought fears
in me.

But thou didst understand me by my signs

And didst in signs again parley with sin ;
 Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
 And consequently thy rude hand to act 240
 The deed, which both our tongues held vile to name.

Out of my sight, and never see me more !
 My nobles leave me ; and my state is braved,
 Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers ;
 Nay, in the body of this fleshly land, 246
 This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
 Hostility and civil tumult reigns
 Between my conscience and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
 I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
 Young Arthur is alive. This hand of mine 251
 Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
 Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
 Within this bosom never ent'red yet
 The dreadful notion of a murderous thought ;
 And you have slander'd nature in my form, 256
 Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
 Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
 Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live ? O, haste thee to the peers, 260

Throw this report on their incensed rage,
 And make them tame to their obedience !
 Forgive the comment that my passion made
 Upon thy feature ; for my rage was blind,
 And foul imaginary eyes of blood 265
 Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
 O, answer not, but to my closet bring
 The angry lords with all expedient haste.
 I conjure thee but slowly ; run more fast.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Before the castle.]

Enter ARTHUR, on the walls.

Arth. The wall is high, and yet will I leap
 down.

Good ground, be pitiful and hurt me not !
 There's few or none do know me ; if they did,
 This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite.

I am afraid, and yet I'll venture it. 5
 If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
 I'll find a thousand shifts to get away.
 As good to die and go, as die and stay.

[Leaps down.]

O me ! my uncle's spirit is in these stones.
 Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones ! 10

[Dies.]

Enter PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmundsbury.

It is our safety, and we must embrace
 This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pem. Who brought that letter from the Cardinal ?

Sal. The Count Melun, a noble lord of
 France ; 15

Whose private with me of the Dauphin's love
 Is much more general than these lines import.

Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him
 then.

Sal. Or rather then set forward ; for 't will be
 Two long days' journey, lords, or ere we meet. 20

Enter the BASTARD.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distem-per'd lords !

The King by me requests your presence
 straight.

Sal. The King hath dispossess'd himself
 of us.

We will not line his thin bestained cloak
 With our pure honours, nor attend the foot 25
 That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks.

Return and tell him so. We know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners, reason now.

Bast. But there is little reason in your
 grief ; 30
 Therefore 't were reason you had manners
 now.

Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege.

Bast. 'T is true, to hurt his master, no man
 else.

Sal. This is the prison. What is he lies here ? [Seeing Arthur.]

Pem. O death, made proud with pure and princely beauty ! 35

The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.

Sal. Murder, as hating what himself hath
 done,

Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.

Big. Or, when he doom'd this beauty to a grave,

Found it too precious-princely for a grave. 40

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you ? Have you beheld,

Or have you read or heard, or could you think ?
 Or do you almost think, although you see,

That you do see ? Could thought, without this object,

Form such another ? This is the very top, 45
 The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,
 Of murder's arms. This is the bloodiest shame,

The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke,
 That ever wall-ey'd wrath or staring rage

Presented to the tears of soft remorse. 50

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in
 this ;

And this, so sole and so unmatchable,
 Shall give a holiness, a purity,

To the yet unbegotten sin of times ;
 And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest, 55

Exempl'd by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work ;
 The graceless action of a heavy hand,

If that it be the work of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the work of any hand ! 60

We had a kind of light what would ensue.
 It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand,

The practice and the purpose of the King ;
 From whose obedience I forbid my soul,

Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life, 65

And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a vow, a holy vow,
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease and idleness, 70
Till I have set a glory to this head,
By giving it the worship of revenge.

Pem. Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Enter HUBERT.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you.

Arthur doth live; the King hath sent for you. 75

Sal. O, he is bold and blushes not at death.

Ayaunt, thou hateful villain, get thee gone!

Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law? 80
[Drawing his sword.]

Bast. Your sword is bright, sir; put it up again.

Sal. Not till I sheathe it in a murderer's skin. 85

Hub. Stand back, Lord Salisbury, stand back, I say;

By heaven, I think my sword's as sharp as yours.

I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence,

Lest I, by marking of your rage, forget 85
Your worth, your greatness and nobility.

Big. Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a nobleman?

Hub. Not for my life; but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so;
Yet I am none. Whose tongue soe'er speaks 90
false,

Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly, lies.

Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast. Keep the peace, I say.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulcon-bridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salis- 95
bury.

If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime;
Or I'll so maul you and your toasting-iron,
That you shall think the devil is come from 100 hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulcon-bridge?

Second a villain and a murderer?

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this prince?

Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well.
I honour'd him, I lov'd him, and will weep 105
My date of life out for his sweet life's loss.

Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,

For villainy is not without such rheum;
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem
Like rivers of remorse and innocence. 110

Away with me, all you whose souls abhor

The uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house;
For I am stifled with this smell of sin.

Big. Away toward Bury, to the Dauphin there!

Pem. There, tell the King, he may inquire us out. [Exeunt Lords. 115

Bast. Here's a good world! Knew you of this fair work?

Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,
Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, sir.

Bast. Ha! I'll tell thee what; 120
Thou'rt damn'd as black—nay, nothing is so black;

Thou art more deep damn'd than Prince Lucifer.
There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell

As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul—

Bast. If thou didst but consent
To this most cruel act, do but despair; 125
And if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread

That ever spider twisted from her womb
Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be a beam

To hang thee on; or wouldst thou drown thyself, 130

Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.

I do suspect thee very grievously.

Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought,
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath 135
Which was embowd in this beauteous clay,

Let hell want pains enough to torture me.
I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms.
I am amaz'd, methinks, and lose my way 140
Among the thorns and dangers of this world.

How easy dost thou take all England up!
From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
The life, the right and truth of all this realm

Is fled to heaven; and England now is left 145
To tug and scramble and to part by the teeth
The unwed interest of proud-swelling state.

Now for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty
Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest
And snarlleth in the gentle eyes of peace. 150

Now powers from home and discontents at home
Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits,
As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,

The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
Now happy he whose cloak and cincture can 155
Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child,

And follow me with speed. I'll to the King.
A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

[Exeunt.]

ACT [V]

SCENE I. [King John's palace.]

Enter KING JOHN, PANDULPH, and Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand

The circle of my glory. [Giving the crown.]

Pand. Take again
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
Your sovereign greatness and authority.

K. John. Now keep your holy word. Go meet the French,
And from his Holiness use all your power
To stop their marches 'fore we are inflam'd.
Our discontented counties do revolt;
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing allegiance and the love of soul
To stranger blood, to foreign royalty.
This inundation of mistemp'red humour
Rests by you only to be qualified.

Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,
That present medicine must be minist'ed,
Or overthrow incurable ensues.

Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,

Upon your stubborn usage of the Pope;
But since you are a gentle convertite,
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your blust'ring land.
On this Ascension-day, remember well,
Upon your oath of service to the Pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms.

[Exit.

K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet

Say that before Ascension-day at noon
My crown I should give off? Even so I have.
I did suppose it should be on constraint;
But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the BASTARD.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out

But Dover castle. London hath receiv'd,
Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers.
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy,
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again

After they heard young Arthur was alive?

Bast. They found him dead and cast into the streets,

An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.

But wherefore do you droop? Why look you sad?

Be great in act, as you have been in thought.
Let not the world see fear and sad distrust

Govern the motion of a kingly eye.

Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;

Threaten the threatener and outface the brow

Of bragging Horror; so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,

Grow great by your example and put on

The dauntless spirit of resolution.

Away, and glisten like the god of war,

When he intendeth to become the field.

Show boldness and aspiring confidence.
What, shall they seek the lion in his den,
And fright him there, and make him tremble there?

O, let it not be said! Forage, and run
To meet displeasure farther from the doors,
And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

K. John. The legate of the Pope hath been with me,

And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

Bast. O inglorious league!

Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley, and base truce

To arms invasive? Shall a beardless boy,
A cock'ed silken wanton, brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,

Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms.

Perchance the Cardinal cannot make your peace;

Or if he do, let it at least be said
They saw we had a purpose of defence.

K. John. Have thou the ordering of this present time.

Bast. Away, then, with good courage! Yet, I know,

Our party may well meet a prouder foe.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. [The Dauphin's camp at Saint Edmundsbury.]

Enter, in arms, LEWIS, SALISBURY, MELUN, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and Soldiers.

Lew. My Lord Melun, let this be copied out,
And keep it safe for our remembrance.

Return the precedent to these lords again,
That, having our fair order written down,

Both they and we, perusing o'er these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament

And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.
And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear

A voluntary zeal and an unurg'd faith
To your proceedings, yet believe me, Prince,

I am not glad that such a sort of time
Should seek a plaster by condemn'd revolt,

And heal the inveterate canker of one wound
By making many. O, it grieves my soul,

That I must draw this metal from my side
To be a widow-maker! O, and there

Where honourable rescue and defence
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury!

But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physic of our right,

We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice and confused wrong.

And is 't not pity, O my griev'd friends,
That we, the sons and children of this isle,

Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
Wherein we step after a stranger, march

Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up Her enemies' ranks—I must withdraw and

weep

Upon the spot of this enforced cause — 30
To grace the gentry of a land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here?
What, here? O nation, that thou couldst remove!

That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thy-
self, 35

And grapple thee unto a pagan shore,
Where these two Christian armies might combine

The blood of malice in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so unneighbourly!

Lew. A noble temper dost thou show in this;
And great affections wrestling in thy bosom 41
Doth make an earthquake of nobility.

O, what a noble combat hast thou fought
Between compulsion and a brave respect!
Let me wipe off this honourable dew. 45

That silverly doth progress on thy cheeks.
My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
Being an ordinary inundation;

But this effusion of such manly drops, 49
This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd

Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors.
Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,

And with a great heart heave away the storm.
Commend these waters to those baby eyes 55
That never saw the giant world enrag'd,

Nor met with fortune other than at feasts,
Full of warm blood, of mirth, of gossiping.
Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as 60 deep

Into the purse of rich prosperity
As Lewis himself; so, nobles, shall you all,
That knit your sinews to the strength of mine.

Enter PANDULPH.

And even there, methinks, an angel spake.
Look, where the holy legate comes apace, 65
To give us warrant from the hand of Heaven,

And on our actions set the name of right
With holy breath.

Pand. Hail, noble Prince of France!
The next is this, King John hath reconcil'd Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in, 70
That so stood out against the Holy Church,

The great metropolis and see of Rome;
Therefore thy threatening colours now wind up,
And tame the savage spirit of wild war,

That, like a lion fostered up at hand, 75
It may lie gently at the foot of Peace,
And be no further harmful than in show.

Lew. Your Grace shall pardon me, I will not back.

I am too high-born to be propertied,
To be a secondary at control, 80
Or useful serving-man and instrument

To any sovereign state throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars

Between this chastis'd kingdom and myself,
And brought in matter that should feed this
fire; 85

And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out

With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this land,
Yea, thrust this enterprise into my heart; 90
And come ye now to tell me John hath made His peace with Rome? What is that peace to
me?

I, by the honour of my marriage-bed,
After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
And, now it is half-conquer'd, must I back 95
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?

Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Rome borne,

What men provided, what munition sent,
To underprop this action? Is't not I 100
That undergo this charge? Who else but I,

And such as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this business and maintain this war?
Have I not heard these islanders shout out

"Vive le roi!" as I have bank'd their towns?
Have I not here the best cards for the game, 105

To win this easy match play'd for a crown?
And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
No, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lew. Outside or inside, I will not return 110
Till my attempt so much be glorified
As to my ample hope was promised

Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest and to win renown 115
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.

[Trumpet sounds.]

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the BASTARD, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,

Let me have audience. I am sent to speak,
My holy lord of Milan, from the King. 120
I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;

And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties. 125
He flatly says he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury
breath'd,

The youth says well. Now hear our English
King,

For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepar'd, and reason too he should. 130
This apish and unmannerly approach,

This harness'd masque and unadvised revel,
This unhar'd sauciness and boyish troops,
The King doth smile at, and is well prepar'd

To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms, 135

From out the circle of his territories.
That hand which had the strength, even at your door,

To cudgel you and make you take the hatch,
To dive like buckets in concealed wells,

To crouch in litter of your stable planks, 140

To lie like pawns lock'd up in chests and trunks,
To hug with swine, to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons, and to thrill and shake
Even at the crying of your nation's crow,
Thinking his voice an armed Englishman; 145
Shall that victorious hand be feeble here,
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No! Know the gallant monarch is in arms
And like an eagle o'er his airy towers,
To souse annoyance that comes near his nest. 150

And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
You bloody Nereos, ripping up the womb
Of your dear mother England, blush for shame;
For your own ladies and pale-visag'd maids
Like Amazons come tripping after drums, 155
Their thimbles into armed gauntlets change,
Their needles to lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Lew. There end thy brave, and turn thy face in peace;
We grant thou canst outscold us. Fare thee
well! 160

We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabbler.

Pand. Give me leave to speak.
Bast. No, I will speak.

Lew. We will attend to neither.
Strike up the drums; and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest and our being here. 165

Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;

And so shall you, being beaten. Do but start
An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready brac'd
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine, 170
Sound but another, and another shall
As loud as thine rattle the welkin's ear
And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder; for at
hand,

Not trusting to this halting legate here,
Whom he hath used rather for sport than need, 175

Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-ribb'd Death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

Lew. Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt. [Exeunt. 180]

SCENE III. [The field of battle.]

Alarums. Enter KING JOHN and HUBERT.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O, tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear. How fares your Majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
Lies heavy on me. O, my heart is sick!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faul-conbridge, 5
Desires your Majesty to leave the field
And send him word by me which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Be of good comfort; for the great supply

That was expected by the Dauphin here, 10
Are wreck'd three nights ago on Goodwin
Sands.

This news was brought to Richard but even
now.

The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ay me! this tyrant fever burns me up,

And will not let me welcome this good news, 15
Set on toward Swinstead. To my litter straight.
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [Another part of the field.]

Enter SALISBURY, PEMBROKE, and BIGOT.

Sal. I did not think the King so stor'd with frends.

Pem. Up once again! Put spirit in the French.

If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day. 5

Pem. They say King John sore sick hath left the field.

Enter MELUN, wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England
here.

Sal. When we were happy we had other names.

Pem. It is the Count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English, you are bought and sold! 10

Unthread the rude eye of rebellion

And welcome home again discarded faith.

Seek out King John and fall before his feet;

For if the French be lords of this loud day,

He means to recompense the pains you take 15

By cutting off your heads. Thus hath he sworn

And I with him, and many moe with me,

Upon the altar at Saint Edmundsbury;

Even on that altar where we swore to you

Dear amity and everlasting love. 20

Sal. May this be possible? May this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,

Retaining but a quantity of life,

Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax

Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire? 25

What in the world should make me now deceive,

Since I must lose the use of all deceit?

Why should I then be false, since it is true

That I must die here and live hence by truth? 30

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,

He is forsworn if e'er those eyes of yours

Behold another day break in the east;

But even this night, whose black contagious
breath

Already smokes about the burning crest
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun, 32
Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire,

Paying the fine of rated treachery
Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,
If Lewis by your assistance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert with your king. 40
The love of him, and this respect besides,
For that my grandsire was an Englishman,
Awakes my conscience to confess all this;
In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence
From forth the noise and rumour of the field, 45
Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts
In peace, and part this body and my soul
With contemplation and devout desires.

Sal. We do believe thee; and beshrew my soul

But I do love the favour and the form 50
Of this most fair occasion, by the which
We will untread the steps of damned flight,
And like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankness and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have o'er-look'd, 55

And calmly run on in obedience
Even to our ocean, to our great King John.
My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence;
For I do see the cruel pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends! New flight; 60

And happy newness, that intends old right.
[Exeunt (leading off Melun).]

SCENE V. [The French camp.]

Enter LEWIS and his train.

Lew. The sun of heaven methought was loath to set,
But stay'd and made the western welkin blush,
When English measure backward their own ground
In faint retire. O, bravely came we off, 5
When with a volley of our needless shot,
After such bloody toil, we bid good night;
And wound our tott'ring colours clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?

Lew. Here: what news?

Mess. The Count Melun is slain; the English lords 10

By his persuasion are again fallen off,
And your supply, which you have wish'd so long,

Are cast away and sunk on Goodwin Sands.

Lew. Ah, foul shrewd news! Beshrew thy very heart!

I did not think to be so sad to-night 15
As this hath made me. Who was he that said
King John did fly an hour or two before
The stumbling night did part our weary powers?

Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.

Lew. Well; keep good quarter and good care to-night. 20

The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. [An open place in the neighbourhood of Swinstead Abbey.]

Enter the BASTARD and HUBERT, severally.

Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! Speak quickly, or I shoot.

Bast. A friend. What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Whither dost thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee?

Bast. Why may not I demand of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine? 25
Hubert, I think?

Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought.
I will upon all hazards well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well.

Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt; and if thou please,
Thou may'st befriend me so much as to think 30
I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hub. Unkind remembrance! thou and eyeless night

Have done me shamé. Brave soldier, pardon me,

That any accent breaking from thy tongue
Should scape the true acquaintance of mine ear. 35

Bast. Come, come; sans compliment, what news abroad?

Hub. Why, here walk I in the black brow of night,

To find you out.

Bast. Brief, then; and what's the news?

Hub. O, my sweet sir, news fitting to the night,

Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible. 40
Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news.

I am no woman, I'll not swoon at it.

Hub. The King, I fear, is poison'd by a monk.

I left him almost speechless; and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil, that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time 45
Than if you had at leisure known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? Who did taste to him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,
Whose bowels suddenly burst out. The King 50
Yet speaks and peradventure may recover.

Bast. Who didst thou leave to tend his Majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not the lords are all come back,

And brought Prince Henry in their company?
At whose request the King hath pardon'd them, 55

And they are all about his Majesty.

Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,

And tempt us not to bear above our power!
I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,

Passing these flats, are taken by the tide ; 40
 These Lincoln Washes have devoured them ;
 Myself, well mounted, hardly have escap'd.
 Away before ; conduct me to the King.
 I doubt he will be dead or ere I come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. [The orchard at Swinstead Abbey.]

Enter PRINCE HENRY, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

P. Hen. It is too late. The life of all his blood
 Is touch'd corruptibly, and his pure brain,
 Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house,
 Doth by the idle comments that it makes Foretell the ending of mortality. 5

Enter PEMBROKE.

Pem. His Highness yet doth speak, and holds belief
 That, being brought into the open air,
 It would allay the burning quality
 Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here. 10
 Doth he still rage ? [Exit Attendants.]

Pem. He is more patient
 Than when you left him ; even now he sung.
P. Hen. O vanity of sickness ! fierce extremes

In their continuance will not feel themselves.
 Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,
 Leaves them invisible ; and his siege is now 15
 Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds

With many legions of strange fantasies,
 Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
 Confound themselves. 'T is strange that death should sing. 20

I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
 Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
 And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
 His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, Prince ; for you are born 25
 To set a form upon that indigest
 Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

KING JOHN is brought in.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room ;
 It would not out at windows nor at doors.
 There is so hot a summer in my bosom, 30
 That all my bowels crumble up to dust.
 I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
 Upon a parchment, and against this fire
 Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your Majesty ?
K. John. Poison'd, — ill fare — dead, forsook, cast off ; 35

And none of you will bid the Winter come
 To thrust his icy fingers in my maw,
 Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
 Through my burn'd bosom, nor entreat the north

To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips

And comfort me with cold. I do not ask you much, 41
 I beg cold comfort ; and you are so strait
 And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O that there were some virtue in my tears,
 That might relieve you !

K. John. The salt in them is hot.
 Within me is a hell, and there the poison 46
 Is as a fiend confin'd to tyrannize
 On unreprieveable condemn'd blood.

Enter the BASTARD.

Bast. O, I am scalded with my violent motion
 And spleen of speed to see your Majesty ! 50

K. John. O cousin, thou art come to set mine eye.
 The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd,
 And all the shrouds wherewith my life should sail.

Are turned to one thread, one little hair.
 My heart hath one poor string to stay it by, 55
 Which holds but till thy news be uttered ;
 And then all this thou seest is but a clod
 And module of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
 Where Heaven He knows how we shall answer
 him ; 60

For in a night the best part of my power,
 As I upon advantage did remove,
 Were in the Washes all unwarily
 Devoured by the unexpected flood.

[The king dies.]

Sal. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear. 65

My liege ! my lord ! But now a king, now thus.
P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.

What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,

When this was now a king, and now is clay ?
Bast. Art thou gone so ? I do but stay behind 70

To do the office for thee of revenge,
 And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
 As it on earth hath been thy servant still.
 Now, now, you stars that move in your right
 spheres,

Where be your powers ? Show now your mended faiths, 75

And instantly return with me again,
 To push destruction and perpetual shame
 Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
 Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought ;

The Dauphin rages at our very heels. 80
Sal. It seems you know not, then, so much as we.

The Cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
 Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,

And brings from him such offers of our peace
 As we with honour and respect may take, 85
 With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it when he sees Ourselves well sinew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already ;
 For many carriages he hath despatch'd ⁹⁰
 To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel

To the disposing of the Cardinal ;
 With whom yourself, myself, and other lords,
 If you think meet, this afternoon will post
 To consummate this business happily. ⁹⁵

Bast. Let it be so ; and you, my noble
 prince,

With other princes that may best be spar'd,
 Shall wait upon your father's funeral.

P. Hen. At Worcester must his body be interr'd ;

For so he will'd it.

Bast. Thither shall it then ; ¹⁰⁰

And happily may your sweet self put on

The lineal state and glory of the land !

To whom, with all submission, on my knee

I do bequeath my faithful services

And true subjection everlastingly. ¹⁰⁵

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make,

To rest without a spot for evermore.

P. Hen. I have a kind soul that would give you thanks

And knows not how to do it but with tears. ¹⁰⁹

Bast. O, let us pay the time but needful woe,
 Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs.

This England never did, nor never shall,

Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,

But when it first did help to wound itself.

Now these her princes are come home again, ¹¹⁵

Come the three corners of the world in arms,

And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us rue,

If England to itself do rest but true.

[Exeunt.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF RICHARD THE SECOND

RICHARD II was first published in an anonymous quarto in 1597. A second quarto, printed from the first, but with Shakespeare's name on the title-page, appeared in 1598. Neither of these editions contained the abdication scene (iv. i. 154-318), which is supposed to have been suppressed owing to Queen Elizabeth's sensitiveness on such subjects, but it appears in the Third Quarto (1608), and is found in all the later editions. The Fourth Quarto, printed from the third, as the third was from the second, is dated 1615, and was the main source of the text of the First Folio. But in addition to some corrections, alterations, and omissions for acting purposes, the First Folio has been thought to show that its editors had access to a manuscript of the abdication scene from which they amended the imperfect text of that part of the Fourth Quarto. Thus for the main part of the play the best authority is the First Quarto; for the abdication scene, the First Folio; and on these the present text is accordingly based.

Apart from the date of publication we have only internal evidence as to date of production. The subject may have been suggested by Marlowe's Edward II; but the style shows a marked departure from the Marlowesque rhetoric of Richard III, and takes it out of the period when Shakespeare was most under the influence of his great predecessor. Taking into consideration the frequency of rime on the one hand, and the absence of prose on the other, we may conclude that the drama was composed within a year of 1594.

The main source of the action is Holinshed's Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland, supplemented by Stowe's Annals, but the chief interest lies in those elements that are due to the dramatist's imagination. The parts played and the speeches uttered by the female characters are entirely Shakespeare's. Historically, the Queen was only eleven years old at the date of her husband's deposition; and the Duchess of York was only the stepmother of Aumerle. The scene at the deathbed of John of Gaunt is represented in the chronicle by the bare statement of the fact of his death; and there is no hint of the great speech on the glory of England. This speech, with others, such as the closing lines of King John, point to the inference that Shakespeare deliberately used the opportunity given in the historical plays to appeal to the patriotic enthusiasm of his contemporaries.

But the greatest achievement in the play is in the creation, or interpretation, of the character of Richard himself. The chronicle supplied the outline of his action, but little characterization beyond charges of self-indulgence and subjection to unworthy favorites. Richard's love of the spectacular and his enjoyment of his own emotions even of misery and despair, along with his tendency to substitute fluent and poetical utterance for action, are all the conception of the dramatist. The resignation of the crown actually took place in the presence of a few lords in Richard's chamber in the Tower, so that the amazing exhibition of sentimental vanity in the abdication scene is purely Shakespearean. The hints of the character of Bolingbroke are also mainly invented. Holinshed speaks of his popularity, but gives nothing of such causes of it as are indicated in the description of his courtship of the common people in i. iv. Throughout, even when the details of the episode are borrowed from the chronicle, as in the conspiracy in which Aumerle is involved, the speeches are purely imaginary, hardly any hint of the diction being derived from the sources.

It is at least probable that this was the "play of the deposing of Richard II" which Essex and his associates procured to be performed in the streets of London on the eve of his attempted revolt in 1601. It is clear that it is not the Richard II seen by Forman at the Globe in 1611, since that play dealt chiefly with the earlier events of Richard's reign.

The spellings "Bullingbroke," "Herford," "Barkly," "Callice," and "Cotshall" or "Colts-hold" (Cotswold) in the old copies, indicate the Elizabethan pronunciation of these names.

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. King Richard's palace.]

Enter KING RICHARD, JOHN OF GAUNT, with other Nobles and Attendants.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honoured
Lancaster,

Hast thou, according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Hereford thy bold son,
Here to make good the boisterous late appeal,
Which then our leisure would not let us hear,
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mow-
bray?

Gaunt. I have, my liege.

K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him

If he appeal the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily, as a good subject should,
On some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argument,

On some apparent danger seen in him
Aim'd at your Highness, no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence.
[Exeunt some Attendants.] Face to face,

And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will
hear

The accuser and the accused freely speak.
High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Enter BOLINGBROKE and MOWBRAY [with Attendants].

Boling. Many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!

Mow. Each day still better other's happiness,
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!

K. Rich. We thank you both; yet one but flatters us,

As well appeareth by the cause you come,
Namely, to appeal each other of high treason.
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mow-
bray?

Boling. First, heaven be the record to my speech!

In the devotion of a subject's love,
Tend'ring the precious safety of my prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appellat to this princely presence.
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.
Thou art a traitor and a miscreant,
Too good to be so, and too bad to live,
Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
And wish, so please my sovereign, ere I move,
What my tongue speaks my right drawn sword may prove.

Mow. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal.

'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain;
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast
As to be hush'd and nought at all to say.
First, the fair reverence of your Highness curbs me

From giving reins and spurs to my free speech,
Which else would post until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.

Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
 And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
 I do defy him, and I spit at him; 60
 Call him a slanderous coward and a villain;
 Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
 And meet him, were I tied to run afoot
 Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
 Or any other ground inhabitable 65
 Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
 Meantime let this defend my loyalty:
 By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my gage,
 Disclaiming here the kindred of the King, 70
 And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
 Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except.

If guilty dread have left thee so much strength
 As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop.
 By that and all the rites of knighthood else, 75
 Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
 What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.

Mow. I take it up; and by that sword I
 swear,

Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
 I'll answer thee in any fair degree, 80
 Or chivalrous design of knightly trial;
 And when I mount, alive may I not light,
 If I be traitor or unjustly fight!

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mow-bray's charge?

It must be great that can inherit us 85
 So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Boling. Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it true:

That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles

In name of lendings for your Highness' soldiers,
 The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments, 90

Like a false traitor and injurious villain.
 Besides I say, and will in battle prove,
 Or here or elsewhere to the furthest verge
 That ever was surveyed by English eye,
 That all the treasons for these eighteen years 95
 Complotted and contrived in this land Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.

Further I say, and further will maintain
 Upon his bad life to make all this good,
 That he did plot the Duke of Gloucester's
 death, 100

Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
 And consequently, like a traitor coward,
 Sluic'd out his innocent soul through streams of blood;

Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
 Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
 To me for justice and rough chastisement; 105
 And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
 This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution soars!

Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Mow. O, let my sovereign turn away his face 111

And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
 Till I have told this slander of his blood
 How God and good men hate so foul a liar.

K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears. 115

Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir,
 As he is but my father's brother's son,
 Now, by my sceptre's awe, I make a vow,
 Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
 Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize 120
 The unstopping firmness of my upright soul.
 He is our subject, Mowbray; so art thou.
 Free speech and fearless I to thee allow.

Mow. Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy
 heart,
 Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest. 125

Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais
 Disburs'd I duly to his Highness' soldiers;
 The other part reserv'd I by consent,
 For that my sovereign liege was in my debt
 Upon remainder of a dear account, 130
 Since last I went to France to fetch his queen.
 Now swallow down that lie. For Gloucester's
 death

I slew him not; but to my own disgrace
 Neglected my sworn duty in that case.
 For you, my noble Lord of Lancaster, 135
 The honourable father to my foe,
 Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
 A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul;

But ere I last receiv'd the sacrament
 I did confess it, and exactly begg'd 140
 Your Grace's pardon; and I hope I had it.
 This is my fault. As for the rest appeal'd,
 It issues from the rancour of a villain,
 A recreant and most degenerate traitor;

Which in myself I boldly will defend; 145
 And interchangeably hurl down my gage
 Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
 To prove myself a loyal gentleman

Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom.
 In haste whereof, most heartily I pray 150
 Your Highness to assign our trial day.

K. Rich. Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be rul'd
 by me;
 Let's purge this choler without letting blood.

This we prescribe, though no physician; 155
 Deep malice makes too deep incision.
 Forget, forgive; conclude and be agreed;
 Our doctors say this is no month to bleed.
 Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
 We'll calm the Duke of Norfolk, you your
 son.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my
 age. 160
 Throw down, my son, the Duke of Norfolk's gage.

K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his.
Gaunt. When, Harry, when!
 Obedience bids I should not bid again.

K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down, we bid;
 there is no boot.

Mow. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot; 165

My life thou shalt command, but not my shame.

The one my duty owes ; but my fair name,
Despite of death that lives upon my grave,
To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffl'd here, ¹⁷⁰
Pierc'd to the soul with slander's venom'd

spear,
The which no balm can cure but his heart-
blood

Which breath'd this poison.

K. Rich. Rage must be withstood ;
Give me his gage. Lions make leopards tame.

Mow. Yea, but not change his spots. Take but my shame, ¹⁷⁵

And I resign my gage. My dear dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation ; that away,
Men are but gilded loam or painted clay.

A jewel in a ten-times-barr'd-up chest ¹⁸⁰
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.

Mine honour is my life ; both grow in one ;
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try ;
In that I live, and for that will I die. ¹⁸⁵

K. Rich. Cousin, throw up your gage. Do you begin.

Boling. O, God defend my soul from such deep sin !

Shall I seem crest-fallen in my father's sight,
Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height ¹⁹⁰
Before this out-dar'd dastard ? Ere my tongue
Shall wound my honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear

The slavish motive of recanting fear,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face. ¹⁹⁵ [Exit Gaunt.]

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command ;

Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,
At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day ;
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate. ²⁰¹
Since we cannot atone you, we shall see
Justice design the victor's chivalry.

Lord Marshal, command our officers at arms
Be ready to direct these home alarms. ²⁰⁵

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [London. The Duke of Lancaster's palace.]

Enter JOHN OF GAUNT with the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Woodstock's
blood

Doth more solicit me than your exclaims,
To stir against the butchers of his life !
But since correction lieth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct, ⁵
Put we our quarrel to the will of Heaven ;
Who, when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur ?

Hath love in thy old blood no living fire ? ¹⁰
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,

Were as seven vials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root.
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,

Some of those branches by the Destinies cut ; ¹⁵
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloucester,

One vial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root,
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt,
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all faded, ²⁰

By Envy's hand and Murder's bloody axe.
Ah, Gaunt, his blood was thine ! That bed,
that womb,

That mettle, that self-mould, that fashion'd
thee

Made him a man ; and though thou liv'st and breath'st,

Yet art thou slain in him. Thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy father's death, ²⁵
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt ; it is despair.
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaught'rd,

Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life, ³¹
Teaching stern Murder how to butcher thee.

That which in mean men we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

What shall I say ? To safeguard thine own life, ³⁵

The best way is to venge my Gloucester's death.
Gaunt. God's is the quarrel ; for God's substitute,

His deputy anointed in His sight,
Hath caus'd his death ; the which if wrongfully,

Let Heaven revenge ; for I may never lift ⁴⁰
An angry arm against His minister.

Duch. Where then, alas, may I complain myself ?

Gaunt. To God, the widow's champion and defence.

Duch. Why, then, I will. Farewell, old
Gaunt !

Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold ⁴⁵
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight.

O, sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's
spear,

That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast !
Or, if misfortune miss the first career,

Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom, ⁵⁰
That they may break his foaming courser's
back,

And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A catiff recreant to my cousin Hereford !

Farewell, old Gaunt ! Thy sometimes brother's wife

With her companion grief must end her life. ⁵⁵
Gaunt. Sister, farewell ; I must to Coventry.

As much good stay with thee as go with me !
Duch. Yet one word more ; grief boundeth where it falls,

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight.
I take my leave before I have begun, ⁶⁰

For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to thy brother, Edmund York.

Lo, this is all : — nay, yet depart not so ;
 Though this be all, do not so quickly go ;
 I shall remember more. Bid him — ah, what ? —
 With all good speed at Plashy visit me. ⁶⁸
 Alack, and what shall good old York there see
 But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls,
 Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones ?
 And what hear there for welcome but my groans ? ⁷⁰
 Therefore commend me ; let him not come
 there,
 To seek out sorrow that dwells everywhere.
 Desolate, desolate, will I hence and die.
 The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The lists at Coventry.]

Enter the LORD MARSHAL and the DUKE OF AUMERLE.

Mar. My Lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford
 arm'd ?

Aum. Yea, at all points ; and longs to enter
 in.

Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
 Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.

Aum. Why, then, the champions are pre-par'd, and stay ⁵

For nothing but his Majesty's approach.

The trumpets sound, and the KING enters with his nobles, GAUNT, BUSHY, BAGOT, GREEN, and others. When they are set, enter MOW-
 BRAY in arms, defendant, with a HERALD.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion

The cause of his arrival here in arms.

Ask him his name, and orderly proceed

To swear him in the justice of his cause. ¹⁰

Mar. In God's name and the King's, say who thou art

And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms,

Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel.

Speak truly, on thy knighthood and thy oath ;
 And so defend thee Heaven and thy valour ! ¹⁵

Mow. My name is Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk ;

Who hither come engaged by my oath —

Which God defend a knight should violate ! —
 Both to defend my loyalty and truth

To God, my King, and my succeeding issue, ²⁰
 Against the Duke of Hereford that appeals me ;

And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
 To prove him, in defending of myself,

A traitor to my God, my King, and me :

And as I truly fight, defend me Heaven ! ²⁵

The trumpets sound. Enter BOLINGBROKE, appellant, in armour, with a HERALD.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,

Both who he is and why he cometh hither

Thus plated in habiliments of war,

And formally, according to our law,
 Depose him in the justice of his cause. ³⁰

Mar. What is thy name ? and wherefore com'st thou hither,

Before King Richard in his royal lists ?

Against whom comest thou ? and what's thy quarrel ?

Speak like a true knight, so defend thee
 Heaven !

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby ³⁵

Am I ; who ready here do stand in arms,
 To prove, by God's grace and my body's valour,
 In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
 That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,
 To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me ; ⁴⁰

And as I truly fight, defend me Heaven !

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold
 Or daring-hardy as to touch the lists,
 Except the Marshal and such officers
 Appointed to direct these fair designs. ⁴⁵

Boling. Lord Marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's hand,

And bow my knee before his Majesty ;
 For Mowbray and myself are like two men
 That vow a long and weary pilgrimage.
 Then let us take a ceremonious leave ⁵⁰
 And loving farewell of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your Highness,

And craves to kiss your hand and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend and fold him in our arms.

Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right, ⁵⁵
 So be thy fortune in this royal fight !

Farewell, my blood ; which if to-day thou shed,
 Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O, let no noble eye profane a tear
 For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's spear. ⁶⁰

As confident as is the falcon's flight
 Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.

My loving lord, I take my leave of you ;
 Of you, my noble cousin, Lord Aumerle ;

Not sick, although I have to do with death, ⁶⁵
 But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath.

Lo, as at English feasts, so I regret
 The daintiest last, to make the end most

sweet :

O thou, the earthly author of my blood,
 Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate, ⁷⁰

Doth with a twofold vigour lift me up
 To reach at victory above my head,

Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayers ;
 And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,

That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat, ⁷⁵
 And furbish new the name of John o' Gaunt,

Even in the lusty haviour of his son.

Gaunt. God in thy good cause make thee prosperous !

Be swift like lightning in the execution ;
 And let thy blows, doubly redoubled, ⁸⁰

Fall like amazing thunder on the casque
 Of thy adverse pernicious enemy.

Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant, and live.

Boling. Mine innocency and Saint George to thrive!

Mow. However God or Fortune cast my lot,
There lives or dies, true to King Richard's throne,

A loyal, just, and upright gentleman.
Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage and embrace
His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement, 90
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversary.
Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy years.
As gentle and as jocund as to jest 95
Go I to fight; truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord; securely I espy
Virtue with valour couched in thine eye.
Order the trial, Marshal, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby, 100

Receive thy lance; and God defend the right!
Boling. Strong as a tower in hope, I cry
amen.

Mar. [To an officer.] Go bear this lance to Thomas, Marshal of Norfolk.

1. Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself, 105

On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mow-
bray,
A traitor to his God, his king, and him;
And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2. Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray,
Duke of Norfolk, 110

On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his sovereign, and to him disloyal;
Courageously and with a free desire 115
Attending but the signal to begin.

Mar. Sound, trumpets; and set forward, combatants. [A charge sounded.
Stay! The King hath thrown his warder
down.

K. Rich. Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,
And both return back to their chairs again. 120
Withdraw with us; and let the trumpets sound
While we return these dukes what we decree.
[A long flourish.

Draw near
And list what with our council we have done.
For that our kingdom's earth should not be soil'd 125

With that dear blood which it hath fostered;
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours'
sword;

And for we think the eagle-winged pride
Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts, 130
With rival-hating envy, set on you
To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle

Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;

Which, so rous'd up with boist'rous untun'd drums,
With harsh-resounding trumpets' dreadful
bray, 135

And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,
Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace
And make us wade even in our kindred's
blood;

Therefore, we banish you our territories.
You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life, 140
Till twice five summers have enrich'd our fields
Shall not regret our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Boling. Your will be done. This must my comfort be,
That sun that warms you here shall shine on
me; 145

And those his golden beams to you here lent
Shall point on me and gild my banishment.

K. Rich. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,

Which I with some unwillingness pronounce.
The sly, slow hours shall not determinate 150
The dateless limit of thy dear exile;
The hopeless word of "never to return"
Breathes I against thee, upon pain of life.

Mow. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign
liege,
And all unlook'd for from your Highness'
mouth. 155

A dearer merit, not so deep a main
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserved at your Highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forgo; 160
And now my tongue's use is to me no more Than an unstringed viol or a harp,

Or like a cunning instrument cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony. 165
Within my mouth you have engaol'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullis'd with my teeth and lips;
And dull unfeeling barren ignorance
Is made my gaoler to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse, 170
Too far in years to be a pupil now.
What is thy sentence then but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native
breath?

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate.

After our sentence plaining comes too late. 175

Mow. Then thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to God — 180
Our part therein we banish with yourselves —
To keep the oath that we administer:
You never shall, so help you truth and God!
Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face; 185
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This louting tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet

To plot, contrive, or complot any ill
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear. 191

Mow. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far as to mine enemy:—

By this time, had the King permitted us,
One of our souls had wand'ring in the air, 195

Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,

As now our flesh is banish'd from this land;

Confess thy treasons ere thou fly the realm;

Since thou hast far to go, bear not along

The clogging burden of a guilty soul. 200

Mow. No, Bolingbroke; if ever I were traitor,

My name be blotted from the book of life,

And I from heaven banish'd as from hence!

But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know;

And all too soon, I fear, the King shall rue. 205

Farewell, my liege. Now no way can I stray;

Save back to England, all the world's my way.

[Exit.]

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine
eyes

I see thy griev'd heart. Thy sad aspect

Hath from the number of his banish'd years 210

Pluck'd four away. [To Boling.] Six frozen

winters spent,

Return with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!

Four lagging winters and four wanton springs

End in a word: such is the breath of kings. 215

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard of
me

He shortens four years of my son's exile;

But little vantage shall I reap thereby,

For, ere the six years that he hath to spend

Can change their moons and bring their times about, 220

My oil-dri'd lamp and time-bewasted light

Shall be extinct with age and endless night;

My inch of taper will be burnt and done,

And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live. 225

Gaunt. But not a minute, King, that thou canst give.

Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,

And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow.

Thou canst help Time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage. 230

Thy word is current with him for my death,

But dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,

Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave.

Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lour?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour. 235

You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather

You would have bid me argue like a father.

O, had it been a stranger, not my child,

To smooth his fault I should have been more mild. 240

A partial slander sought I to avoid,

And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.

Alas, I look'd when some of you should say

I was too strict to make mine own away;

But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue 245

Against my will to do myself this wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell; and, uncle, bid him so.

Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Exit King Richard

and train.]

Aum. Cousin, farewell! What presence must not know,

From where you do remain let paper show. 250

Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,

As far as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. O, to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,

That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of
you, 255

When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six winters? They are quickly gone. 260

Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall
it so,

Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps 265

Esteem as foil wherein thou art to set

The precious jewel of thy home return.

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I
make

Will but remember me what a deal of world

I wander from the jewels that I love. 270

Must I not serve a long apprenticeship

To foreign passages, and in the end,

Having my freedom, boast of nothing else

But that I was a journeyman to grief?

Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits 275

Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.

Teach thy necessity to reason thus;

There is no virtue like necessity.

Think not the King did banish thee,

But thou the King. Woe doth the heavier sit 280

Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.

Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour

And not the King exil'd thee; or suppose

Devouring pestilence hangs in our air

And thou art flying to a fresher clime. 285

Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it

To lie that way thou goest, not whence thou com'st.

Suppose the singing birds musicians,

The grass whereon thou tread'st the presence
strew'd,

The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure or a dance ; 391
For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it and sets it light.

Boling. O, who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus ? 395
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite
By bare imagination of a feast ?
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat ?
O, no ! the apprehension of the good 300
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse.
Fell Sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more
Than when he bites, but lanceth not the sore.

Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way ;
Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.
Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell ; sweet soil, adieu ; 305
My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet !
Where'er I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a trueborn Englishman.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [The Court.]

Enter the KING, with BAGOT and GREEN at one door ; and the DUKE OF AUMERLE at another.

K. Rich. We did observe. Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way ?
Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,

But to the next highway, and there I left him.
K. Rich. And say, what store of parting tears were shed ? 5

Aum. Faith, none for me ; except the north-east wind,

Which then blew bitterly against our faces,
Awak'd the sleeping rheum, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.

K. Rich. What said our cousin when you parted with him ? 10

Aum. "Farewell !"
And, for my heart disdained that my tongue
Should so profane the word, that taught me craft

To counterfeit oppression of such grief
That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's grave. 15

Marry, would the word "farewell" have length'n'd hours

And added years to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of farewells ;
But since it would not, he had none of me.

K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin ; but 't is doubt, 20

When time shall call him home from banish-
ment,

Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.
Ourself and Bushy, [Bagot here and Green]
Observ'd his courtship to the common people ;
How he did seem to dive into their hearts 25

With humble and familiar courtesy,
What reverence he did throw away on slaves,
Woofing poor craftsmen with the craft of smiles
And patient underbearing of his fortune,

As 't were to banish their affects with him. 30
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench ;
A brace of draymen bid God speed him well
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With "Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends,"

As were our England in reversion his, 35
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well, he is gone ; and with him go these thoughts.

Now for the rebels which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
Ere further leisure yield them further means 40
For their advantage and your Highness' loss.

K. Rich. We will ourself in person to this war ;

And, for our coffers, with too great a court
And liberal largess, are grown somewhat light,
We are inforc'd to farm our royal realm ; 45
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand. If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank charters ;

Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,

They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold 50

And send them after to supply our wants ;
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter BUSHY.

[Bushy, what news ?]

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick,
my lord,

Suddenly taken ; and hath sent post haste 55
To entreat your Majesty to visit him.

K. Rich. Where lies he ?

Bushy. At Ely House.

K. Rich. Now put it, God, in the physician's mind

To help him to his grave immediately ! 60
The lining of his coffers shall make coats

To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him.

Pray God we may make haste, and come too late !

[All.] Amen.

[Exeunt. 65]

ACT II

SCENE I. [London. Ely House.]

Enter JOHN OF GAUNT, sick, with the DUKE OF YORK, etc.

Gaunt. Will the King come, that I may breathe my last

In wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth ?
York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath ;

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear.
Gaunt. O, but they say the tongues of dying
men 5

Enforce attention like deep harmony.
Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain,

For they breathe truth that breathe their words in pain.

He that no more must say is listen'd more Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glose. 10

More are men's ends mark'd than their lives before.

The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance more than things long past.

Though Richard my life's counsel would not
hear, 15

My death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.

York. No; it is stopp'd with other flattering sounds,

As praises, of whose taste the wise are found,
Lascivious metres, to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen; 20
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardy, apish nation
Limps after in base imitation.

Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity —
So it be new, there's no respect how vile — 25

That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
Then all too late comes counsel to be heard
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.

Direct not him whose way himself will choose;
'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose. 30

Gaunt. Methinks I am a prophet new in-spir'd

And thus expiring do foretell of him:
His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last,
For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short; 35

He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder;
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.

This royal throne of kings, this scept'red isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars, 41

This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by Nature for herself

Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world, 45

This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall

Or as a moat defensive to a house
Against the envy of less happier lands,

This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this
England, 50

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings, Fear'd by their breed and famous by their birth,

Renowned for their deeds as far from home,
For Christian service and true chivalry,

As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry, 55
Of the world's ransom, blessed Mary's Son,

This land of such dear souls, this dear dear
land,

Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now leas'd out, I die pronouncing it,

Like to a tenement or pelting farm. 60
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,

Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with
shame,

With inky blots and rotten parchment bonds.
That England, that was wont to conquer
others, 65

Hath made a shameful conquest of itself.
Ah, would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter KING RICHARD and QUEEN, AUMERLE, BUSHY, GREEN, BAGOT, ROSS, and WIL-LOUGHBY.

York. The King is come. Deal mildly with his youth;

For young hot colts being rag'd do rage the
more. 70

Queen. How fares our noble uncle Lancaster?
K. Rich. What comfort, man? How is't with aged Gaunt?

Gaunt. O, how that name befits my composition!

Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old.
Within me Grief hath kept a tedious fast; 75

And who abstains from meat that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;

Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt.
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon, 78

Is my strict fast; I mean, my children's looks;
And therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt.

Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?

Gaunt. No, misery makes sport to mock itself. 85

Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
I mock my name, great King, to flatter thee.

K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those that live?

Gaunt. No, no, men living flatter those that die.

K. Rich. Thou, now a-dying, say'st thou flatter'st me. 90

Gaunt. O, no! thou diest, though I the sicker be.

K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.

Gaunt. Now He that made me knows I see
thee ill;

Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.
Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land 95

Wherein thou liest in reputation sick;
And thou, too careless patient as thou art,

Commit'st thy anointed body to the cure
Of those physicians that first wounded thee.

A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown, 100
Whose compass is no bigger than thy head;

And yet, incaged in so small a verge,
The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.

O, had thy grandsire with a prophet's eye
Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,

From forth thy reach he would have laid thy
shame, 105

Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.

Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this land by lease; 110

But for thy world enjoying but this land,
Is it not more than shame to shame it so?

Landlord of England art thou now, not king.
Thy state of law is bonds slave to the law,
And thou —

K. Rich. A lunatic lean-witted fool, 115
Presuming on an ague's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the royal blood
With fury from his native residence.
Now, by my seat's right royal majesty, 120
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head
Should run thy head from thy unreverent shoulders.

Gaunt. O, spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
For that I was his father Edward's son. 125
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou tapp'd out and drunkenly carous'd.
My brother Gloucester, plain well-meaning soul, Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls!

May be a precedent and witness good 130
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's
blood.

Join with the present sickness that I have,
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too long wither'd flower.
Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee!
These words hereafter thy tormentors be! 135
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave;
Love they to live that love and honour have.

[Exit [borne off by his Attendants].]

K. Rich. And let them die that age and sullens have;

For both hast thou, and both become the grave.
York. I do beseech your Majesty, impute his words 141

To wayward sickness and age in him.
He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear
As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.

K. Rich. Right, you say true. As Hereford's love, so his; 145
As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your Majesty.

K. Rich. What says he?

North. Nay, nothing; all is said.
His tongue is now a stringless instrument;
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt
so! 151

Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he;

His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be.
So much for that. Now for our Irish wars. 155
We must supplant those rough-rug-headed kerns,
Which live like venom where no venom else
But only they have privilege to live.

And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
Towards our assistance we do seize to us 160

The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.

York. How long shall I be patient? Ah, how long

Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?

Not Gloucester's death, nor Hereford's banish-
ment, 165

Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private wrongs,

Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace,
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face. 170
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, Prince of Wales, was
first.

In war was never lion rag'd more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentle-
man. 175

His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours;
But when he frown'd, it was against the French
And not against his friends. His noble hand Did win what he did spend and spent not
that 180

Which his triumphant father's hand had won.
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between. 185

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?
York. O my liege,

Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize and gripe into your hands
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford? 190

Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?
Take Hereford's rights away, and take from
Time 195

His charters and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God — God forbid I say true! — 200
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters patents that he hath
By his attorneys general to sue
His livery, and deny his off'red homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head, 205
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts

Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will, we seize into our hands

His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands. 210

York. I'll not be by the while. My liege, farewell!

What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood
That their events can never fall out good.

[Exit.
K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the Earl of Wiltshire straight. 215

Bid him repair to us to Ely House

To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England; 220
For he is just and always lov'd us well.
Come on, our queen; to-morrow must we part.
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

[Flourish. Exeunt King, Queen, Aumerle, Bushy, Green, and Bagot.]

North. Well, lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke. 225

Willo. Barely in title, not in revenues.
North. Richly in both, if Justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with silence.

Ere't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.

North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak more 230

That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!
Willo. Tends that thou wouldst speak to the Duke of Hereford?

If it be so, out with it boldly, man;
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can do for him; 235

Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

North. Now, afore God, 'tis shame such wrongs are borne

In him, a royal prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining land. 240

The King is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the King severely prosecute
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs. 245

Ross. The commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes,

And quite lost their hearts; the nobles hath he fined

For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Willo. And daily new exactions are devis'd,
As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what. 250

But what, o' God's name, doth become of this?
North. Wars hath not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not,

But basely yielded upon compromise
That which his noble ancestors achiev'd with blows.

More hath he spent in peace than they in wars. 255

Ross. The Earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.

Willo. The King's grown bankrupt, like a broken man.

North. Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars,

His burdenous taxations notwithstanding, 260

But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.

North. His noble kinsman: most degenerate king!

But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm;
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails, 265
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

Ross. We see the very wreck that we must suffer;

And unavoids is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wreck.

North. Not so; even through the hollow eyes of death 270

I spy life peering; but I dare not say
How near the tidings of our comfort is.

Willo. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumberland.

We three are but thyself; and, speaking so, 275
Thy words are but as thoughts; therefore, be bold.

North. Then thus: I have from Le Port Blanc, a bay

In Brittany, received intelligence
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainold Lord

Cobham,
[The son and heir of the Earl of Arundel,] 280

That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother, Archbishop late of Canterbury,

Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Ramston,
Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton, and

Francis Coines,
All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Bre- 285

tagne

With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,

Are making hither with all due expedience
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore.

Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland. 290

If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Imp out our drooping country's broken wing,

Redeem from broking pawn the blemish'd crown,

Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptre's gilt,
And make high majesty look like itself, 295

Away with me in post to Ravenspurgh;
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,

Stay and be secret, and myself will go.

Ross. To horse, to horse! urge doubts to them that fear.

Willo. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there. [Exeunt. 300

SCENE II. [Windsor Castle.]

Enter QUEEN, BUSHY, and BAGOT.

Bushy. Madam, your Majesty is too much sad.

You promis'd, when you parted with the King,
To lay aside life-harming heaviness

And entertain a cheerful disposition.

Queen. To please the King I did; to please myself 305

I cannot do it; yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as Grief,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest

As my sweet Richard. Yet again, methinks,
Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune's womb, 10
Is coming towards me, and my inward soul
With nothing trembles. At something it grieves,

More than with parting from my lord the King.

Bushy. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,

Which shows like grief itself, but is not so; 15
For sorrow's eyes, glazed with blinding tears,
Divides one thing entire to many objects,
Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Show nothing but confusion, ey'd awry
Distinguish form; so your sweet Majesty, 20
Looking awry upon your lord's departure, Find shapes of grief, more than himself, to wail;

Which, look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows
Of what it is not. Then, thrice-gracious Queen,
More than your lord's departure weep not.
More 's not seen; 25

Or if it be, 't is with false sorrow's eye,
Which for things true weeps things imaginary.

Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
Persuades me it is otherwise. Howe'er it be,
I cannot but be sad; so heavy sad 30
As, though on thinking on no thought I think, Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. 'T is nothing but conceit, my gracious
lady.

Queen. 'T is nothing less: conceit is still deriv'd

From some forefather grief; mine is not so, 35
For nothing hath begot my something grief,
Or something hath the nothing that I grieve.
'T is in reversion that I do possess;
But what it is, that is not yet known; what,
I cannot name; 't is nameless woe, I wot. 40

Enter GREEN.

Green. God save your Majesty! and well met,
gentlemen.

I hope the King is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen. Why hop'st thou so? 'T is better hope he is;

For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope.
Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipp'd? 45

Green. That he, our hope, might have retir'd
his power,

And driven into despair an enemy's hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this land.
The banish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself,
And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd 50
At Ravenspurgh.

Queen. Now God in heaven forbid!

Green. Ah, madam, 't is too true; and, that is worse,

The Lord Northumberland, his son young
Henry Percy,

The Lords of Ross, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends, are fled to 55
him.

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland

And all the rest revolted faction traitors?

Green. We have; whereupon the Earl of Worcester

Hath broken his staff, resign'd his stewardship,

And all the household servants fled with him 60
To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe,

And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir.

Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,

And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother, 65

Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.

Bushy. Despair not, madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me?

I will despair, and be at enmity

With cozening hope. He is a flatterer,

A parasite, a keeper back of death, 70

Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,

Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter YORK.

Green. Here comes the Duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck.

O, full of careful business are his looks! 75
Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable
words.

York. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts.

Comfort 's in heaven; and we are on the
earth,

Where nothing lives but crosses, cares, and
grief.

Your husband, he is gone to save far off, 80

Whilst others come to make him lose at home.

Here am I left to underprop his land,

Who, weak with age, cannot support myself.

Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit
made;

Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came. 85

York. He was? Why, so! go all which way it will!

The nobles they are fled; the commons they are cold,

And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.

Sirrah, get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloucester; 90

Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.

Hold, take my ring.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship,

To-day, as I came by, I called there,—
But I shall grieve you to report the rest. 95

York. What is 't, knave?

Serv. An hour before I came, the Duchess died.

York. God for his mercy! what a tide of woes

Comes rushing on this woeful land at once!

I know not what to do. I would to God, 100

So my untruth had not provok'd him to it,
The King had cut off my head with my brother's.

What, are there no posts dispatch'd for Ireland?

How shall we do for money for these wars?

Come, sister,—cousin, I would say,—pray, pardon me. 105

Go, fellow, get thee home, provide some carts And bring away the armour that is there.

[Exit Servant.]

Gentlemen, will you go muster men?

If I know how or which way to order these affairs

Thus disorderly thrust into my hands, 110

Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen:

T' one is my sovereign, whom both my oath

And duty bids defend; t' other again

Is my kinsman, whom the King hath wrong'd,

Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right. 115

Well, somewhat we must do. Come, cousin, I'll Dispose of you.

Gentlemen, go, muster up your men,

And meet me presently at Berkeley.

I should to Plashy too, 120

But time will not permit. All is uneven,

And everything is left at six and seven.

[Exeunt York and Queen.]

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go for Ireland,

But none returns. For us to levy power

Proportionable to the enemy 125

Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the King in love

Is near the hate of those love not the King.

Bagot. And that's the wavering commons, for their love

Lies in their purses; and whose empties them

By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate. 131

Bushy. Wherein the King stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgement lie in them, then so do we,

Because we ever have been near the King.

Green. Well, I will for refuge straight to Bristol castle: 135

The Earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you; for little office

The hateful commons will perform for us,

Except like curs to tear us all to pieces.

Will you go along with us? 140

Bagot. No; I will to Ireland to his Majesty.

Farewell! If heart's presages be not vain,

We three here part that ne'er shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York thrives to beat back Bolingbroke.

Green. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes 145

Is numb'ring sands and drinking oceans dry.

Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.

Farewell at once, for once, for all, and ever.

Bushy. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Wilds in Gloucestershire.]

Enter BOLINGBROKE and NORTHUMBERLAND [with forces].

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkeley now?

North. Believe me, noble lord,

I am a stranger here in Gloucestershire.

These high wild hills and rough uneven ways

Draws out our miles, and makes them weary some;

And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar, Making the hard way sweet and delectable.

But I bethink me what a weary way

From Ravenspurgh to Cotswold will be found

In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company. 10

Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd

The tediousness and process of my travel.

But theirs is sweet'ned with the hope to have

The present benefit which I possess;

And hope to joy is little less in joy 15

Than hope enjoy'd. By this the weary lords Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath done

By sight of what I have, your noble company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company

Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter HENRY PERCY.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy, 21

Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever.

Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the Queen? 25

Percy. No, my good lord; he hath forsook the court,

Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd

The household of the King.

North. What was his reason?

He was not so resolv'd when last we spake together.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed traitor. 30

But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspurgh

To offer service to the Duke of Hereford,

And sent me over by Berkeley, to discover

What power the Duke of York had levied there;

Then with directions to repair to Ravenspurgh. 35

North. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford, boy?

Percy. No, my good lord, for that is not forgot

Which ne'er I did remember. To my knowledge,

I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now; this is the Duke. 40

Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,

Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young;

Which elder days shall ripen and confirm

To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and be sure 45

I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul rememb'ring my good friends;
And, as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense.
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it. 50

North. How far is it to Berkeley? and what stir Keeps good old York there with his men of war? 55

Percy. There stands the castle, by yon tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard;
And in it are the Lords of York, Berkeley, and Seymour; — 60
None else of name and noble estimate.

Enter ROSS and WILLOUGHBY.

North. Here come the Lords of Ross and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords. I wot your love pursues

A banish'd traitor. All my treasury 60
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord.

Willo. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.

Boling. Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor, 65

Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter BERKELEY.

North. It is my Lord of Berkeley, as I guess.
Berk. My Lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Boling. My lord, my answer is — to Lancaster; 70

And I am come to seek that name in England;
And I must find that title in your tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.

Berk. Mistake me not, my lord; 't is not my meaning

To raze one title of your honour out. 75
To you, my lord, I come, what lord you will,
From the most gracious regent of this land,
The Duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time
And fright our native peace with self-borne arms. 80

Enter YORK [attended].

Boling. I shall not need transport my words by you;

Here comes his Grace in person. My noble uncle! [Kneels.]

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,

Whose duty is deceiveable and false.

Boling. My gracious uncle — 85

York. Tut, tut!

Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle.
I am no traitor's uncle; and that word "grace" —
In an ungracious mouth is but profane.
Why have those banish'd and forbidden legs 90
Dar'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?

But then more "why?" Why have they dar'd to march

So many miles upon her peaceful bosom,
Frighting her pale-fac'd villages with war
And ostentation of despised arms? 95
Com'st thou because the anointed King is hence?

Why, foolish boy, the King is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.
Were I but now the lord of such hot youth
As when brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself
Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men, 101

From forth the ranks of many thousand French,
O, then how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee
And minister correction to thy fault! 105

Boling. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault.

On what condition stands it and wherein?

York. Even in condition of the worst degree,
In gross rebellion and detested treason.
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come 110
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign.

Boling. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford;

But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And, noble uncle, I beseech your Grace 115
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye.
You are my father, for methinks in you
I see old Gaunt alive. O, then, my father,
Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd
A wandering vagabond; my rights and royal- ties 120

Pluck'd from my arms perforce, and given away

To upstart thrifths? Wherefore was I born?
If that my cousin king be King of England,
It must be granted I am Duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble cousin; 125
Had you first died, and he been thus trod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father
To rouse his wrongs and chase them to the bay.
I am deni'd to sue my livery here,

And yet my letters patents give me leave. 130
My father's goods are all distrain'd and sold,
And these and all are all amiss employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And I challenge law. Attorneys are denied me;
And therefore personally I lay my claim 135
To my inheritance of free descent.

North. The noble Duke hath been too much abus'd.

Ross. It stands your Grace upon to do him right.

Willo. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My lords of England, let me tell you this: 140

I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs

And labour'd all I could to do him right;
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrong, it may not be; 145
And you that do abet him in this kind
Cherish rebellion and are rebels all.

North. The noble Duke hath sworn his coming is

But for his own; and for the right of that
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid; 150
And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath!
York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms.

I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak and all ill left;
But if I could, by Him that gave me life, 155
I would attach you all and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the King;
But since I cannot, be it known to you
I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well;
Unless you please to enter in the castle 160
And there repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept.
But we must win your Grace to go with us
To Bristol castle, which they say is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices, 165
The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

York. It may be I will go with you; but yet
I'll pause,

For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends nor foes, to me welcome you are. 170
Things past redress are now with me past care.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [A camp in Wales.]

Enter SALISBURY and a Welsh CAPTAIN.

Cap. My Lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd ten days,
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will disperse ourselves. Fare-
well!

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty
Welshman. 5

The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Cap. 'Tis thought the King is dead; we will not stay.

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change; 11

Rich men look sad and ruffians dance and leap,

The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,

The other to enjoy by rage and war.

These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.
Farewell! Our countrymen are gone and fled, 15
As well assur'd Richard their king is dead.

[Exit.]

Sal. Ah, Richard, with the eyes of heavy
mind

I see thy glory like a shooting star
Fall to the base earth from the firmament. 20
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,

Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest.
Thy friends are fled to wait upon thy foes,
And crossly to thy good all fortune goes. [Exit.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [Bristol. Before the castle.]

Enter BOLINGBROKE, YORK, NORTHUMBER-LAND, ROSS, PERCY, WILLUGHBY, with BUSHY and GREEN, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.

Bushy and Green, I will not vex your souls—Since presently your souls must part your bodies—

With too much urging your pernicious lives;
For 't were no charity; yet, to wash your
blood 5

From off my hands, here in the view of men
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.

You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigur'd clean. 10

You have in manner with your sinful hours
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed

And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears drawn from her eyes by your foul
wrongs. 15

Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the King in blood, and near in love
Till you did make him misinterpret me,
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds, 20

Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
Dispark'd my parks and fell'd my forest woods,
From my own windows torn my household coat,

Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign, 25
Save men's opinions and my living blood,
To show the world I am a gentleman.

This and much more, much more than twice all this,

Condemns you to the death. See them delivered over

To execution and the hand of death. 30

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to me

Than Bolingbroke to England. Lords, fare-
well!

Green. My comfort is that heaven will take our souls

And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

Boling. My Lord Northumberland, see them
dispatch'd. 35

[Exeunt Northumberland and others, with the prisoners.]

Uncle, you say the Queen is at your house;
For God's sake, fairly let her be entreated;
Tell her I send to her my kind commends.
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.

York. A gentleman of mine I have dis-patch'd 40

With letters of your love to her at large.

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle. Come, lords,
away,
To fight with Glendower and his complices.
Awhile to work, and after holiday. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The coast of Wales. A castle in view.]

Drums: flourish and colours. Enter KING RICHARD, the BISHOP OF CARLISLE, AUMERLE, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly castle call they this at hand?

Aum. Yea, my lord. How brooks your Grace
the air,

After your late tossing on the breaking seas?

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well; I weep for joy

To stand upon my kingdom once again.
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses'
hoofs.

As a long-parted mother with her child Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting,

So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth, 10
And do thee favours with my royal hands.

Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense;

But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom, 15
And heavy-gaited toads lie in their way,

Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.

Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies;
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,

Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder 20
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch

Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies.
Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords.

This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king 25

Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms.
Car. Fear not, my lord; that Power that made you king

Hath power to keep you king in spite of all.

The means that heavens yield must be embrace'd,

And not neglected; else, if heaven would 30
And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse,

The proffer'd means of succour and redress.
Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;

Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,

Grows strong and great in substance and in
power. 35

K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know'st thou
not

That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the globe, that lights the lower world,

Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen
In murders and in outrage, boldly here; 40

But when from under this terrestrial ball
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines

And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,

The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs, 45

Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?

So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the night,

Whilst we were wand'ring with the antipodes,
Shall see us rising in our throne, the east, 50

His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,

But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea

Can wash the balm off from an anointed king;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose 55

The deputy elected by the Lord.
For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd

To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay 60

A glorious angel; then, if angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for Heaven still guards

the right.

Enter SALISBURY.

Welcome, my lord. How far off lies your power?

Sal. Nor near nor farther off, my gracious
lord,

Than this weak arm. Discomfort guides my
tongue 65

And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear me, noble lord,

Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth.
O, call back yesterday, bid time return,

And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting
men! 70

To-day, to-day, unhappy day, too late, O'erthrows thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy

state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,

Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, and fled.
Aum. Comfort, my liege; why looks your

Grace so pale? 75
K. Rich. But now the blood of twenty thousand men

Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;

And, till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?

All souls that will be safe fly from my side, 80
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort, my liege; remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself; am I not
King?

Awake, thou coward majesty! thou sleepest.
Is not the King's name twenty thousand

names? 85
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes

At thy great glory. Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king; are we not high?

High be our thoughts. I know my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who comes here? 90

Enter SCROOP.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my
liege

Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him!
K. Rich. Mine ear is open and my heart prepar'd.

The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold.
Say, is my kingdom lost? Why, 't was my care;

95

And what loss is it to be rid of care?
Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be; if he serve God,
We'll serve Him too and be his fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? That we cannot mend;
They break their faith to God as well as us.
Cry woe, destruction, ruin, and decay;
The worst is death, and death will have his day.

Scroop. Glad am I that your Highness is so
arm'd

To bear the tidings of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,

105

As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears,
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel and hearts harder than steel.

110

White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairless scalps

Against thy majesty; boys, with women's voices,

Strive to speak big, and clap their female joints
In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown;

115

Thy very beadsmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state;

Yea, distaff-women manage rusty bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

K. Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a tale so ill.

121

Where is the Earl of Wiltshire? Where is Bagot?

What is become of Bushy? Where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy

Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.

126

I warrant they have made peace with Boling-
broke.

Scroop. Peace have they made with him indeed, my lord.

K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption!

Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man!
Snakes, in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting
my heart!

130

Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!

Would they make peace? Terrible hell make war

Upon their spotted souls for this offence!
Scroop. Sweet love, I see, changing his property,

135

Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Again uncure their souls; their peace is made With heads, and not with hands. Those whom you curse

Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound
And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the Earl of Wiltshire dead?

141

Scroop. Ay, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the Duke my father with his power?

K. Rich. No matter where; of comfort no man speak.

Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper and with rainy eyes

145

Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors and talk of wills;

And yet not so; for what can we bequeath
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?

150

Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,

And that small model of the barren earth
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.

For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:

155

How some have been depos'd; some slain in
war;

Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd;

Some poison'd by their wives; some sleeping
kill'd;

All murder'd: for within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king

160

Keeps Death his court, and there the antic sits,

Scorning his state and grinning at his pomp,
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,

To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks,
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,

165

As if this flesh which walls about our life
Were brass impregnable; and humour'd thus

Comes at the last and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and—farewell
king!

170

Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence. Throw away respect,

Tradition, form, and ceremonious duty;
For you have but mistook me all this while.

I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste grief, need friends: subjected thus,

175

How can you say to me I am a king?
Car. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their woes,

But presently prevent the ways to wail.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,

Gives in your weakness strength unto your foe,

181

And so your follies fight against yourself.
Fear, and be slain; no worse can come to fight;

And fight and die is death destroying death,
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.

Aum. My father hath a power; inquire of
him,

186

And learn to make a body of a limb.
K. Rich. Thou chid'st me well. Proud Bolingbroke, I come

To change blows with thee for our day of doom.
This ague fit of fear is over-blown;

190

An easy task it is to win our own.
Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?

Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.

Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky

The state and inclination of the day;

195

So may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
I play the torturer by small and small
To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken.

Your uncle York is join'd with Bolingbroke,
And all your northern castles yielded up, 201
And all your southern gentlemen in arms
Upon his party.

K. Rich. Thon hast said enough.
[To Aumerle.] Beshrew thee, cousin, which didst lead me forth

Of that sweet way I was in to despair! 205
What say you now? What comfort have we
now?

By heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint castle; there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey. 210
That power I have, discharge; and let them
go

To ear the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none. Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aum. My liege, one word.
K. Rich. He does me double wrong
That wounds me with the flatteries of his
tongue. 216

Discharge my followers; let them hence away,
From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair
day. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Wales. Before Flint Castle.]

Enter, with drum and colours, BOLINGBROKE, YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND, Attendants [and forces].

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn
The Welshmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few private friends upon this coast.

North. The news is very fair and good, my
lord. 5
Richard not far from hence hath hid his head.

York. It would beseem the Lord Northumberland

To say King Richard. Alack the heavy day
When such a sacred king should hide his head!

North. Your Grace mistakes; only to be brief 10
Left I his title out.

York. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would

Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole head's length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, further than you should. 15

York. Take not, good cousin, further than you should,
Lest you mistake the heavens are o'er our
heads.

Boling. I know it, uncle, and oppose not myself
Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter PERCY.

Welcome, Harry. What, will not this castle yield? 20

Percy. The castle royally is mann'd, my lord,

Against thy entrance.

Boling. Royally!

Why, it contains no king?

Percy. Yes, my good lord,
It doth contain a king. King Richard lies 25
Within the limits of yon lime and stone;
And with him are the Lord Aumerle, Lord
Salisbury,

Sir Stephen Scroop, besides a clergyman

Of holy reverence; who, I cannot learn.
North. O, belike it is the Bishop of Carlisle.

Boling. Noble lords, 31
Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle;
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parley

Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver:

Henry Bolingbroke 35
On both his knees doth kiss King Richard's
hand

And sends allegiance and true faith of heart
To his most royal person, hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that my banishment repeal'd 40

And lands restor'd again be freely granted.
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power
And lay the summer's dust with showers of
blood

Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd English-
men;

The which, how far off from the mind of Bo-
lingbroke 45

It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair King Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.

Go, signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain. 50

Let's march without the noise of threat'ning
drum,

That from this castle's tatter'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Methinks King Richard and myself should
meet

With no less terror than the elements 55
Of fire and water, when their thund'ring shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.

Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water;
The rage be his, whilst on the earth I rain

My waters; on the earth, and not on him. 60 March on, and mark King Richard how he looks.

Parle without, and answer within: then a flourish. Enter on the walls, KING RICHARD, the

BISHOP OF CARLISLE, AUMERLE, SCROOP, and SALISBURY.

See, see, King Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east,
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory and to stain the track 65
Of his bright passage to the occident.

York. Yet looks he like a king! Behold, his eye,
 As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth
 Controlling majesty. Alack, alack, for woe, 70
 That any harm should stain so fair a show!
K. Rich. We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood [To North.]
 To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
 Because we thought ourself thy lawful king;
 And if we be, how dare thy joints forget 75
 To pay their awful duty to our presence?
 If we be not, show us the hand of God
 That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship;
 For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
 Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre, 80
 Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.
 And though you think that all, as you have
 done,
 Have torn their souls by turning them from us,
 And we are barren and bereft of friends,
 Yet know, my master, God omnipotent, 85
 Is mustering in his clouds on our behalf
 Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike
 Your children yet unborn and unbegot,
 That lift your vassal hands against my head
 And threat the glory of my precious crown— 90 Tell Bolingbroke—for yon methinks he stands—
 That every stride he makes upon my land
 Is dangerous treason. He is come to open
 The purple testament of bleeding war;
 But ere the crown he looks for live in peace, 95
 Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers' sons
 Shall ill become the flower of England's face,
 Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace
 To scarlet indignation, and bedew
 Her pastures' grass with faithful English blood.
North. The King of heaven forbid our lord
 the King 101
 Should so with civil and uncivil arms
 Be rush'd upon! Thy thrice noble cousin Harry Bolingbroke doth humbly kiss thy
 hand;
 And by the honourable tomb he swears, 105
 That stands upon your royal grandsire's bones,
 And by the royalties of both your bloods,
 Currents that spring from one most gracious
 head,
 And by the buried hand of warlike Gaunt,
 And by the worth and honour of himself, 110
 Comprising all that may be sworn or said,
 His coming hither hath no further scope
 Than for his lineal royalties, and to beg
 Enfranchisement immediate on his knees;
 Which on thy royal party granted once, 115
 His glittering arms he will commend to rust,
 His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
 To faithful service of your Majesty.
 This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
 And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him. 120
K. Rich. Northumberland, say thus the King returns:
 His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
 And all the number of his fair demands
 Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction.

With all the gracious utterance thou hast 125
 Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends.
 [Northumberland withdraws to Bolingbroke.]
 [To Aumerle.] We do debase ourselves, cousin, do we not,
 To look so poorly and to speak so fair?
 Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die? 130
Aum. No, good my lord; let's fight with gentle words
 Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful
 swords.
K. Rich. O God, O God! that e'er this tongue of mine,
 That laid the sentence of dread banishment
 On yon proud man, should take it off again 135
 With words of sooth! O that I were as great
 As is my grief, or lesser than my name!
 Or that I could forget what I have been,
 Or not remember what I must be now!
 Swell'st thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to beat, 140
 Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.
K. Rich. What must the King do now?
 Must he submit?
 The King shall do it. Must he be depos'd?
 The King shall be contented. Must he lose 145
 The name of king? O' God's name, let it go.
 I'll give my jewels for a set of beads,
 My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
 My gay apparel for an almsman's gown,
 My figur'd goblets for a dish of wood, 150
 My sceptre for a palmer's walking-staff,
 My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
 And my large kingdom for a little grave,
 A little little grave, an obscure grave;
 Or I'll be buried in the King's highway, 155
 Some way of common trade, where subjects'
 feet
 May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
 For on my heart they tread now whilst I live,
 And buried once, why not upon my head?
 Aumerle, thou weep'st, my tender-hearted
 cousin! 160
 We'll make foul weather with despised tears.
 Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer
 corn,
 And make a dearth in this revolting land.
 Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
 And make some pretty match with shedding
 tears? 165
 As thus, to drop them still upon one place,
 Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
 Within the earth; and, therein laid,—there lies
 Two kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping
 eyes.
 Would not this ill do well? Well, well, I see 170
 I talk but idly, and you laugh at me.
 Most mighty prince, my Lord Northumberland,
 What says King Bolingbroke? Will his Majesty
 Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?
 You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says ay. 175

North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend
To speak with you, may it please you to come down.

K. Rich. Down, down I come; like glist'ring Phaethon, Wanting the manage of unruly jades.
In the base court? Base court, where kings grow base,¹⁸⁰
To come at traitors' calls and do them grace.
In the base court? Come down? Down, court! down, king!

For night-owls shriek where mounting larks should sing. [Exeunt from above.]

Boling. What says his Majesty?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantic man; Yet he is come.¹⁸⁶

[Enter KING RICHARD and his Attendants below.]

Boling. Stand all apart,
And show fair duty to his Majesty.
[He kneels down.]

My gracious lord, —

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee¹⁹⁰
To make the base earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had my heart might feel your love
Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.

Up, cousin, up; your heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least [touching his own head],
although your knee be low.¹⁹⁵

Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.

K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,

As my true service shall deserve your love.

K. Rich. Well you deserve; they well deserve to have,²⁰⁰

That know the strong'st and surest way to get.
Uncle, give me your hands: nay, dry your eyes;

Tears show their love, but want their remedies.
Cousin, I am too young to be your father,

Though you are old enough to be my heir.²⁰⁵
What you will have, I'll give, and willing too;

For do we must what force will have us do.
Set on towards London, cousin, is it so?

Boling. Yea, my good lord.

K. Rich. Then I must not say no.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [Langley. The Duke of York's garden.]

Enter the QUEEN and two LADIES.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this garden

To drive away the heavy thought of care?

Lady. Madam, we'll play at bowls.

Queen. 'Twill make me think the world is full of rubs,

And that my fortune runs against the bias.⁵

Lady. Madam, we'll dance.

Queen. My legs can keep no measure in delight,

When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief;

Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

Lady. Madam, we'll tell tales.¹⁴

Queen. Of sorrow or of joy?

Lady. Of either, madam.

Queen. Of neither, girl;

For if of joy, being altogether wanting,

It doth remember me the more of sorrow;

Or if of grief, being altogether had,¹⁵

It adds more sorrow to my want of joy;

For what I have I need not to repeat,

And what I want it boots not to complain.

Lady. Madam, I'll sing.

Queen. 'Tis well that thou hast cause;

But thou shouldst please me better, wouldst thou weep.²⁶

Lady. I could weep, madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could sing, would weeping do me good,

And never borrow any tear of thee.

Enter a GARDENER and two SERVANTS.

But stay, here come the gardeners.

Let's step into the shadow of these trees.²⁸

My wretchedness unto a row of pins,

They'll talk of state; for every one doth so

Against a change; woe is forerun with woe.

[Queen and Ladies retire.]

Gard. Go, bind thou up yon dangling apri-cocks,

Which, like unruly children, make their sire³⁴

Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight;

Give some supportance to the bending twigs.

Go thou, and like an executioner,

Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprays,

That look too lofty in our commonwealth;³⁵

All must be even in our government.

You thus employ'd, I will go root away

The noisome weeds, which without profit suck

The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

Serv. Why should we in the compass of a pale⁴⁰

Keep law and form and due proportion,

Showing, as in a model, our firm estate,

When our sea-walled garden, the whole land,

Is full of weeds, her fairest flowers chok'd up,

Her fruit-trees all unprun'd, her hedges

ruin'd,⁴⁵

Her knots disorder'd and her wholesome herbs

Swarming with caterpillars?

Gard. Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd spring

Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf.

The weeds which his broad-spreading leaves

did shelter,⁵⁰

That seem'd in eating him to hold him up,

Are pluck'd up root and all by Bolingbroke,

I mean the Earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

Serv. What, are they dead?

Gard. They are; and Bolingbroke

Hath seiz'd the wasteful King. O, what pity is it⁵⁵

That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land

As we this garden ! We at time of year
Do wound the bark, the skin of our fruit-trees,
Lest, being over-proud in sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself ;
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear and he to taste
Their fruits of duty. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live ;
Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,
Which waste of idle hours hath quite thrown down.

Serv. What, think you the King shall be depos'd ?

Gard. Depress'd he is already, and depos'd 'Tis doubt he will be. Letters came last night To a dear friend of the good Duke of York's, That tell black tidings.

Queen. O, I am press'd to death through want of speaking !
Thou, old Adam's likeness, set to dress this garden,

How dares thy harsh rude tongue sound this displeasing news ?

What Eve, what serpent, hath suggested thee

To make a second fall of cursed man ?
Why dost thou say King Richard is depos'd ?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfall ? Say, where, when, and how,

Cam'st thou by this ill tidings ? Speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, madam ; little joy have I To breathe this news ; yet what I say is true. King Richard, he is in the mighty hold Of Bolingbroke. Their fortunes both are weigh'd.

In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities that make him light ;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peers,
And with that odds he weighs King Richard down.

Post you to London, and you'll find it so ;
I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble Mischance, that art so light of foot,

Doth not thy embassy belong to me,
And am I last that knows it ? O, thou think'st To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast. Come, ladies, go,
To meet at London London's king in woe.
What, was I born to this, that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke ?

Gardener, for telling me these news of woe,
Pray God the plants thou graft'st may never grow.

Gard. Poor queen ! so that thy state might be no worse,

I would my skill were subject to thy curse.
Here did she fall a tear ; here in this place
I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace,
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [London. Westminster Hall.]

Enter as to the Parliament BOLINGBROKE, AUMERLE, NORTHUMBERLAND, PERCY, FITZWATER, SURREY, the BISHOP OF CARLISLE, the ABBOT OF WESTMINSTER [and another LORD], Herald, and Officers.

Boling. Call forth Bagot.

Enter BAGOT.

Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind ;
What thou dost know of noble Gloucester's death,

Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd

The bloody office of his timeless end.

Bagot. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.

Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.

Bagot. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue

Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.
In that dead time when Gloucester's death was plotted,

I heard you say, " Is not my arm of length,
That reacheth from the restful English court
As far as Calais, to mine uncle's head ? "
Amongst much other talk, that very time,

I heard you say that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand crowns
Than Bolingbroke's return to England ;
Adding withal, how blest this land would be
In this your cousin's death.

Aum. Princes and noble lords,
What answer shall I make to this base man ?

Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,
On equal terms to give him chastisement ?
Either I must, or have mine honour soil'd
With the attainer of his slanderous lips.
There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out for hell. I say, thou liest,

And will maintain what thou hast said is false
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Boling. Bagot, forbear ; thou shalt not take it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best

In all this presence that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathy,
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine.
By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st,

I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloucester's death.

If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest ;
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.

Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.

Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.

Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as true

In this appeal as thou art all unjust; 45
And that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to the extremest point
Of mortal breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'st.

Aum. An if I do not, may my hands rot off
And never brandish more revengeful steel 50
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Another Lord. I task the earth to the like,
forsworn Aumerle;

And spur thee on with full as many lies
As may be holloa'd in thy treacherous ear
From sun to sun. There is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st. 55

Aum. Who sets me else? By heaven, I'll throw at all!

I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey. My Lord Fitzwater, I do remember
well 60

The very time Aumerle and you did talk.
Fitz. 'Tis very true; you were in presence
then,

And you can witness with me this is true.
Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.

Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.
Surrey. Dishonourable boy!

That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword, 65
That it shall render vengeance and revenge
Till thou the lie-giver and that lie do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's skull;
In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn;
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st. 71

Fitz. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!

If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,

And spit upon him, whilst I say he lies, 75
And lies, and lies. There is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction.

As I intend to thrive in this new world,
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal;

Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say 80
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
To execute the noble Duke at Calais.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a
gage,

That Norfolk lies. Here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd, to try his honour. 85

Boling. These differences shall all rest under
gage

Till Norfolk be repeal'd. Repeal'd he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restor'd again

To all his lands and signories. When he's re-turn'd,

Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial. 90
Car. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.

Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ in glorious Christian field,
Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross
Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens; 95
And, toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself

To Italy; and there at Venice gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long. 100

Boling. Why, Bishop, is Norfolk dead?
Car. As surely as I live, my lord.

Boling. Sweet Peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom

Of good old Abraham! Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage 105
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter YORK [attended].

York. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to
thee

From plume-pluck'd Richard; who with willing soul

Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand. 110

Ascend his throne, descending now from him;
And long live Henry, fourth of that name!

Boling. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal throne.

Car. Marry, God forbid!
Worst in this royal presence may I speak, 115
Yet best beseeching me to speak the truth.

Would God that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge
Of noble Richard! Then true noblesse would Learn him forbearance from so foul a 120 wrong.

What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?

Thieves are not judg'd but they are by to
hear,

Although apparent guilt be seen in them;
And shall the figure of God's majesty, 125
His captain, steward, deputy elect,

Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,
And he himself not present? O, forbend it,
God,

That in a Christian climate souls refin'd 130
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!

I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,
Stirr'd up by God, thus boldly for his king.

My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call
king,

Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king; 135
And if you crown him, let me prophesy,
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for this foul act.

Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And in this seat of peace tumultuous wars 140
Shall kin with kin and kind with kind confound.

Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha and dead men's skulls.

O, if you raise this house against this house, 145
It will the woe-fullest division prove
That ever fell upon this cursed earth.

Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
Lest child, child's children, cry against you
"woe!"

North. Well have you argued, sir; and, for your pains, 150
Of capital treason we arrest you here.
My Lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.
May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit?

Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view 155
He may surrender; so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.
York. I will be his conduct. [Exit.

Boling. Lords, you that here are under our arrest,
Procure your sureties for your days of answer.
Little are we beholding to your love, 160
And little look'd for at your helping hands.
Re-enter YORK, with RICHARD [and Officers bearing the crown and sceptre].

K. Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a king,
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd

To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my knee.
Give sorrow leave a while to tutor me 165
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The favours of these men. Were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, "All hail!" to me?

So Judas did to Christ; but He, in twelve, 170
Found truth in all but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.

God save the King! — Will no man say amen?
Am I both priest and clerk? Well then, amen.
God save the King! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me. —
To do what service am I sent for hither? 175

York. To do that office of thine own good will

Which tired majesty did make thee offer,
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Henry Bolingbroke. 180

K. Rich. Give me the crown. — Here, cousin, seize the crown;

Here, cousin,
On this side my hand, and on that side thine.
Now is this golden crown like a deep well
That owes two buckets, filling one another, 185
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water.
That bucket down and full of tears am I,
Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.

Boling. I thought you had been willing to resign. 190

K. Rich. My crown I am; but still my griefs are mine.

You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs; still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown.

K. Rich. Your cares set up do not pluck my cares down. 195

My care is loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is gain of care, by new care won.

The cares I give I have, though given away;
They 'tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown? 204

K. Rich. Ay, no; no, ay; for I must nothing be;

Therefore no no, for I resign to thee.
Now mark me, how I will undo myself.
I give this heavy weight from off my head
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand, 205
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart.
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duteous oaths.
All pomp and majesty I do forswear; 211
My manors, rents, revenues I forgo;
My acts, decrees, and statutes I deny.

God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbroke are made to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd, 215

And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd!

Long mayst thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit! 219
God save King Henry, unking'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!
— What more remains?

North. No more, but that you read [Presenting a paper.]

These accusations and these grievous crimes
Committed by your person and your followers

Against the state and profit of this land; 225
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out

My weav'd-up follies? Gentle Northumberland,

If thy offences were upon record, 230

Would it not shame thee in so fair a troop
To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst,
There shouldst thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposing of a king

And cracking the strong warrant of an oath, 235
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven.

Nay, all of you that stand and look upon me
Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait myself,
Though some of you with Pilate wash your hands

Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates 240

Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

North. My lord, dispatch; read o'er these articles.

K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see;

And yet salt water blinds them not so much 245
But they can see a sort of traitors here.

Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest;

For I have given here my soul's consent
To undeck the pompous body of a king; 250

Made glory base, a sovereignty a slave,
Proud majesty a subject, state a peasant.

North. My lord, —

K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou haught insulting man, 254

Nor no man's lord. I have no name, no title;
No, not that name was given me at the font,
But 't is usurp'd. Alack the heavy day,
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself!
O that I were a mockery king of snow, 260
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops!
Good king, great king, and yet not greatly good,
An if my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight, 265
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.

Boling. Go some of you and fetch a looking-glass. [Exit an attendant.]

North. Read o'er this paper while the glass doth come.

K. Rich. Fiend, thou torments me e'er I come to hell! 270

Boling. Urge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.

North. The commons will not then be satisfi'd.

K. Rich. They shall be satisfi'd. I'll read enough,

When I do see the very book indeed

Where all my sins are writ, and that's myself. 275

Re-enter Attendant, with a glass.

Give me that glass, and therein will I read.
No deeper wrinkles yet? Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds? O flatt'ring glass, 280

Like to my followers in prosperity,

Thou dost beguile me! Was this face the face

That every day under his household roof

Did keep ten thousand men? Was this the face

That, like the sun, did make beholders wink?

Is this the face which fac'd so many follies, 285

That was at last out-fac'd by Bolingbroke?

A brittle glory shineth in this face;

As brittle as the glory is the face,

[Dashes the glass against the ground.]

For there it is, crack'd in an hundred shivers.

Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport, 290

How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd

The shadow of your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.

The shadow of my sorrow! Ha! let's see.

'T is very true, my grief lies all within;

And these external manners of laments 295

Are merely shadows to the unseen grief

That swells with silence in the tortur'd soul.

There lies the substance; and I thank thee,

King,

For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st 300

Me cause to wail but teachest me the way

How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,

And then be gone and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin.

K. Rich. "Fair cousin"? I am greater than a king; 305

For when I was a king, my flatterers

Were then but subjects; being now a subject,

I have a king here to my flatterer.

Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask. 310

K. Rich. And shall I have?

Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Then give me leave to go.

Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights. 315

Boling. Go, some of you convey him to the Tower.

K. Rich. O, good! convey! Conveyers are you all,

That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.
[Exeunt King Richard, some Lords, and a Guard.]

Boling. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down

Our coronation. Lords, prepare yourselves. 320
[Exeunt all but the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Aumerle.]

Abbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.

Car. The woe's to come; the children yet unborn

Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

Aum. You holy clergymen, is there no plot To rid the realm of this pernicious blot? 325

Abbot. My lord,

Before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament

To bury mine intents, but also to effect

Whatever I shall happen to devise. 330

I see your brows are full of discontent,

Your hearts of sorrow and your eyes of tears.

Come home with me to supper; and I'll lay

A plot shall show us all a merry day. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [London. A street leading to the Tower.]

Enter QUEEN and Ladies.

Queen. This way the King will come; this is the way

To Julius Cæsar's ill-erected tower,
To whose flint bosom my condemned lord

Is doom'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke.

Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth 3

Have any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter RICHARD and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither; yet look up, behold,

That you in pity may dissolve to dew,

And wash him fresh again with true-love tears. 6

Ah, thou, the model where old Troy did stand,

Thou map of honour, thou King Richard's tomb,
And not King Richard; thou most beauteous inn,

Why should hard-favour'd Grief be lodg'd in
thee,

When Triumph is become an alehouse guest? ¹⁵

K. Rich. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so,

To make my end too sudden. Learn, good soul,
To think our former state a happy dream;
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are Shows us but this. I am sworn brother, sweet,
To grim Necessity; and he and I ²¹

Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to
France

And cloister thee in some religious house.

Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
Which our profane hours here have thrown down. ²⁵

Queen. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind

Transform'd and weak'ned? Hath Bolingbroke depos'd

Thine intellect? Hath he been in thy heart?

The lion dying thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage ³⁰

To be o'erpower'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like,

Take the correction, mildly kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,

Which art a lion and the king of beasts?

K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught
but beasts, ³⁵

I had been still a happy king of men.

Good sometimes queen, prepare thee hence for
France.

Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, thy last living leave. ⁴⁰

In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages long ago betid;

And ere thou bid good night, to quit their griefs

Tell thou the lamentable tale of me

And send the hearers weeping to their beds. ⁴⁵

For why, the senseless brands will sympathize

The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,

And in compassion weep the fire out;

And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,

For the deposing of a rightful king. ⁵⁰

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND [and others].

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd;

You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.

And, madam, there is order ta'en for you;

With all swift speed you must away to France.

K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder wherewithal ⁵⁵

The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,

The time shall not be many hours of age

More than it is, ere foul sin gathering head

Shall break into corruption. Thou shalt think,

Though he divide the realm and give thee half,

It is too little, helping him to all; ⁶¹

And he shall think that thou, which know'st
the way

To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne. ⁶⁵

The love of wicked men converts to fear;

That fear to hate, and hate turns one or both

To worthy danger and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.

Take leave and part; for you must part forthwith. ⁷⁰

K. Rich. Doubly divorce'd! Bad men, you violate

A twofold marriage, 'twixt my crown and me,
And then betwixt me and my married wife.

Let me unkind the oath 'twixt thee and me;

And yet not so, for with a kiss 't was made. ⁷⁵

Part us, Northumberland; I towards the north, Where shivering cold and sickness pines the
clime;

My wife to France; from whence, set forth in pomp,

She came adorned hither like sweet May,

Sent back like Hallowmas or short'st of day. ⁸⁰

Queen. And must we be divided? Must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the King
with me.

North. That were some love but little policy.

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go. ⁸⁵

K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe.

Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;

Better far off than near, be ne'er the near.

Go, count thy way with sighs; I mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans. ⁹⁰

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,

And piece the way out with a heavy heart.

Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief,

Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.

One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part; ⁹⁵

Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

Queen. Give me mine own again; 't were no good part

To take on me to keep and kill thy heart. —

So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan. ¹⁰⁰

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay.

Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [London. The Duke of York's palace.]

Enter YORK and his DUCHESS.

Duch. My lord, you told me you would tell the rest,

When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?
Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
 Where rude misgovern'd hands from windows'
 tops
 Threw dust and rubbish on King Richard's
 head.

York. Then, as I said, the Duke, great Bolingbroke,
 Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed
 Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
 With slow but stately pace kept on his course, Whilst all tongues cried, "God save thee, Bo-
 lingbroke!"
 You would have thought the very windows
 spake,

So many greedy looks of young and old
 Through casements darted their desiring eyes
 Upon his visage, and that all the walls
 With painted imagery had said at once,
 "Jesu preserve thee! Welcome, Bolingbroke!"
 Whilst he, from the one side to the other turn-
 ing,

Bareheaded, lower than his proud steed's neck,
 Bespake them thus: "I thank you, country-
 men."

And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.
Duch. Alack, poor Richard! where rode he the whilst?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
 After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
 Are idly bent on him that enters next,
 Thinking his prattle to be tedious;
 Even so, or with much more contempt, men's
 eyes

Did scowl on gentle Richard. No man cried,
 "God save him!"

No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
 But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
 Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
 His face still combating with tears and smiles,
 The badges of his grief and patience,
 That had not God, for some strong purpose, steel'd

The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,

And barbarism itself have pitied him.
 But Heaven hath a hand in these events,
 To whose high will we bow our calm contents.
 To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
 Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Enter AUMERLE.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.
York. Aumerle that was;
 But that is lost for being Richard's friend,
 And, madam, you must call him Rutland now.
 I am in parliament pledge for his truth
 And lasting fealty to the new made king.

Duch. Welcome, my son! Who are the violets now
 That strew the green lap of the new come spring?

Aum. Madam, I know not, ner I greatly care not.

God knows I had as lief be none as one.
York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,

Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.
 What news from Oxford? Do these jousts and triumphs hold?

Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.
York. You will be there, I know.

Aum. If God prevent not, I purpose so.
York. What seal is that, that hangs without thy bosom?

Yea, look'st thou pale? Let me see the writing.

Aum. My lord, 't is nothing.
York. No matter, then, who see it.
 I will be satisfied; let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me.
 It is a matter of small consequence,
 Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

York. Which for some reasons, sir, I mean to see.

I fear, I fear, —
Duch. What should you fear?
 'T is nothing but some band, that he is ent'red into

For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day.

York. Bound to himself! What doth he with a bond

That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.
 Boy, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me. I may not show it.

York. I will be satisfied; let me see it, I say.
 [He plucks it out of his bosom and reads it.]

Treason! foul treason! Villain! traitor! slave!

Duch. What is the matter, my lord?

York. Ho! who is within there?

[Enter a Servant.]

Saddle my horse.

God for his mercy, what treachery is here!

Duch. Why, what is it, my lord?

York. Give me my boots, I say; saddle my horse.

[Exit Servant.]
 Now, by mine honour, by my life, by my troth,
 I will appeach the villain.

Duch. What is the matter?

York. Peace, foolish woman.

Duch. I will not peace. What is the matter,
 Aumerle?

Aum. Good mother, be content; it is no more Than my poor life must answer.

Duch. Thy life answer!

York. Bring me my boots; I will unto the
 King.

Re-enter Servant with boots.

Duch. Strike him, Aumerle. Poor boy, thou art amaz'd.

— Hence, villain! never more come in my sight.

York. Give me my boots, I say.

Duch. Why, York, what wilt thou do?

Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?
 Have we more sons? or are we like to have?
 Is not my teeming date drunk up with time?
 And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine
 age,

And rob me of a happy mother's name?
 Is he not like thee? Is he not thine own?

York. Thou fond mad woman,
Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?
A dozen of them here have ta'en the sacrament,
And interchangeably set down their hands,
To kill the King at Oxford.

Duch. He shall be none;
We'll keep him here; then what is that to him?

York. Away, fond woman! were he twenty times my son,
I would appeach him.

Duch. Hadst thou groan'd for him
As I have done, thou wouldst be more pitiful.
But now I know thy mind; thou dost suspect
That I have been disloyal to thy bed,
And that he is a bastard, not thy son.
Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind.
He is as like thee as a man may be,
Not like to me, or any of my kin,
And yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman!
[Exit.]

Duch. After, Aumerle! mount thee upon his horse;

Spur post, and get before him to the King,
And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
I'll not be long behind; though I be old,
I doubt not but to rise as fast as York.
And never will I ride up from the ground
Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away, be gone! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Windsor Castle.]

Enter BOLINGBROKE, PERCY, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell me of my unthrifty
son?

'Tis full three months since I did see him last.
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he.

I would to God, my lords, he might be found.
Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,
For there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained loose companions,
Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;
Which he, young wanton and effeminate boy,
Takes on the point of honour to support
So dissolute a crew.

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw the Prince,

And told him of those triumphs held at Oxford.

Boling. And what said the gallant?

Percy. His answer was, he would unto the stews,

And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,
And wear it as a favour; and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Boling. As dissolute as desperate; yet through both

I see some sparks of better hope, which elder years

May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter AUMERLE, amazed.

Aum. Where is the King?

Boling. What means our cousin, that he stares and looks

So wildly?

Aum. God save your Grace! I do beseech your Majesty,

To have some conference with your Grace alone.

Boling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone. [Exeunt Percy and Lords.]

What is the matter with our cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth, [Kneeling.]

My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a pardon ere I rise or speak.

Boling. Intended or committed was this fault?

If on the first, how heinous e'er it be,
To win thy after-love I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,

That no man enter till my tale be done:

Boling. Have thy desire.
[Aumerle locks the door.] York knocks at the door and crieth.

York. [Within.] My liege, beware! Look to thyself;

Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I'll make thee safe.

[Drawing.]

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand; thou hast no cause to fear.

York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, foolhardy King!

Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

Enter YORK.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? Speak;
Recover breath; tell us how near is danger,

That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know

The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise pass'd.

I do repent me; read not my name there.
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. It was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down.

I tore it from the traitor's bosom, King;
Fear, and not love, begets his penitence.

Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove
A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.

Boling. O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy!

O loyal father of a treacherous son!
Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,

From whence this stream through muddy passages

Hath held his current and defil'd himself!
Thy overflow of good converts to bad,

And thy abundant goodness shall excuse
This deadly blot in thy digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd;
And he shall spend mine honour with his shame,

As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,

Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies.
Thou kill'st me in his life; giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. (Within.) What ho, my liege! for God's sake, let me in.

Boling. What shrill-voiced suppliant makes this eager cry? 75

Duch. A woman, and thy aunt, great King; 'tis I.

Speak with me, pity me, open the door!

A beggar begs that never begg'd before.

Boling. Our scene is alt'ed from a serious thing,

And now chang'd to "The Beggar and the King." 80

My dangerous cousin, let your mother in:

I know she's come to pray for your foul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,

More sins for this forgiveness prosper may.

This fest'ed joint cut off, the rest rest sound;

This let alone will all the rest confound. 85

Enter DUCHESS.

Duch. O King, believe not this hard-hearted man!

Love loving not itself none other can.

York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?

Shall thy old dugs once more a traitor rear? 90

Duch. Sweet York, be patient. Hear me, gentle liege. [Kneels.]

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech.

For ever will I walk upon my knees,

And never see day that the happy sees,

Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy, 95

By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aum. Unto my mother's prayers I bend my knee. [Kneels.]

York. Against them both my true joints bended be. [Kneels.]

Ill mayst thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!

Duch. Pleads he in earnest? Look upon his face; 100

His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;

His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast.

He prays but faintly and would be deni'd;

We pray with heart and soul and all beside.

His weary joints would gladly rise, I know; 105

Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow.

His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;

Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.

Our prayers do out-pray his; then let them have

That mercy which true prayer ought to have. 110

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say, "Stand up";

Say "Pardon" first, and afterwards "Stand up."

An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,

"Pardon" should be the first word of thy speech.

I never long'd to hear a word till now. 115

Say "pardon," King; let pity teach thee how.

The word is short, but not so short as sweet;

No word like "pardon" for kings' mouths so

meet.

York. Speak it in French, King; say, "Par-donne moi."

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy? 120

Ah, my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,

That set'st the word itself against the word!

Speak "pardon" as 'tis current in our land;

The chopping French we do not understand.

Thine eye begins to speak; set thy tongue there; 125

Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear;

That hearing how our complaints and prayers do pierce,

Pity may move thee "pardon" to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. I do not sue to stand;

Pardon is all the suit I have in hand. 130

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee!

Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again.

Twice saying "pardon" doth not pardon twain,

But makes one pardon strong.

Boling. I pardon him with all my heart. 135

Duch. A god on earth thou art.

Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law and the abbot,

With all the rest of that consorted crew,

Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.

Good uncle, help to order several powers 140

To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are.

They shall not live within this world, I swear,

But I will have them, if I once know where.

Uncle, farewell; and, cousin, adieu!

Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true. 145

Duch. Come, my old son; I pray God make thee new. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Another room in the same.]

Enter EXTON and SERVANT.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the King, what words he spake,

"Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?"

Was it not so?

Serv. These were his very words.

Exton. "Have I no friend?" quoth he. He spake it twice,

And urg'd it twice together, did he not? 5

Serv. He did.

Exton. And speaking it, he wistly look'd on me,

As who should say, "I would thou wert the man That would divorce this terror from my heart;"

Meaning the King at Pomfret. Come, let's go. I am the King's friend, and will rid his foe. 11

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [V. Pomfret Castle. A ward room.]

Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare

This prison where I live unto the world;

And for because the world is populous
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer it out. 5
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul,
My soul the father; and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little
world,

In humours like the people of this world. 10
For no thought is contented. 'The better sort,
As thoughts of things divine, are intermix'd
With scruples and do set the word itself
Against the word:

As thus, "Come, little ones," and then again,
"It is as hard to come as for a camel 15
To thread the postern of a small needle's eye."
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs 20
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls,
And, for they cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves
That they are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last; like silly beggars 25
Who sitting in the stocks refuge their shame,
That many have and others must sit there;
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortunes on the back
Of such as have before endur'd the like. 30

Thus play I in one person many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I king;
Then treasons make me wish myself a beggar;
And so I am. Then crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king; 35
Then am I king'd again; and by and by
Think that I am unking'd by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing. But whate'er I be,
Nor I nor any man that but man is
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd 40

With being nothing. Music do I hear? [Music.]
Ha, ha! keep time! How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.
And here have I the daintiness of ear 45
To check time broke in a disorder'd string;
But for the concord of my state and time
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth Time waste me;
For now hath Time made me his numb'ring
clock. 50

My thoughts are minutes; and with sighs they jar

Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward
watch,

Whereto my finger, like a dial's point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.
Now sir, the sound that tells what hour it is 55
Are clamorous groans, which strike upon my
heart,

Which is the bell. So sighs and tears and groans

Show minutes, times, and hours; but my time
Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy, While I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock. 60

This music mads me; let it sound no more;

For though it have help madmen to their wits,
In me it seems it will make wise men mad.
Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me!
For 'tis a sign of love; and love to Richard 65
Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.

Enter a GROOM of the Stable.

Groom. Hail, royal prince!

K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer!
The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
What art thou? and how com'st thou hither,
Where no man never comes but that sad dog 70

That brings me food to make misfortune live?
Groom. I was a poor groom of thy stable,
King,

When thou wert king; who, travelling towards
York,

With much ado at length have gotten leave
To look upon my sometimes royal master's
face. 75

O, how it yearn'd my heart when I beheld
In London streets, that coronation-day,
When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary,
That horse that thou so often hast bedrid,
That horse that I so carefully have dress'd! 80

K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me, gentle friend,
How went he under him?

Groom. So proudly as if he disdain'd the ground.

K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back!

That jade hath eat bread from my royal
hand; 85

This hand hath made him proud with clapping
him.

Would he not stumble? Would he not fall
down,

Since pride must have a fall, and break the neck

Of that proud man that did usurp his back?
Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee, 90
Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
Wast born to bear? I was not made a horse;
And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
Spurr'd, gall'd, and tir'd by jauncing Boling-
broke.

Enter KEEPER, with a dish.

Keep. Fellow, give place; here is no longer
stay. 95

K. Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away.

Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. [Exit.]

Keep. My lord, will 't please you to fall to?

K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do. 99

Keep. My lord, I dare not. Sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the King, commands the contrary.

K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster and thee!

Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

Keep. Help, help, help! 105

Enter EXTON and Servants [armed].

K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault?

Villain, thy own hand yields thy death's instrument.

[Snatching an axe from a Servant and killing him.]

Go thou, and fill another room in hell.

[He kills another.] Here Exton strikes him down.

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire

That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand

Hath with the King's blood stained the King's own land.

Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high; Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.

[Dies.]

Exton. As full of valour as of royal blood! Both have I spill'd; O would the deed were good!

For now the devil, that told me I did well, Says that this deed is chronicled in hell. This dead king to the living king I'll bear: Take hence the rest, and give them burial here.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [VI. Windsor Castle.]

Flourish. Enter BOLINGBROKE, YORK, with other Lords, and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear

Is that the rebels hath consum'd with fire Our town of Cicester in Gloucestershire; But whether they be ta'en or slain we hear not.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Welcome, my lord, what is the news?

North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness.

The next news is, I have to London sent The heads of Oxford, Salisbury, Blunt, and Kent.

The manner of their taking may appear At large discoursed in this paper here.

Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains;

And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter FITZWATER.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London

The heads of Brocas and Sir Bennet Seely,

Two of the dangerous consorted traitors That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot;

Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter PERCY, and the BISHOP OF CARLISLE.

Percy. The grand conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,

With clog of conscience and sour melancholy Hath yielded up his body to the grave;

But here is Carlisle living, to abide Thy kingly doom and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom: Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,

More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life. So as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife;

For though mine enemy thou hast ever been, High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter EXTON, with [Attendants bearing] a coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this coffin I present

Thy buried fear. Herein all breathless lies The mightiest of thy greatest enemies, Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast wrought

A deed of slander with thy fatal hand Upon my head and all this famous land.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this deed.

Boling. They love not poison that do poison need,

Nor do I thee. Though I did wish him dead, I hate the murderer, love him murdered.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,

But neither my good word nor princely favour.

With Cain go wander through the shades of night,

And never show thy head by day nor light. Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe

That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow.

Come, mourn with me for what I do lament, And put on sullen black incontinent.

I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land, To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.

March sadly after; grace my mournings here In weeping after this untimely bier.

[Exeunt.]

THE HISTORY OF HENRY THE FOURTH

THE Historie of Henry IV was entered in the Stationers' Register in February, 1598, and the First Quarto of Part I was printed in the same year. Meres names the play, but does not indicate whether he refers to one part or both. Part II was entered and printed in 1600, but is referred to by Jonson in Every Man out of his Humour in 1599. These facts, taken along with the marks of maturity in style and metre, point to 1597 and 1598 as the respective dates of the two parts.

Quartos of Part I were issued in 1598, 1599, 1604, 1608, 1613, and 1622, the version in the First Folio being taken from the Fifth Quarto. Of Part II only one quarto is known to have been issued; and the First Folio text was printed from a copy of this, revised with care but probably without authority. The basis for the present text is, for both parts, the First Quarto.

The political action of the two plays is founded on Holinshed's Chronicles. Great freedom is used in converting historical into dramatic time, and the speeches, as usually in the English historical plays, are elaborated from the merest hints. The most marked creation in the serious plot of Part I, aside from the Prince, is the opposing figure of Hotspur, whom Shakespeare clearly conceived for the purpose of psychological contrast. There is no corresponding foil for Prince Hal in Part II; the political action is still more overshadowed by the comic than in the earlier part; and the serious interest centres in the relation of father and son, and the pathetic depression of Henry IV's closing years. For most of this, e. g., the plans for a crusade, and the famous "crown scene," Holinshed affords a basis; but the rich emotional quality is all Shakespeare's.

For the comic scenes Shakespeare gathered some names and incidents from The Famous Victories of Henry V, a very crude history-comedy printed in 1598, but licensed in 1594, and acted certainly as early as 1588. The robbery at Gadshill, the tavern in Eastcheap, Hal's relation to his boon companions and to the Lord Chief Justice, his reconciliation to his father, the episode of the crown, and the final banishing of his tavern friends, are all presented in a rude form in The Famous Victories. But the method of treatment is such as to offer hardly more suggestion than the bald narrative of Holinshed. The character of Falstaff, especially, owes little to any predecessor. In Henry IV as first written, Falstaff's name was Oldecastle, as it is in The Famous Victories. Sir John Oldecastle was a well-known peer of the time of Henry V, who was burned as a Lollard. But it is supposed that out of deference to Oldecastle's descendants Shakespeare changed the name to Falstaff before the play was printed, and added in the Epilogue to Part II the statement that "Oldecastle died a martyr, and this is not the man." The new name seems to have been suggested by that of the historical Sir John Fastolfe, who, in 1 Henry VI, is represented (unjustly, as it seems) as a coward. But the creation is independent of any real or supposed historical prototype.

In the development of the Chronicle History as a distinct type of drama, the most notable feature of Henry IV is the importance in it of the element of comedy. For, although the continuation of the exposition of the character of the Bolingbroke of Richard II is of great psychological interest, yet the story of Henry's reign did not in itself afford material nearly so intense in interest or so appropriate for dramatic treatment as the author had found in the histories of Richard III and Richard II. So far as 1 Henry IV has a culmination at all, it is in the emergence of Prince Henry from his low surroundings as a brilliant warrior who slays Hotspur at Shrewsbury, rather than in his father's suppression of a rebellion. In Part II, the death of Henry IV is presented in the fourth act, and the real culmination of the play is in the new King's final throwing off of his old life and companions, and assuming worthily the dignities and duties of his royal office. Viewing the Prince, then, as the most important factor in the structure of the plays as a whole, we can regard the comic scenes, in which the lighter side of his character is displayed, as more organically related to the main scheme than they have usually been conceived.

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. The palace.]

Enter KING HENRY, LORD JOHN OF LANCASTER, the EARL OF WESTMORELAND, [SIR WALTER BLUNT] with others.

King. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted Peace to pant,
And breathe short-winded accents of new broils

To be commenc'd in strands afar remote.
No more the thirsty entrance of this soil Shall daub her lips with her own children's
blood;

No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
Nor bruise her flowerets with the armed hoofs
Of hostile paces. Those opposed eyes,
Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
All of one nature, of one substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock
And furious close of civil butchery,
Shall now, in mutual well-beseeming ranks,
March all one way and be no more oppos'd
Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies.
The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his master. Therefore,
friends,

As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross
We are impress'd and engag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy;
Whose arms were moulded in their mothers'
womb

To chase these pagans in those holy fields
Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter cross.
But this our purpose now is twelve month old,
And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go;
Therefore we meet not now. Then let me
hear

Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
What yesternight our council did decree
In forwarding this dear expedience.

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,

And many limits of the charge set down
But yesternight; when all athwart there came
A post from Wales loaden with heavy news;
Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,

A thousand of his people butchered;
Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,

Such beastly shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done as may not be Without much shame retold or spoken of.

King. It seems then that the tidings of this broil

Brake off our business for the Holy Land.

West. This match'd with other did, my gracious lord;

For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did import:
On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,
Young Harry Percy and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,

At Holmedon met,
Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour,
As by discharge of their artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the news was told;
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

King. Here is a dear, a true industrious
friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soil
Betwix that Holmedon and this seat of ours;

And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.

The Earl of Douglas is discomfited.

Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty knights,

Balk'd in their own blood did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains. Of prisoners, Hotspur took 70

Murdoch Earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas; and the Earl of Athole,
Of Moray, Angus, and Menteith:

And is not this an honourable spoil?

A gallant prize, ha, cousin, is it not? 75

West. In faith,

It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

King. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin

In envy that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the father to so blest a son, 80

A son who is the theme of Honour's tongue,
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant,

Who is sweet Fortune's minion and her pride;
Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him,

See riot and dishonour stain the brow 85
Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd

That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,

And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet!
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine. 90

But let him from my thoughts. What think you, coz,

Of this young Percy's pride? The prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,

To his own use he keeps; and sends me word,
I shall have none but Murdoch Earl of Fife. 95

West. This is his uncle's teaching; this is Worcester,

Malevolent to you in all aspects;
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle 100

up
The crest of youth against your dignity.

King. But I have sent for him to answer
this; 100

And for this cause awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.

Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we Will hold at Windsor. So inform the lords;

But come yourself with speed to us again, 105
For more is to be said and to be done

Than out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [London. An apartment of the Prince's.]

Enter the PRINCE OF WALES and FALSTAFF.

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad?

Prince. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack and unbuttoning thee after supper and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly which thou wouldst truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? Unless [s] hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-coloured taffeta,

I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day. 15

Fal. Indeed, you come near me now, Hal; for we that take purses go by the moon and the seven stars, and not by Phœbus, he, "that wand'ring knight so fair." And, I prithee, sweet wag, when thou art a king, as, God save thy Grace, — Majesty I should say, for grace thou wilt have none, — 20

Prince. What, none?

Fal. No, by my troth, not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

Prince. Well, how then? Come, roundly, roundly. 25

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us that are squires of the night's body be called thieves of the day's beauty. Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon; and let men say we be men of good government, being governed, as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal. 33

Prince. Thou say'st well, and it holds well too; for the fortune of us that are the moon's men doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed, as the sea is, by the moon. As, for proof, now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatch'd [s] on Monday night and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing "Lay by" and spent with crying "Bring in;" now in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder, and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows. 43

Fal. By the Lord, thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

Prince. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance? 49

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag! What, in thy quips and thy quiddities, what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

Prince. Why, what a fox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern? 54

Fal. Well, thou hast call'd her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

Prince. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there. 60

Prince. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and where it would not, I have us'd my credit. 63

Fal. Yea, and so us'd it that, were it not here apparent that thou art heir apparent — But, I prithee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king? and resolution thus fobb'd as it is with the rusty curb of old father antic the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief. 70

Prince. No; thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge.

Prince. Thou judgest false already. I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves and so become a rare hangman. 75

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

Prince. For obtaining of suits? 80

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Sblood, I am as melancholy as a gib cat or a lugg'd bear.

Prince. Or an old lion, or a lover's lute. 84

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

Prince. What sayest thou to a hare, or the melancholy of Moor-ditch? 88

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes and art indeed able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal; God forgive thee for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I [94] must give over this life, and I will give it over. By the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain. I'll be damn'd for never a king's son in Christendom.

Prince. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack? 100

Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration and art indeed able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me, Hal; God forgive thee for it! Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I [106] must give over this life, and I will give it over. By the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain. I'll be damn'd for never a king's son in Christendom.

Prince. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack? 111

Fal. 'Zounds, where thou wilt, lad; I'll make one. An I do not, call me villain and baffle me.

Prince. I see a good amendment of life in thee, from praying to purse-taking.

Fal. Why, Hal, 't is my vocation, Hal. 'T is no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. [117]

Enter POINS.

Points! Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match. O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain that ever cried "Stand!" to a true man.

Prince. Good morrow, Ned. 123

Poins. Good morrow, sweet Hal. What says Monsieur Remorse? What says Sir John Sack and Sugar? Jack! how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on Good Friday last for a cup of Madeira and a cold capon's leg? 129

Prince. Sir John stands to his word, the devil shall have his bargain; for he was never a breaker of proverbs. He will give the devil his due.

Poins. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the devil. 135

Prince. Else he had been damn'd for cozening the devil.

Poins. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill! There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London [140] with fat purses. I have vizards for you all; you have horses for yourselves. Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester. I have bespoken supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap. We may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff [145] your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fal. Hear ye, Yedward; if I tarry at home and go not, I'll hang you for going. 150

Poins. You will, chops?

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prince. Who, I rob? I a thief? Not I, by my faith. 154

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou can'st not of the blood royal, if thou dar'st not stand for ten shillings.

Prince. Well, then, once in my days I'll be a madcap. 160

Fal. Why, that's well said.

Prince. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. By the lord, I'll be a traitor then, when thou art king. 165

Prince. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I prithee, leave the Prince and me alone. I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure that he shall go. 169

Fal. Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may, for recreation sake, prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell; you shall find me in Eastcheap. 176

Prince. Farewell, thou latter spring! Farewell, All-hallow summer! [Exit Falstaff.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow; I have a jest to execute that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff [Bardolph, Peto] and Gadshill shall rob those men that we have already waylaid; yourself [182] and I will not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head off from my shoulders.

Prince. How shall we part with them in setting forth? 188

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail, and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves; which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them. 194

Prince. Yea, but 't is like that they will know us by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves. 197

Poins. Tut! our horses they shall not see; I'll tie them in the wood; our vizards we will change after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the nonce, to im-mask our noted outward garments. 203

Prince. Yea, but I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Poins. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turn'd back ;

and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue ³⁰⁷ of this jest will be the incomprehensible lies that this same fat rogue will tell us when we meet at supper ; how thirty, at least, he fought with ; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured ; and in the reproof of this lies the jest. ²¹³

Prince. Well, I'll go with thee. Provide us all things necessary and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap ; there I'll sup. Farewell.

Poins. Farewell, my lord. [Exit.]

Prince. I know you all, and will a while uphold

The unyok'd humour of your idleness ;
Yet herein will I imitate the sun, ²²⁰
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That when he please again to be himself
Being wanted, he may be more wond'ring at
By breaking through the foul and ugly mists
Of vapours that did seem to strangle him. ²²⁶
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work ;
But when they seldom come, they wish'd for
come,

And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents. ²³⁰
So, when this loose behaviour I throw off
And pay the debt I never promised,
By how much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's hopes ;
And like bright metal on a sullen ground, ²³⁵
My reformation, glitt'ring o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly and attract more eyes
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend, to make offence a skill, ²³⁹
Redeeming time when men think least I will.
[Exit.]

SCENE III. [London. The palace.]

*Enter the KING, NORTHUMBERLAND, WORCES-TER, HOTSPUR, SIR WALTER BLUNT, with
others.*

King. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these indignities,
And you have found me ; for accordingly
You tread upon my patience. But be sure
I will from henceforth rather be myself, ⁵
Mighty and to be fear'd, than my condition ;
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young
down,
And therefore lost that title of respect
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves ¹⁰

The scourge of greatness to be us'd on it ;
And that same greatness too which our own hands

Have help to make so portly.

North. My lord, —

King. Worcester, get thee gone ; for I do see ¹⁵

Danger and disobedience in thine eye.

O, sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And majesty might never yet endure
The moody frontier of a servant brow.
You have good leave to leave us. When we need ²⁰

Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.

[Exit Worcester.]

You were about to speak.

North.

Yea, my good lord.
Those prisoners in your Highness' name demanded,

Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied ²⁵

As is delivered to your Majesty.

Either envy, therefore, or misprision
Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners.

But I remember, when the fight was done, ³⁰
When I was dry with rage and extreme toil,
Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,
Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd, Fresh as a bridegroom ; and his chin new reap'd

Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home. ³⁵
He was perfum'd like a milliner ;
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held

A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose and took 't away again ; ³⁹

Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in snuff ; and still he smil'd and talk'd,
And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome corse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility. ⁴⁵

With many holiday and lady terms
He question'd me ; amongst the rest, demanded
My prisoners in your Majesty's behalf.

I then, all smarting with my wounds being cold,
Out of my grief, and my impatience ⁵⁰

To be so pest'ring with a popinjay,
Answer'd neglectingly — I know not what,
He should, or he should not ; for he made me
mad

To see him shine so brisk and smell so sweet
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman ⁵⁵
Of guns and drums and wounds, — God save the mark ! —

And telling me the sovereign'st thing on earth
Was parmaceti for an inward bruise ;
And that it was great pity, so it was,

This villanous salt-petre should be digg'd ⁶⁰
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly ; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier.

This bald unjointed chat of his, my lord, ⁶⁵

I answered indirectly, as I said ;
And I beseech you, let not his report

Come current for an accusation
Betwixt my love and your high Majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance considered, good my lord, ⁷⁰

Whate'er Lord Harry Percy then had said
To such a person and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest retold,
May reasonably die and never rise

To do him wrong or any way impeach 75
What then he said, so he unsay it now.

King. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners
But with proviso and exception
That we at our own charge shall ransom
straight

His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer; 80
Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against that great magician, damn'd Glendower,

Whose daughter, as we hear, the Earl of March
Hath lately married. Shall our coffers, then, 85
Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we buy treason, and indent with fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend 90
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war. To prove that true 95
Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,

Those mouth'd wounds, which valiantly he took,

When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank,
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour 100
In changing hardiment with great Glendower.
Three times they breath'd and three times did they drink,

Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood;
Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds, 105
And hid his crisp head in the hollow bank
Bloodstained with these valiant combatants.

Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer 110
Receive so many, and all willingly.
Then let not him be sland'ring with revolt.

King. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie him;

He never did encounter with Glendower.
I tell thee, 115
He durst as well have met the devil alone
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not asham'd? But, sirrah, henceforth

Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send me your prisoners with the speediest means, 120

Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease you. My Lord Northumber-
land,

We license your departure with your son.
Send us your prisoners, or you'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King Henry [Blunt, and train].]

Hot. An if the devil come and roar for
them, 125

I will not send them. I will after straight
And tell him so; for I will ease my heart,
Albeit I make a hazard of my head.

North. What, drunk with choler? Stay and pause a while. 128
Here comes your uncle.

Re-enter WORCESTER.

Hot. — Speak of Mortimer!
'Zounds, I will speak of him; and let my soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him.
Yea, on his part I'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop in the dust,

But I will lift the down-trod Mortimer 135
As high in the air as this unthankful king,
As this ingrate and cank'ring Bolingbroke.

North. Brother, the King hath made your nephew mad.

Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners; 140

And when I urg'd the ransom once again
Of my wife's brother, then his cheek look'd
pale,

And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him. Was not he proclaim'd 145

By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood?

North. He was; I heard the proclamation.

And then it was when the unhappy king, —
Whose wrongs in us God pardon! — did set forth

Upon his Irish expedition; 150
From whence he intercepted did return
To be depos'd and shortly murdered.

Wor. And for whose death we in the world's wide mouth
Live scandaliz'd and foully spoken of.

Hot. But, soft, I pray you; did King Richard then 155

Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?

North. He did; myself did hear it.

Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin
king,

That wish'd him on the barren mountains starve.

But shall it be, that you, that set the crown 160

Upon the head of this forgetful man

And for his sake wear the detested blot

Of murderous subornation, shall it be,

That you a world of curses undergo,

Being the agents, or base second means, 165

The cords, the ladder, or the hangman rather?

O, pardon me that I descend so low,

To show the line and the predicament

Wherein you range under this subtle king!

Shall it for shame be spoken in these days, 170

Or fill up chronicles in time to come,

That men of your nobility and power

Did gage them both in an unjust behalf,

As both of you — God pardon it! — have done,

To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose, 175

And plant this thorn, this canker, Boling-
broke?

And shall it in more shame be further spoken,

That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
By him for whom these shames ye underwent?
No; yet time serves wherein you may redeem 180

Your banish'd honours and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again,
Revenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt
Of this proud king, who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes to you 185
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
Therefore, I say, —

Wor. Peace, cousin, say no more;
And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick-conceiving discontents
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous, 190
As full of peril and adventurous spirit
As to o'er-walk a current roaring loud
On the steadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night! or sink or swim.

Send Danger from the east unto the west, 195
So Honour cross it from the north to south,
And let them grapple. O, the blood more stirs
To rouse a lion than to start a hare!

North. Imagination of some great exploit
Drives him beyond the bounds of patience. 200

Hot. By heaven, methinks it were an easy
leap,

To pluck bright Honour from the pale-fac'd
moon,

Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the
ground,

And pluck up drowned Honour by the locks; 205
So he that doth redeem her thence might wear
Without corival all her dignities.
But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend. 210
Good cousin, give me audience for a while.

Hot. I cry you mercy.
Wor. Those same noble Scots

That are your prisoners, —

Hot. I'll keep them all!
By God, he shall not have a Scot of them; 214
No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not!
I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away
And lend no ear unto my purposes.
Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat.
He said he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer; 220
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear I'll holla "Mortimer!"

Nay,
I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but "Mortimer," and give it him, 225
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you, cousin; a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke;
And that same sword-and-buckler Prince of Wales, 230

But that I think his father loves him not
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman! I'll talk to you
When you are better temper'd to attend. 235

North. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient fool

Art thou to break into this woman's mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods,

Nettled and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke. 241

In Richard's time, — what do you call the place? —

A plague upon it, it is in Gloucestershire;
'T was where the madeap duke his uncle kept,
His uncle York; where I first bow'd my knee 245

Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke, —
'Sblood! —

When you and he came back from Ravens-purgh.

North. At Berkley castle.

Hot. You say true. 250

Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
Look, "when his infant fortune came to age,"
And "gentle Harry Percy," and "kind
cousin;"

O, the devil take such cozeners! — God forgive
me! 255

Good uncle, tell your tale; for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to't again;
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, i' faith.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.

Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean 261
For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons

Which I shall send you written, be assur'd,
Will easily be granted. Yon, my lord,

[To Northumberland.]

Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd, 265
Shall secretly into the bosom creep

Of that same noble prelate, well belov'd,
The Archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not?

Wor. True; who bears hard 270
His brother's death at Bristol, the Lord Scroop.

I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know

Is ruminated, plotted, and set down,
And only stays but to behold the face 275
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it. Upon my life, it will do well.

North. Before the game's afoot, thou still let'st slip.

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot. 279

And then the power of Scotland and of York,
To join with Mortimer, ha?

Wor. And so they shall.

Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads by raising of a head;

For, bear ourselves as even as we can, 285
The King will always think him in our debt,

And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love. 290
Hot. He does, he does. We'll be reveng'd on him.

Wor. Cousin, farewell! No further go in this
Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly,
I'll steal to Glendower and Lord Mortimer; 295
Where you and Douglas and our powers at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

North. Farewell, good brother! We shall thrive, I trust. 300

Hot. Uncle, adieu! O, let the hours be short Till fields and blows and groans applaud our sport! [Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Rochester. An inn yard.]

Enter a CARRIER with a lantern in his hand.

1. Car. Heigh-ho! an it be not four by the day, I'll be hang'd. Charles' wain is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not pack'd.
What, ostler!

Ost. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1. Car. I prithee, Tom, beat Cut's saddle, put a few flocks in the point. The poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess. 5

Enter another CARRIER.

2. Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots. This house is turned upside down since Robin Ostler died.

1. Car. Poor fellow, never joy'd since the price of oats rose; it was the death of him. 10

2. Car. I think this be the most villainous house in all London road for fleas. I am stung like a tench.

1. Car. Like a tench! by the mass, there is ne'er a king christen could be better bit than
I have been since the first cock. 20

2. Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jordan, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lye breeds fleas like a loach.

1. Car. What, ostler! come away and be hang'd! Come away. 25

2. Car. I have a gammon of bacon and two races of ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-cross. 28

1. Car. God's body! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved. What, ostler! A plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in thy head?
Canst not hear? An't were not as good deed as drink, to break the pate on thee, I am a very villain. Come, and be hang'd! Hast no faith in thee? 35

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

[1.] Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I prithee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1. Car. Nay, by God, soft; I know a trick worth two of that, i' faith. 41

Gads. I pray thee, lend me thine.

2. Car. Ay, when? canst tell? Lend me thy lantern, quoth he? Marry, I'll see thee hang'd first.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London? 45

2. Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee. Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen. They will along with company, for they have great charge. 51

[Exeunt Carriers.]

Enter CHAMBERLAIN.

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. At hand, quoth pick-purse.

Gads. That's even as fair as — at hand, quoth the chamberlain; for thou variest no more from picking of purses than giving direction doth from labouring; thou lay'st the plot
how. 57

Cham. Good morrow, Master Gadshill. It holds current that I told you yesternight:
there's a franklin in the wild of Kent hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold. I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at supper; a kind of auditor;
one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter. They will away presently. 65

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with Saint Nicholas' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it. I pray thee, keep that for the hangman; for I know thou worshipp'st Saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may. 72

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? If I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows; for if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me, and thou know'st he is no starvel-ing. Tut! there are other Troians that thou dream'st not of, the which for sport sake are content to do the profession some grace, [78 that would, if matters should be look'd into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot land-rakers, no long-staff sixpenny strikers, none of these mad mus-tacio purple-hued malt-worms; but with nobility and tranquillity, burgomasters and great oneyers; such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner [85 than drink, and drink sooner than pray; and yet, 'zounds, I lie; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or rather, not pray to her, but prey on her, for they ride up and down on her and make her their boots. 91

Cham. What, the commonwealth their boots?
Will she hold out water in foul way?

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquor'd her. We steal as in a castle, cock-sure; we have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invis-
ble. 96

Cham. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more beholding to the night than to fern-seed for your walking invisible.

Gads. Give me thy hand. Thou shalt have a share in our purchase, as I am a true man. ¹⁰¹
Cham. Nay, rather let me have it as you are a false thief.

Gads. Go to; homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Farewell, you muddy knave. ¹⁰⁶

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The highway, near Gadshill.]

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter! I have removed Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gumm'd velvet. ¹¹¹
[They step back.]

Prince. Stand close.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Poins! Poins, and be hang'd! Poins! ¹¹⁴

Prince. [Coming forward.] Peace, ye fat-kidney'd rascal! what a brawling dost thou keep!

Fal. Where's Poins, Hal?

Prince. He is walk'd up to the top of the hill; I'll go seek him. ¹¹⁹
[Withdraws.]

Fal. I am accurs'd to rob in that thief's company. The rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire further afoot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his ¹²⁵ company hourly any time this two and twenty years, and yet I am bewitch'd with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hang'd. It could not be else; I have drunk medi- ¹³⁰ cines. Poins! Hal! a plague upon you both! Bardolph! Peto! I'll starve ere I'll rob a foot further. An 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man and to leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever ¹³⁵ chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles afoot with me; and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough. A plague upon it when thieves cannot be true one to another! (They whistle.) Whew! A plague upon you all! Give me ¹⁴⁰ my horse, you rogues; give me my horse, and be hang'd!

Prince. [Coming forward.] Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down. Lay thine ear close to the ground and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers. ¹⁴⁵

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood, I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus? ¹⁵⁰

Prince. Thou liest; thou art not colted, thou art uncolted.

Fal. I prithee, good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son.

Prince. Out, ye rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters! If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison. When a jest is so forward, and afoot too! I hate it. ¹⁵⁶

Enter GADSHILL [BARDOLPH, and PETO with him].

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So I do, against my will.

Poins. [Coming forward.] O, 't is our setter; I know his voice. Bardolph, what news? ¹⁶¹

Bard. Case ye, case ye; on with your vizards. There's money of the King's coming down the hill; 't is going to the King's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, ye rogue; 't is going to the King's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all. ¹⁶⁶

Fal. To be hang'd.

Prince. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower. If they scape from your encounter, then they light on us. ¹⁷¹

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight or ten.

Fal. 'Zounds, will they not rob us?

Prince. What, a coward, Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal. ¹⁷⁶

Prince. Well, we leave that to the proof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge; when thou need'st him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast. ¹⁸¹

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hang'd.

Prince. [Aside.] Ned, where are our disguises.

Poins. [Aside.] Here, hard by. Stand close. [Exeunt Prince and Poins.]

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I. Every man to his business. ¹⁸⁶

Enter the TRAVELLERS.

[I.] Trav. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill. We'll walk afoot a while, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand!

Travellers. Jesus bless us! ¹⁹¹

Fal. Strike; down with them! Cut the villains' throats! Ah! whoreson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us youth. Down with them! Fleece them!

Travellers. O, we are undone, both we and ours for ever! ¹⁹⁶

Fal. Hang ye, gorbellied knaves, are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs; I would your store were here! On, bacons, on! What, ye knaves! young men must live. You are grandjurors, are ye? We'll jure ye, faith. ²⁰¹

[Here they rob them and bind them.]

Exeunt.

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS [in buckram].

Prince. The thieves have bound the true men. Now, could thou and I rob the thieves and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever. 103

Poins. Stand close; I hear them coming.

Enter the Thieves again.

Fal. Come, my masters, let us share, and then to horse before day. An the Prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more valour in that Poins than in a wild-duck. 108

Prince. Your money!

Poins. Villains!

[As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them; they all run away; and Falstaff, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind them.]

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse.

The thieves are all scatt' red and possess'd with fear

So strongly that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, 115 And lards the lean earth as he walks along.

Were't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the [fat] rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Warkworth Castle.]

Enter HOTSPIRE, solus, reading a letter.

Hot. "But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house." He could be contented: why is he not, then? In respect of the love he bears our house: he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves [5] our house. Let me see some more. "The purpose you undertake is dangerous;" — why, that's certain. "Tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this [10] flower, safety. "The purpose you undertake is dangerous; the friends you have named uncertain; the time itself unsorted; and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition." Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, [15] cowardly hind, and you lie. What a lack-brain is this! By the Lord, our plot is a good plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation; an excellent plot, very good friends. [20] What a frosty-spirited rogue is this! Why, my Lord of York commends the plot and the general course of the action. 'Sounds, an I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, [25] and myself? Lord Edmund Mortimer, my Lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not besides the Douglas? Have I not all their letters to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month? and are they not some of them set forward already? What a pagan rascal [30] is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now in my sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the King and lay open all our proceedings. O,

I could divide myself and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skim-milk with so [35] honourable an action! Hang him! let him tell the King; we are prepared. I will set forward to-night.

Enter LADY PERCY.

How now, Kate! I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady. O, my good lord, why are you thus alone? 40

For what offence have I this fortnight been

A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed?

Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from thee

Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?

Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth, And start so often when thou sit'st alone? 45

Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks,

And given my treasures and my rights of thee

To thick-ey'd musing and curst melancholy?

In thy faint slumbers I by thee have watch'd,

And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars; 51

Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed;

Cry "Courage! to the field!" And thou hast talk'd

Of sallies and retires, of trenches, tents,

Of palisadoes, frontiers, parapets, 55

Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin,

Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain,

And all the currents of a heady fight.

Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war

And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep, 60

That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,

Like bubbles in a late-disturbed stream;

And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,

Such as we see when men restrain their breath

On some great sudden hest. O, what portents

are these? 65

Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,

And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho!

[Enter SERVANT.]

Is Gilliams with the packet gone?

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff? 70

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? Roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne.

Well, I will back him straight. O Esperance!

Bid Butler lead him forth into the park. 75

[Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st thou, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?

Hot. Why, my horse, my love, my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape! 80

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen

As you are toss'd with. In faith,

I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.

I fear my brother Mortimer doth stir

About his title, and hath sent for you 85

To line his enterprise; but if you go, —

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you paraquito, answer me

Directly unto this question that I ask.

In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry, 90
An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away,

Away, you triffler! Love! I love thee not,
I care not for thee, Kate. This is no world
To play with mammetts and to tilt with lips. 95
We must have bloody noses and crack'd crowns,
And pass them current too. God's me, my horse!

What say'st thou, Kate? What would'st thou have with me?

Lady. Do you not love me? Do you not, indeed? 99

Well, do not then; for since you love me not,
I will not love myself. Do you not love me?
Nay, tell me if you speak in jest or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?

And when I am o' horseback, I will swear
I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate; 105
I must not have you henceforth question me
Whither I go, nor reason whereabouts.

Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude,
This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.
I know you wise; but yet no farther wise. 110
Than Harry Percy's wife. Constant you are,
But yet a woman; and for secrecy,
No lady closer; for I well believe
Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;
And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate. 115

Lady. How! so far?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you, Kate:

Whither I go, thither shall you go too;

To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.

Will this content you, Kate?

Lady. How! so far? It must of force. 120

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [The Boar's-Head Tavern, Eastcheap.]

Enter the PRINCE and POINS.

Prince. Ned, prithee, come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

Prince. With three or four loggerheads amongst three or four score hog'sheads. I have sounded the very base-string of humility. [5] Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers; and can call them all by their christen names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king [10] of courtesy; and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, (by the Lord, so they call me), and when I am King of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. [15] They call drinking deep, dyeing scarlet; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry "hem!" and bid you play it off. To conclude,

I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his [20] own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned, — to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapp'd even now into my hand by an under-skinker, one that never [25] spake other English in his life than "Eight shillings and sixpence," and "You are welcome," with this shrill addition, "Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon," or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time [30] till Falstaff come, I prithee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling "Francis," that his tale to me may be nothing but "Anon." Step [35] aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

Prince. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis! [Exit Poins.] 40

Enter drawer [FRANCIS].

Fran. Anon, anon, sir. Look down into the Pomgarnet, Ralph.

Prince. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord?

Prince. How long hast thou to serve, Francis? 45

Fran. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to —

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, sir. 49

Prince. Five year! by'r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture and show it a fair pair of heels and run from it? 54

Fran. O Lord, sir, I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find in my heart —

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, sir.

Prince. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see — about Michaelmas next I shall be — 61

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, sir. Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

Prince. Nay, but hark you, Francis: for the sugar thou gavest me, 't was a pennyworth, was 't not? 66

Fran. O Lord, I would it had been two!

Prince. I will give thee for it a thousand pound. Ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it. 70

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.

Prince. Anon, Francis? No, Francis; but to-morrow, Francis; or Francis, o' Thursday; or indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis! 75

Fran. My lord?

Prince. Wilt thou rob this leathern jerkin, crystal-button, not-pated, agate-ring, puke-stocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch, — 80

Fran. O Lord, sir, who do you mean?

Prince. Why, then, your brown bastard is your only drink; for look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Prince. Away, you rogue! dost thou not hear them call?

[Here they both call him; the drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.]

Enter VINTNER.

Vint. What, stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit Francis.] My lord, old Sir John with half-a-dozen more are at the door; shall I let them in?

Prince. Let them alone a while, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

Poins. [Within.] Anon, anon, sir.

Re-enter POINS.

Prince. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door; shall we be merry?

Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But bask ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? Come, what's the issue?

Prince. I am now of all humours that have showed themselves humours since the old days of Goodman Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o'clock at midnight.

[Re-enter FRANCIS.]

What's o'clock, Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

[Exit.] 100

Prince. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is upstairs and downstairs; his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind, the Hotspur of the north; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, "Fie upon this quiet life! I want work." "O my sweet Harry," says she, "how many hast thou kill'd to-day?" "Give my roan horse a drench," says he; and answers, "Some fourteen," an hour after; "a trifle, a trifle." I prithee, call in Falstaff. I'll play Percy, and that damn'd brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. "Rivo!" says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter FALSTAFF [GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO; FRANCIS following with wine].

Poins. Welcome, Jack! Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen! Give me a cup of sack, boy. Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether stocks, and mend them and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! Give me a cup of sack, rogue. Is there no virtue extant?

[He drinketh.]

Prince. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter, pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted at the sweet tale of the sun? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here's lime in this sack too. There is nothing but roguery to be found in villanous man; yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it. A villanous coward! Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten her-ring. There lives not three good men unhang'd in England; and one of them is fat and grows old. God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

Prince. How now, wool-sack! what mutter you?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild-geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales!

Prince. Why, you whoreson round man, what's the matter?

Fal. Are not you a coward? Answer me to that; and Poins there?

Poins. 'Zounds, ye fat paunch, an ye call me coward, by the Lord, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damn'd ere I call thee coward; but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders; you care not who sees your back. Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack. I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

Prince. O villain! thy lips are scarce wip'd since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All's one for that. (He drinketh.) A plague of all cowards, still say I.

Prince. What's the matter?

Fal. What's the matter! There be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it! Taken from us it is; a hundred upon poor four of us.

Prince. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have scaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hack'd like a hand-saw — ecce signum! I never dealt better since I was a man; all would not do. A plague of all cowards! Let them speak; if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains and the sons of darkness.

Prince. Speak, sirs; how was it?

Gads. We four set upon some dozen —

Fal. Sixteen at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them, or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us — 200

Fal. And unboud the rest, and then come in the other.

Prince. What, fought you with them all? 203

Fal. All! I know not what you call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish. If there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

Prince. Pray God you have not murd'ered some of them. 210

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for; I have pepper'd two of them. Two I am sure I have paid, two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward: here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me — 217

Prince. What, four? Thou saidst but two even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four. 221

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

Prince. Seven? why, there were but four even now. 226

Fal. In buckram?

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts, or I am a villain else. 230

Prince. Prithee, let him alone; we shall have more anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

Prince. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack. 234

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram that I told thee of — Prince. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points being broken, —

Poins. Down fell their hose. 239

Fal. Began to give me ground; but I followed me close, came in foot and hand, and with a thought seven of the eleven I paid.

Prince. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two! 244

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green came at my back and let drive at me; for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand. 248

Prince. These lies are like their father that begets them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why thou clay-brain'd guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-catch, — 253

Fal. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? Is not the truth the truth?

Prince. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? Come, tell us your reason; what say'st thou to this? 259

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? 'Zounds, an

I were at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! If reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I. 266

Prince. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin. This sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horseback-breaker, this huge hill of flesh, — 269

Fal. 'Sblood, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's tongue, you bull's pizzle, you stockfish! O for breath to utter what is like thee! you tailor's-yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing-tuck, — 274

Prince. Well, breathe a while, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this: —

Poins. Mark, Jack. 278

Prince. We two saw you four set on four and bound them, and were masters of their wealth. Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. Then did we two set on you four; and, with a word, out-fac'd you from your prize, and have it, yea, and can show it you here in the house; and, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roar'd for mercy, and still run and roar'd, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame? 293

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack; what trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why, hear you, my masters. Was it for me to kill the heir-apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct; the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter; I was now a coward on instinct, I shall think the better of myself and thee during my life; I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money. Hostess, clap to the doors! Watch to-night, pray to-morrow. Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What, shall we be merry? Shall we have a play extempore?

Prince. Content; and the argument shall be thy running away. 311

Fal. Ah, no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me!

Enter HOSTESS.

Host. O Jesu, my lord the Prince!

Prince. How now, my lady the hostess! what say'st thou to me? 318

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you. He says he comes from your father.

Prince. Give him as much as will make him a royal man; and send him back again to my mother. 323

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth Gravity out of his bed at midnight? Shall I give him his answer? 336

Prince. Prithee, do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him packing. [Exit.]

Prince. Now, sirs, by 'r lady, you fought fair; so did you, Peto; so did you, Bardolph. You are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince; no, fie! 333

Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

Prince. Faith, tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hack'd?

Peto. Why, he hack'd it with his dagger, and said he would swear truth out of England but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and persuaded us to do the like. 339

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass to make them bleed, and then to beslobber our garments with it and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven year before, I blush'd to hear his monstrous devices. 344

Prince. O villain, thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blush'd extempore. Thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ran'st away; what instinct hadst thou for it? 350

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? Do you behold these exhalations?

[Pointing to his own face.]

Prince. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

Prince. Hot livers and cold purses. 355

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Prince. No, if rightly taken, halter. Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast! How long is 't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee? 361

Fal. My own knee? When I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring. A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad. Here was Sir John [366] Bracy from your father; you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy, and he of Wales that gave Amamon the bastinado and made Lucifer cuckold and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook — what a plague call you him? 373

Poins. O, Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen, the same; and his son-in-law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular, —

Prince. He that rides at high speed and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying. 380

Fal. You have hit it.

Prince. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run. 384

Prince. Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running!

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo; but afoot he will not budge a foot.

Prince. Yes, Jack, upon instinct. 389

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Murdoch, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stolen away tonight. Thy father's beard is turn'd white with the news. You may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel. 395

Prince. Why, then, it is like, if there come a hot June and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds. 399

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou say'st true; it is like we shall have good trading that way. But tell me, Hal, art not thou horrible afraid? Thou being heir-apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? Doth not thy blood thrill at it? 407

Prince. Not a whit, i' faith; I lack some of thy instinct.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid tomorrow when thou comest to thy father. If thou love me, practise an answer. 412

Prince. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? Content. This chair shall be my state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown. 417

Prince. Thy state is taken for a join'd-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown! 420

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. Give me a cup of sack to make my eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambryses' vein. 426

Prince. Well, here is my leg.

Fal. And here is my speech. Stand aside, nobility.

Host. O Jesu, this is excellent sport, i' faith!

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen; for trickling tears are vain. 431

Host. O, the father, how he holds his countenance!

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristful queen;

For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes. 435

Host. O Jesu, he doth it as like one of these harlotry players as ever I see!

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot; peace, good tickle-brain. Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art [440] accompanied; for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion, but chiefly a villainous trick of thine eye and a foolish [445] hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point; why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher and eat blackberries? a [450] question not to be ask'd. Shall the son of England prove a thief and take purses? a question to be ask'd. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch. This pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth ^[455] defile; so doth the company thou keepest: for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink but in tears; not in pleasure but in passion, not in words only, but in woes also; and yet there is a virtuous man whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name. ^[461]

Prince. What manner of man, an it like your Majesty?

Fal. A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, ^[465] his age some fifty, or, by'r lady, inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff. If that man should be lewdly given, he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known ^[470] by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff; him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

Prince. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me? If thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker or a poultier's hare. ^[481]

Prince. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand. Judge, my masters.

Prince. Now, Harry, whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap. ^[485]

Prince. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false. — Nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith. ^[489]

Prince. Swearst thou, ungracious boy? Henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace. There is a devil haunts thee in the likeness of an old fat man; a tun of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch of beastliness, that swollen ^[495] parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard of sack, that stuff'd cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? ^[500] Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning, but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villainy? wherein villainous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing? ^[505]

Fal. I would your Grace would take me with you. Whom means your Grace?

Prince. That villainous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know. ^[510]

Prince. I know thou dost.

Fal. But to say I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it; but that he is, saving your reverence, a whoremaster, that I utterly ^[515] deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know is damn'd. If to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord; ^[520] banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins; but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company. Banish ^[525] plump Jack, and banish all the world.

Prince. I do, I will.

[A knocking heard. Exeunt Hostess, Francis, and Bardolph.]

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord! the sheriff with a most monstrous watch is at the door. ^[530]

Fal. Out, ye rogue! Play out the play; I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter the HOSTESS.

Host. O Jesu, my lord, my lord!

Prince. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick. What's the matter? ^[535]

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door; they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? Never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit. Thou art essentially mad, without seeming so. ^[541]

Prince. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major. If you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter. If I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another. ^[548]

Prince. Go, hide thee behind the arras; the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me. [Exit. ^[553]

Prince. Call in the sheriff.

[Exeunt all except the Prince and Peto.]

Enter SHERIFF and the CARRIER.

Now, master sheriff, what is your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry

Hath followed certain men unto this house.

Prince. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord,

A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter. ^[558]

Prince. The man, I do assure you, is not here,

For I myself at this time have employ'd him.

And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee
That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time,
Send him to answer thee or any man 585
For anything he shall be charg'd withal.
And so let me entreat you leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen

Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.
Prince. It may be so. If he have robb'd these men, 570

He shall be answerable; and so farwello.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

Prince. I think it is good morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock. [Exeunt [Sheriff and Carrier].]

Prince. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth. 575

Peto. Falstaff! — Fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

Prince. Hark, how hard he fetches breath.
Search his pockets. (He searcheth his pockets, and findeth certain papers.) What hast thou
found? 582

Peto. Nothing but papers, my lord.

Prince. Let 's see what they be. Read them.

Peto. [Reads.]

Item, A capon	2s. 2d.
Item, Sauce	4d.
Item, Sack, two gallons	5s. 8d.
Item, Anchovies and sack after supper	2s. 6d.
Item, Bread	ob.

Prince. O monstrous! but one half-penny — [591 worth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!
What there is else, keep close; we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day.
I'll to the court in the morning. We must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable. [595
I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot;
and I know his death will be a march of twelve-score. The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so, good morrow, Peto. 601

Peto. Good morrow, good my lord. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [Bangor. The Archdeacon's house.]

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENOWER.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,

And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower,
Will you sit down?

And uncle Worcester, — a plague upon it! 5
I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur,

For by that name as oft as Lancaster

Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale and
with

A rising sigh he wisheth you in heaven. 10

Hot. And you in hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him. At my nativity
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning cressets; and at my birth 15
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself had never been born. 20

Glend. I say the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind,
If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

Hot. O, then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire, 25

And not in fear of your nativity.

Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth

In strange eruptions; oft the teeming earth

Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd

By the imprisoning of unruly wind 30

Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving,

Shakes the old beldam earth, and topples down
Steeple and moss-grown towers. At your birth
Our grandam earth, having this distemperature,
In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men 35

I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave

To tell you once again that at my birth

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,

The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds

Were strangely clamorous to the frightened fields.

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary; 41

And all the courses of my life do show

I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living, clipp'd in with the sea

That chides the banks of England, Scotland,
Wales, 45

Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?

And bring him out that is but woman's son

Can trace me in the tedious ways of art

And hold me pace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think there's no man speaks better
Welsh. I'll to dinner. 51

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy; you will make him mad.

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man;

But will they come when you do call for
them? 55

Glend. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command

The devil.

Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil

By telling truth. "Tell truth and shame the devil."

If thou have power to raise him, bring him
hither, 60

And I'll be sworn I have power to shame him
hence.

O, while you live, tell truth and shame the devil!

Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head
Against my power; thrice from the banks of Wye 65

And sandy-bottom'd Severn have I sent him
Bootless home and weather-beaten back.

Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!

How scapes he agues, in the devil's name?

Glend. Come, here's the map. Shall we divide our right 70

According to our threefold order ta'en?

Mort. The Archdeacon hath divided it
Into three limits very equally.

England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,
By south and east is to my part assign'd; 75

All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile land within that bound,

To Owen Glendower; and, dear coz, to you
The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.

And our indentures tripartite are drawn; 80

Which being sealed interchangeably,

A business that this night may execute,

To-morrow, cousin Percy, you and I

And my good Lord of Worcester will set forth
To meet your father and the Scottish power, 85

As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.

My father Glendower is not ready yet,

Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days.
Within that space you may have drawn together

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen. 90

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you,
lords;

And in my conduct shall your ladies come,
From whom you now must steal and take no

leave,
For there will be a world of water shed

Upon the parting of your wives and you. 95

Hot. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here,

In quantity equals not one of yours.

See how this river comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my land,

A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle out. 100

I'll have the current in this place damm'd
up;

And here the smug and silver Trent shall run
In a new channel, fair and evenly.

It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottom here. 105

Glend. Not wind? It shall, it must; you see it doth.

Mort. Yea, but
Mark how he bears his course, and runs me up

With like advantage on the other side;
Gelding the opposed continent as much. 110

As on the other side it takes from you.

Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here

And on this north side win this cape of land;
And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do
it. 115

Glend. I'll not have it alt' red.
Hot. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you, then;
speak it in Welsh. 120

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as
you;

For I was train'd up in the English court;
Where, being but young, I framed to the harp

Many an English ditty lovely well
And gave the tongue a helpful ornament, 125

A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry,

And I am glad of it with all my heart.

I had rather be a kitten and cry mew
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers.

I had rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd, 130

Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,

Nothing so much as mincing poetry.
'T is like the forc'd gait of a shuffling nag. 135

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.
Hot. I do not care. I'll give thrice so much

land
To any well-deserving friend;

But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair. 140

Are the indentures drawn? Shall we be gone?

Glend. The moon shines fair; you may away by night.

I'll haste the writer, and withal

Break with your wives of your departure
hence.

I am afraid my daughter will run mad, 145

So much she doteth on her Mortimer. [Exit.]

Mort. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!

Hot. I cannot choose. Sometime he angers
me

With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies, 150

And of a dragon and a finless fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin and a moulten raven,

A couching lion and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skumble-skamble stuff

As puts me from my faith. I tell you what: 155

He held me last night at least nine hours
In reckoning up the several devils' names

That were his lackeys. I cried "hum," and
"well, go to,"

But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife; 160

Worse than a smoky house. I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,

Than feed on cates and have him talk to me
In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman, 165

Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange concealments, valiant as a lion

And wondrous affable, and as bountiful
As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?

He holds your temper in a high respect. 170

And curbs himself even of his natural scope
When you come 'cross his humour. Faith, he does.

I warrant you, that man is not alive
Might so have tempted him as you have done,

Without the taste of danger and reproof. 175
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame;

And since your coming hither have done enough
To put him quite besides his patience.

You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault. 180

Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,—

And that 's the dearest grace it renders you,—
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,

Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain; 185

The least of which haunting a nobleman
Loseth men's hearts and leaves behind a stain

Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hot. Well, I am school'd. Good manners be your speed! 190

Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER with the ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me;

My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part with you.

She 'll be a soldier too, she 'll to the wars. 195

Mort. Good father, tell her that she and my aunt Percy

Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

[Glendower speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.]

Glend. She is desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry, one that no persuasion can do good upon. [The lady speaks in Welsh.] 200

Mort. I understand thy looks. That pretty Welsh

Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens

I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a parley should I answer thee.

[The lady speaks again in Welsh.]

I understand thy kisses and thou mine, 205
And that 's a feeling disputation.

But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue

Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,
 Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower, 210

With ravishing division, to her lute.

Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad. [The lady speaks again in Welsh.]

Mort. O, I am ignorance itself in this!

Glend. She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down

And rest your gentle head upon her lap, 215
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you

And on your eyelids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness,

Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep
As is the difference 'twixt day and night 220

The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I 'll sit and hear her sing.

By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;
And those musicians that shall play to you

Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence,
And straight they shall be here. Sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down. Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my head in thy lap. 225

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose. [The music plays.]

Hot. Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh;

And 't is no marvel he is so humorous.
By 'r lady, he is a good musician. 235

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical, for you are altogether governed by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish. 241

Lady P. Wouldst thou have thy head broken?

Hot. No.
Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; 't is a woman's fault. 245
Lady P. Now God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.
Lady P. What 's that?

Hot. Peace! she sings.
[Here the lady sings a Welsh song.]

Hot. Come, Kate, I 'll have your song too.
Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth. 251

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth! Heart, you swear like a comfit-maker's wife. "Not you, in good sooth," and "as true as I live," and "as God shall mend me," and "as sure as day;" 255

And givest such sarcenet surety for thy oaths
As if thou never walk'st further than Fins-

bury.

Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good mouth-filling oath, and leave "in sooth,"

And such protest of pepper-gingerbread, 260
To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens.

Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.
Hot. 'T is the next way to turn tailor, or be red-breast teacher. An the indentures be drawn, I 'll away within these two hours;

and so, come in when ye will. [Exit.] 267

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer; you are as slow

As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go.
By this our book is drawn. We 'll but seal, 270

And then to horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [London. The palace.]

Enter the KING, PRINCE OF WALES, and others.

King. Lords, give us leave; the Prince of Wales and I Must have some private conference; but be near at hand,

For we shall presently have need of you. [Exeunt Lords]

I know not whether God will have it so,

For some displeasing service I have done, 5
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood He'll breed revengement and a scourge for
me;

But thou dost in thy passages of life
Make me believe that thou art only mark'd
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven 10
To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,

Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withal and grafted to, 15
Accompany the greatness of thy blood
And hold their level with thy princely heart?

Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could

Quit all offences with as clear excuse
As well as I am doubtless I can purge 20
Myself of many I am charg'd withal.
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproof of many tales devis'd,
Which oft the ear of greatness needs must
hear,

By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmon-
gers, 25

I may, for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wand'ring and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.

King. God pardon thee! yet let me wonder,
Harry,

At thy affections, which do hold a wing 30
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is suppli'd,
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court and princes of my blood. 35
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd, and the soul of every man
Prophetically do forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney'd in the eyes of men, 40
So stale and cheap to vulgar company,
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession.
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood. 45
By being seldom seen, I could not stir
But like a comet I was wond'ring at;
That men would tell their children, "This is he;"

Others would say, "Where, which is Boling-
broke?"

And then I stole all courtesy from heaven, 50
And dress'd myself in such humility
That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
Even in the presence of the crowned King.
Thus did I keep my person fresh and new, 55
My presence, like a robe pontifical,
Ne'er seen but wond'ring at; and so my state,
Seldom but sumptuous, show'd like a feast
And won by rareness such solemnity.

The skipping King, he ambled up and down 60
With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits,
Soon kindled and soon burnt; carded his state,
Mingled his royalty with cap'ring fools,

Had his great name profaned with their scorn,
And gave his countenance, against his name, 65
To laugh at gibing boys and stand the push
Of every beardless vain comparative;
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enfeoff'd himself to popularity;
That, being daily swallowed by men's eyes, 70
They surfeited with honey and began To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the cuckoo is in June, 75
Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes
As, sick and blunted with community,
Afford no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on sun-like majesty
When it shines seldom in admiring eyes; 80
But rather drows'd and hung their eyelids down,
Slept in his face and rend'ring such aspect
As cloudy men use to their adversaries, Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd and full.

And in that very line, Harry, standest thou; 85
For thou hast lost thy princely privilege
With vile participation. Not an eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee
more;

Which now doth that I would not have it do, 90
Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious
lord,

Be more myself.

King. For all the world
As thou art to this hour was Richard then
When I from France set foot at Ravenspurgh, 95
And even as I was then is Percy now.
Now, by my sceptre and my soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state
Than thou, the shadow of succession.
For of no right, nor colour like to right, 100
He doth fill fields with harness in the realm,
Turns head against the lion's armed jaws,
And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on
To bloody battles and to bruising arms. 105
What never-dying honour hath he got Against renowned Douglas! whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions and great name in arms
Holds from all soldiers chief majority
And military title capital 110
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.

Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing clothes,

This infant warrior, in his enterprises
Discomfited great Douglas, ta'en him once, 115
Enlarged him and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,

The Archbishop's grace of York, Douglas,
Mortimer,

Capitulate against us and are up. 120
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?

Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my near'st and dearest enemy?
Thou that art like enough, through vassal fear,
Base inclination, and the start of spleen, 125
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels and curtsy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

Prince. Do not think so; you shall not find it so:

And God forgive them that so much have sway'd 130

Your Majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood 135
And stain my favour in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with it.

And that shall be the day, when'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight, 140
And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.
For every honour sitting on his helm,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shames redoubled! For the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange 145

His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account
That he shall render every glory up, 150
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here;
The which if He be pleas'd I shall perform,
I do beseech your Majesty may save 155
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance.
If not, the end of life cancels all bands;
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

King. A hundred thousand rebels die in this.
Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust herein. 161

Enter BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt? Thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak of.

Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word
That Douglas and the English rebels met 165
The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever off'red foul play in a state.

King. The Earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day, 170

With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster,
For this advertisement is five days old.
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward;

On Thursday we ourselves will march. Our meeting

Is Bridgenorth: and, Harry, you shall march 175
Through Gloucestershire; by which account,

Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgenorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business; let's away.
Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay. 180
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Eastcheap. The Boar's-Head Tavern.]

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? Do I not bate? Do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown; I am withered like an old apple-john. Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking. I shall [5 be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. The inside of a church! Company, villanous company, hath [10 been the spoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long. 14

Fal. Why, there is it. Come sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be; virtuously enough, swore little, die'd not above seven times a week, went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter—of an hour, paid money that I borrowed three or four times, lived well [21 and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, out of all reasonable compass, Sir John. 26

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our admiral; thou bearest the lantern in the poop, but 't is in the nose of thee. Thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp. 30

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you no harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a Death's-head or a memento mori; I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire and Dives that lived in [35 purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, "By this fire, that's God's angel;" but thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, [40 but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou ran'st up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O, [45 thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light! Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern; but the sack that thou hast drunk me would [50 have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintain'd that salamander of yours with fire any time this two and thirty years; God reward me for it! 55

Bard. 'Sblood, I would my face were in your belly!

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter HOSTESS.

How now, Dame Partlet the hen! have you inquir'd yet who pick'd my pocket?

Host. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have search'd, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, [65] servant by servant. The tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. Ye lie, hostess. Bardolph was shav'd and lost many a hair; and I'll be sworn my pocket was pick'd. Go to, you are a woman, Host. Who? I? No; I defy thee. God's light, I was never call'd so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Host. No, Sir John; you do not know me, Sir John. I know you, Sir John; you owe me [75] money, Sir John; and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowlas, filthy dowlas. I have given them away to bakers' wives; they have made bolters of them.

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinkings, and money lent you, four and twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Host. He? Alas, he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? Look upon his face; what call you rich? Let them coin his nose, let [80] them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker of me? Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my pocket pick'd? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu, I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper!

Fal. How! the Prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup. 'Sblood, an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter the PRINCE [and PETO], marching, and FALSTAFF meets them playing on his truncheon like a fife.

How now, lad! is the wind in that door, i' faith? Must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Mistress Quickly? How doth thy husband? I love him well; he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Prithes, let her alone, and list to me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behind the arras and had my pocket pick'd.

This house is turn'd bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

Prince. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? Three or four bonds of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

Prince. A trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord, and I said I [120] heard your Grace say so; and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouth'd man as he is, and said he would cudgel you.

Prince. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stew'd prune; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, Maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? Why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I [135] would thou shouldst know it. I am an honest man's wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave, thou?

Fal. What beast? Why, an otter.

Prince. An otter, Sir John! Why an otter?

Fal. Why, she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so. Thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave, thou!

Prince. Thou say'st true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day you ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! A million. Thy love is worth a million; thou ow'st me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my ring was copper.

Prince. I say 'tis copper. Dar'st thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou know'st, as thou art but man, I dare; but as thou art Prince, I fear thee as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

Prince. And why not as the lion?

Fal. The King himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? Nay, an I do, I pray God my girdle break.

Prince. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty in this bosom of thine; it is all filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, emboss'd rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded, if ¹⁸⁰ thy pocket were enrich'd with any other injuries but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it; you will not pocket up wrong. Art thou not asham'd?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? Thou know'st in the state of innocency Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do in the days of villainy? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess then, you pick'd my pocket?

Prince. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests. Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason; thou seest I am pacified still. Nay, prithee, be gone.

[Exit Hostess.]

Now, Hal, to the news at court. For the robbery, lad, how is that answered?

Prince. O, my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee. The money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying back; 'tis a double labour.

Prince. I am good friends with my father and may do anything.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou doest, and do it with unwash'd hands too.

Bard. Do, my lord.

Prince. I have procur'd thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O for a fine thief, of the age of two and twenty or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels, they offend none but the virtuous, I land them, I praise them.

Prince. Bardolph!

Bard. My lord?

Prince. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster, to my brother John; this to my Lord of Westmoreland. [Exit Bardolph.] Go, Peto, to horse, to horse; for thou and I have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time. [Exit Peto.] Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple hall at two o'clock in the afternoon. There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive Money and order for their furniture.

The land is burning; Percy stands on high; And either we or they must lower lie. [Exit.]

Fal. Rare words! brave world! Hostess, my breakfast, come!

O, I could wish this tavern were my drum!

[Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.]

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot! If speaking truth

In this fine age were not thought flattery,

Such attribution should the Douglas have As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current through the world.

By God, I cannot flatter; I do defy The tongues of soothers; but a braver place In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.

Doug. Thou art the king of honour. No man so potent breathes upon the ground But I will beard him.

Enter a MESSENGER with letters.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well. — What letters hast thou there? — I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father. Hot. Letters from him! Why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord; he is grievously sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick

In such a justling time? Who leads his power? Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bears his mind, not I, my lord.

Wor. I prithee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;

And at the time of my departure thence

He was much fear'd by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole

Ere he by sickness had been visited.

His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! This sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise;

'Tis catching hither, even to our camp.

He writes me here, that inward sickness —

And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn, nor did he think it meet

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust

On any soul remov'd but on his own.

Yet doth he give us bold advertisement

That with our small conjunction we should on

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;

For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,

Because the King is certainly possess'd Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a main to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off.

And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want Seems more than we shall find it. Were it good

To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast? to set so rich a main

On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?

It were not good; for therein should we read

The very bottom and the soul of hope,

The very list, the very utmost bound

Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should;

Where now remains a sweet reversion,

We may boldly spend upon the hope of what

Is to come in. 55

A comfort of retirement lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,

If that the devil and mischance look big

Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Wor. But yet I would your father had been here. 60

The quality and hair of our attempt

Brooks no division. It will be thought

By some that know not why he is away,

That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike

Of our proceedings kept the earl from hence;

And think how such an apprehension 65

May turn the tide of fearful faction

And breed a kind of question in our cause.

For well you know we of the off'ring side

Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement, 70

And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence

The eye of reason may pry in upon us.

This absence of your father's draws a curtain,

That shows the ignorant a kind of fear

Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far. 75

I rather of his absence make this use:

It lends a lustre and more great opinion,

A larger dare to our great enterprise,

Than if the earl were here; for men must

think,

If we without his help can make a head 80

To push against a kingdom, with his help

We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.

Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think. There is not such a word

Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear. 85

Enter SIR RICHARD VERNON.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord.

The Earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,

Is marching hitherwards; with him Prince John.

Hot. No harm. What more?

Ver. And further, I have learn'd,

The King himself in person is set forth, 91

Or hitherwards intended speedily,

With strong and mighty preparation.

Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his son,

The nimble-footed madcap Prince of Wales, 95

And his comrades, that daff'd the world aside,

And bid it pass?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms;

All plum'd like estridges that with the wind

Bated, like eagles having lately bath'd;

Glittering in golden coats, like images; 100

As full of spirit as the month of May,

And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer;

Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.

I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,

His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd, 105

Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury,

And vaulted with such ease into his seat,

As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds

To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus

And witch the world with noble horseman-ship. 110

Hot. No more, no more! Worse than the sun in March,

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come!

They come like sacrifices in their trim,

And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war

All hot and bleeding will we offer them. 115

The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit

Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire

To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh

And yet not ours. Come, let me taste my horse,

Who is to bear me like a thunderbolt 120

Against the bosom of the Prince of Wales.

Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,

Meet and ne'er part till one drop down a corse.

O that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news.

I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along, 125

He cannot draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.

Hot. What may the King's whole battle reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be! 130

My father and Glendower being both away,

The powers of us may serve so great a day.

Come, let us take a muster speedily.

Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying; I am out of fear

Of death or death's hand for this one-half year. [Exeunt. 135]

SCENE II. [A public road near Coventry.]

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry; fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton Cop-hill to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out. 140

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all; I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto meet me at town's end. 145

Bard. I will, captain; farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not asham'd of my soldiers, I am a sous'd gurnet. I have misus'd the King's press damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good 150 householders, yeoman's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been ask'd twice on the banns; such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lieve hear the devil as a drum;

such as fear the report of a caliver worse 155 than a struck fowl or a hurt wild-duck. I press'd me none but such toasts-and-butter, with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins!

heads; and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge consists of ²⁵ ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies, slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth, where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but discarded unjust serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers, revolted tapsters ³⁰ and ostlers trade-fallen, the cankers of a calm world and a long peace, ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old feaz'd ancient: and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them as have bought out their services, that you ³⁵ would think that I had a hundred and fifty tatter'd prodigals lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks. A mad fellow met me on the way and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets and press'd the dead bodies. No ⁴⁰ eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on; for indeed I had the most of them out of prison. There's but a ⁴⁵ shirt and a half in all my company; and the half shirt is two napkins tack'd together and thrown over the shoulders like an herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-nose inn-keeper of Daventry. ⁵⁰ But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.

Enter the PRINCE and WESTMORELAND.

Prince. How now, blown Jack! how now, quilt! ⁵⁴

Fal. What, Hal! how now, mad wag! what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy! I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury. ⁵⁹

West. Faith, Sir John, 't is more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The King, I can tell you, looks for us all. We must away all night.

Fal. Tut, never fear me. I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream. ⁶⁵

Prince. I think, to steal cream indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack, whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine. ⁶⁹

Prince. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut; good enough to toss; food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better. Tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare, too beggarly. ⁷⁵

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure they never learn'd that of me.

Prince. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs bare. But, sirrah, make haste. Percy is already in the field. ⁸¹

Fal. What, is the King encamp'd?

West. He is, Sir John. I fear we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well,

To the latter end of a fray and the beginning of a feast ⁸⁵
Fits a dull fighter and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The rebel camp near Shrewsbury.]

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? Looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd; stir not to-night. ⁵

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well. You speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas. By my life,

And I dare well maintain it with my life, If well-respected honour bid me on, ¹⁰
I hold as little counsel with weak fear As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives.

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content. ¹⁵

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonder much,

Being men of such great leading as you are, That you foresee not what impediments Drag back our expedition. Certain horse Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up. ²⁰
Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day; And now their pride and mettle is asleep, Their courage with hard labour tame and dull, That not a horse is half the half of himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy ²⁵
In general, journey-bated and brought low. The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the King exceedeth ours.

For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in. [The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter SIR WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King, ³⁰

If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect,

Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and would to God

You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those ³⁵

some Envy your great deservings and good name, Because you are not of our quality, But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,

So long as out of limit and true rule

You stand against anointed majesty. 40
But to my charge. The King hath sent to know

The nature of your griefs, and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land
Audacious cruelty. If that the King 45
Have any way your good deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefs; and with all speed

You shall have your desires with interest
And pardon absolute for yourself and these 50
Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The King is kind; and well we know the King

Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.
My father and my uncle and myself
Did give him that same royalty he wears; 55
And when he was not six and twenty strong,
Sick in the world's regard, wretched and low,
A poor unmindful outlaw sneaking home,
My father gave him welcome to the shore;
And when he heard him swear and vow to God
He came but to be Duke of Lancaster, 61
To sue his livery and beg his peace,
With tears of innocence and terms of zeal,
My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,
Swore him assistance and perform'd it too. 65
Now when the lords and barons of the realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and less came in with cap and knee;
Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,
Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes, 70
Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths,

Gave him their heirs as pages, followed him
Even at the heels in golden multitudes.
He presently, as greatness knows itself,
Steps me a little higher than his vow 75
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh;
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform
Some certain edicts and some strait decrees
That lie too heavy on the commonwealth, 80
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country's wrongs; and by this face,
This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for;
Proceeded further; cut me off the heads 85
Of all the favourites that the absent king
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then to the point.

In short time after, he depos'd the King; 90
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;
And in the neck of that, task'd the whole state.
To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman
March,

Who is, if every owner were well plac'd,
Indeed his king, to be engag'd in Wales, 95
There without ransom to lie forfeited;
Disgrac'd me in my happy victories,
Sought to entrap me by intelligence;
Rated mine uncle from the council-board;
In rage dismiss'd my father from the court; 100

Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong,

And in conclusion drove us to seek out
This head of safety; and withal to pry
Into his title, the which we find
Too indirect for long continuance. 105

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the King?

Hot. Not so, Sir Walter; we'll withdraw a while.

Go to the King; and let there be impawn'd
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall mine uncle 110
Bring him our purposes: and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love.

Hot. And may be so we shall.

Blunt. Pray God you do. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [York. The Archbishop's palace.]

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK and SIR MICHAEL.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael; bear this sealed brief

With winged haste to the Lord Marshal,
This to my cousin Scroop, and all the rest
To whom they are directed. If you knew How much they do import, you would make 5 haste.

Sir M. My good lord,

I guess their tenour.

Arch. Like enough you do.

To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury, 10
As I am truly given to understand,
The King with mighty and quick-raised power
Meets with Lord Harry; and, I fear, Sir
Michael,

What with the sickness of Northumberland,
Whose power was in the first proportion, 15
And what with Owen Glendower's absence
thence,

Who with them was a rated sinew too
And comes not in, o'er-ruled by prophecies,
I fear the power of Percy is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the King. 20

Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear;

There is Douglas and Lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Murdoch, Vernon, Lord
Harry Percy,

And there is my Lord of Worcester, and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen. 25

Arch. And so there is; but yet the King hath drawn

The special head of all the land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt; 30
And many more corivals and dear men
Of estimation and command in arms.

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 'tis to fear;

And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed;
 For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King³⁵
 Dismiss his power he means to visit us,
 For he hath heard of our confederacy,
 And 't is but wisdom to make strong against
 him.

Therefore make haste. I must go write again⁴⁰
 To other friends; and so farewell, Sir Michael.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [The King's camp near Shrewsbury.]

Enter the KING, PRINCE OF WALES, LORD
 JOHN OF LANCASTER, SIR WALTER BLUNT, and FALSTAFF.

King. How bloodily the sun begins to peer Above yon busky hill! The day looks pale
 At his distemperature.

Prince. The southern wind
 Doth play the trumpet to his purposes,
 And by his hollow whistling in the leaves⁵
 Foretells a tempest and a blust'ring day.

King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
 For nothing can seem foul to those that win.
[The trumpet sounds.]

Enter WORCESTER [and VERNON].

How now, my Lord of Worcester! 't is not well
 That you and I should meet upon such terms¹⁰
 As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
 And made us doff our easy robes of peace,
 To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel.
 This is not well, my lord, this is not well.
 What say you to it? Will you again unknot¹⁵
 This churlish knot of all-aborred war?
 And move in that obedient orb again
 Where you did give a fair and natural light,
 And be no more an exhal'd meteor,
 A prodigy of fear and a portent²⁰
 Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege.
 For mine own part, I could be well content
 To entertain the lag-end of my life
 With quiet hours; for I do protest,²⁵
 I have not sought the day of this dislike.

King. You have not sought it! How comes it, then?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found
 it.

Prince. Peace, chewet, peace!
 Wor. It pleas'd your Majesty to turn your looks³⁰

Of favour from myself and all our house;
 And yet I must remember you, my lord,
 We were the first and dearest of your friends.
 For you my staff of office did I break
 In Richard's time; and posted day and night³⁵
 To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,
 When yet you were in place and in account
 Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.
 It was myself, my brother, and his son,
 That brought you home and boldly did outdare
 The dangers of the time. You swore to us,⁴⁰
 And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
 That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state;

Nor claim no further than your new-fallen
 right,

The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster.⁴⁵
 To this we swore our aid. But in short space
 It rain'd down fortune show'ring on your head;
 And such a flood of greatness fell on you,
 What with our help, what with the absent King,
 What with the injuries of a wanton time,⁵⁰
 The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
 And the contrarious winds that held the King
 So long in his unlucky Irish wars
 That all in England did repute him dead;
 And from this swarm of fair advantages⁵⁵
 You took occasion to be quickly woo'd
 To gripe the general sway into your hand;
 Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster;
 And being fed by us you us'd us so
 As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,⁶⁰
 Useth the sparrow; did oppress our nest;
 Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk
 That even our love durst not come near your sight

For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing
 We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly⁶⁵
 Out of your sight and raise this present head;
 Whereby we stand opposed by such means
 As you yourself have forg'd against yourself
 By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
 And violation of all faith and troth⁷⁰
 Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

King. These things indeed you have articulate,
 Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
 To face the garment of rebellion
 With some fine colour that may please the eye⁷⁵
 Of fickle changelings and poor discontents,
 Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
 Of hurly-burly innovation.
 And never yet did insurrection want
 Such water-colours to impaint his cause;⁸⁰
 Nor moody beggars, starving for a time
 Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.

Prince. In both your armies there is many a soul
 Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
 If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,⁸⁵
 The Prince of Wales doth join with all the
 world

In praise of Henry Percy. By my hopes,
 This present enterprise set off his head,
 I do not think a braver gentleman,
 More active-valiant or more valiant-young,⁹⁰
 More daring or more bold, is now alive
 To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
 For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
 I have a truant bent to chivalry;
 And so I hear he doth account me too;⁹⁵
 Yet this before my father's majesty:
 I am content that he shall take the odds
 Of his great name and estimation,
 And will, to save the blood on either side,
 Try fortune with him in a single fight.¹⁰⁰

King. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,
 Albeit considerations infinite
 Do make against it. No, good Worcester, no,
 We love our people well; even those we love

That are misled upon your cousin's part ; 105
 And, will they take the offer of our grace,
 Both he and they and you, yea, every man
 Shall be my friend again and I'll be his.
 So tell your cousin, and bring me word
 What he will do. But if he will not yield, 110
 Rebuke and dread correction wait on us
 And they shall do their office. So, be gone ;
 We will not now be troubled with reply.
 We offer fair ; take it adviſedly.

[Exeunt Worcester [and Vernon].]

Prince. It will not be accepted, on my life.
 The Douglas and the Hotspur both together 115
 Are confident against the world in arms.

King. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge,

For, on their answer, will we set on them ;
 And God befriend us, as our cause is just ! 120

[Exeunt all but the Prince of Wales and Halſtaff.]

Fal. Hal, if thou ſee me down in the battle and bestride me, so ; 't is a point of friendship.

Prince. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would 't were bed-time, Hal, and all well. 125

Prince. Why, thou owest God a death,

[Exit.]

Fal. 'T is not due yet ; I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me ?
 Well, 't is no matter ; honour pricks me on. 130
 Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on ? How then ? Can honour set to a leg ?
 No. Or an arm ? No. Or take away the grief of a wound ? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then ? No. What is honour ? A word. 135
 What is in that word honour ? What is that honour ? Air ; a trim reckoning ! Who hath it ? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it ? No. Doth he hear it ? No. 'T is insensible, then ? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live 140 with the living ? No. Why ? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a mere scutcheon : and so ends my catechism.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. [The rebel camp.]

Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

Wor. O, no, my nephew must not know, Sir
 Richard,

The liberal and kind offer of the King.

Ver. 'T were best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.

It is not possible, it cannot be,
 The King should keep his word in loving us. 5
 He will suspect us still, and find a time
 To punish this offence in other faults.
 Supposition all our lives shall be stuck full of
 eyes ;

For treason is but trusted like the fox,
 Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd and lock'd up,
 Will have a wild trick of his ancestors. 11
 Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
 Interpretation will misquote our looks,
 And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,

The better cherish'd, still the nearer death. 15
 My nephew's trespass may be well forgot ;
 It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood,
 And an adopted name of privilege,
 A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
 All his offences live upon my head 20
 And on his father's. We did train him on,
 And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
 We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
 Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know,
 In any case, the offer of the King. 25

Ver. Deliver what you will ; I'll say 't is so.
 Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR [and DOUGLAS].

Hot. My uncle is return'd ;
 Deliver up my Lord of Westmoreland.
 Uncle, what news ? 30

Wor. The King will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmore-
 land.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. 35

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the
 King.

Hot. Did you beg any ? God forbid !

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
 Of his oath-breaking ; which he mended thus,
 By now forswearing that he is forsworn.
 He calls us rebels, traitors ; and will scourge 40
 With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen ; to arms ! for I have thrown
 A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth,
 And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear
 it ;

Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the King, 45

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, would the quarrel lay upon our
 heads,

And that no man might draw short breath today

But I and Harry Monmouth ! Tell me, tell me, How show'd his tasking ? Seem'd it in com-tempt ? 51

Ver. No, by my soul ; I never in my life
 Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,
 Unless a brother should a brother dare
 To gentle exercise and proof of arms. 55

He gave you all the duties of a man,
 Trimm'd up your praises with a princely tongue,
 Spoke your deservings like a chronicle,
 Making you ever better than his praise

By still dispraising praise valued with you ; 60
 And, which became him like a prince indeed,
 He made a blushing cital of himself,

And chid his truant youth with such a grace
 As if he mast'rd there a double spirit
 Of teaching and of learning instantly. 65

There did he pause ; but let me tell the world,
 If he outlive the envy of this day,

England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured 70
On his follies. Never did I hear
Of any prince so wild a liberty.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy. 75
Arm, arm with speed! and, fellows, soldiers,
friends,
Better consider what you have to do
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you. 80
Hot. I cannot read them now.
O gentlemen, the time of life is short!
To spend that shortness basely were too long,
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour. 85
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us!
Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another MESSENGER.

[2.] Mess. My lord, prepare; the King comes on apace. 90

Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking; only this—
Let each man do his best; and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal. 95
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now Esperance! Percy! and set on.
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall 100
A second time do such a courtesy.

[They embrace [and exeunt].]

[SCENE III. Plain between the camps.]

*The trumpets sound. The King enters with his power and passes over. Alarum to the battle.
Then enter DOUGLAS and SIR WALTER
BLUNT.*

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle
thus
Thou crossest me? What honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know then, my name is Douglas;
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus
Because some tell me that thou art a king. 5

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The Lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought

Thy likeness, for instead of thee, King Harry,
This sword hath ended him. So shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner. 10

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;

And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death.

[They fight. Douglas kills Blunt.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O Douglas, hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,
I never had triumph'd upon a Scot. 15

Doug. All's done, all's won; here breathless lies the King.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? No. I know this face full well.

A gallant knight he was, his name was
Blunt; 20

Sensibly furnish'd like the King himself.

Doug. Ah! "fool" go with thy soul, whither it goes!

A borrowed title hast thou bought too dear.

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The King hath many marching in his coats. 25

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;

I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,

Until I meet the King.

Hot. Up, and away!

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. 30
[Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter FALSTAFF, solus.

Fal. Though I could scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here; here's no scoring but upon the pate. Soft! who are you? Sir Walter Blunt. There's honour for you! Here's no vanity! I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too. God keep lead out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. I [35 have led my ragamuffins where they are pepper'd. There's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end, to beg during life. But who comes here? 40

Enter the PRINCE.

Prince. What, stands thou idle here? Lend me thy sword.

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths are yet unreveng'd. I prithee, lend me thy sword. 44

Fal. O Hal, I prithee, give me leave to breathe a while. Turk Gregory never did such deeds in arms as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure,

Prince. He is, indeed; and living to kill thee. I prithee, lend me thy sword. 50

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou gets not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

Prince. Give it me. What, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 't is hot, 't is hot. There's that will sack a city. 56

[The Prince draws it out, and finds it to be a bottle of sack.]

Prince. What, is it a time to jest and dally now? [He throws the bottle at him. Exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him.
If he do come in my way, so; if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a car- [61

bonado of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath. Give me life, which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. [Exit. 65]

SCENE [IV. Another part of the field.]

Alarum. Excursions. Enter the KING, the PRINCE [wounded], LORD JOHN OF LANCASTER, and EARL OF WESTMORELAND.

King. I prithee, Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleedest too much.

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.

Lan. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

Prince. I beseech your Majesty, make up, lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do so.

My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help: 10

And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive The Prince of Wales from such a field as this, Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on, And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Lan. We breathe too long. Come, cousin Westmoreland, 15

Our duty this way lies; for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince John and Westmoreland.]

Prince. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster;

I did not think thee lord of such a spirit.

Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;

But now, I do respect thee as my soul. 20

King. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point With luster maintenance than I did look for Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince. O, this boy Lends mettle to us all! [Exit. 25]

Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads. 25

I am the Douglas, fatal to all those That wear those colours on them. What art thou,

That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

King. The King himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart

So many of his shadows thou hast met 30

And not the very King. I have two boys

Seek Percy and thyself about the field;

But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,

I will assay thee; so, defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit; 35

And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king.

But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,

And thus I win thee.

They fight; the King being in danger, re-enter PRINCE OF WALES.

Prince. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like Never to hold it up again! The spirits 40

Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms.

It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee, Who never promiseth but he means to pay.

[They fight: Douglas flies.]

Cheerly, my lord, how fares your Grace?

Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent, 45

And so hath Clifton. I'll to Clifton straight.

King. Stay, and breathe a while.

Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion, And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life,

In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me. 50

Prince. O God! they did me too much injury

That ever said I hear'd need for your death.

If it were so, I might have let alone

The insulting hand of Douglas over you,

Which would have been as speedy in your end

As all the poisonous potions in the world, 55

And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

King. Make up to Clifton. I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. [Exit. 60]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prince. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name. 60

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

Prince. Why, then I see A very valiant rebel of the name.

I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,

To share with me in glory any more.

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;

Nor can one England brook a double reign. 65

Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry; for the hour is come

To end the one of us; and would to God

Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

Prince. I'll make a greater ere I part from thee; 70

And all the budding honours on thy crest

I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight. 75]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you. 80

Re-enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead [and exit Douglas. Hotspur is wounded, and falls].

Hot. O, Harry, thou hast robb'd me of my youth!

I better brook the loss of brittle life

Than those proud titles thou hast won of me.

They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh. 85

But thought's the slave of life, and life time's a fool;

And time, that takes survey of all the world,

Must have a stop. O, I could prophesy,

But that the earthy and cold hand of death

Lies on my tongue. No, Percy, thou art dust, ⁴⁵
And food for — [Dies.]

Prince. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart!

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!
When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound; ⁹⁰
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough. This earth that bears thee
dead

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesy,
I should not make so dear a show of zeal; ⁹⁵
But let my favours hide thy mangled face;
And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself
For doing these fair rites of tenderness.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!
Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave, ¹⁰⁰
But not rememb'ed in thy epitaph!

[He speth Falstaff on the ground.]
What, old acquaintance! could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!
I could have better spar'd a better man.

O, I should have a heavy miss of thee, ¹⁰⁵
If I were much in love with vanity!
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer, in this bloody fray.
Embowell'd will I see thee by and by; ¹¹⁰
Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.]

Fal. (Rising up.) Embowell'd! if thou em-bowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me and eat me too to-morrow. 'Sblood, 'twas time to counterfeit, or that hot terragant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie, I am no counterfeit. To die is to be a ¹¹⁵ counterfeit, for he is but the counterfeit of a man who hath not the life of a man; but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part ¹²⁰ of valour is discretion; in the which better part I have saved my life. 'Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy, though he be dead. How, if he should counterfeit too and rise? By my faith, I am afraid he would ¹²⁵ prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me.
Therefore, sirrah [stabbing him], with a new ¹³⁰ wound in your thigh, come you along with me.
[Takes up Hotspur on his back.]

Re-enter the PRINCE OF WALES and LORD JOHN OF LANCASTER.

Prince. Come, brother John; full bravely hast thou flesh'd
Thy maiden sword.

Lan. But, soft! whom have we here?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead? ¹³⁵

Prince. I did; I saw him dead, Breathless and bleeding on the ground. Art thou alive?

Or is it fantasy that plays upon our eyesight?
I prithee, speak; we will not trust our eyes Without our ears. Thou art not what thou seem'st. 140

Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a double man; but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I a Jack. There is Percy [throwing the body down].
If your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you. ¹⁴⁵

Prince. Why, Percy I kill'd myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou? Lord, Lord, how this world is given to lying! I grant you I was down and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant and fought a ¹⁵⁰ long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads.
I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh. If the man were alive ¹⁵⁵ and would deny it, 'zounds, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

Lan. This is the strangest tale that ever I heard.

Prince. This is the strangest fellow, brother
John.

Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back. ¹⁶⁰
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.]
The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the
field,

To see what friends are living, who are dead. ¹⁶⁵ [Exeunt [Prince of Wales and Lancaster].]

Fal. I'll follow, as they say, for reward.
He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly as a nobleman should do. [Exit.]

SCENE [V. Another part of the field.]

The trumpets sound. Enter the KING, PRINCE OF WALES, LORD JOHN OF LANCASTER, EARL OF WESTMORELAND, with WORCESTER and VERNON prisoners.

King. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester! did not we send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenuous of thy kinsman's trust? ⁵
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else
Had been alive this hour,
If like a Christian thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence. ¹⁰

Wor. What I have done my safety urg'd me
to;

And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

King. Bear Worcester to the death and Vernon too.

Other offenders we will pause upon. ¹⁵

[Exeunt Worcester and Vernon
[guarded].]

How goes the field?
Prince. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw

The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,

The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest; 20
And falling from a hill, he was so bruised
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is; and I beseech your Grace
I may dispose of him.

King. With all my heart.

Prince. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you 25

This honourable bounty shall belong.
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless and free.
His valours shown upon our crests to-day
Have taught us how to cherish such high 30
deeds

Even in the bosom of our adversaries. 31

Lan. I thank your Grace for this high courtesy,

Which I shall give away immediately.

King. Then this remains, that we divide our power.

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland 35
Towards York shall bend you with your dearest speed,

To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop,

Who, as we hear, are busily in arms.
Myself and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway, 40
Meeting the check of such another day;
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won.

[Exeunt.]

INDUCTION

[Warkworth. Before the castle.]

Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues.

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop

The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks?

I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold

The acts commenced on this ball of earth. 5

Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,

Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.

I speak of peace, while covert enmity
Under the smile of safety wounds the world; 10

And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters and prepar'd defence,

Whiles the big year, swoln with some other grief,

Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe 15

Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,
And of so easy and so plain a stop

That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wav'ring multitude, 20

Can play upon it. But what need I thus

My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?

I run before King Harry's victory,
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troops,

Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebel's blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? My office is
To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword, 30
And that the King before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns

Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone, 35
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland, Lies crafty-sick. The posts come tiring on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me. From Rumour's tongues
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit. 40]

ACT I

SCENE [I. The same.]

Enter LORD BARDOLPH at one door.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here, ho?

[The PORTER opens the gate.]

Where is the Earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?

L. Bard. Tell thou the Earl
That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him here.
Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard.

Please it your honour, knock but at the gate, 5
And he himself will answer.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

L. Bard. Here comes the Earl.
[Exit Porter.]

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? Every minute now

Should be the father of some stratagem.
The times are wild; contention, like a horse
Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose 10
And bears down all before him.

L. Bard. Noble Earl,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an God will!

L. Bard. As good as heart can wish.
The King is almost wounded to the death;
And, in the fortune of my lord your son, 15
Prince Harry slain outright; and both the Blunts

Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince
John

And Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field;
And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir
John,

Is prisoner to your son. O, such a day, 20
So fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won,
Came not till now to dignify the times,
Since Cæsar's fortunes!

North. How is this deriv'd?
Saw you the field? Came you from Shrewsbury?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence, 25

A gentleman well bred and of good name,
That freely rend'red me these news for true.

North. Here comes my servant Travers, who I sent

On Tuesday last to listen after news.

Enter TRAVERS.

L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way; 30

And he is furnish'd with no certainties
More than he haply may retail from me.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings comes with you?

Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfreville turn'd me
back

With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,
Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard 35
A gentleman, almost forspent with speed,
That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied
horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him
I did demand what news from Shrewsbury. 40

He told me that rebellion had bad luck,
And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.

With that, he gave his able horse the head,
And bending forward struck his armed heels

Against the panting sides of his poor jade 45
Up to the rowel-head, and starting so

He seem'd in running to devour the way,
Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! Again.
Said he young Harry Percy's spur was cold?

Of Hotspur Coldspur? That rebellion 50
Had met ill luck?

L. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what:
If my young lord your son have not the day,

Upon mine honour, for a silken point
I'll give my barony. Never talk of it.

North. Why should that gentleman that rode by Travers 55

Give then such instances of loss?
L. Bard. Who, he?

He was some hilding fellow that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,

Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf, 60

Foretells the nature of a tragic volume.
So looks the strand whereon the imperious
flood

Hath left a witness'd usurpation.
Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord,
Where hateful Death put on his ugliest mask 65

To fright our party.
North. How doth my son and brother?

Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek

Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, 70
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him half his Troy was burnt;

But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it. 75
This thou wouldst say, "Your son did thus and thus;

Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas;
las; "

Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds;
But in the end, to stop my ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, 80
Ending with "Brother, son, and all are dead."

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother yet;

But, for my lord your son, —

North. Why, he is dead.

See what a ready tongue suspicion hath!
He that but fears the thing he would not
know 85

Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes
That what he fear'd is chanc'd. Yet speak, Morton;

Tell thou an earl his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gain-said; 91

Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's
dead.

I see a strange confession in thine eye.
Thou shak'st thy head and hold'st it fear or sin 95

To speak a truth. If he be slain, [say so;]
The tongue offends not that reports his death;
And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news 100
Hath but a losing office, and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Rememb'red tolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe 105

That which I would to God I had not seen;
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance, wearied and out-
breath'd,

To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat
down

The never-daunted Percy to the earth, 110
From whence with life he never more sprung
up.

In few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd courage in his troops;
For from his metal was his party steel'd; 115
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead.
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed, 120

So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss, Lend to this weight such lightness with their
fear

That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
Fly from the field. Then was that noble
Worcester 125

Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring
sword

Had three times slain the appearance of the King,

Gan vail his stomach and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs, and in his flight, 130

Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is that the King hath won, and hath sent out
A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmoreland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn. 135

In poison there is physic; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me
sick,

Being sick, have in some measure made me
well.

And as the wretch, whose fever-weak'n'd
joints, 140

Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life,
Impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs, Weak'n'd with grief, being now enrag'd with
grief,

Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice crutch! 145

A scaly gauntlet now with joints of steel
Must glove this hand; and hence, thou sickly quoif!

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron; and approach
The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare
bring 151

To frown upon the enrag'd Northumberland!
Let heaven kiss earth! Now let not Nature's
hand

Keep the wild flood confin'd! Let order die!
And let this world no longer be a stage 155

To feed contention in a ling'ring act;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms, that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead! 160

[Tra.] This strained passion doth you wrong,
my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet Earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er

To stormy passion, must perforce decay. 165

[You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And sum'm'd the account of chance, before you
said,

"Let us make head." It was your presumise,
That, in the dole of blows, your son might drop.

You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge, 170
More likely to fall in than to get o'er;
You were advis'd his flesh was capable
Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit
Would lift him where most trade of danger
rang'd;

Yet did you say, "Go forth!" and none of this, 174
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
The stiff-borne action. What hath then befallen,

Or what hath this bold enterprise brought
forth,

More than that being which was like to be?

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this loss 180

Knew that we ventur'd on such dangerous seas
That if we wrought out life 't was ten to one;
And yet we ventur'd, for the gain propos'd
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd;
And since we are o'erset, venture again, 185
Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.

Mor. 'Tis more than time; and, my most noble lord,

I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,
[The gentle Archbishop of York is up
With well-appointed powers. He is a man 190
Who with a double surety binds his followers.

My lord your son had only but the corpse,
But shadows and the shows of men, to fight;
For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls; 195

And they did fight with queasiness, constrain'd,
As men drink potions, that their weapons only Seem'd on our side; but, for their spirits and souls,

This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
As fish are in a pond. But now the Bishop 200
Turns insurrection to religion.

Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,
He's follow'd both with body and with mind;
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones; 205

Derives from heaven his quarrel and his cause;
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke;
And more and less do flock to follow him.]

North. I knew of this before; but, to speak truth, 210

This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me; and counsel every man
The aptest way for safety and revenge.

Get posts and letters, and make friends with speed, —

Never so few, and never yet more need. 215
[Exeunt.]

SCENE [II. London. A street.]

Enter FALSTAFF, with his Page bearing his sword and buckler.

Fal. Sirrah, you giant, what says the doctor to my water?

Page. He said, sir, the water itself was a good healthy water; but, for the party that ow'd it, he might have moe diseases than he knew for. 6

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me. The brain of this foolish-compounded clay man, is not able to invent anything that intends to laughter, more than I invent or is invented on me. I am not only witty in myself, but [10 the cause that wit is in other men. I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath over-whelm'd all her litter but one. If the Prince put thee into my service for any other reason than to set me off, why then I have no judge- [15 ment. Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels. I was never mann'd with an agate till now; but I will inset you neither in gold nor silver, but in vile apparel, and send you back [20 again to your master, for a jewel, — the juvenal, the Prince your master, whose chin is not yet fiedg'd. I will sooner have a beard grow in the palm of my hand than he shall get one off his cheek; and yet he will not stick to say his [25 face is a face royal. God may finish it when he will, 't is not a hair amiss yet. He may keep it still at a face royal, for a barber shall never earn sixpence out of it; and yet he'll be crowing as if he had writ man ever since his [30 father was a bachelor. He may keep his own grace, but he's almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said Master Dommelton about the satin for my short cloak and my slops? 34

Page. He said, sir, you should procure him better assurance than Bardolph. He would not take his hand and yours. He lik'd not the security. 38

Fal. Let him be damn'd like the glutton!
Pray God his tongue be hotter! A whoreson Achitophel! a rascally yea-for-sooth knave!
to bear a gentleman in hand, and then stand upon security! The whoreson smooth-pates do now wear nothing but high shoes, and bunches of keys at their girdles; and if a man is through with them in honest taking up, then [45 they must stand upon security. I had as lief they would put ratsbane in my mouth as offer to stop it with security. I look'd 'a should have sent me two and twenty yards of satin, as I am a true knight, and he sends me security. Well, [50 he may sleep in security; for he hath the horn of abundance, and yet the lightness of his wife shines through it; and yet cannot he see, though he have his own lanthorn to light him.
Where's Bardolph? 55

Page. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your worship a horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paul's, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield. An I could get me but a wife in the stews, I were mann'd, hors'd, [61 and wiv'd.

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE and SERVANT.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that committed the Prince for striking him about Bardolph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him. 65

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Serv. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the robbery? 68

Serv. He, my lord; but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is now going with some charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Ch. Just. What, to York? Call him back again. 75

Serv. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder; my master is deaf. 79

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of anything good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; I must speak with him.

Serv. Sir John! 83

Fal. What! a young knave, and begging! Is there not wars? Is there not employment? Doth not the King lack subjects? Do not the rebels need soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it. 90

Serv. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? Setting my knighthood and my soldiiership aside, I had lied in my throat, if I had said so. 94

Serv. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiiership aside; and give me leave to tell you you lie in your throat if you say I am any other than an honest man. 98

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou get'st any leave of me, hang me; if thou tak'st leave, thou wert better be hang'd. You hunt counter; hence! avaunt! 103

Serv. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad. I heard say your lordship was sick; I hope your lordship goes abroad by [108] advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time in you; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to have a reverent care of your health. 114

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his Majesty is return'd with some discomfort from Wales. 119

Ch. Just. I talk not of his Majesty. You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his Highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you. 126

Fal. This apoplexy, as I take it, is a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship, a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? Be it as it is. 130

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study, and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen. It is a kind of deafness. 134

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease; for you hear not what I say to you.

[Fal.] Very well, my lord, very well. Rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of not marking, that I am troubled withal. 140

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician. 143

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient. Your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself. 149

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advis'd by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come. 155

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles himself in my belt cannot live in less.

Ch. Just. Your means is very slender, and your waste is great. 161

Fal. I would it were otherwise; I would my means were greater, and my waist slenderer.

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me. I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog. 166

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-heal'd wound. Your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill. You may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action. 171

Fal. My lord?

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so. Wake not a sleeping wolf.

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as smell a fox. 176

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord, all tallow. If I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth. 181

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair in your face but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravity, gravity, gravity.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. 186

Fal. Not so, my lord. Your ill angel is light; but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing; and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go. I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermongers' [190] times that true Valour is turned bear-herd; Pregnancy is made a tapster, and his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings; all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. [195] You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too. 300

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, a decreasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, [205] your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity? And will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John! 200

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hallooing and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not. The truth is, I am only old in judgement and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box of the ear that the Prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have check'd him for it, and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack. 222

Ch. Just. Well, God send the Prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him. 226

Ch. Just. Well, the King hath sever'd you [and Prince Harry]. I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the Archbishop and the Earl of Northumberland. 230

Fal. Yea, I thank your pretty sweet wit for it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my lady Peace at home, that our armies join not in a hot day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily. If it be a hot day, and [238] I brandish anything but a bottle, I would I might never spit white again. There is not a dangerous action can peep out his head but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever; but it was always yet the trick of our English [240] nation, if they have a good thing, to make it too common. If ye will needs say I am an old man, you should give me rest. I would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is. I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion. 247

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny, not a penny; you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well! Commend me to my cousin Westmoreland. 254

[Exeunt Chief Justice and Servant.]

Fal. If I do, flip me with a three-man beetle. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than 'a can part young limbs and lechery; but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinches the other, and so both the degrees prevent my curses. Boy! 260

Page. Sir?

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and two pence. 263

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse. Borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster; this to the Prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland; and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceiv'd the first white hair of my chin. [270] About it. You know where to find me. [Exit Page.] A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pox! for the one or the other plays the rogue with my great toe. 'Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension shall seem the more reasonable. A good wit will make use of anything. I will turn diseases to commodity. [Exit. 278

SCENE [III. York. The Archbishop's palace.]

Enter the ARCHBISHOP, the Lords HASTINGS, MOWBRAY, and BARDOLPH.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause and known our means;

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes.

And first, Lord Marshal, what say you to it?

Mowb. I well allow the occasion of our arms; 8

But gladly would be better satisfied

How in our means we should advance ourselves

To look with forehead bold and big enough

Upon the power and puissance of the King.

Hast. Our present musters grow upon the file 10

To five and twenty thousand men of choice; And our supplies live largely in the hope Of great Northumberland, whose bosom burns With an incensed fire of injuries.

L. Bard. The question then, Lord Hastings, standeth thus: 15

Whether our present five and twenty thousand May hold up head without Northumberland?

Hast. With him, we may.

L. Bard. Yea, marry, there's the point! But if without him we be thought too feeble, My judgement is, we should not step too far [20] [Till we had his assistance by the hand; For, in a theme so bloody-fac'd as this, Conjecture, expectation, and surmise Of aids uncertain should not be admitted].

Arch. 'Tis very true, Lord Bardolph; for indeed 25

It was young Hotspur's case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bard. It was, my lord; who lin'd himself with hope,

Eating the air, and promise of supply, Flatt'ring himself in project of a power

Much smaller than the smallest of his thoughts; And so, with great imagination 31

Proper to madmen, led his powers to death,

And winking leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But, by your leave, it never yet did hurt

To lay down likelihoods and forms of hope. 35

L. Bard. [Yes, if this present quality of war
Needed the instant action. A cause on foot
Lives so in hope as in an early spring
We see the appearing buds, which to prove fruit

Hope gives not so much warrant, as despair 40
That frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,

We first survey the plot, then draw the model;
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the erection;
Which if we find outweighs ability, 45
What do we then but draw anew the model
In fewer offices, or at least desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,

Which is almost to pluck a kingdom down
And set another up, should we survey 50
The plot of situation and the model,
Consent upon a sure foundation,
Question surveyors, know our own estate,
How able such a work to undergo,
To weigh against his opposite; or else] 55
We fortify in paper and in figures,
Using the names of men instead of men;
Like one that draws the model of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who, half through,

Gives o'er and leaves his part-created cost 60
A naked subject to the weeping clouds
And waste for churlish winter's tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes, yet likely of fair birth,

Should be still-born, and that we now possess'd
The utmost man of expectation, 65
I think we are a body strong enough,
Even as we are, to equal with the King.

L. Bard. What, is the King but five and twenty thousand?

Hast. To us no more; nay, not so much,
Lord Bardolph.

For his divisions, as the times do brawl, 70
Are in three heads: one power against the French,

And one against Glendower; perforce a third
Must take up us. So is the unfirm King
In three divided; and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness. 75

Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together

And come against us in full puissance,
Need not to be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
To French and Welsh he leaves his back un-
arm'd,

They saying him at the heels. Never fear
that. 80

L. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces
hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmore-
land;

Against the Welsh, himself and Harry Mon-
mouth;

But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice. 85

[Arch. Let us on,
And publish the occasion of our arms.

The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited.

An habitation giddy and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart. 90
O thou fond many, with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Boling-
broke,

Before he was what thou wouldst have him be!
And being now trimm'd in thine own desires,
Thou, heastly feeder, art so full of him, 95
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard;
And now thou wouldst eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these times? 100

They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him
die,

Are now become enamour'd on his grave.
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head
When through proud London he came sighing on
After the admired heels of Bolingbroke, 105
Cris't now, "O earth, yield us that king again,
And take thou this!" O thoughts of men accurs'd!

Past and to come seems best; things present worst.]

Mowb. Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?

Hast. We are Time's subjects, and Time bids be gone. [Exeunt. 110

ACT II

SCENE I. [London. A street.]

Enter HOSTESS, FANG [and his Boy with her,] and SNARE following.

Host. Master Fang, have you ent'red the action?

Fang. It is ent'red.

Host. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman? Will 'a stand to 't? 5

Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?

Host. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Fal-staff.

Host. Yea, good Master Snare; I have ent'red him and all. 11

Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives, for he will stab.

Host. Alas the day! take heed of him. He stabbd me in mine own house, [and that] most beastly. In good faith, 'a cares not what mischief he does, if his weapon be out. He will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child. 19

Fang. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither. I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once; an 'a come but within my vice, — 24

Host. I am undone by his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score.
Good Master Fang, hold him sure. Good Master

Snare, let him not scape. 'A comes continually to Pie-corner — saving your manhoods — to buy a saddle; and he is indicted to dinner to the Lubber's-head in Lumbert street, to [50] Master Smooth's the silk-man. I pray you, since my exion is ent'red and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, [55] and borne, and borne, and have been fubb'd off, and fubb'd off, and fubb'd off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass and a [60] beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsey-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare; do me, do me, do me your offices. 65

Enter FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? What's the matter?

Fang. [Sir John,] I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph; cut me off the villain's head. Throw the quean in the channel. 62

Host. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue! Murder, murder! Ah, thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the King's? Ah, thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller. 60

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Host. Good people, bring a rescue or two. Thou wo't, wo't thou? thou wo't, wo't ta? Do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hempseed! 64

Page. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you fustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, and his men.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? Keep the peace here, ho!

Host. Good my lord, be good to me. I beseech you, stand to me. 70

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what, are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business?

You should have been well on your way to York. Stand from him, fellow; wherefore hang'st thou upon him? 74

Host. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your Grace, I am a poor widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum? 75

Host. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all I have. He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his; but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights like the mare. 78

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie! what man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not asham'd to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own? 80

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Host. Marry, if thou wert an honest man, thyself and the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson week, [85] when the Prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not goodwife Keech, [90] the butcher's wife, come in then and call me gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mess of vinegar, telling us she had a good dish of prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat some; whereby I told thee they were ill for a green [95] wound? And didst thou not, when she was gone downstairs, desire me to be no more so familiarly with such poor people, saying that ere long they should call me madam? And didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy book-oath. Deny it, if thou canst. 113

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; and she says up and down the town that her eldest son is like you. She hath been in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you I may have redress against them. 118

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sauciness from you, [125] can thrust me from a level consideration. You have, as it appears to me, practis'd upon the easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and made her serve your uses both in purse and in person.

Host. Yea, in truth, my lord. 126

Ch. Just. Pray thee, peace. Pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villainy you have done with her. The one you may do with sterling money, and the other with current repentance. 132

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this sneak without reply. You call honourable boldness impudent sauciness; if a man will make curtsy and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty rememb'ed, I will not be your suitor. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty employment in the King's affairs. 140

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to do wrong; but answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess. 144

Enter GOWER.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what news?

Gow. The King, my lord, and Harry Prince of Wales

Are near at hand. The rest the paper tells.

Fal. As I am a gentleman.

Host. Faith, you said so before. 149

Fal. As I am a gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Host. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I must be fain to pawn both my plate and the tapestry of my dining-chambers. 154

Fal. Glasses, glasses, is the only drinking; and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, or the German hunting in water-work, is worth a thousand of these bed-hangers and these fly-bitten tapestries. Let it be ten pound, if thou canst. Come, an 't were not for thy humours, there's not a bet-¹⁶⁰ter wench in England. Go, wash thy face, and draw the action. Come, thou must not be in this humour with me; dost not know me? Come, come, I know thou wast set on to this. 165

Host. Pray thee, Sir John, let it be but twenty nobles. I' faith, I am loath to pawn my plate, so God save me, la!

Fal. Let it alone; I'll make other shift. You'll be a fool still. 170

Host. Well, you shall have it, though I pawn my gown. I hope you'll come to supper. You'll pay me altogether?

Fal. Will I live? [To Bardolph.] Go, with her, with her; hook on, hook on. 175

Host. Will you have Doll Tearsheet meet you at supper?

Fal. No more words; let's have her.

[Exeunt Hostess, Bardolph, Officers, and Boy.]

Ch. Just. I have heard better news.

Fal. What's the news, my lord? 180

Ch. Just. Where lay the King to-night?

Gow. At [Basingstoke], my lord.

Fal. I hope, my lord, all's well. What is the news, my lord?

Ch. Just. Come all his forces back? 185

Gow. No; fifteen hundred foot, five hundred horse,

Are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaster.

Against Northumberland and the Archbishop.

Fal. Let the King back from Wales, my noble lord?

Ch. Just. You shall have letters of me presently. 190

Come, go along with me, good Master Gower.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. What's the matter?

Fal. Master Gower, shall I entreat you with me to dinner? 195

Gow. I must wait upon my good lord here; I thank you, good Sir John.

Ch. Just. Sir John, you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in counties as you go. 200

Fal. Will you sup with me, Master Gower?

Ch. Just. What foolish master taught you these manners, Sir John?

Fal. Master Gower, if they become me not, he was a fool that taught them me. This is the right fencing grace, my lord; tap for tap, and so part fair. 207

Ch. Just. Now the Lord lighten thee! thou art a great fool. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [London. Another street.]

Enter PRINCE HENRY and POINS.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.
Poins. Is't come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attach'd one of so high blood. 4

Prince. Faith, it does me, though it discolors the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Dost it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition. 10

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got, for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name! or to ¹⁵know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast, viz., these, and those that were thy peach-colour'd ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts, as, one for superfluity, and another for use! ²⁰But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I; for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of the low countries have [made a shift to] eat ²⁵up thy holland. And God knows, whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom: but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened. 30

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have labour'd so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is?

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins? 35

Poins. Yes, faith; and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell. 41

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick; albeit I could tell to thee, as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend, I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject. 47

Prince. By this hand, thou think'st me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow. 54

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What wouldst thou think of me, if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite. 59

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks. Never a man's thought in the world keeps the road-way better than thine. Every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what acites your most worshipful thought to think so? 65

Poins. Why, because you have been so lewd and so much engrafted to Falstaff.

Prince. And to thee. 68

Poins. By this light, I am well spoke on; I can hear it with mine own ears. The worst that they can say of me is that I am a second brother and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and those two things, I confess, I cannot help. By the mass, here comes Bardolph. 74

Enter BARDOLPH and PAGE.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff. 'A had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not transform'd him ape.

Bard. God save your Grace!

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph! 79

Poins. Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? Wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is't such a matter to get a pottle-pot's maidenhead? 84

Page. 'A calls me e'en now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window. At last I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale-wife's [new] petticoat and so peep'd through.

Prince. Has not the boy profited? 90

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althæa's dream, away! 94

Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althæa dream'd she was delivered of a fire-brand; and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A crown's worth of good interpretation. There 'tis, boy. 100

Poins. O, that this [good] blossom could be kept from cankers! Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee.

Bard. An you do not make him hang'd among you, the gallows shall have wrong. 105

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my lord. He heard of your Grace's coming to town. There's a letter for you.

Poins. Deliver'd with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master? 110

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

Poins. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him. Though that be sick, it dies not. 114

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog, and he holds his place, for look you how he writes. 117

Poins. [Reads.] "John Falstaff, knight," — every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself; even like those that are kin to the King, for they never prick their finger but they say, "There's some of the King's blood spilt." "How comes that?" [124] says he, that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap, "I am the King's poor cousin, sir."

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But the letter: 128
"Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the King nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting."

Poins. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace! 138

"I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity."

Poins. He sure means brevity in breath, short-winded.

[Prince.] "I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins; for he misuses thy favours so much, that he swears thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou mayest; and so, farewell. 141

"Thine, by yea and no, which is as much as to say, as thou usest him, JACK FALSTAFF with my familiars, JOHN with my brothers and sisters, and SIR JOHN with all Europe." 146

Poins. My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty of his words. But do you use me thus, Ned? Must I marry your sister? 151

Poins. God send the wench no worse fortune! But I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Is your master here in London? 157

Bard. Yea, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? Doth the old boar feed in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in East-cheap. 162

Prince. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord, of the old church.

Prince. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quickly and Mistress Doll Tearsheet. 167

Prince. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kinswoman of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heifers are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon them, Ned, at supper? 173

Poins. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll follow you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph, no word to your master that I am yet come to town. There's for your silence. 178

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Prince. Fare you well; go. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] This Doll Tearsheet should be some road. 188

Poins. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Alban's and London.

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow himself to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen? ¹⁸⁸

Poins. Put on two leathern jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers. ¹⁹¹

Prince. From a God to a bull? a heavy descension! It was Jove's case. From a prince to a prentice? a low transformation! That shall be mine; for in everything the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. ¹⁹⁶

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Warkworth. Before the castle.]

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, LADY NORTHUMBERLAND, and LADY PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife, and gentle daughter,

Give even way unto my rough affairs;
Put not you on the visage of the times
And be like them to Percy troublesome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no more. ⁵

Do what you will; your wisdom be your guide.

North. Alas, sweet wife, my honour is at pawn;

And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.

Lady P. O yet, for God's sake, go not to these wars!

The time was, father, that you broke your word, ¹⁰

When you were more endear'd to it than now;
When your own Percy, when my heart's dear Harry,

Threw many a northward look to see his father
Bring up his powers; but he did long in vain.
Who then persuaded you to stay at home? ¹⁵
There were two honours lost, yours and your son's.

For yours, the God of heaven brighten it!
For his, it stuck upon him as the sun
In the grey vault of heaven, and by his light
Did all the chivalry of England move ²⁰
To do brave acts. He was indeed the glass
Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves.
[He had no legs, that practis'd not his gait;
And speaking thick, which nature made his blemish,

Became the accents of the valiant; ²⁵
For those that could speak low and tardily
Would turn their own perfection to abuse,
To seem like him; so that in speech, in gait,
In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood, ³⁰
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others. And him, O wondrous him!

O miracle of men! him did you leave,
Second to none, unseconded by you,
To look upon the hideous god of war ³⁵
In disadvantage; to abide a field
Where nothing but the sound of Hotspur's name

Did seem defensible: so you left him.
Never, O never, do his ghost the wrong
To hold your honour more precise and nice ⁴⁰
With others than with him! Let them alone.

The Marshal and the Archbishop are strong.
Had my sweet Harry had but half their numbers,

To-day might I, hanging on Hotspur's neck,
Have talk'd of Monmouth's grave.]

North. Beshrew your heart,
Fair daughter, you do draw my spirits from me ⁴⁵

With new lamenting ancient oversights.

But I must go and meet with danger there,

Or it will seek me in another place

And find me worse provided.

Lady N. O, fly to Scotland,
Till that the nobles and the armed commons ⁵¹
Have of their puissance made a little taste.

Lady P. If they get ground and vantage of the King,

Then join you with them, like a rib of steel,
To make strength stronger; but, for all our loves, ⁵⁵

First let them try themselves. So did your son;
He was so suff'ring; so came I a widow;
And never shall have length of life enough
To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes,
That it may grow and sprout as high as heaven,
For recordation to my noble husband. ⁶¹

North. Come, come, go in with me. 'Tis with my mind

As with the tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still stand, running neither way.
Fain would I go to meet the Archbishop, ⁶⁵

But many thousand reasons hold me back.

I will resolve for Scotland. There am I,
Till time and vantage crave my company.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [London. The Boar's-Head Tavern in Eastcheap.]

Enter two DRAWERS.

1. Draw. What the devil hast thou brought there? Apple-johns? Thou know'st Sir John cannot endure an apple-john. ³

2. Draw. Mass, thou say'st true. The Prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns, and, putting off his hat, said, "I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, wither'd knights." It anger'd him to the heart; but he hath forgot that. ¹⁰

1. Draw. Why, then, cover, and set them down; and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise. Mistress Tearsheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch! The room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight. ¹⁵

2. Draw. Sirrah, here will be the Prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it. Bardolph hath brought word, ²⁰

1. Draw. By the mass, here will be old utis; it will be an excellent stratagem.

2. Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak.

[Exit.]

Enter HOSTESS and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. I' faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperality. Your ²⁵ pulsidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la! But, i' faith, you have drunk too much canaries; and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood ere one can say, "What's this?" How do you now?

Dol. Better than I was. Hem!

Host. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo, here comes Sir John.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. [Singing.] "When Arthur first in court"—Empty the jordan. [Exit 1. Drawer.] —[Singing.] "And was a worthy king." How now, Mistress Doll!

Host. Sick of a calm; yea, good faith.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm, they are sick.

Dol. A pox damn you, you muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Dol. I make them? Gluttony and diseases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the gluttony, you help to make the diseases, Doll. We catch of you, Doll, we catch of you. Grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Dol. Yea, joy, our chains and our jewels.

Fal. Your brooches, pearls, and ouches. For to serve bravely is to come halting off, you know; to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charg'd chambers bravely, —

Dol. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Host. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord. You are both, i' good truth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confimities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you; you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Dol. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshead? There's a whole merchant's venture of Bourdeaux stuff in him; you have not seen a hulk better stuff'd in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack. Thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares.

Re-enter [FIRST] DRAWER.

[1.] Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Dol. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither. It is the foul-mouth'd st rogue in England.

Host. If he swagger, let him not come here; no, by my faith. I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers. I am in good name and fame with the very best. Shut the door; there comes no swaggerers here. I have not liv'd all this while, to have swaggering now. Shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Host. Pray ye, pacify yourself, Sir John. There comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear? It is mine ancient.

Host. Tilly-fally, Sir John, ne'er tell me; and your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, t' other day; and, as he said to me, 't was no longer ago than Wednesday last, "I' good faith, neighbour Quickly," says he; Master Dumble, our minister, was by then; "neighbour Quickly," says he, "receive those that are civil; for," said he, "you are in an ill name." Now 'a said so, I can tell whereupon; "for," says he, "you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive. Receive," says he, "no swaggering companions." There comes none here. You would bless you to hear what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, i' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound. He'll not swagger with a Barbary hen, if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer.

[Exit 1. Drawer.]

Host. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth. I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Dol. So you do, hostess.

Host. Do I? yea, in very truth, do I, an't were an aspen leaf. I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack; do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Host. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets. I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I will charge you.

Dol. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, cheating, lack-linen mate! Away, you mouldy rogue, away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Dol. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you filthy bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my knife in your mouldy chaps, an you play the saucy cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rascal! you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since when, I pray you, sir? God's light, with two points on your shoulder? Much!

Pist. God let me not live, but I will murder your ruff for this.

Fal. No more, Pistol; I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our company, Pistol.

Host. No, good Captain Pistol; not here, sweet captain.

Dol. Captain! thou abominable damn'd cheater, art thou not asham'd to be call'd captain? An captains were of my mind, they would truncheon you out, for taking their names upon you before you have earn'd them. You a captain! you slave, for what? For tearing ¹⁵⁵ a poor whore's ruff in a bawdy-house? He a captain! Hang him, rogue! he lives upon mouldy stew'd prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's light, these villains will make the word as odious as the word "occupy"; ¹⁶⁰ which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted; therefore captains had need look to 't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll. ¹⁶⁵

Pist. Not I. I tell thee what, Corporal Bardolph, I could tear her. I'll be reveng'd of her.

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damn'd first; to Pluto's damn'd lake, by this hand, to the infernal deep, with Erebus and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, say I. Down, down, dogs! down, fautors! Have we not Hiren here? ¹⁷³

Host. Good Captain Peesel, be quiet; 't is very late, i' faith. I beseech you now, aggravate your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! Shall pack-horses

And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia,
Which cannot go but thirty mile a-day, ¹⁷⁹
Compare with Cæsars and with Cannibals
And Trojan Greeks? Nay, rather damn them with King Cerberus, and let the welkin roar.

Shall we fall foul for toys?

Host. By my troth, captain, these are very bitter words. ¹⁸⁵

Bard. Be gone, good ancient. This will grow to a brawl anon.

Pist. [Die] men like dogs! Give crowns like pins! Have we not Hiren here? ¹⁸⁹

Host. O' my word, captain, there's none such here. What the good-year! do you think I would deny her? For God's sake, be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calipolis. Come, give 's some sack. ¹⁹⁴

"Si fortune me tormente, sperato me contento."
Fear we broadsides? No, let the fiend give fire.

Give me some sack; and, sweetheart, lie thou there. ^[Laying down his sword.]

Come we to full points here; and are etceteras nothing?

Fal. Pistol, I would be quiet. ¹⁹⁹

Pist. Sweet knight, I kiss thy neaf. What! we have seen the seven stars.

Dol. For God's sake, thrust him downstairs. I cannot endure such a fustian rascal.

Pist. Thrust him downstairs! Know we not Galloway nags? ²⁰⁵

Fal. Quoit him down, Bardolph, like a shove-groat shilling. Nay, an 'a do nothing but speak nothing, 'a shall be nothing here.

Bard. Come, get you downstairs.

Pist. What! shall we have incision? Shall we imbrue? ^[Snatching up his sword.] ²¹⁰

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why, then, let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds

Untwine the Sisters Three! Come, Atropos, I say!

Host. Here's goodly stuff toward! ²¹⁴

Fal. Give me my rapier, boy.

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, I pray thee, do not draw.

Fal. Get you downstairs. ²¹⁸
^[Drawing, and driving Pistol out.]

Host. Here's a goodly tumult! I'll forswear keeping house, afore I'll be in these tiritris and frights. So; murder, I warrant now. Alas, alas! put up your naked weapons, put up your naked weapons. ²²³

^[Exeunt Pistol and Bardolph.]

Dol. I pray thee, Jack, be quiet; the rascal's gone. Ah, you whoreson little valiant villain, you!

Host. Are you not hurt i' the groin? Methought 'a made a shrewd thrust 'at your belly. ²²⁸

^[Re-enter BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Have you turn'd him out o' doors?

Bard. Yea, sir; the rascal's drunk. You have hurt him, sir, i' the shoulder.

Fal. A rascal! to brave me! ²³²

Dol. Ah, you sweet little rogue, you! Alas, poor ape, how thou sweat'st! Come, let me wipe thy face. Come on, you whoreson chops. Ah, rogue! i' faith, I love thee. Thou art as valorous as Hector of Troy, worth five of Agamemnon, and ten times better than the Nine Worthies. Ah, villain! ²³⁹

Fal. A rascally slave! I will toss the rogue in a blanket.

Dol. Do, an thou dar'st for thy heart. An thou dost, I'll canvass thee between a pair of sheets. ²⁴⁴

^{Enter Music.}

Page. The music is come, sir.

Fal. Let them play. Play, sirs. Sit on my knee, Doll. A rascal bragging slave! The rogue fled from me like quicksilver. ²⁴⁸

Dol. I' faith, and thou follow'dst him like a church. Thou whoreson little tidy Bartholomew boar-pig, when wilt thou leave fighting o' days and foining o' nights, and begin to patch up thine old body for heaven? ²⁵³

^{Enter [behind,] PRINCE HENRY and POINS, disguised.}

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a death's-head. Do not bid me remember mine end?

Dol. Sirrah, what humour's the Prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow. 'A would have made a good pantler; 'a would ha' chipp'd bread well. ²⁵⁹

Dol. They say Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit? Hang him, baboon! His wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard;

there's no more conceit in him than is in a mallet. 253

Dol. Why does the Prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and he plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides the wild-mare with the boys, and jumps upon join'd stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boots very smooth, like unto the sign of The Leg, and [270] breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties 'a has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the Prince admits him. For the Prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoirdupois. 277

Prince. Would not this nave of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

Prince. Look, wh'er the wither'd elder hath not his poll claw'd like a parrot. 282

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! What says the almanac to that? 287

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lipping to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering bushes.

Dol. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart. 293

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Dol. I love thee better than I love e'er a scurvy young boy of them all. 296

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday. Shalt have a cap to-morrow. A merry song, come! It grows late; we'll to bed. Thou't forget me when I am gone. 300

Dol. By my troth, thou't set me a-weeping, an thou say'st so. Prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis. 305

Prince. } Anon, anon, sir.

Poins. }

[Coming forward.]

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the King's? And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead! 310

Fal. A better than thou. I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears. 314

Host. O, the Lord preserve thy Grace! By my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu, are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome. 321

Dol. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat. 325

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Host. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth. 330

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea, and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill. You knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience. 335

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilful abuse, and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal, o' mine honour; no abuse. 340

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Poins. No abuse? 344

Fal. No abuse, Ned, i' the world; honest Ned, none. I disprais'd him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned, none; no, faith, boys, none. 351

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is thy boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked? 357

Poins. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath prick'd down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast malt-worms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil blinds him too. 363

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money; and whether she be damn'd for that, I know not.

Host. No, I warrant you. 369

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl. 374

Host. All victuallers do so. What's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, gentlewoman,—

Dol. What says your Grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against. [Peto knocks at door.] 380

Host. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The King your father is at Westminster; 386

And there are twenty weak and wearied posts
Come from the north; and, as I came along,
I met and overtook a dozen captains,
Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns,

And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame, 390

So idly to profane the precious time,
When tempest of commotion, like the south
Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt
And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.
Give me my sword and cloak. Falstaff, good night. 395

[Exeunt Prince Henry, Poins, Peto, and Bardolph.]

Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpick'd. [Knocking within.] More knocking at the door!

[Re-enter BARDOLPH.]

How now! what's the matter? 400

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently;

A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. [To the Page.] Pay the musicians, sirrah. Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, my good wenches, how men of merit are sought after. The undeserver may sleep, when the man of action is call'd on. Farewell, good wenches; if I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go. 408

Dol. I cannot speak. If my heart be not ready to burst, — well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

[Exeunt Falstaff [and Bardolph].]

Host. Well, fare thee well. I have known thee these twenty-nine years, come peascod-time; but an honest and truer-hearted man, — well, fare thee well. 415

Bard. [Within.] Mistress Tearsheet!

Host. What's the matter?

Bard. [Within.] Bid Mistress Tearsheet come to my master.

Host. O, run, Doll, run; run, good Doll. Come. (She comes blubbered.) Yea, will you come, Doll? [Exeunt. 421

ACT III

SCENE I. [Westminster. The palace.]

Enter the KING in his nightgown, with a Page.

King. Go call the Earls of Surrey and of Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'er-read these letters,

And well consider of them. Make good speed.

[Exit Page.]

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep! O Sleep, O gentle Sleep, 425

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?

Why rather, Sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, 430
And hush'd with buzzing night-flies to thy slumber,

Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god, why li'st thou with the vile 435
In loathsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch

A watch-case or a common 'larum-bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge 440

And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take the ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads and hanging them

With deafening clamour in the slippery clouds,
That, with the hurly, death itself awakes? 445

Canst thou, O partial Sleep, give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,

And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot,

Deny it to a king? Then happy low, lie down! 450

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter WARWICK and SURREY.

War. Many good morrows to your Majesty!

King. Is it good morrow, lords?

War. 'Tis one o'clock, and past.

King. Why, then, good morrow to you all, my lords. 455

Have you read o'er the letters that I sent you?

War. We have, my liege.

King. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom

How foul it is; what rank diseases grow,
And with what danger, near the heart of it. 460

War. It is but as a body yet distemper'd;
Which to his former strength may be restor'd

With good advice and little medicine.

My Lord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

King. O God! that one might read the book of fate, 465

And see the revolution of the times
Make mountains level, and the continent,

Wearied of solid firmness, melt itself

Into the sea! and, other times, to see

The beauly girdle of the ocean 470
Too wide for Neptune's hips; how chances

mock,

And changes fill the cup of alteration

With divers liquors! O, if this were seen,

The happiest youth, viewing his progress through,

What perils past, what crosses to ensue, 475
Would shut the book, and sit him down and die.

'Tis not ten years gone

Since Richard and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together, and in two years after

Were they at wars. It is but eight years since 480

This Percy was the man nearest my soul,

Who like a brother toil'd in my affairs
And laid his love and life under my foot;
Yea, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard Gave him defiance. But which of you was by—

You, cousin Nevil, as I may remember—

[To Warwick.]

When Richard, with his eye brimful of tears,
Then check'd and rated by Northumberland,
Did speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
"Northumberland, thou ladder by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne,—"
Though then, God knows, I had no such intent,
But that necessity so bow'd the state
That I and greatness were compell'd to kiss;—
"The time shall come," thus did he follow it,
"The time will come, that foul sin, gathering
head,

Shall break into corruption;" so went on,
Foretelling this same time's condition
And the division of our amity.

War. There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times deceas'd;
The which observ'd, a man may prophesy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things
As yet not come to life, who in their seeds
And weak beginnings lie intresured.
Such things become the hatch and brood of
time;

And by the necessary form of this
King Richard might create a perfect guess
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater false-
ness;

Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

King. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities.
And that same word even now cries out on us.
They say the Bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord.
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the feared. Please it your
Grace

To go to bed. Upon my soul, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth
Shall bring this prize in very easily.
To comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your Majesty hath been this fortnight ill,
And these unseason'd hours perforce must add

Unto your sickness.

King. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Gloucestershire. Before Justice Shallow's house.]

*Enter SHALLOW and SILENCE [meeting];
MOULDY, SHADOW, WART, FEEBLE, BULL-
CALF [a Servant or two with them].*

Shal. Come on, come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir. An early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? And your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas, a black ousel, cousin Shallow!

Shal. By yea and no, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. 'A must, then, to the Inns o' Court shortly. I was once of Clement's Inn, where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were call'd lusty Shallow then,
cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was call'd anything;
and I would have done anything indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squele, a Cots'ol' man. You had not four such swingebucklers in all the Inns o' Court again; and I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were and had the best of them all at commandment. Then was Jack Falstaff, now
Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray,
Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. Cousin, this Sir John that comes hither anon about soldiers?

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same. I see him break Skogan's head at the court-gate, when 'a was a crack not thus high; and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfish, a fruiterer, behind Gray's Inn.
Jesu, Jesu, the mad days that I have spent!
And to see how many of my old acquaintance are dead!

Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure. Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bul-locks at Stamford fair?

Sil. By my troth, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu, Jesu, dead! 'A drew a good bow; and dead! 'A shot a fine shoot. John o' Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! 'a would have clapp'd 'i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft at fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be, a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter BARDOLPH and one with him.

Good morrow, honest gentlemen.

Bard. I beseech you, which is Justice
Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the King's justices of the peace. What is your good pleasure with me? 85

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff, a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir. I knew him a good backword man. How doth the good knight? May I ask how my lady his wife doth? 71

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated! it is good; yea, indeed, is it. Good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodo. Very good; a good phrase. 79

Bard. Pardon, sir; I have heard the word. Phrase call you it? By this day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. [64 Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or when a man is, being, whereby 'a may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look, here comes [80 good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you like well and bear your years very well. Welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think? 85

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome. 100

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provided me here half a dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you. 105

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll? where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, let me see. So, so, so, so, so, so, so; yea, marry, sir. Ralph Mouldy! Let them appear as I call; let them do so, let them do so. Let me see; where is Mouldy? 111

Moul. Here, an it please you.

Shal. What think you, Sir John? A good-limb'd fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy? 115

Moul. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert us'd.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! Things that are mouldy lack use. Very singular good! In faith, well said, Sir John, very well said.

Fal. Prick him. 121

Moul. I was prick'd well enough before, an you could have let me alone. My old dame will be undone now for one to do her husbandry and her drudgery. You need not to have prick'd me; there are other men fitter to go out than I. 126

Fal. Go to; peace, Mouldy; you shall go. Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Moul. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace; stand aside; know you where you are? For the other, Sir John, let me see. Simon Shadow! 132

Fal. Yea, marry, let me have him to sit under; he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou? 137

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow. So the son of the female is the shadow of the male. It is often so, indeed; but much of the father's substance! 143

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer. Prick him, for we have a number of shadows to fill up the muster-book. 145

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Fal. Where's he?

Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart? 150

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Shal. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel is built upon his back and the whole frame stands upon pins. Prick him no more. 155

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you can do it; I commend you well. Francis Feeble!

Fee. Here, sir.

[Fal.] What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir. 161

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. You may; but if he had been a man's tailor, he'd ha' prick'd you. Wilt thou make as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou hast done in a woman's petticoat? 166

Fee. I will do my good will, sir; you can have no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well said, courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. Prick the woman's tailor. Well, Master Shallow; deep, Master Shallow. 173

Fee. I would Wart might have gone, sir.

Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that thou mightst mend him and make him fit to go. I cannot put him to a private soldier that is the leader of so many thousands. Let that suffice, most forcible Feeble.

Fee. It shall suffice, sir. 180

Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble. Who is next?

Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!

Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.

Bull. Here, sir. 185

Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain, —

Fal. What, dost thou roar before thou art prick'd? 190

Bull. O Lord, sir! I am a diseased man.

Fal. What disease hast thou?

Bull. A whoreson cold, sir, a cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the King's affairs upon his coronation-day, sir. 195

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a gown. We will have away thy cold; and I will take such order that thy friends shall ring for thee. Is here all? 199

Shal. Here is two more call'd than your number; you must have to four here, sir. And so, I pray you, go in with me to dinner.

Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I cannot tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by my troth, Master Shallow. 205

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we lay all night in the windmill in Saint George's field?

Fal. No more of that, [good] Master Shallow [no more of that].

Shal. Ha! 't was a merry night. And is Jane Nightwork alive? 211

Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.

Shal. She never could away with me.

Fal. Never, never; she would always say she could not abide Master Shallow. 215

Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the heart. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she hold her own well?

Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow. 219

Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose but be old; certain she's old; and had Robin Nightwork by old Nightwork before I came to Clement's Inn.

Sil. That's fifty-five year ago. 224

Shal. Ha, cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen that that this knight and I have seen! Ha, Sir John, said I well?

Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow. 229

Shal. That we have, that we have, that we have; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was "Hem, boys!" Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner. Jesu, the days that we have seen! Come, come. 234

[Exeunt [Falstaff and the Justices].]

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend; and here's four Harry ten shillings in French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, I had as lief be hang'd, sir, as go; and yet, for mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, because I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends; else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much. 239

Bard. Go to; stand aside. 243

Moul. And, good master corporal captain, for my [old] dame's sake, stand my friend. She has nobody to do anything about her when I am gone; and she is old, and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside. 249

Fee. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind. An't be my destiny, so; an't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next. 255

Bard. Well said; th' art a good fellow.
Fee. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter FALSTAFF and the JUSTICES.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four of which you please.

Bard. [Aside to Fal.] Sir, a word with you. I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf. 261

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry, then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow. 267

Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf! for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service; and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it. I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong. They are your likeliest men, and I would have you serv'd with the best. 274

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thews, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is. 'A shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that glibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-fac'd fellow, Shadow; give me this man. He presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And for a retreat; how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O, give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph. 280

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So: very well; go to; very good, exceeding good. O, give me always a little, lean, old, chapt, bald shot. Well said, i' faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab. Hold, there's a tester for thee. 295

Shal. He is not his craft's master; he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn, — I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show, — there was a little quiver fellow, and 'a would manage you his piece thus; and 'a would about and about, and come you in and come you in. "Rah, tah, tah," would 'a say; "bounce" would 'a say; and away again would 'a go, and again would 'a come. I shall ne'er see such a fellow. 305

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow. God keep you, Master Silence; I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both; I thank you. I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats. 311

Shal. Sir John, the Lord bless you! God prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house; let our old acquaintance be renewed. Peradventure I will with ye to the court. 316

Fal. 'Fore God, would you would [Master Shallow].

Shal. Go to; I have spoke at a word. God keep you! ³³⁰

Fal. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen. [Exit Justices.] On, Bardolph; lead the men away. [Exit Bardolph, recruits, etc.] As I return, I will fetch off these justices. I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of ³³⁵ lying! This same starv'd justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth, and the feats he hath done about Turn-bull Street; and every third word a lie, duer paid to the hearer than the Turk's tribute. ³⁴⁰ I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring. When 'a was naked, he was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carv'd upon it with a knife. 'A was so for- ³⁴⁵ lorn, that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible. 'A was the very genius of famine, yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake. 'A came ever in the rearward of the fashion, and sung those tunes to the overscutch'd huswives that he ³⁵⁰ heard the carmen whistle, and sware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John o' Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn 'a ³⁵⁵ ne'er saw him but once in the Tilt-yard; and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it, and told John o' Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an ³⁶⁰ eel-skin. The case of a treble hautboy was a mansion for him, a court; and now has he land and beeves. Well, I'll be acquainted with him, if I return; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philosopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I ³⁶⁵ see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [Yorkshire.] Within the Forest of Gaultree.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, MOWBRAY, HASTINGS [and others].

Arch. What is this forest call'd?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an 't shall please your Grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords; and send discoverers forth

To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd New-dated letters from Northumberland; Their cold intent, tenour, and substance, thus: Here doth he wish his person, with such powers

As might hold sortance with his quality, The which he could not levy; whereupon He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes, To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayers That your attempts may overlive the hazard ¹⁵ And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowb. Thus do the hopes we have in him touch ground

And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Hast. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile, In goodly form comes on the enemy; ²⁰ And, by the ground they hide, I judge their number

Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowb. The just proportion that we gave them out.

Let us sway on and face them in the field.

Arch. What well-appointed leader fronts us here? ²⁵

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Mowb. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,

The Prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, in peace,

What doth concern your coming.

West. [Then, my lord,]

Unto your Grace do I in chief address ³¹

The substance of my speech. If that rebellion

Came like itself, in base and abject routs,

Led on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,

And countenanc'd by boys and beggary, — ³⁶

I say, if damnd commotion so appear'd,

In his true, native, and most proper shape,

You, reverend father, and these noble lords

Had not been here, to dress the ugly form

Of base and bloody insurrection ⁴⁰

With your fair honours. You, Lord Archbishop,

Whose see is by a civil peace maintain'd,

Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath

touch'd,

Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd,

Whose white investments figure innocence, ⁴⁵

The dove, and very blessed spirit of peace,

Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself

Out of the speech of peace that bears such

grace,

Into the harsh and boist'rous tongue of war;

Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood, ⁵⁰

Your pens to lances and your tongue divine

To a loud trumpet and a point of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.

Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd,

And with our surfeiting and wanton hours ⁵⁵

Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,

And we must bleed for it; of which disease

Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.

10.

But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
 I take not on me here as a physician, 60
 Nor do I as an enemy to peace
 Troop in the throngs of military men;
 But rather show awhile like fearful war
 To diet rank minds sick of happiness,
 And purge the obstructions which begin to stop 65

Our very veins of life. Hear me more plainly.
 I have in equal balance justly weigh'd
 What wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs
 we suffer,

And find our griefs heavier than our offences.
 We see which way the stream of time doth run, 70

And are enforc'd from our most quiet there
 By the rough torrent of occasion;
 And have the summary of all our griefs,
 When time shall serve, to show in articles;
 Which long ere this we offer'd to the King, 75
 And might by no suit gain our audience.
 When we are wrong'd and would unfold our
 griefs,

We are deny'd access unto his person
 Even by those men that most have done us
 wrong.]

The dangers of the days but newly gone, 80
 Whose memory is written on the earth
 With yet appearing blood, and the examples
 Of every minute's instance, present now,
 Hath put us in these ill-beseeming arms,
 Not to break peace or any branch of it, 85
 But to establish here a peace indeed,
 Concurring both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal deny'd?

Wherein have you been galled by the King? 89
 What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you,
 That you should seal this lawless bloody book
 Of forg'd rebellion with a seal divine
 And consecrate commotion's bitter edge?

Arch. My brother general, the commonwealth,

To brother born an household cruelty. 95
 I make my quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress;
 Or if there were, it not belongs to you.

Mowb. Why not to him in part, and to us all
 That feel the bruises of the days before, 100
 And suffer the condition of these times
 To lay a heavy and unequal hand
 Upon our honours?

West. [O, my good Lord Mowbray,
 Construe the times to their necessities,
 And you shall say indeed, it is the time, 105
 And not the King, that doth you injuries.

Yet for your part, it not appears to me
 Either from the King or in the present time
 That you should have an inch of any ground
 To build a grief on. Were you not restor'd 110
 To all the Duke of Norfolk's signories,
 Your noble and right well-remember'd father's?

Mowb. What thing, in honour, had my father
 lost,

That need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me?
 The King that lov'd him, as the state stood
 then, 115

Was, force perforce, compell'd to banish him;
 And then that Henry Bolingbroke and he,
 Being mounted and both roused in their seats,
 Their neighing coursers daring of the spur,
 Their armed staves in charge, their beavers
 down, 120

Their eyes of fire sparkling through sights of steel,

And the loud trumpet blowing them together,
 Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd

My father from the breast of Bolingbroke, 124
 O, when the King did throw his warder down —
 His own life hung upon the staff he threw, —
 Then threw he down himself and all their lives
 That by indictment and by dint of sword
 Have since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you know not what. 130

The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
 In England the most valiant gentleman.
 Who knows on whom Fortune would then have smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there,
 He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry; 135
 For all the country in a general voice Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and
 love

Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on
 And bless'd and grac'd and did, more than the
 King, —]

But this is mere digression from my purpose.
 Here come I from our princely general 141
 To know your griefs; to tell you from his
 Grace

That he will give you audience; and wherein
 It shall appear that your demands are just, 145
 You shall enjoy them, everything set off
 That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer;

And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so;
 This offer comes from mercy, not from fear. 150
 For, lo! within a ken our army lies,
 Upon mine honour, all too confident
 To give admittance to a thought of fear.

Our battle is more full of names than yours,
 Our men more perfect in the use of arms, 155
 Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
 Then reason will our hearts should be as good.
 Say you not then our offer is compell'd.

Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no
 parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offence. 160

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hath the Prince John a full commission,

In very ample virtue of his father,
 To hear and absolutely to determine
 Of what conditions we shall stand upon? 165

West. That is intended in the general's name.
 I urge you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland, this schedule,

For this contains our general grievances.

Each several article herein redress'd, 170
All members of our cause, both here and hence,

That are insinew'd to this action,
Acquitted by a true substantial form
And present execution of our wills 175
To us and to our purposes confin'd,
We come within our awful banks again
And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet;
And either end in peace, which God so frame!
Or to the place of difference call the swords 181
Which must decide it. [Exit West.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.
Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand.
Hast. Fear you not that. If we can make our peace 185

Upon such large terms and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be such
That every slight and false-derived cause, 190
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason
Shall to the King taste of this action;
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff 195

And good from bad find no partition.
Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this: the King is weary

Of dainty and such picking grievances;
For he hath found to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life, 200
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance; for full well he knows
He cannot so precisely weed this land 205
As his misdoubts present occasion.
His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend;
So that this land, like an offensive wife, 210
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the King hath wasted all his rods 215

On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement;
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true;
And therefore be assured, my good Lord Marshal, 220

If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The Prince is here at hand. Pleaseth your lordship 225
To meet his Grace just distance 'tween our armies.

Mowb. Your Grace of York, in God's name, then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his Grace. My lord, we come. [Exeunt.

[SCENE II. Another part of the forest.]

Enter [from one side, MOWBRAY, attended; afterwards the ARCHBISHOP, HASTINGS, and others: from the other side,] PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER [and WESTMORELAND; Officers, and others with them].

Lan. You are well encount'ed here, my cousin Mowbray.

Good day to you, gentle Lord Archbishop;
And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better show'd with you
When that your flock, assembled by the bell, 5
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man,
Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death. 10
That man that sits within a monarch's heart,
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the King,
Alack, what mischiefs might he set abroad
In shadow of such greatness! With you, Lord Bishop, 15

It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken
How deep you were within the books of God?
To us the speaker in His parliament;
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer 20
Between the grace, the sanctities, of Heaven
And our dull workings. O, who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of Heaven,
As a false favourite doth his prince's name, 25
In deeds dishonourable? You have ta'en up,
Under the counterfeit zeal of God,
The subjects of His substitute, my father,
And both against the peace of Heaven and him

Have here upswarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster,
I am not here against your father's peace; 31
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland,
The time misord'ed doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. I sent your Grace 35
The parcels and particulars of our grief,
The which hath been with scorn shov'd from the court,

Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd
asleep

With grant of our most just and right desires; 40

And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fortunes

To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall down,
We have supplies to second our attempt. 45
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel up
Whiles England shall have generation.

Lan. You are too shallow, Hastings, much too shallow, 50

To sound the bottom of the after-times.

West. Pleaseth your Grace to answer them directly

How far forth you do like their articles.

Lan. I like them all, and do allow them well,

And swear here, by the honour of my blood, 55
My father's purposes have been mistook,
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redress'd;

Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please you, 60

Discharge your powers unto their several counties,

As we will ours; and here between the armies
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens home

Of our restored love and amity. 65

Arch. I take your princely word for these redresses.

Lan. I give it you, and will maintain my word;

And thereupon I drink unto your Grace.

[Hast.] Go, captain, and deliver to the army
This news of peace. Let them have pay, and part. 70

I know it will well please them. Hie thee, captain. [Exit [Officer].]

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland.

West. I pledge your Grace; and, if you knew what pains

I have bestow'd to breed this present peace,
You would drink freely. But my love to ye 75
Shall show itself more openly hereafter.

Arch. I do not doubt you.

West. I am glad of it.

Health to my lord and gentle cousin, Mowbray,

Mowb. You wish me health in very happy season;

For I am, on the sudden, something ill. 80

Arch. Against ill chances men are ever merry;

But heaviness foreruns the good event.

West. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow

Serves to say thus, some good thing comes to-morrow.

Arch. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit. 85

Mowb. So much the worse, if your own rule be true. [Shouts [within].]

Lan. The word of peace is rend'red. Hark, how they shout!

Mowb. This had been cheerful after victory.

Arch. A peace is of the nature of a conquest; For then both parties nobly are subdu'd, 90
And neither party loser.

Lan. Go, my lord,

And let our army be discharged too.

And, good my lord, so please you, let your trains

March by us, that we may peruse the men

We should have cop'd withal. [Exit [Westmoreland].]

Arch. Go, good Lord Hastings,
And, ere they be dismiss'd, let them march by. [Exit [Hastings]. 96

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lan. I trust, lords, we shall lie to-night together.

Now cousin, wherefore stands our army still?

West. The leaders, having charge from you to stand,

Will not go off until they hear you speak. 100

Lan. They know their duties.

Re-enter HASTINGS.

Hast. My lord, our army is dispers'd already.
Like youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses

East, west, north, south; or, like a school broke up,

Each hurries toward his home and sporting-place. 105

West. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the which

I do arrest thee, traitor, of high treason;

And you, Lord Archbishop, and you, Lord Mowbray,

Of capital treason I attach you both.

Mowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable? 110

West. Is your assembly so?

Arch. Will you thus break your faith?

Lan. I pawn'd thee none.

I promis'd you redress of these same grievances
Whereof you did complain; which, by mine honour,

I will perform with a most Christian care. 115

But for you, rebels, look to taste the due

Meet for rebellion [and such acts as yours].

Most shallowly did you these arms commence,

Fondly brought here and foolishly sent hence.

Strike up our drums, pursue the scatt' red stray.

God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day. 121

Some guard these traitors to the block of death,
Treason's true bed and yielder up of breath.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Another part of the forest.]

Alarums. Excursion. Enter FALSTAFF and COLVILLE [meeting].

Fal. What's your name, sir? Of what condition are you, and of what place, [I pray]?

Col. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Colville of the Dale. 4

Fal. Well, then, Colville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the Dale. Colville shall be still your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deep enough; so shall you be still Colville of the Dale. 10

Col. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, whoe'er I am. Do ye yield, sir? or shall I sweat for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy. 17

Col. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply [23] the most active fellow in Europe. My womb, my womb, my womb, undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter PRINCE JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, [BLUNT] and others.

Lan. The heat is past; follow no further now. 27

Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland. [Exit Westmoreland.]

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?

When everything is ended, then you come. These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life, One time or other break some gallows' back. 32

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus. I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? Have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought? I have speeded hither with the [37] very extreme inch of possibility; I have found red ninescore and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colville of the Dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that? He saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say, with the hook-nos'd fellow of Rome, "I came, saw, and overcame."

Lan. It was more of his courtesy than your deservings. 43

Fal. I know not. Here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech your Grace, let it be book'd with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on't, Colville kissing my foot; to the which course if I be enforce'd, if you do not all show like gilt [53] twopenies to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'ershine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins' heads to her, believe not the word of the noble. Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount. 61

Lan. Thine's too heavy to mount.

Fal. Let it shine, then.

Lan. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will. 66

Lan. Is thy name Colville?

Col. It is, my lord.

Lan. A famous rebel art thou, Colville.

Fal. And a famous true subject took him. 70

Col. I am, my lord, but as my betters are That led me hither. Had they been rul'd by me, You should have won them dearer than you have.

Fal. I know not how they sold themselves; but thou, like a kind fellow, gav'st thyself away gratis; and I thank thee for thee. 76

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Lan. Now, have you left pursuit?

West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.

Lan. Send Colville with his confederates To York, to present execution. 80
Blunt, lead him hence; and see you guard him sure.

[Exeunt [Blunt and others] with Colville.]

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords;

I hear the King my father is sore sick. Our news shall go before us to his Majesty, Which, cousin, you shall bear to comfort him, And we with sober speed will follow you. 86

Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go Through Gloucestershire; and, when you come to court,

Stand my good lord, [pray,] in your good report.

Lan. Fare you well, Falstaff. I, in my condition, 90
Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

[Exeunt [all but Falstaff].]

Fal. I would you had [but] the wit; 't were better than your dukedom. Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me, nor a man cannot make him laugh; but [95] that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. [100] They are generally fools and cowards; which some of us should be too, but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crudy [105] vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble, fiery, and delectable shapes; which, deliver'd o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property [110] of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice; but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extremes. It illumineth the [115] face, which as a beacon gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits muster me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puff'd up with this retinue, [130] doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in the weapon is nothing without sack, for that sets it a-work; and learning a mere hoard of gold kept by a devil, till sack commences it and sets it in act [135] and use. Hereof comes it that Prince Harry is valiant; for the cold blood he did naturally inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, sterile, and bare land, manured, husbanded, and till'd with excellent endeavour of drinking good [140] and good store of fertile sherris, that he is become very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack. 135

Enter BARDOLPH.

How now, Bardolph?

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone. Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Robert Shallow, esquire. I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him. Come away. 142

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [IV. Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.]

Enter the KING, the PRINCES THOMAS OF CLARENCE and HUMPHREY OF GLOUCESTER, WARWICK [and others].

King. Now, lords, if God doth give successful end

To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields,
And draw no swords but what are sanctifi'd. 5
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And everything lies level to our wish.
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government. 10

War. Both which we doubt not but your Majesty Shall soon enjoy.

King. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester,
Where is the Prince your brother?

Glou. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, at Windsor.

King. And how accompanied?

Glou. I do not know, my lord.

King. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence, with him? 15

Glou. No, my good lord; he is in presence here.

Clar. What would my lord and father?

King. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas of Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the Prince thy brother? 20

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomas.

Thou hast a better place in his affection

Than all thy brothers. Cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou mayst effect
Of mediation, after I am dead, 25
Between his greatness and thy other brethren.

Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace
By seeming cold or careless of his will.
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd; 30
He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity;
Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint,
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
As flaws congealed in the spring of day. 35
His temper, therefore, must be well observ'd.
Chide him for faults, and do it reverently;
When you perceive his blood inclin'd to mirth;
But, being moody, give him time and scope,
Till that his passions, like a whale on ground, 40
Confound themselves with working. Learn this, Thomas,

And thou shalt prove a shelter to thy friends,
A hoop of gold to bind thy brothers in,
That the united vessel of their blood,
Mingled with venom of suggestion, 45
As, force perforce, the age will pour it in,
Shall never leak, though it do work as strong
As acornitum or rash gunpowder.

Clar. I shall observe him with all care and love.

King. Why art thou not at Windsor with him, Thomas? 50

Clar. He is not there to-day; he dines in London.

King. And how accompanied? [Canst thou tell that?]

Clar. With Poins, and other his continual followers.

King. Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds,

And he, the noble image of my youth, 55
Is overspread with them; therefore my grief
Stretches itself beyond the hour of death.
The blood weeps from my heart when I do shape

In forms imaginary the unguided days
And rotten times that you shall look upon 60
When I am sleeping with my ancestors.
For when his headstrong riot hath no curb,
When rage and hot blood are his counsellors,
When means and lavish manners meet together,
O, with what wings shall his affections fly 65
Towards fronting peril and oppos'd decay!

War. My gracious lord, you look beyond him quite.

The Prince but studies his companions
Like a strange tongue, wherein, to gain the language,

'Tis needful that the most immodest word 70
Be look'd upon and learn'd; which once attain'd,

Your Highness knows, comes to no further use
But to be known and hated. So, like gross terms,

The Prince will in the perfectness of time
Cast off his followers; and their memory 75
Shall as a pattern or a measure live,

By which his Grace must mete the lives of others,

Turning past evils to advantages.

King. 'Tis seldom when the bee doth leave her comb
In the dead carrion.

Enter WESTMORELAND.

Who's here? Westmoreland?

West. Health to my sovereign, and new happiness 81

Added to that that I am to deliver!

Prince John your son doth kiss your Grace's hand.

Mowbray, the Bishop Scroop, Hastings and all
Are brought to the correction of your law. 83

There is not now a rebel's sword unsheath'd,

But Peace puts forth her olive everywhere.

The manner how this action hath been borne

Here at more leisure may your Highness read,

With every course in his particular. 90

King. O Westmoreland, thou art a summer bird,

Which ever in the haunch of winter sings

The lifting up of day.

Enter HARCOURT.

Look, here's more news.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your Majesty;

And, when they stand against you, may they fall 96

As those that I am come to tell you of!

The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bar-
dolph,

With a great power of English and of Scots,

Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.

The manner and true order of the fight 100

This packet, please it you, contains at large.

King. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will Fortune never come with both hands full,

But write her fair words still in foulest letters?

She either gives a stomach and no food; 105

Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast

And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,

That have abundance and enjoy it not.

I should rejoice now at this happy news;

And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.

O me! come near me; now I am much ill. 111

Glou. Comfort, your Majesty!

Clar. O my royal father!

West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself, look up.

War. Be patient, Princes; you do know, these fits

Are with his Highness very ordinary. 115

Stand from him, give him air. He'll straight be well.

Clar. No, no, he cannot long hold out these pangs.

The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in

So thin that life looks through [and will break
out]. 120

Glou. The people fear me; for they do observe Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature.
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep and leap'd them over.

Clar. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between; 125

And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,

Say it did so a little time before

That our great-grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

War. Speak lower, Princes, for the King recovers.

Glou. This apoplexy will certain be his end.

King. I pray you, take me up, and bear me
hence 131

Into some other chamber. [Softly, pray.]

[Exeunt. The King is borne out.]

[SCENE V. Another chamber.]

The King lying on a bed: CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, and others in attendance.

King. Let there be no noise made, my gentle
friends;

Unless some dull and favourable hand

Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

King. Set me the crown upon my pillow
here. 5

Clar. His eye is hollow, and he changes
much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter PRINCE HENRY.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Clar. I am here, brother, full of heaviness.

Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the King? 10

Glou. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet?
Tell it him.

Glou. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

Prince. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic. 15

War. Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet

Prince, speak low;

The King, your father, is dispos'd to sleep.

Clar. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will't please your Grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the King. [Exeunt all but the Prince.] 20

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow?

O polish'd perturbation! golden care!

That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide

To many a watchful night! Sleep with it now!

Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet 25

As he whose brow with homely biggen bound

Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!

When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit

Like a rich armour worn in heat of day, 30

That scald'st with safety. By his gates of breath

There lies a downy feather which stirs not.
Did he suspire, that light and weightless down Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!

This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep 35
That from this golden rigol hath divorc'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness
Shall, O dear father, pay thee plenteously. 40
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. [Puts on the crown.] Lo,
where it sits,

Which God shall guard; and put the world's whole strength

Into one giant arm, it shall not force 45
This lineal honour from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 't is left to me. [Exit.
King. Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

Re-enter WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE
[and the rest].

Clar. Doth the King call?

War. What would your Majesty? [How fares your Grace?] 50

King. Why did you leave me here alone, my lords?

Clar. We left the Prince my brother here,
my liege,

Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

King. The Prince of Wales! Where is he?
Let me see him.

He is not here. 55

War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
Glou. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

King. Where is the crown? Who took it from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

King. The Prince hath ta'en it hence. Go, seek him out. 60

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose

My sleep my death?

Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him
hither. [Exit Warwick.]

This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what things
you are! 65

How quickly nature falls into revolt

When gold becomes her object!

For this the foolish over-careful fathers

Have broke their sleep with thoughts, their brains with care,

Their bones with industry; 70

For this they have engrossed and pil'd up

The cank' red heaps of strange-achieved gold;

For this they have been thoughtful to invest

Their sons with arts and martial exercises;

When, like the bee, tolling from every flower
[The virtuous sweets], 75

Our thighs pack'd with wax, our mouths with honey,

We bring it to the hive, and, like the bees,
Are murd' red for our pains. This bitter taste
Yields his engrossments to the ending father. 80

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War. My lord, I found the Prince in the next room,

Washing with kindly tears his gentle cheeks,
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow 85
That Tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife

With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

King. But wherefore did he take away the crown?

Re-enter PRINCE HENRY.

Lo, where he comes. Come hither to me,
Harry. 90

Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

[Exeunt [Warwick and the rest].]

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak
again.

King. Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.

I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.

Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair 95
That thou wilt needs invest thee with mine honours

Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!

Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm
thee.

Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind 100

That it will quickly drop. My day is dim.

Thou hast stolen that which after some few hours

Were thine without offence; and at my death

Thou hast seal'd up my expectation.

Thy life did manifest thou lov'dst me not, 105

And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.

Thou hid'st a thousand daggers in thy
thoughts,

Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart,

To stab at half an hour of my life.

What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour? 110

Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself,

And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear

That thou art crown'd, not that I am dead.

Let all the tears that should bedew my hearse

Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head; 115

Only compound me with forgotten dust;

Give that which gave thee life unto the worms.

Pluck down my officers, break my decrees;

For now a time is come to mock at form.

Harry the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity! 120

Down, royal state! All you sage counsellors,
hence!

And to the English court assemble now,

From every region, apes of idleness!

Now, neighbour confines, purge you of your scum!

Have you a ruffian that will swear, drink,
dance, 125

Revel the night, rob, murder, and commit

The oldest sins the newest kind of ways?

Be happy, he will trouble you no more.

England shall double gild his treble guilt,
 England shall give him office, honour, might; 150
 For the fifth Harry from curb'd license plucks
 The muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog
 Shall flesh his tooth on every innocent.
 O my poor kingdom, sick with civil blows!
 When that my care could not withhold thy riots, 155

What wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
 O, thou wilt be a wilderness again,
 Peopled with wolves, thy old inhabitants!
Prince. O, pardon me, my liege! but for my
 tears,

The moist impediments unto my speech, 160
 I had forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
 Ere you with grief had spoke and I had heard
 The course of it so far. There is your crown;
 And He that wears the crown immortally
 Long guard it yours! If I affect it more 165
 Than as your honour and as your renown,
 Let me no more from this obedience rise,

[Kneels.]
 Which my most inward, true, and duteous
 spirit

Teacheth, this prostrate and exterior bending.
 God witness with me, when I here came in, 160
 And found no course of breath within your Majesty,

How cold it struck my heart! If I do feign,
 O, let me in my present wildness die
 And never live to show the incredulous world
 The noble change that I have purposed! 165
 Coming to look on you, thinking you dead,
 And dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
 I spake unto this crown as having sense,
 And thus upbraided it: "The care on thee depending

Hath fed upon the body of my father; 160
 Therefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold.
 Other, less fine in carat, is more precious,
 Preserving life in medicine potable;
 But thou, most fine, most honour'd, most re-nown'd,

Hast eat thy bearer up." Thus, my most royal
 liege, 165

Accusing it, I put it on my head,
 To try with it, as with an enemy
 That had before my face murder'd my father,
 The quarrel of a true inheritor.
 But if it did infect my blood with joy, 170
 Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
 If any rebel or vain spirit of mine
 Did with the least affection of a welcome
 Give entertainment to the might of it,
 Let God for ever keep it from my head 175
 And make me as the poorest vassal is
 That doth with awe and terror kneel to it!

King. [O my son,]
 God put it in thy mind to take it hence,
 That thou mightst win the more thy father's
 love, 180

Pleading so wisely in excuse of it!
 Come hither, Harry, sit thou by my bed;
 And hear, I think, the very latest counsel
 That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son,
 By what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways 185
 I met this crown; and I myself know well

How troublesome it sat upon my head.
 To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
 Better opinion, better confirmation;
 For all the soil of the achievement goes 190
 With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
 But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous
 hand,

And I had many living to upbraid
 My gain of it by their assistances;
 Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed, 195

Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
 Thou see'st with peril I have answered;
 For all my reign hath been but as a scene
 Acting that argument; and now my death
 Changes the mode; for what in me was purchas'd, 200

Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
 So thou the garland wear'st successively.
 Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,

Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are
 green;

And all [my] friends, which thou must make thy friends, 205

Have but their stings and teeth newly ta'en
 out;

By whose fell working I was first advanc'd
 And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
 To be again displac'd; which to avoid,
 I cut them off; and had a purpose now 210
 To lead out many to the Holy Land,
 Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
 Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
 With foreign quarrels, that action, hence borne
 out, 215

May waste the memory of the former days.
 More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
 That strength of speech is utterly deny'd me.
 How I came by the crown, O God forgive;
 And grant it may with thee in true peace
 live! 220

Prince. [My gracious liege,]
 You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
 Then plain and right must my possession be,
 Which I with more than with a common pain
 'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain. 225

Enter LORD JOHN OF LANCASTER and WAR-WICK.

King. Look, look, here comes my John of Lancaster.

Lan. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

King. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown

From this bare wither'd trunk. Upon thy sight 230

My worldly business makes a period.
 Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

King. Doth any name particular belong
 Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?

War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.
King. Laud be to God! even there my life must end. 236

It hath been prophesied to me many years,
I should not die but in Jerusalem;
Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie;
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die. [Exeunt.] 241

ACT V

SCENE I. [Gloucestershire. Shallow's house.]

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and Page.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What, Davy, I say!

Fal. You must excuse me, Master Robert
Shallow. 4

Shal. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excus'd; excusals shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excus'd. Why, Davy!

[Enter DAVY.]

Davy. Here, sir. 9

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see,
Davy; let me see, Davy; let me see, Yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither.
Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts have not be serv'd; and, again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheat? 16

Shal. With red wheat, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons. 20

Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excus'd.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had; and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost [the other day] at Hinckley fair? 26

Shal. 'A shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legg'd hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook. 30

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night,
sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy; I will use him well. A friend if the court is better than a penny in purse. Use his men well, Davy; for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite. 36

Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir; for they have marvellous foul linen.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy. About thy business, Davy. 40

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance
William Visor of Woncot against Clement
Perkes o' the hill.

Shal. There is many complaints, Davy, against that Visor. That Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge. 46

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have serv'd your worship truly, sir, this eight [51] years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have [but a very] little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech you, let him be countenanc'd. 57

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong.
Look about, Davy. [Exit Davy.] Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, come, off with your boots. Give me your hand, Master Bar-
dolph. 62

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Shal. I thank thee with [all] my heart, kind Master Bardolph: and welcome, my tall fellow
[to the Page.] Come, Sir John. 66

Fal. I'll follow you, good Master Robert Shallow. [Exit Shallow.] Bardolph, look to our horses. [Exeunt Bardolph and Page.] If I were saw'd into quantities, I should make four dozen of such bearded hermits' staves as [70] Master Shallow. It is a wonderful thing to see the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his. They, by observing [of] him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turn'd into a justice-like serv- [75] ing-man. Their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese. If I had a suit to Master Shallow,
I would humour his men with the imputa- [80]
tion of being near their master; if to his men,
I would curry with Master Shallow that no man could better command his servants. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of [85] another; therefore let men take heed of their company. I will devise matter enough out of this Shallow to keep Prince Harry in continual laughter the wearing out of six fashions, which is four terms, or two actions, and 'a shall laugh without intervallums. O, it is much [90] that a lie with a slight oath and a jest with a sad brow will do with a fellow that never had the ache in his shoulders! O, you shall see him laugh till his face be like a wet cloak ill laid
up. 95

Shal. [Within.] Sir John!

Fal. I come, Master Shallow; I come,
Master Shallow. [Exit.]

SCENE II. [Westminster. The palace.]

Enter WARWICK and the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE [meeting].

War. How now, my Lord Chief Justice? whither away?

Ch. Just. How doth the King?

War. Exceeding well; his cares are now all ended.

Ch. Just. I hope, not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature;
And to our purposes he lives no more.

Ch. Just. I would his Majesty had call'd me with him.

The service that I truly did his life
Hath left me open to all injuries.

War. Indeed I think the young King loves you not.

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm myself 10

To welcome the condition of the time,
Which cannot look more hideously upon me
Than I have drawn it in my fantasy.

Enter LANCASTER, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER
[WESTMORELAND, and others.]

War. Here come the heavy issue of dead
Harry:

O that the living Harry had the temper 15
Of him, the worst of these three gentlemen!
How many nobles then should hold their places,
That must strike sail to spirits of vile sort!

Ch. Just. O God, I fear all will be over-
turn'd!

Lan. Good morrow, cousin Warwick, good
morrow. 20

Glou. } Good morrow, cousin.
Clar. }

Lan. We meet like men that had forgot to speak.

War. We do remember; but our argument
Is all too heavy to admit much talk.

Lan. Well, peace be with him that hath made us heavy! 25

Ch. Just. Peace be with us, lest we be heavier!

Glou. O, good my lord, you have lost a friend
indeed;

And I dare swear you borrow not that face
Of seeming sorrow; it is sure your own.

Lan. Though no man be assur'd what grace to find, 30

You stand in coldest expectation.

I am the sorrier; would't were otherwise!

Clar. Well, you must now speak Sir John Falstaff fair;

Which swims against your stream of quality.

Ch. Just. Sweet princes, what I did, I did in honour, 35

Led by the impartial conduct of my soul;

And never shall you see that I will beg

A ragged and forestall'd remission.

If truth and upright innocence fail me,

I'll to the King my master that is dead, 40

And tell him who hath sent me after him.

War. Here comes the Prince.

Enter KING HENRY THE FIFTH [attended].

Ch. Just. Good morrow; and God save your Majesty!

King. This new and gorgeous garment, majesty,

Sits not so easy on me as you think. 45

Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear.

This is the English, not the Turkish court;

Not Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

But Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers,

For, by my faith, it very well becomes you. 50

Sorrow so royally in you appears

That I will deeply put the fashion on

And wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;

But entertain no more of it, good brothers,
Than a joint burden laid upon us all. 55

For me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,
I'll be your father and your brother too.

Let me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares.

Yet weep that Harry's dead, and so will I;
But Harry lives, that shall convert those tears

By number into hours of happiness. 61

Princes. We hope no other from your Majesty.

King. You all look strangely on me, and you most.

You are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly, 65

Your Majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

King. No?

How might a prince of my great hopes forget

So great indignities you laid upon me?

What! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison. 70

The immediate heir of England! Was this easy?

May this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your
father;

The image of his power lay then in me;

And, in the administration of his law, 75

Whiles I was busy for the commonwealth,

Your Highness pleased to forget my place,

The majesty and power of law and justice,

The image of the King whom I presented,

And struck me in my very seat of judgement;

Whereon, as an offender to your father, 81

I gave bold way to my authority

And did commit you. If the deed were ill,

Be you contented, wearing now the garland,

To have a son set your decrees at nought? 85

To pluck down justice from your awful bench?

To trip the course of law and blunt the sword

That guards the peace and safety of your person?

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image

And mock your workings in a second body? 90

Question your royal thoughts, make the case
yours:

Be now the father and propose a son,

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,

See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,

Behold yourself so by a son disinherited; 95

And then imagine me taking your part

And in your power soft silencing your son.

After this cold consideration, sentence me;

And, as you are a king, speak in your state

What I have done that misbecame my place, 100

My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

King. You are right, Justice, and you weigh this well,

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword;

And I do wish your honours may increase,

Till you do live to see a son of mine 105

Offend you and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:

"Happy am I, that have a man so bold,

That dares do justice on my proper son;

And not less happy, having such a son 110

That would deliver up his greatness so Into the hands of justice." You did commit
me;

For which, I do commit into your hand
The unstained sword that you have us'd to bear;

With this remembrance, that you use the same 115

With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit
As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand.

You shall be as a father to my youth,
My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear,
And I will stoop and humble my intents 120

To your well-practic'd wise directions.
And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you,

My father is gone wild into his grave,
For in his tomb lie my affections;
And with his spirit sadly I survive, 125

To mock the expectation of the world,
To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out
Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down
After my seeming. The tide of blood in me

Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now: 130
Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,

Where it shall mingle with the state of floods
And flow henceforth in formal majesty.

Now call we our high court of parliament;
And let us choose such limbs of noble counsel,
That the great body of our state may go 135

In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;
That war, or peace, or both at once, may be
As things acquainted and familiar to us;

In which you, father, shall have foremost hand.
Our coronation done, we will accite, 140

As I before rememb'ed, all our state;
And, God consigning to my good intents,

No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say,
God shorten Harry's happy life one day! 145

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Gloucestershire. Shallow's orchard.]

Enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, SILENCE, DAVY, BARDOLPH, and the Page.

Shal. Nay, you shall see my orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of mine own grafting, with a dish of carraways, and so forth,—come, cousin Silence,—and then to bed. 5

Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich.

Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John: marry, good air. Spread,
Davy; spread, Davy. Well said, Davy. 10

Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses; he is your serving-man and your husband.

Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John. By the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper. A good var-let. Now sit down, now sit down. Come,
cousin. 15

Sil. Ah, sirrah! quoth-a, we shall [Singing.]

"Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise God for the merry year,
When flesh is cheap and females dear, 20

And lusty lads roam here and there

So merrily,

And ever among so merrily."

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master
Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon. 25

Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy.

Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon;
most sweet sir, sit. Master page, good master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat, we'll have in drink; but you must bear. The heart's all. [Exit.] 32

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and, my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. [Singing.] "Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;

For women are shrews, both short and tall.

'Tis merry in hall when beards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide. 35

Be merry, be merry."

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who? I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter DAVY.

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you. [To Bardolph.] 40

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! I'll be with you straight. A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. [Singing.] "A cup of wine that's brisk and fine,

And drink unto the leman mine;
And a merry heart lives long-a." 45

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master
Silence. 50

Sil. [Singing.] "Fill the cup, and let it
come;

I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom."

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome. If thou want'st anything, and wilt not call, beshrew thy heart. Welcome, my little tiny thief [to the Page], and welcome indeed too. I'll drink to Master Bardolph, and to all the cavaleros about London. 55

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I
die.

Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,— Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together, ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a pottle-pot. 60

Shal. By God's liggers, I thank thee. The knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that. 'A will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir. 65

[One knocks at door.]

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing; be merry! Look who's at door there.
Ho! who knocks? [Exit Davy.]

Fal. Why, now you have done me right. 70

[To Silence, seeing him take off a bumper.]

Sil. [Singing.] "Do me right,
And dub me knight:
S'amingo."

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why then, say an old man can do somewhat.

[Re-enter DAVY.]

Davy. An't please your worship, there's one Pistol come from the court with news.

Fal. From the court! Let him come in.

Enter PISTOL.

How now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you!

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man to good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think 'a be, but Goodman Puff of Barson.

Pist. Puff!

Puff i' thy teeth, most recreant coward base!

Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend,

And helter-skelter have I rode to thee,

And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys

And golden times and happy news of price.

Fal. I pray thee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A foutra for the world and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy news?

Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. [Singing.] "And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John."

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicons?

And shall good news be baffled?

Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap.

Sil. Honest gentleman, I know not your breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Shal. Give me pardon, sir. If, sir, you come with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways, either to utter them, or to conceal them. I am, sir, under the King, in some authority.

Pist. Under which king, Besonian? Speak, or die.

Shal. Under King Harry.

Pist. Harry the Fourth or Fifth?

Shal. Harry the Fourth.

Pist. A foutra for thine office!

Sir John, thy tender lambkin now is king;

Harry the Fifth's the man. I speak the truth.

When Pistol lies, do this, and fig me like The bragging Spaniard.

Fal. What, is the old king dead?

Pist. As nail in door. The things I speak are just.

Fal. Away, Bardolph! saddle my horse. Master Robert Shallow, choose what office thou wilt in the land, 'tis thine. Pistol, I will double-charge thee with dignities.

Bard. O joyful day!

I would not take a knighthood for my fortune.

Pist. What! I do bring good news.

Fal. Carry Master Silence to bed. Master Shallow, my Lord Shallow, — be what thou wilt; I am Fortune's steward — get on thy boots. We'll ride all night. O sweet Pistol! Away, Bardolph! [Exit Bard.] Come, Pistol, utter more to me; and withal devise something to do thyself good. Boot, boot, Master Shallow! I know the young king is sick for me. Let us take any man's horses; the laws of England are at my commandment. Blessed are they that have been my friends; and woe to my Lord Chief Justice!

Pist. Let vultures vile seize on his lungs also!

"Where is the life that late I led?" say they. Why here it is; welcome these pleasant days!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [London. A street.]

Enter BEADLES, [dragging in] HOSTESS QUICKLY and DOLL TEARSHEET.

Host. No, thou arrant knave; I would to God that I might die, that I might have thee hang'd. Thou hast drawn my shoulder out of joint.

1. Bead. The constables have deliver'd her over to me; and she shall have whipping-cheer enough, I warrant her. There hath been a man or two lately kill'd about her.

Dol. Nut-hook, nut-hook, you lie. Come on! I'll tell thee what, thou damn'd tripe-visag'd rascal, an the child I now go with do miscarry, thou wert better thou hadst struck thy mother, thou paper-fac'd villain!

Host. O the Lord, that Sir John were come! He would make this a bloody day to somebody. But I pray God the fruit of her womb miscarry.

1. Bead. If it do, you shall have a dozen of cushions again; you have but eleven now. Come, I charge you both go with me; for the man is dead that you and Pistol beat amongst you.

Dol. I'll tell you what, you thin man in a censer, I will have you as soundly swung for this, — you blue-bottle rogue, you filthy famish'd corrector, if you be not swung, I'll forswear half-kirtles.

1. Bead. Come, come, you she knight-errant, come.

Host. O God, that right should thus overcome might! Well, of sufferance comes ease.

Dol. Come, you rogue, come; bring me to a justice.

Host. Ay, come, you starv'd blood-hound.

Dol. Goodman death, Goodman bones!

Host. Thou atomy, thou!

Dol. Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal.

1. Bead. Very well.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. [A public place near Westminster Abbey.]

Enter two GROOMS, strewing rushes.

1. Groom. More rushes, more rushes.

2. Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

1. Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch. ⁴
[Exeunt.]

Trumpets sound, and the King and his train pass over the stage. After them enter FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, PISTOL, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the King do you grace. I will leer upon him as he comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight. ⁹

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. O, if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth him better; this doth infer the zeal I had to see him. ¹⁵

[Shal.] It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnestness of affection, —

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion, —

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth. ²⁰

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me, —

Shal. It is best, certain. ²⁴

[Fal.] But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else, putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him. ²⁹

Pist. 'Tis "semper idem," for "obsque hoc nihil est." 'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver,

And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, ³⁵
Is in base durance and contagious prison;
Hal'd thither

By most mechanical and dirty hand.

Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell
Alecto's snake,

For Doll is in. Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her. ⁴¹

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clangor sounds.

The trumpets sound. Enter the KING and his train, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE among them.

Fal. God save thy Grace, King Hal! my royal Hal! ⁴⁴

Pist. The heavens thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!

King. My Lord Chief Justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? Know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee,
my heart! ⁵⁰

King. I know thee not, old man; fall to thy prayers.

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
I have long dream'd of such a kind of man,
So surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
But, being awak'd, I do despise my dream. ⁵⁵
Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth
gape

For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest.

Presume not that I am the thing I was; ⁶⁰

For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,

That I have turn'd away my former self;

So will I those that kept me company.

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,

Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast, ⁶⁵

The tutor and the feeder of my riots;

Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,

As I have done the rest of my misleaders,

Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you, ⁷⁰

That lack of means enforce you not to evils;

And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,

We will, according to your strengths and qualities,

Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of my word. ⁷⁵

Set on. [Exeunt King [etc.].]

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Yea, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me. ⁸⁰

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow.

Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great. ⁸⁵

Shal. I cannot well perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of my thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word. This that you heard was but a colour. ⁹¹

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours; go with me to dinner. Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph. I shall be sent for soon at night. ⁹⁵

Re-enter PRINCE JOHN, the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE [Officers with them].

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet.

Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord, —

Ch. Just. I cannot now speak; I will hear you soon. ¹⁰⁰

Take them away.

Pist. Si fortuna me tormenta, spera contenta,
[Exeunt all but Prince John and the Chief Justice.]

Lan. I like this fair proceeding of the King's.

He hath intent his wonted followers
Shall all be very well provided for ; 106

But all are banish'd till their conversations Appear more wise and modest to the world.

Ch. Just. And so they are.

Lan. The King hath call'd his parliament,
my lord.

Ch. Just. He hath. 110

Lan. I will lay odds that, ere this year expire,

We bear our civil swords and native fire
As far as France. I heard a bird so sing, Whose music, to my thinking, pleas'd the

King.

Come, will you hence ? [Exeunt. 115

EPILOGUE

[Spoken by a DANCER.]

First my fear ; then my curtsy ; last my speech. My fear is, your displeasure ; my curtsy, my duty ; and my speech, to beg your pardons. If you look for a good speech now, you undo me ; for what I have to say is of mine own making ; and what indeed I should say [5 will, I doubt, prove mine own marring. But to the purpose, and so to the venture. Be it known to you, as it is very well, I was lately here in the end of a displeasing play, to pray your patience for it and to promise you a bet- [10

ter. I meant indeed to pay you with this ; which,
if like an ill venture it come unluckily home,
I break, and you, my gentle creditors, lose.
Here I promis'd you I would be, and here I commit my body to your mercies. Bate me [15 some and I will pay you some and, as most debtors do, promise you infinitely.

If my tongue cannot entreat you to acquit me, will you command me to use my legs ? And yet that were but light payment, to dance out of your debt. But a good conscience will [20 make any possible satisfaction, and so would I.
All the gentlewomen here have forgiven me ;
if the gentlemen will not, then the gentlemen do not agree with the gentlewomen, which was never seen before in such an assembly. 25

One word more, I beseech you. If you be not too much cloy'd with fat meat, our humble author will continue the story, with Sir John in it, and make you merry with fair Katharine of France ; where, for anything I know, [30 Falstaff shall die of a sweat, unless already 'a be kill'd with your hard opinions ; for Oldcastle died a martyr, and this is not the man. My tongue is weary ; when my legs are too, I will bid you good night ; and so kneel down be- [35 fore you ; but, indeed, to pray for the Queen.

THE LIFE OF HENRY THE FIFTH

IN the case of Henry V the date of composition can be fixed with more exactness and assurance than usual. The Chorus prefixed to Act v contains in lines 30-34 a clear allusion to the expedition led by the Earl of Essex, who left for Ireland on April 15, 1599, and returned on September 28 of the same year. The nature of the reference is such as to date the passage between these limits.

A quarto edition appeared in 1600, and was reprinted in 1602 and 1608. This is, however, not the source of the text of the First Folio, on which the present edition is based. The Quarto is less than half the length of the version in the Folio, and the text is so badly mangled and corrupted that it is to be concluded that it is a pirated edition printed from notes taken at a performance, and perhaps from other sources surreptitiously obtained. The theory that it represents an earlier draft of the play, afterwards elaborated into the form found in the Folio, is negated by a close comparison of the texts.

The source of the serious plot of this history is, as usual, the Chronicles of Holinshed. Shakespeare follows the main thread of the actual events, altering the order only slightly, but condensing the action from six years. The long speeches throughout are, but for a few hints, altogether his, with the exception of the genealogical argument of the Archbishop of Canterbury in i. ii., which follows Holinshed with remarkable closeness. The scenes in which Pistol and his fellows appear have, of course, no original; and the group of subordinate officers, Fluellen, Macmorris, and Captain Jamy, with Williams and Bates and the glove episode, are all purely Shakespearean. The pardoning of the man who had railed against the king is a skilful invention to lead up to the unmasking and self-condemnation of the conspirators. Changes in the comparative prominence of details are managed in such a way as to produce the characteristic patriotic temper of the play. Thus, the tennis-ball message and reply are emphasized and elaborated; and the happy personal relations existing among the English are brought out in Henry's speeches to old Erpingham, in the description of the deaths of Suffolk and York, in the conversation between the king and the common soldiers, in the splendid eloquence of such speeches as those of Henry before Harfleur and on St. Crispin's Day, all of which are absent from the chronicles; and, conversely, the vain boasting of the French lords before the battle is created out of a mere hint that they passed the night in merriment and were contemptuous of their opponents. Again, additional stress is laid by Shakespeare on Henry's piety, his soliloquy and prayer before Agincourt being without historical basis. Yet the main lines of his character are those laid down by Holinshed and earlier writers.

The French lesson of the Princess is original; but the wooing is foreshadowed in the crude play of The Famous Victories of Henry the Fifth, which had already supplied hints for Henry IV. This play also uses the Dauphin's gift of tennis-balls, and contains dialect parts which may have suggested the Welsh, Scottish, and Irish parts here; and a scene in which a Frenchman tries to hold an Englishman for ransom bears a certain resemblance to Pistol's treatment of his French captive. The stealing of the pyx and the fate, though not the character, of Bardolph are historical. The Dauphin was not in fact present at the battle of Agincourt, and in this detail the Quarto follows history more accurately than the Folio. The simile of the bees in Canterbury's speech (i. ii. 187-204) may have been suggested by a passage in Lyly's Euphues and his England, which in turn is based on Pliny.

The style of the sonnet Epilogue suggests some doubts as to its authorship, — a point of some importance in view of the stress laid on it in discussions on Henry VI.

With the exception of the doubtful Henry VIII, this play was the last to be written of Shakespeare's histories. The crises in English history before the Tudor period which gave good dramatic opportunity were well-nigh exhausted, and the limitations of the form of the chronicle play must have been increasingly irksome to Shakespeare's developed artistic sense. Henry V forms an appropriate close to the series, bringing, as it does, the patriotic fervor underlying them all to its highest expression, and embodying it in the heroic figure of the ideal English king.

PROLOGUE

Enter [CHORUS].

[Chor.] O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend
 The brightest heaven of invention,
 A kingdom for a stage, princes to act,
 And monarchs to behold the swelling scene !
 Then should the warlike Harry, like himself, s
 Assume the port of Mars ; and at his heels, Leash'd in like hounds, should famine, sword,
 and fire
 Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles
 all,

The flat unraised spirits that hath dar'd
 On this unworthy scaffold to bring forth 10
 So great an object. Can this cockpit hold
 The vasty fields of France ? Or may we cram
 Within this wooden O the very casques
 That did affright the air at Agincourt ?
 O, pardon ! since a crooked figure may 15
 Attest in little place a million ;
 And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,
 On your imaginary forces work.
 Suppose within the girdle of these walls
 Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies, 20
 Whose high upreared and abutting fronts
 The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder ;
 Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts ;
 Into a thousand parts divide one man,
 And make imaginary puissance ; 25
 Think, when we talk of horses, that you see
 them

Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving
 earth.
 For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck
 our kings,
 Carry them here and there, jumping o'er
 times,
 Turning the accomplishment of many years 30
 Into an hour-glass : for the which supply,
 Admit me Chorus to this history ;
 Who, prologue-like, your humble patience
 pray,
 Gently to hear, kindly to judge, our play.
 [Exit.]

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. An ante-chamber in the King's palace.]

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. My lord, I'll tell you : that self bill is urg'd,
 Which in the eleventh year of the last king's reign
 Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
 But that the scrambling and unquiet time
 Did push it out of farther question. a Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it
 now ?
Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
 We lose the better half of our possession ;

For all the temporal lands, which men devout

By testament have given to the Church, 10
Would they strip from us; being valu'd thus:
As much as would maintain, to the King's honour,

Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lazars and weak age, 15
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil,
A hundred almshouses right well suppli'd;
And to the coffers of the King beside,
A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'T would drink the cup and all.

Ely. But what prevention? 21

Cant. The King is full of grace and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy Church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.

The breath no sooner left his father's body, 25
But that his wildness, mortifi'd in him,
Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment
Consideration like an angel came
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise 30

To envelope and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood
With such a heady currance, scouring faults;
Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness 35
So soon did lose his seat, and all at once,
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the King were made a prelate; 40

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs,
You would say it hath been all in his study;
List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle rend'ring you in music;
Turn him to any cause of policy, 45
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears,
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences; 50
So that the art and practice part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoric:
Which is a wonder how his Grace should glean it,

Since his addiction was to courses vain,
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow, 55
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports,
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle, 60

And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality;
And so the Prince obscur'd his contemplation

Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,

Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet cressive in his faculty. 66

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are ceas'd,
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons? Doth his Majesty
Incline to it, or no? 70

Cant. He seems indifferent,
Or rather swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us;
For I have made an offer to his Majesty, 75
Upon our spiritual convocation
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his Grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet 80
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his Majesty;
Save that there was not time enough to hear,
As I perceiv'd his Grace would fain have done,
The severals and unhidden passages 86
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And generally to the crown and seat of France
Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off? 90

Cant. The French ambassador upon that instant
Crav'd audience; and the hour, I think, is come

To give him hearing. Is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in, to know his embassy;
Which I could with a ready guess declare, 96
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same. The presence chamber.]

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, WARWICK, WESTMORELAND [and Attendants.]

K. Hen. Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle.

West. Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege?

K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin. We would be resolv'd,

Before we hear him, of some things of weight
That task our thoughts, concerning us and France.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY and the BISHOP OF ELY.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne

And make you long become it!

K. Hen. Sure, we thank you.

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed
And justly and religiously unfold 100

Why the law Salique that they have in France
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim;
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading,

Or nicely charge your understanding soul 15
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know how many now in health
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to. 20
Therefore take heed how you impawn our person,

How you awake our sleeping sword of war.
We charge you, in the name of God, take
heed;

For never two such kingdoms did contend
Without much fall of blood, whose guiltless
drops 25

Are every one a woe, a sore complaint
'Gainst him whose wrong gives edge unto the swords

That makes such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration speak, my lord;
For we will hear, note, and believe in heart 30
That what you speak is in your conscience wash'd

As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers,

That owe yourselves, your lives, and services
To this imperial throne. There is no bar 35
To make against your Highness' claim to France
But this, which they produce from Pharamond:

"In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant,"
"No woman shall succeed in Salique land;"
Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze
To be the realm of France, and Pharamond 41
The founder of this law and female bar.

Yet their own authors faithfully affirm
That the land Salique is in Germany,
Between the floods of Sala and of Elbe; 45
Where Charles the Great, having subdu'd the Saxons,

There left behind and settled certain French;
Who, holding in disdain the German women
For some dishonest manners of their life,
Establish'd then this law, to wit, no female 50
Should be inheritrix in Salique land;

Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
Is at this day in Germany call'd Meisen.

Then doth it well appear the Salique law
Was not devised for the realm of France; 55

Nor did the French possess the Salique land
Until four hundred one and twenty years
After defunction of King Pharamond,
Idly suppos'd the founder of this law,
Who died within the year of our redemption 60
Four hundred twenty-six; and Charles the Great

Subdu'd the Saxons, and did seat the French
Beyond the river Sala; in the year
Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
King Pepin, which deposed Childeric, 65
Did, as heir general, being descended
Of Blithild, which was daughter to King Clo-thair,

Make claim and title to the crown of France.
Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown 60
Of Charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male

Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great,
To find his title with some shows of truth,
Though, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,

Convey'd himself as the heir to the Lady Lingare,

Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son 75
To Lewis the Emperor, and Lewis the son Of Charles the Great. Also, King Lewis the Tenth,

Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
Could not keep quiet in his conscience,
Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied 80
That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother,
Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, Daughter to Charles, the foresaid Duke of Lorraine;

By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great

Was re-united to the crown of France. 85

So that, as clear as is the summer's sun,
King Pepin's title and Hugh Capet's claim,
King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear
To hold in right and title of the female.

So do the kings of France unto this day, 90
Howbeit they would hold up this Salique law
To bar your Highness claiming from the female,
And rather choose to hide them in a net
Than amply to imbar their crooked titles
Usurp'd from you and your progenitors. 95

K. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim?

Cant. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign!

For in the book of Numbers is it writ,
When the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord, 100
Stand for your own! Unwind your bloody flag!
Look back into your mighty ancestors!
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's
tomb,

From whom you claim; invoke his warlike
spirit,

And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black
Prince. 105

Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France,

Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp

Forage in blood of French nobility. 110

O noble English, that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France

And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work and cold for action!

Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant
dead, 115

And with your puissant arm renew their feats.
You are their heir; you sit upon their throne;
The blood and courage that renown'd them
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant
liege

Is in the very May-morn of his youth, 120
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

Ere. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth

Do all expect that you should rouse yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.

West. They know your Grace hath cause and means and might; 125

So hath your Highness. Never King of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England

And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Cant. O, let their bodies follow, my dear
liege, 130

With blood and sword and fire to win your
right;

In aid whereof we of the spirituality
Will raise your Highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time

Bring in to any of your ancestors. 135

K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French,

But lay down our proportions to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.

Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign, 140

Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.

K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only,

But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us; 145

For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France

But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,

With ample and brim fullness of his force, 150
Galling the gleaned land with hot assays,

Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,

Hath shook and trembled at the ill neighbourhood.

Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege; 155

For hear her but exampl'd by herself:

When all her chivalry hath been in France,

And she a mourning widow of her nobles,

She hath herself not only well defended
But taken and impounded as a stray 160

The King of Scots; whom she did send to
France

To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner
kings,

And make her chronicle as rich with praise

As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures. 165

West. But there's a saying very old and true,

"If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin."

For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot 170

Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,

To tear and havoc more than she can eat.
Ere. It follows then the cat must stay at home;

Yet that is but a crush'd necessity, 175
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities,
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad,
The advised head defends itself at home;
For government, though high and low and lower, 180

Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreeing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion, 185
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience; for so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king and officers of sorts, 190
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,
Which pillage they with merry march bring home 195

To the tent-royal of their emperor;
Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in 200
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-eyed justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,
That many things, having full reference 205
To one consent, may work contrariously.
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Come to one mark; as many ways meet in one
town;

As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many lines close in the dial's centre; 210
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege!
Divide your happy England into four,
Whereof take you one quarter into France, 215
And you withal shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy. 220

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. [Exeunt some Attendants.]
Now are we well resolv'd; and, by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe,
Or break it all to pieces. Or there we'll sit, 225

Ruling in large and ample empery
O'er France and all her almost kingly duke-
doms,

Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them.
Either our history shall with full mouth 230
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless
mouth,

Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter AMBASSADORS of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we hear ²³⁵
Your greeting is from him, not from the King.

1. Amb. May 't please your Majesty to give us leave

Freely to render what we have in charge,
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy? ²⁴⁰

K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian
king,

Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As is our wretches fett'ed in our prisons;
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plain-
ness

Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

1. Amb. Thus, then, in few.
Your Highness, lately sending into France, ²⁴⁶
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, King Edward the Third.

In answer of which claim, the prince our master

Says that you savour too much of your youth, ²⁵⁰

And bids you be advis'd there's nought in
France

That can be with a nimble galliard won.
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.

He therefore sends you, mester for your spirit,
This tun of treasure; and, in lieu of this, ²⁵⁵
Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim
Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks.

K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?
Exe. Tennis-balls, my liege.

K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us.

His present and your pains we thank you for. ²⁶⁰

When we have match'd our rackets to these balls,

We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard.
Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler

That all the courts of France will be disturb'd ²⁶⁵

With chaces. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself ²⁷⁰

To barbarous license; as't is ever common That men are merriest when they are from home.

But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king, and show my sail of greatness
When I do rouse me in my throne of France. ²⁷⁵

For that I have laid by my majesty
And plodded like a man for working-days,
But I will rise there with so full a glory
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France, Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us. ²⁸⁰

And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his

Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones, and his soul Shall stand sore charged for the wasteful vengeance

That shall fly with them; for many a thousand widows

Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands, ²⁸⁵

Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles
down;

And some are yet ungotten and unborn
That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn.

But this lies all within the will of God,
To whom I do appeal; and in whose name ²⁹⁰

Tell you the Dauphin I am coming on
To venge me as I may, and to put forth
My rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause.

So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin
His jest will savour but of shallow wit, ²⁹⁵

When thousands weep more than did laugh at
it.—

Convey them with safe conduct.—Fare you well. [Exeunt Ambassadors.]

Exe. This was a merry message.

K. Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.

Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour ³⁰⁰

That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.

Therefore, let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, and all things thought upon ³⁰⁵

That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings; for, God before,

We'll chide this Dauphin at his father's door.
Therefore let every man now task his thought, ³¹⁰

That this fair action may on foot be brought.
[Exeunt.]

[ACT II]

[PROLOGUE.]

Flourish. Enter CHORUS.

[Chor.] Now all the youth of England are on fire,

And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies.

Now thrive the armourers, and honour's
thought

Reigns solely in the breast of every man.
They sell the pasture now to buy the horse, ⁵

Following the mirror of all Christian kings,
With winged heels, as English Mercuries.

For now sits Expectation in the air,
And hides a sword from hilts unto the point

With crowns imperial, crowns, and coronets, ¹⁰
Promis'd to Harry and his followers.

The French, advis'd by good intelligence
Of this most dreadful preparation,

Shake in their fear, and with pale policy
Seek to divert the English purposes. ¹⁵

O England! model to thy inward greatness,
Like little body with a mighty heart,

What might'st thou do, that honour would thee
do,

Were all thy children kind and natural !
But see thy fault ! France hath in thee found
out 30

A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills
With treacherous crowns ; and three corrupted
men,

One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second,

Henry Lord Seroop of Masham, and the third,
Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland, Have, for the gilt of France, — O guilt indeed ! — 35

Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France ;
And by their hands this grace of kings must die,
If hell and treason hold their promises,
Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton. 36

Linger your patience on, and we'll digest
The abuse of distance, force a play.
The sum is paid ; the traitors are agreed ;
The King is set from London ; and the scene
Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton. 38
There is the playhouse now, there must you sit ;
And thence to France shall we convey you safe,
And bring you back, charming the narrow seas
To give you gentle pass ; for, if we may,
We'll not offend one stomach with our play. 40
But, till the King come forth, and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. [Exit.

[SCENE I. London. A street.]

Enter CORPORAL NYM and LIEUTENANT BAR-
DOLPH.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet ? 4

Nym. For my part, I care not. I say little ;
but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles ; but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will wink and hold out mine iron.
It is a simple one, but what though ? It will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's sword will ; and there's an end. 11

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends ; and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France. Let it be so, good Corporal Nym. 14

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it ; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may. That is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly ; and certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her. 21

Nym. I cannot tell. Things must be as they may. Men may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time ; and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may.
Though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell. 27

Enter PISTOL and HOSTESS.

Bard. Here come Ancient Pistol and his wife. Good corporal, be patient here. How now, mine host Pistol ! 30

Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me host ?

Now, by this hand, I swear, I scorn the term ;
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers. 33

Host. No, by my troth, not long ; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy house straight. [Nym and Pistol draw.]
O well a day, Lady, if he be not drawn now !
We shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. 40

Bard. Good lieutenant ! good corporal ! offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish !

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog ! thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland !

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword. 45

Nym. Will you shog off ? I would have you solus.

Pist. "Solus," egregious dog ! O viper vile !

The "solus" in thy most mervailous face ; 50
The "solus" in thy teeth, and in thy throat,
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw,
perdy,

And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth !
I do retort the "solus" in thy bowels ;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow. 56

Nym. I am not Barbason ; you cannot con-jure me. I have an humour to knock you indifferent well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms. If you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may ; and that's the humour of it. 63

Pist. O braggart vile and damned furious wight !

The grave doth gape, and doting death is near,

Therefore exhale.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say. He that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. [Draws.]

Pist. An oath of mickle might ; and fury shall abate. 70

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give.
Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms : that is the humour of it.

Pist. "Couple a gorge !" 75
That is the word. I thee defy again.

O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get ?

No ! to the spital go,
And from the powdering-tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind, 80
Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her spouse.
I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly
For the only she ; and — pauca, there's enough.
Go to. 84

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and you, hostess. He is very sick, and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets, and do the office of a warm-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue! 90

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days. The King has kill'd his heart. Good husband, come home presently.

[Exeunt [Hostess and Boy].]

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together; why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats? 96

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays. 100

Nym. That now I will have: that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound. Push home. 106

[They draw.]

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will. 106

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends; an thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. Prithce, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won from you at betting? 111

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay;

And liquor likewise will I give to thee, And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood.

I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me, 115 Is not this just? For I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue. Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid. 120

Nym. Well, then, that's the humour of 't.

Re-enter HOSTESS.

Host. As ever you come of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart! he is so shak'd of a burning quotidian tertian, that it is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him. 126

Nym. The King hath run bad humours on the knight; that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right.

His heart is fractured and corroborate. 130

Nym. The king is a good King; but it must be as it may; he passes some humours and careers.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkins, we will live. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Southampton. A council-chamber.]

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his Grace is bold, to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do bear themselves!

As if allegiance in their bosoms sat Crowned with faith and constant loyalty. 5

Bed. The King hath note of all that they intend,

By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bed-fellow,

Whom he hath dull'd and cloy'd with gracious favours,

That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell 10 His sovereign's life to death and treachery.

Trumpets sound. Enter KING HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, and GREY.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham,

And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts.

Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France, 16

Doing the execution and the act For which we have in head assembled them?

Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that, since we are well persuaded 20

We carry not a heart with us from hence That grows not in a fair consent with ours, Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd 25

Than is your Majesty. There's not, I think, a subject

That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government.

Grey. True; those that were your father's enemies

Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do serve you 30

With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness,

And shall forget the office of our hand Sooner than quittance of desert and merit

According to the weight and worthiness. 35

Scroop. So service shall with steeled sinews toil,

And labour shall refresh itself with hope, To do your Grace incessant services.

K. Hen. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter, Enlarge the man committed yesterday, 40

That rail'd against our person. We consider It was excess of wine that set him on,

And on his more advice we pardon him.

Scroop. That's mercy, but too much security. Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example 45

Breed, by his sufferance, more of such a kind.

K. Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.

Cam. So may your Highness, and yet punish too.

Grey. Sir,

You show great mercy if you give him life 50 After the taste of much correction.

K. Hen. Alas, your too much love and care of me

Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch!
If little faults, proceeding out of temper,
Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch
our eye

When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd and digested,

Appear before us? We'll yet enlarge that
man,

Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care

And tender preservation of our person,
Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes.

Who are the late commissioners?
Cam. I one, my lord.

Your Highness bade me ask for it to-day.
Scroop. So did you me, my liege.

Grey. And I, my royal sovereign.

K. Hen. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge,
there is yours;

There yours, Lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir
knight,

Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours.
Read them, and know I know your worthiness.

My Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter,
We will aboad to-night. — Why, how now,
gentlemen!

What see you in those papers that you lose
So much complexion? — Look ye, how they change!

Their cheeks are paper. — Why, what read you
there,

That have so cowarded and chas'd your blood
Out of appearance?

Cam. I do confess my fault,

And do submit me to your Highness' mercy.

Grey. } To which we all appeal.
Scroop. }

K. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but
late,

By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd.

You must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy,
For your own reasons turn into your bosoms,

As dogs upon their masters, worrying you.
See you, my princes and my noble peers,

These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here,

You know how apt our love was to accord
To furnish him with all appertinents

Belonging to his honour; and this man
Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd

And sworn unto the practices of France
To kill us here in Hampton; to the which

This knight, no less for bounty bound to us
Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn.

But, O
What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop? thou cruel,

Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature!

Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels,
That knew'st the very bottom of my soul,

That almost might'st have coin'd me into gold, Wouldst thou have practis'd on me for thy
use,

May it be possible that foreign hire

Could out of thee extract one spark of evil
That might annoy my finger? 'T is so strange,

That, though the truth of it stands off as gross
As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it.

Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,

Working so grossly in a natural cause
That admiration did not whoop at them;

But thou, 'gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder;

And whatsoever cunning fiend it was
That wrought upon thee so preposterously

Hath got the voice in hell for excellence;
And other devils that suggest by treasons

Do botch and bungle up damnation
With patches, colours, and with forms being fetch'd

From glist'ring semblances of piety.
But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up,

Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason,

Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor.
If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus

Should with his lion gait walk the whole world,
He might return to vasty Tartar back,

And tell the legions, "I can never win
A soul so easy as that Englishman's."

O, how hast thou with jealousy infected
The sweetness of affiance! Show men dutiful?

Why, so didst thou. Seem they grave and learned?

Why, so didst thou. Come they of noble family?

Why, so didst thou. Seem they religious?

Why, so didst thou. Or are they spare in diet,
Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger,

Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood,
Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement,

Not working with the eye without the ear,
And but in purged judgement trusting neither?

Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem.
And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot

To mark the full-fraught man and best indued
With some suspicion. I will weep for thee;

For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like
Another fall of man. Their faults are open.

Arrest them to the answer of the law;
And God acquit them of their practices!

Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of [Henry] Lord Scroop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland.

Scroop. Our purposes God justly hath dis-
cover'd,

And I repent my fault more than my death,
Which I beseech your Highness to forgive,

Although my body pay the price of it.

Cam. For me, the gold of France did not seduce,

Although I did admit it as a motive
The sooner to effect what I intended.

But God be thanked for prevention,
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,

Beseeching God and you to pardon me.

Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason
Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise.
My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.

You have conspir'd against our royal person,
Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers

Received the golden earnest of our death;
Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,

His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt,
And his whole kingdom into desolation.

Touching our person seek we no revenge;
But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,

Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death,

The taste whereof God of his mercy give
You patience to endure, and true repentance

Of all your dear offences! Bear them hence.

[Exeunt [Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, guarded].]

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.

We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light

This dangerous treason lurking in our way
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now

But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then forth, dear countrymen! Let us deliver

Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.

Cheerly to sea! The signs of war advance!
No king of England, if not king of France!

[Flourish.]

[SCENE III. London. Before a tavern.]

Enter PISTOL, NYM, BARDOLPH, BOY, and HOSTESS.

Host. Prithee honey, sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.
Bardolph, be blithe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins;

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead,

And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell. He's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child. 'A parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' ends, I as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbled of green fields. "How now, Sir John!" quoth I; "what, man! be o' good cheer." So 'a cried out, "God, God, God!" three or four times. Now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. So 'a bade me lay more clothes on his feet. I put my hand into the bed and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, [and they were as cold as any stone;] and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that 'a did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that 'a did not.

Boy. Yes, that 'a did; and said they were devils incarnate.

Host. 'A could never abide carnation; 't was a colour he never lik'd.

Boy. 'A said once, the devil would have him about women.

Host. 'A did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talk'd of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember, 'a saw a flea stick upon Bardolph's nose, and 'a said it was a black soul burning in hell-fire?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain'd that fire. That 's all the riches I got in his service.

Nym. Shall we shog? The King will be gone from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.

Look to my chattels and my movables.
Let senses rule; the word is "Pitch and Pay."

Trust none;

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck;
Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arms,
Let us to France; like horse-leeches, my boys,

To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, they say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. [Kissing her.]

Nym. I cannot kiss; that is the humour of it; but, adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear. Keep close, I thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. France. The King's palace.]

Flourish. Enter the FRENCH KING, the DAUPHIN, the DUKES OF BERRI and BRETAGNE [the CONSTABLE, and others].

Fr. King. Thus comes the English with full power upon us.

And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Bretagne,
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,

And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch,
To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defendant;

For England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulf. 10
It fits us then to be as provident
As fears may teach us out of late examples
Left by the fatal and neglected English
Upon our fields.

Dau. My most redoubted father,
It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe; 15
For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom, Though war nor no known quarrel were in question,

But that defences, musters, preparations,
Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
As were a war in expectation. 20

Therefore, I say, 't is meet we all go forth
To view the sick and feeble parts of France.
And let us do it with no show of fear;
No, with no more than if we heard that Eng-
land

Were busied with a Whitsun morris-dance; 25
For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd,
Her sceptre so fantastically borne
By a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth,
That fear attends her note.

Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin!
You are too much mistaken in this king. 30
Question your Grace the late ambassadors
With what great state he heard their embassy,
How well supplied with noble counsellors,
How modest in exception, and withal
How terrible in constant resolution, 35
And you shall find his vanities forespent
Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,
Covering discretion with a coat of folly,
As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots
That shall first spring and be most delicate. 40

Dau. Well, 't is not so, my Lord High Constable;

But though we think it so, it is no matter.
In cases of defence 't is best to weigh
The enemy more mighty than he seems,
So the proportions of defence are fill'd; 45
Which, of a weak and niggardly projection,
Doth, like a miser, spoil his coat with scanting
A little cloth.

Fr. King. Think we King Harry strong;
And, Princes, look you strongly arm to meet
him.

The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon
us; 50

And he is bred out of that bloody strain
That haunted us in our familiar paths.
Witness our too much memorable shame
When Cressy battle fatally was struck,
And all our princes captiv'd by the hand 55
Of that black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales;

Whiles that his mountain sire, on mountain standing,

Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him,
Mangle the work of nature and deface 60

The patterns that by God and by French fathers
Had twenty years been made. This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Ambassadors from Harry King of England 65

Do crave admittance to your Majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

*[Exeunt Messenger and certain
Lords.]*

You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit; for coward dogs

Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten 70

Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head.
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Enter EXETER.

Fr. King. From our brother of England?
Exe. From him; and thus he greets your Majesty: 75

He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrowed glories that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature and of nations, longs 80
To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain
By custom and the ordinance of times Unto the crown of France. That you may know

'T is no sinister nor no awkward claim 85
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd
days,

Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,
In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree; 90
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him, the native and true challenger. 95

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown

Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it.
Therefore in fierce tempest he is coming,
In thunder and in earthquake, like a Jove, 100
That, if requiring fail, he will compel;
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head 105
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens'
groans,

For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallowed in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message; 110

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further.

To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother of England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him. What to him from England? 116

Exe. Scorn and defiance, Slight regard, contempt,

And anything that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king: an if your father's High-
ness 120

Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his Majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and wombly vaultages of France Shall chide your trespass and return your mock 125

In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will; for I desire
Nothing but odds with England. To that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity, 130
I did present him with the Paris balls.

Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,

Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe;
And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference,
As we his subjects have in wonder found, 135
Between the promise of his greener days
And these he masters now. Now he weighs
time

Even to the utmost grain. That you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. [Flourish. 140]

Exe. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king

Come here himself to question our delay;
For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions.

A night is but small breath and little pause 145
To answer matters of this consequence.

[Exeunt.]

ACT [III]

[PROLOGUE]

Flourish. Enter CHORUS.

[Chor.] Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies

In motion of no less celerity

Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen

The well-appointed king at [Hampton] pier
Embark his royalty, and his brave fleet 5
With silken streamers the young Phœbus fanning.

Play with your fancies, and in them behold
Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing;
Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
To sounds confus'd; behold the threaten sails,

Borne with the invisible and creeping wind, 11
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,

Breasting the lofty surge. O, do but think
You stand upon the rivage and behold
A city on the inconstant billows dancing; 15
For so appears this fleet majestic,
Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!

Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,
And leave your England, as dead midnight
still,

Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old wo-
men, 20

Either past or not arriv'd to pith and puissance.
For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair, that will not follow
These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?

Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege; 25

Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back,

Tells Harry that the King doth offer him Katharine his daughter, and with her, to dowry, 30

Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
The offer likes not; and the nimble gunner
With linstock now the devilish cannon touches.
[Alarum, and chambers go off.]

And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit. 35]

[SCENE I. France. Before] Harfleur.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY, EXETER, BED-FORD, GLOUCESTER, [and Soldiers, with] scaling-ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more,

Or close the wall up with our English dead.
In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility;
But when the blast of war blows in our ears, 5
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage;
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head 10
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it

As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. 14
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide,
Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his full height. On, on, you noblest English,

Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof!
Fathers that, like so many Alexanders,
Have in these parts from morn till even fought,
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument. 21

Dishonour not your mothers; now attest

That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you.

Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
And teach them how to war. And you, good yeomen,

Whose limbs were made in England, show us here

The mettle of your pasture; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding, which I doubt not;

For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.

I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot!

Follow your spirit, and upon this charge
Cry, "God for Harry! England and Saint George!"

[Exeunt.] Alarum, and chambers go off.

[SCENE II. The same.]

Enter Nym, BARDOLPH, PISTOL, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on! To the breach, to the breach!

Nym. Pray thee, corporal, stay. The knocks are too hot; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives. The humour of it is too hot; that is the very plain-song of it.

Pist. The plain-song is most just, for humours do abound.

"Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die;

And sword and shield,
In bloody field,

Doth win immortal fame."

Boy. Would I were in an alehouse in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.

Pist. And I.

"If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I hie."

Boy. "As duly, but not as truly,
As bird doth sing on bough."

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. Up to the breach, you dogs! Avaunt, you cullions!

[Driving them forward.]

Pist. Be merciful, great Duke, to men of mould.

Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage,

Abate thy rage, great Duke!

Good bawcock, bate thy rage; use lenity, sweet chuck!

Nym. These be good humours! Your honour wins bad humours.

[Exeunt [all but Boy].]

Boy. As young as I am, I have observ'd these three swashers. I am boy to them all three; but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for indeed three such antics do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, he is white-liver'd and red-fac'd; by the means whereof 'a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, he hath a killing tongue and a quiet sword; by the means whereof 'a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym, he hath heard that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest 'a should be thought a coward. But his few bad words are match'd with as few good deeds; for 'a never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post when he was drunk. They will steal anything, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nym and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel. I knew by that piece of service the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers; which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service. Their villainy goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up.

[Exit.]

Enter GOWER [and FLUELLEN].

Gow. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines. The Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! Tell you the Duke, it is not so good to come to the mines; for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war. The concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, the athversary, you may discuss unto the Duke, look you, is digt himself four yard under the countermines. By Cheshu, I think 'a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, 'a faith.

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow. I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world. I will verify as much in his beard. He has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter MACMORRIS and CAPTAIN JAMY.

Gow. Here 'a comes; and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition and knowledge in the aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions. By Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say gud-day, Captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you quit the mines? Have the pioners given o'er?

Mac. By Chrish, la! 'tish ill done. The work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over. I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la! in an hour, O, 'tish ill done, 'tish ill done; by my hand, 'tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, I look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline; that is the point.

Jamy. It sall be very gud, gud feith, gud captains bath: and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me. The day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the King, and the Dukes. It is no time to discourse. The town is beseech'd, and the trumpet call us to the breach, and we talk, and, be Chrish, do nothing. 'Tis shame for us all. So God sa' me, 't is shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la!

Jamy. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, I'll de gud service, or I'll lig' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and I'll pay 't as valourously as I may, that sall I suerly do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain heard some question 'tween you tway.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation —

Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation? Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you ake the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you, being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself. So Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.

Gov. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Ah! that's a foul fault.

[A parley sounded].

Gov. The town sounds a parley.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The same.] Before the gates.

[The GOVERNOR and some Citizens on the walls; the English forces below.] Enter KING HENRY and his train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town?

This is the latest parle we will admit; Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves, Or like to men proud of destruction Defy us to our worst; for, as I am a soldier, A name that in my thoughts becomes me best, If I begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur Till in her ashes she lies buried.

The gates of mercy shall be all shut up, And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart,

In liberty of bloody hand shall range With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass

Your fresh fair virgins and your flow'ring infants.

What is it then to me, if impious War, Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends, Do with his smirch'd complexion all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation?

What is't to me, when you yourselves are cause,

If your pure maidens fall into the hand Of hot and forcing violation?

What rein can hold licentious wickedness When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless spend our vain command Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil

As send precepts to the leviathan To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur,

Take pity of your town and of your people, Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command, Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace

O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds Of heady murder, spoil, and villainy.

If not, why, in a moment look to see The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;

Your fathers taken by the silver beards, And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;

Your naked infants spitted upon pikes, Whiles the mad mothers with their howls confus'd

Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry

At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen. What say you? Will you yield, and this avoid, Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

Gov. Our expectation hath this day an end. The Dauphin, whom of succours we entreated, Returns us that his powers are yet not ready To raise so great a siege. Therefore, great King,

We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy. Enter our gates; dispose of us and ours; For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates. Come, uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,
And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French.
Use mercy to them all. For us, dear uncle,
The winter coming on, and sickness growing ⁵⁵
Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais.
To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest;
To-morrow for the march are we address.

[Flourish. [The King and his train enter the town.

[SCENE IV. The French King's palace.]

Enter KATHARINE and [ALICE] an old Gentlewoman.

Kath. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu parles bien le langage.

Alice. Un peu, madame.

Kath. Je te prie, m'enseignez; il faut que j'apprenne à parler. Comment appelez-vous la main en Anglois? ⁶

Alice. La main? Elle est appelée de hand.

Kath. De hand. Et les doigts?

Alice. Les doigts? Ma foi, j'oublie les doigts; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts? Je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres; oui, de fingres. ¹¹

Kath. La main, de hand; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon écolier; j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois vitelement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles? ¹⁵

Alice. Les ongles? Nous les appelons de nails.

Kath. De nails. Écoutez; dites-moi, si je parle bien: de hand, de fingres, et de nails.

Alice. C'est bien dit, madame; il est fort bon Anglois. ²⁰

Kath. Dites-moi l'Anglois pour le bras.

Alice. De arm, madame.

Kath. Et le coude?

Alice. D' elbow. ²⁴

Kath. D' elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

Alice. Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kath. Excusez-moi, Alice; écoutez: D' hand, de fingres, de nails, d' arma, de bilbow. ³¹

Alice. D' elbow, madame.

Kath. O Seigneur Dieu, je m'en oublie! D' elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col?

Alice. De nick, madame. ³⁵

Kath. De nick. Et le menton?

Alice. De chin.

Kath. De sin. Le col, de nick; le menton, de sin. ³⁹

Alice. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleterre.

Kath. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps. ⁴⁴

Alice. N'avez-vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné?

Kath. Non, je réciterai à vous promptement: d' hand, de fingres, de mails, —

Alice. De nails, madame.

Kath. De nails, de arm, de ilbow. ⁵⁰

Alice. Sauf votre honneur, de elbow.

Kath. Ainsi dis-je; d' elbow, de nick, et de sin. Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?

Alice. De foot, madame; et de coun. ⁵⁴

Kath. De foot et de coun! O Seigneur Dieu! ce sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user. Je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. Foh! le foot et le coun! Néanmoins, je réciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble: d' hand, de fingres, de nails, d' arm, d' elbow, de nick, de sin, de foot, de coun. ⁵⁸

Alice. Excellent, madame!

Kath. C'est assez pour une fois: allons-nous à dîner. [Exeunt.

[SCENE V. The same.]

Enter the KING OF FRANCE, the DAUPHIN, [the DUKE OF BOURBON,] the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, and others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme.

Con. An if he be not fought withal, my lord, Let us not live in France; let us quit all And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dau. O Dieu vivant! shall a few sprays of us, The emptying of our fathers' luxury, Our scions put in wild and savage stock, Spirit up so suddenly into the clouds, And overlook their grafters?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards! ¹⁰

Mort de ma vie! if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm In that nook-shotten isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle? ¹⁵

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull, On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,

A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth,

Decoet their cold blood to such valiant heat? ²⁰

And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, Seem frosty? O, for honour of our land,

Let us not hang like roping icicles Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people

Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields! Poor we may call them in their native lords. ²⁵

Dau. By faith and honour, Our madams mock at us, and plainly say

Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth ³⁰

To new-store France with bastard warriors.

Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools,

And teach lavoltas high, and swift corantos; Saying our grace is only in our heels,

And that we are most lofty runaways. ³⁵

Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald? Speed him hence.

Let him greet England with our sharp defiance, Up, princes! and, with spirit of honour edged

More sharper than your swords, hie to the field !
 Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France ; 40
 You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri, Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy ;
 Jacques Châtillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
 Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg,
 Foix, Lestrale, Bouciquault, and Charolois ; 45 High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,

For your great seats now quit you of great shames.

Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our
 land

With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur.
 Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow 50
 Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat
 The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon.
 Go down upon him, you have power enough,
 And in a captive chariot into Rouen
 Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great.
 Sorry am I his numbers are so few, 55
 His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march ;
 For I am sure, when he shall see our army,
 He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear
 And for achievement offer us his ransom. 60

Fr. King. Therefore, Lord Constable, haste on Montjoy,

And let him say to England that we send
 To know what willing ransom he will give.
 Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your Majesty. 65

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain
 with us.

Now forth, Lord Constable and princes all,
 And quickly bring us word of England's fall.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. The English camp in Picardy.]

Enter GOWER and FLUELLEN [meeting].

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen ! come you from the bridge ?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe ? 5

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon ; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my live, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not—God be praised and blessed !—any hurt in the world ; but 10 keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient lieutenant there at the pridge, I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony ; and he is a man of no estimation in the world, 15
 but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him ?

Flu. He is called Aunchient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not. 20

Enter PISTOL.

Flu. Here is the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours.

The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God ; and I have merited some love at his hands. 25

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of
 heart,

And of buxom valour, bath, by cruel fate,
 And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel,
 That goddess blind,

That stands upon the rolling restless stone— 30

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol.
 Fortune is painted blind, with a muffer afore his eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind ; and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and 35 variation ; and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls. In good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it. Fortune is an excellent moral. 40

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns
 on him ;

For he hath stolen a pax, and hanged must 'a be,—

A damned death !

Let gallows gape for dog ; let man go free,
 And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate. 45

But Exeter hath given the doom of death
 For pax of little price.

Therefore, go speak ; the Duke will hear thy voice ;

And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
 With edge of penny cord and vile reproach. 50

Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore. 54

Flu. Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at ; for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the Duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution ; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damn'd ! and figo for thy friendship ! 60

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain. [Exit.]

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal. I remember him now ; a bawd, a cutpurse. 65

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a uttered as prave words at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day. But it is very well ; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve. 69

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names ; and they will learn you by rote where services were done ; at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such 75
 a convoy ; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what terms the enemy stood on ;
 and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths : and what a beard of the general's cut and a hor- 80 rid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-wash'd wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is. If I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.] Hark you, the King is coming, and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Drum and colours. Enter KING HENRY, [GLOUCESTER], and his poor Soldiers.

God bless your Majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your Majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the pridge. The French is gone off, look you; and there is gallant and most brave passages. Marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge; but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge. I can tell your Majesty, the Duke is a prave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of the athversary hath been very great, reasonable great. Marry, for my part, I think the Duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your Majesty know the man. His face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, and flames o' fire; and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off; and we give express charge, that in our marches through the country, there be nothing compell'd from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then I know thee. What shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my King: Say thou to Harry of England: Though we seem'd dead, we did but sleep; advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuk'd him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe. Now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial. England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance; and tell him, for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my King and master; so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,

And tell thy King I do not seek him now, But could be willing to march on to Calais. Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth, Though 't is no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage, My people are with sickness much enfeebled, My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French; Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,

I thought upon one pair of English legs Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me, God,

That I do brag thus! This your air of France Hath blown that vice in me. I must repent. Go therefore, tell thy master here I am; My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk, My army but a weak and sickly guard; Yet, God before, tell him we will come on, Though France himself and such another neighbour Stand in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy.

Go, bid thy master well advise himself. If we may pass, we will; if we be hind'ed, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood

Discolour; and so, Montjoy, fare you well.

The sum of all our answer is but this:

We would not seek a battle, as we are;

Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it.

So tell your master.

Mont. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your Highness. [Exit.]

Glou. I hope they will not come upon us now.

K. Hen. We are in God's hands, brother, not in theirs.

March to the bridge; it now draws toward night.

Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves, And on to-morrow bid them march away.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VII. The French camp, near Agincourt.]

Enter the CONSTABLE OF FRANCE, the LORD RAMBOURES, ORLEANS, DAUPHIN, with others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. Would it were day!

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My Lord of Orleans, and my Lord High Constable, you talk of horse and armour?

Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world. ¹⁰

Dau. What a long night is this! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha! he bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk; ¹⁵ he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg. ²⁰

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus. He is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him. He is indeed a horse, and all other jades you may call beasts. ²⁵

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage. ³¹

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey. It is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the ³⁵ sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all. 'Tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world, familiar to us and unknown, to lay apart their ⁴⁰ particular functions and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise and began thus: "Wonder of nature,"—

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress. ⁴⁵

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my courser, for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress. ⁵⁰

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled. ⁵⁴

Dau. O then belike she was old and gentle; and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait strossers.

Con. You have good judgement in horsemanship. ⁵⁹

Dau. Be warn'd by me, then; they that ride so and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, Constable, my mistress wears his own hair. ⁶⁵

Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. "Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, et la truie lavée au boubier." Thou mak'st use of anything. ⁷⁰

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mis-treus, or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My Lord Constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it? ⁷⁵

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 't were more honour some were away. ⁸¹

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces. ⁸⁸

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be fac'd out of my way. But I would it were morning; for I would fain be about the ears of the English. ⁹²

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them. ⁹⁶

Dau. 'T is midnight; I 'll go arm myself. ^[Exit.]

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills. ¹⁰⁰

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France. ¹⁰⁶

Con. Doing is activity; and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow. He will keep that good name still. ¹¹¹

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he? ¹¹⁵

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said he car'd not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not; it is no hidden virtue in him. ¹¹⁹

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never anybody saw it but his lackey. 'T is a hooded valour; and when it appears, it will bate.

Orl. "I'll never said well."

Con. I will cap that proverb with "There is flattery in friendship." ¹²⁵

Orl. And I will take up that with "Give the devil his due."

Con. Well plac'd. There stands your friend for the devil; have at the very eye of that proverb with "A pox of the devil." ¹²⁹

Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much "A fool's bolt is soon shot."

Con. You have shot over.

Orl. 'T is not the first time you were over-shot.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My Lord High Constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents.

Con. Who hath measur'd the ground? ¹³⁷

Mess. The Lord Grandpré.

Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England, he longs not for the dawning as we do. ¹⁴¹

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away. ¹⁴⁶

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures. Their mastiffs are of unmatched courage. ¹⁵²

Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crush'd like rotten apples! You may as well say, that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion. ¹⁵⁷

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives; and then, give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils. ¹⁶²

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is the time to arm. Come, shall we about it? ¹⁶⁷

Orl. It is now two o'clock; but, let me see, by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt.]

ACT [IV]

[PROLOGUE]

[Enter CHORUS.]

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp through the foul womb of
night

The hum of either army stilly sounds, ⁵
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch;
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other's umber'd face;
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful
neighs ¹⁰

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.

The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll, ¹⁵
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.

Proud of their numbers and secure in soul,
The confident and over-justy French

Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And hide the cripple tardy-gaited Night ²⁰
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,

Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently and inly ruminate
The morning's danger; and their gesture sad, ²⁵
Investing lank-lean cheeks and war-worn coats,
Presented them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O now, who will behold
The royal captain of this ruin'd band Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent, ³⁰

Let him cry, "Praise and glory on his head!"
For forth he goes and visits all his host,
Bids them good morrow with a modest smile,
And calls them brothers, friends, and country-
men.

Upon his royal face there is no note ³⁵
How dread an army hath enrouned him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watched night,
But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint
With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty; ⁴⁰
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks.
A largess universal like the sun
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all ⁴⁵
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night.
And so our scene must to the battle fly,
Where — O for pity! — we shall much disgrace
With four or five most vile and ragged foils, ⁵⁰
Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous,
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see,
Minding true things by what their mockeries
be. [Exit.]

[SCENE I. The English camp at Agincourt.]

Enter KING HENRY, BEDFORD, and GLOUCESTER.

K. Hen. Gloucester, 't is true that we are in great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty!
There is some soul of goodness in things evil, ⁵
Would men observingly distil it out;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward consciences,
And preachers to us all, admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end. ¹⁰
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham.
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France. ¹⁵

Erp. Not so, my liege; this lodging likes me
better,
Since I may say, "Now lie I like a king."

K. Hen. 'T is good for men to love their present pains

Upon example ; so the spirit is eased ; 19
 And when the mind is quick'ned, out of doubt,
 The organs, though defunct and dead before,
 Break up their drowsy grave and newly move,
 With casted slough and fresh legerity.
 Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers

both, 20
 Commend me to the princes in our camp ;
 Do my good morrow to them, and anon
 Desire them all to my pavilion.

Glou. We shall, my liege.

Erp. Shall I attend your Grace ?

K. Hen. No, my good knight ;

Go with my brothers to my lords of England. 20
 And my bosom must debate a while,
 And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble
 Harry ! [Exeunt [all but King].]

K. Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart ! thou speak'st cheerfully.

Enter PISTOL.

Pist. Qui va là ? 25

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me ; art thou officer ?
 Or art thou base, common, and popular ?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trail'st thou the puissant pike ? 40

K. Hen. Even so. What are you ?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the Emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the
 King.

Pist. The King's a bawcock, and a heart of gold,

A lad of life, an imp of fame ; 45
 Of parents good, of fist most valiant.

I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string
 I love the lovely bully. What is thy name ?

K. Hen. Harry le Roy.

Pist. Le Roy ! a Cornish name. Art thou of Cornish crew ? 50

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Know'st thou Fluellen ?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate

Upon Saint Davy's day. 55

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about
 yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend ?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee, then ! 60

K. Hen. I thank you. God be with you !

Pist. My name is Pistol call'd. [Exit.]

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Captain Fluellen ! 64

Flu. So ! in the name of Jesu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal world, when the true and aunchient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kept.
 If you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle 70 nor pibble pabble in Pompey's camp. I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise. 75

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud ; you hear him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb ? In your own conscience, now ? 81

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you and beseech you that you will. [Exeunt [Gower and Fluellen].]

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion, 85

There is much care and valour in this Welsh-
 man.

Enter three soldiers, JOHN BATES, ALEXANDER COURT, and MICHAEL WILLIAMS.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder ?

Bates. I think it be ; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day. 90

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there ?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you ? 95

K. Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman. I pray you, what thinks he of our estate ?

K. Hen. Even as men wreck'd upon a sand, that look to be wash'd off the next tide. 101

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the King ?

K. Hen. No ; nor it is not meet he should.
 For, though I speak it to you, I think the King is but a man, as I am. The violet smells to [105 him as it does to me ; the element shows to him as it doth to me ; all his senses have but human conditions. His ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man ; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, [110 yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore, when he sees reason of fears as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are ; yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army. 117

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will ; but I believe, as cold a night as 't is,
 he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck ;
 and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here. 122

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the King : I think he would not wish himself anywhere but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone ; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved. 128

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds. Methinks I could not die anywhere so contented as in the King's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable. 134

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the King's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the King wipes the crime of it out of us. 139

Will. But if the cause be not good, the King himself hath a heavy reckoning to make, when all those legs and arms and heads, choppt off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day and cry all, "We died at such a place"; some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afraid there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of anything, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the King that led them to it; who to disobey were against all proportion of subjection. 153

K. Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him; or if a servant, under his master's command transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconcil'd iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so. The King is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some peradventure have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of Peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God. War is his beadle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punish'd for before-breach of the King's laws in now the King's quarrel. Where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would be safe, they perish. Then if they die unprovided, no more is the King guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the King's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained; and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, He let him outlive that day to see His greatness and to teach others how they should prepare. 196

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head, the King is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him. 201

K. Hen. I myself heard the King say he would not be ransom'd.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut, he may be ransom'd, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after. 208

Will. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch! You may as well go about to turn the sun to ice with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! Come, 'tis a foolish saying. 215

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round. I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live. 220

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet; then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel. 225

Will. Here's my glove; give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap. If ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, "This is my glove," by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear. 232

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the King's company. 237

Will. Keep thy word; fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, be friends. We have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon. [Exeunt soldiers.] 241

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders; but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the King himself will be a clipper. Upon the King! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, Our children, and our sins lay on the King! We must bear all. O hard condition, Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel But his own wringing! What infinite heart's-ease

Must kings neglect, that private men enjoy! And what have kings, that privates have not too,

Save ceremony, save general ceremony?

And what art thou, thou idol Ceremony?
What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more
Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers?
What are thy rents? What are thy comings
in?

O Ceremony, show me but thy worth! 261
What is thy soul of adoration?

Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form,

Creating awe and fear in other men?
Wherein thou art less happy being fear'd 265

Than they in fearing.

What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage
sweet,

But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great great-
ness,

And bid thy Ceremony give thee cure!
Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out 270

With titles blown from adulation?

Will it give place to flexure and low bending?
Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee,

Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream,

That play'st so subtly with a king's repose; 275
I am a king that find thee, and I know

'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,

The intertissed robe of gold and pearl,
The farced title running 'fore the King, 280

The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world,

No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous Ceremony, —
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,

Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave, 285
Who with a body fill'd and vacant mind

Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread,

Never sees horrid night, the child of hell,
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set 290

Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and all night
Sleeps in Elysium; next day after dawn,

Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse,
And follows so the ever-running year,

With profitable labour, to his grave:
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch, 295

Winding up days with toil and nights with sleep,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king.

The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it, but in gross brain little wots

What watch the King keeps to maintain the
peace,

Whose hours the peasant best advantages. 301

Enter ERPINGHAM.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you.

K. Hen. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent.

I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. 305

K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts.

Possess them not with fear. Take from them
now

The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them. Not to-day, O
Lord,

O, not to-day, think not upon the fault 310
My father made in compassing the crown!

I Richard's body have interred new,
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears

Than from it issued forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay, 315

Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built

Two chantries, where the sad and solemn priests

Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do;
Though all that I can do is nothing worth, 320

Since that my penitence comes after all,
Imploping pardon.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. My liege!

K. Hen. My brother Gloucester's voice? Ay;
I know thy errand, I will go with thee. 325

The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The French camp.]

Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, RAMBURES, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords!

Dau. Montez à cheval! My horse, varlet!
lackey! ha!

Orl. O brave spirit!
Dau. Via! les eaux et la terre.

Orl. Rien puis? L'air et le feu. 3
Dau. Ciel, cousin Orleans.

Enter CONSTABLE.

Now, my Lord Constable!

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh!

Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides,

That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And dout them with superfluous courage, ha! 11

Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood?

How shall we, then, behold their natural tears?

Enter MESSENGER.

Mess. The English are embattl'd, you French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse! 15

Do but behold yond poor and starved band,
And your fair show shall suck away their souls,

Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands;

Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins 20
To give each naked curtle-axe a stain,

That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheathe for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them,

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.

'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, 25

That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants,
Who in unnecessary action swarm
About our squares of battle, were enow
To purge this field of such a hilding foe,
Though we upon this mountain's basis by 30
Took stand for idle speculation,
But that our honours must not. What's to say?
A very little little let us do,
And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound
The tucket sonance and the note to mount; 35
For our approach shall so much dare the field
That England shall crouch down in fear and yield.

Enter GRANDPRÉ.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?

Yond island carrions, desperate of their bones,
Ill-favour'dly become the morning field. 40
Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose,
And our air shakes them passing scornfully.
Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host

And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps;
The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks 45
With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor jades
Lob down their heads, drooping the hides and hips,

The gum down-roping from their pale-dead
eyes,
And in their pale dull mouths the gimball bit Lies foul with chew'd grass, still, and motionless; 50

And their executors, the knavish crows,
Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit itself in words
To demonstrate the life of such a battle,
In life so lifeless as it shows itself. 55

Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death.

Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits

And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guard; on to the field! 60

I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste. Come, come, away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The English camp.]

Enter GLOUCESTER, BEDFORD, EXETER, ER-PINGHAM, with all his host: SALISBURY and WESTMORELAND.

Glou. Where is the King?

Bed. The King himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.

Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds. 5

God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge.

If we no more meet till we meet in heaven,
Then, joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford,
My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord
Exeter,

And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu! 10
Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury, and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord; fight valiantly to-
day!

And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.
[Exit Salisbury.]

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness, 15
Princely in both.

Enter the KING.

West. O that we now had here

But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work to-day!

K. Hen. What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? No, my fair cousin.
If we are mark'd to die, we are enow 20
To do our country loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man
more.

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost; 25
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires;
But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England. 30

God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour

As one man more, methinks, would share from
me

For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one
more!

Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,

That he which hath no stomach to this fight, 35
Let him depart. His passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse.

We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian. 40
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named,

And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age,

Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours, 45
And say, "To-morrow is Saint Crispian."

Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say, "These wounds I had on Crispian's
day."

Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember with advantages 50
What feats he did that day. Then shall our names,

Familiar in his mouth as household words,
Harry the King, Bedford, and Exeter,

Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
Be in their flowing cups freshly rememb'red. 55

This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispian Crispian shall ne'er go by,

From this day to the ending of the world,
 But we in it shall be remembered,
 We few, we happy few, we band of brothers. ⁶⁰
 For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
 Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
 This day shall gentle his condition;
 And gentlemen in England now a-bed Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here, ⁶⁵
 And hold their manhoods cheap whiles any speaks
 That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Re-enter SALISBURY.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed.
 The French are bravely in their battles set,
 And will with all expedience charge on us. ⁷⁰
K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.
West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!
K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?
West. God's will! my liege, would you and I alone,
 Without more help, could fight this royal battle! ⁷⁵
K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwish'd five thousand men,
 Which likes me better than to wish us one.
 You know your places. God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter MONTJOY.

Mont. Once more I come to know of thee,
 King Harry,
 If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound, ⁸⁰
 Before thy most assured overthrow;
 For certainly thou art so near the gulf, Thou needs must be englutted. Besides, in mercy,
 The Constable desires thee thou wilt mind
 Thy followers of repentance; that their souls ⁸⁵
 May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
 From off these fields, where, wretches, their poor bodies
 Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?
Mont. The Constable of France.
K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back: ⁹⁰
 Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
 Good God! why should they mock poor fellows
 thus?

The man that once did sell the lion's skin
 While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting
 him.

A many of our bodies shall no doubt ⁹⁵
 Find native graves, upon the which, I trust,
 Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;
 And those that leave their valiant bones in
 France,

Dying like men, though buried in your dung-hills,

They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them, ¹⁰⁰

And draw their honours reeking up to heaven;

Leaving their earthly parts to choke your
 clime,
 The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France.

Mark then abounding valour in our English,
 That being dead, like to the bullet's grazing, ¹⁰⁵
 Break out into a second course of mischief,
 Killing in relapse of mortality.

Let me speak proudly: tell the Constable
 We are but warriors for the working-day.
 Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd ¹¹⁰
 With rainy marching in the painful field;
 There's not a piece of feather in our host —
 Good argument, I hope, we will not fly —
 And time hath worn us into slovenry;
 But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim; ¹¹⁵
 And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night
 They'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck
 The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers'
 heads

And turn them out of service. If they do this —
 As, if God please, they shall, — my ransom
 then ¹²⁰

Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour.

Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald.
 They shall have none, I swear, but these my
 joints;

Which if they have as I will leave 'em them,
 Shall yield them little, tell the Constable. ¹²⁵

Mont. I shall, King Harry. And so fare thee
 well;

Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.]

K. Hen. I fear thou'lt once more come again for ransom.

Enter YORK.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg

The leading of the vaward. ¹³⁰

K. Hen. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away;

And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
 [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. The field of battle.]

Alarum. Excursions. Enter PISTOL, FRENCH SOLDIER, and BOY.

Pist. Yield, cur!
Fr. Sol. Je pense que vous êtes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.

Pist. Qualitie calmeie custure me! Art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? Discuss. ¹³⁵

Fr. Sol. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O, Signieur Dew should be a gentle-
 man.

Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark:
 O Signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox,
 Except, O signieur, thou do give to me ¹⁴⁰
 Egregious ransom.

Fr. Sol. O, prenez misericorde! ayez pitié de moi!

Pist. Moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys,

Or I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat ¹⁴⁵
 In drops of crimson blood.

Fr. Sol. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras ?

Pist. Brass, cur !
Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, 20
Offer'st me brass ?

Fr. Sol. O pardonnez moi !

Pist. Say'st thou me so ? Is that a ton of moys ?

Come hither, boy ; ask me this slave in French
What is his name. 25

Boy. Écoutez : comment êtes-vous appelé ?

Fr. Sol. Monsieur le Fer.

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer ! I'll fer him, and firke him, and ferret him. Discuss the same in French unto him. 31

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firke.

Pist. Bid him prepare ; for I will cut his throat.

Fr. Sol. Que dit-il, monsieur ? 35

Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous faites vous prêt ; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Owy, cuppelle gorge, permafoy,
Peasant ; unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns ; 40
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour le Dieu, me pardonner ! Je suis le gentilhomme de bonne maison ; gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus. 45

Pist. What are his words ?

Boy. He prays you to save his life. He is a gentleman of a good house ; and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I 50
The crowns will take.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il ?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier ; néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchisement. 55

Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remerciemens ; et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre. 61

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you upon his knees, a thousand thanks ; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one, as he thinks, the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy seigneur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show. Follow me ! 65

Boy. Suivez-vous le grand capitaine. [Exeunt Pistol, and French Soldier.] I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart ; but the saying is true, "The empty vessel makes the greatest sound." Bardolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil ! the old play, that every one may pare his 75 nails with a wooden dagger ; and they are both hang'd ; and so would this be, if he durst steal anything adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys with the luggage of our camp. The French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it ; for there is none to guard it but boys. [Exit. 83

[SCENE V. Another part of the field.]

Enter CONSTABLE, ORLEANS, BOURBON, DAUPHIN, and RAMBURES.

Con. O diable !

Orl. O seigneur ! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu !

Dau. Mort de ma vie ! all is confounded, all !
Reproach and everlasting shame
Sits mocking in our plumes. O méchante fortune ! 85

Do not run away. [A short alarm.

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame ! let's stab ourselves.

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for ?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom ?

Bour. Shame and eternal shame, nothing but shame ! 90

Let's die in honour !—Once more back again !
And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand,
Like a base pandar, hold the chamber door
Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, 95
His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now !

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enow yet living in the field
To smother up the English in our throngs, 100
If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now ! I'll to the throng.

Let life be short, else shame will be too long. [Exeunt.

[SCENE VI. Another part of the field.]

Alarm. Enter KING HENRY and his train, with prisoners.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice valiant countrymen.

But all's not done ; yet keep the French the field.

Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your Majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle ? Thrice within this hour

I saw him down ; thrice up again, and fighting.
From helmet to the spur all blood he was. 105

Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie,

Larding the plain ; and by his bloody side,
Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies. 110

Suffolk first died ; and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteeped,
And takes him by the beard ; kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawn upon his face.

He cries aloud, "Tarry, my cousin Suffolk ! 115
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven ;

Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast,
 As in this glorious and well-foughten field
 We kept together in our chivalry! " 19
 Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up.
 He smil'd me in the face, raught me his hand,
 And, with a feeble gripe, says, "Dear my lord, Commend my service to my sovereign."
 So did he turn and over Suffolk's neck 24
 He threw his wounded arm and kiss'd his lips;
 And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
 A testament of noble-ending love.
 The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd
 Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd;
 But I had not so much of man in me, 30
 And all my mother came into mine eyes
 And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not;
 For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
 With mistful eyes, or they will issue too.

[Alarum.
 But, hark! what new alarum is this same? 35
 The French have reinforce'd their scatter'd men.
 Then every soldier kill his prisoners;
 Give the word through. [Exeunt.

[SCENE VII. Another part of the field.]

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'Tis expressly against the law of arms. 'Tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer't; in your conscience, now, is it not? 4

Gow. 'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive; and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle ha' done this slaughter. Besides, they have burn'd and carried away all that was in the King's tent; wherefore the King, most worthily, hath caus'd every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king! 11

Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, Captain Gower. What call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born!

Gow. Alexander the Great. 15

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations. 19

Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon. His father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porn. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and 25
 Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth.
 It is call'd Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other 30 river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both.
 If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. 35 Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, and his cholers, and his moods, and his displeasures, and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicated in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Cleitus. 41 Gow. Our King is not like him in that. He never kill'd any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made and finished. I speak but in the figures 45 and comparisons of it. As Alexander kill'd his friend Cleitus, being in his ales and his cups;
 so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his good judgements, turn'd away the fat knight with the great belly doublet. He 50 was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks; I have forgot his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he. I'll tell you there is good men porn at Monmouth. 56

Gow. Here comes his Majesty.

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY and [forces;
WARWICK, GLOUCESTER, EXETER,] with prisoners. Flourish.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to
 France

Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald;
 Ride thou unto the horsemen on yond hill. 60
 If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
 Or void the field; they do offend our sight.
 If they 'll do neither, we will come to them,
 And make them skirr away, as swift as stones
 Enforced from the old Assyrian slings. 65
 Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have,
 And not a man of them that we shall take Shall taste our mercy. Go and tell them so.

Enter MONTJOY.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French,
 my liege.

Glou. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to
 be. 70

K. Hen. How now! what means this, herald?
 Know'st thou not

That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?

Com'st thou again for ransom?

Mont. No, great King;

I come to thee for charitable license,
 That we may wander o'er this bloody field: 75
 To book our dead, and then to bury them;
 To sort our nobles from our common men.
 For many of our princes — woe the while! —
 Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
 So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs 80
 In blood of princes; and their wounded steeds
 Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage
 Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,

Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great
 King,

To view the field in safety, and dispose 85
 Of their dead bodies!

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald,
 I know not if the day be ours or no;
 For yet a many of your horsemen peer
 And gallop o'er the field.

Mont.

The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it!

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt,

Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an 't please your Majesty, and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most prave pattle here in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your Majesty says very true. If your Majesties is rememb'ed of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which, your Majesty know, to this hour is an honourable badge of the service; and I do believe your Majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour; For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your Majesty's Welsh blood out of your pody, I can tell you that. God pless it and preserve it, as long as it pleases His grace, and His majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. By Jeshu, I am your Majesty's countryman, I care not who know it. I will confess it to all the 'orld. I need not to be ashamed of your Majesty, praised be God, so long as your Majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep me so!

Enter WILLIAMS.

Our heralds go with him;
Bring me just notice of the numbers dead
On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither.

[Exeunt Herald with Montjoy.]

Ere. Soldier, you must come to the King.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An 't please your Majesty, 't is the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An 't please your Majesty, a rascal that swagger'd with me last night; who, if alive and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear; or if I can see my glove in his cap, which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear if alive, I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? Is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an 't please your Majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your Grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjurd, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce, as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and His earth, in my conscience, la!

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who serv'st thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literated in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege.

K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together, I pluck'd this glove from his helm. If any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person. If thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Flu. Your Grace doo's me as great honours as can be desir'd in the hearts of his subjects. I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggriev'd at this glove; that is all. But I would fain see it once, an please God of His grace that I might see.

K. Hen. Know'st thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him.

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester, Follow Fluellen closely at the heels.

The glove which I have given him for a favour
May haply purchase him a box o' the ear.
It is the soldier's; I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick.
If that the soldier strike him, as I judge
By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,
Some sudden mischief may arise of it;
For I do know Fluellen valiant
And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury.
Follow, and see there be no harm between them.
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter.

[SCENE VIII. Before King Henry's pavilion.]

Enter GOWER and WILLIAMS.

Will. I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter FLUELLEN.

Flu. God's will and his pleasure, captain, I beseech you now, come apace to the King. There is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove! I know the glove is a glove.

Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it.

[Strikes him.]

Flu. 'Sblood! an arrant traitor as any is in the universal world, or in France, or in England!

Gow. How now, sir! you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, Captain Gower. I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor. 16

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his Majesty's name, apprehend him; he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's. 19

Enter WARWICK and GLOUCESTER.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is — praised be God for it! — a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his Majesty.

Enter KING HENRY and EXETER.

K. Hen. How now! what's the matter? 25

Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your Grace, has struck the glove which your Majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon. 28

Will. My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promis'd to wear it in his cap. I promis'd to strike him, if he did. I met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word. 34

Flu. Your Majesty hear now, saving your Majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is. I hope your Majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, that this is the glove of Alençon that your Majesty is give me; in your conscience, now? 40

K. Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier. Look, here is the fellow of it.

"Twas I, indeed, thou promisedst to strike; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu. An it please your Majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world. 47

K. Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will. All offences, my lord, come from the heart. Never came any from mine that might offend your Majesty. 51

K. Hen. It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will. Your Majesty came not like yourself. You appear'd to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowliness; and what your Highness suffer'd under that shape, I beseech you take it for your own fault and not mine; for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore, I beseech your Highness, pardon me. 60

K. Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,

And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow; And wear it for an honour in thy cap Till I do challenge it. Give him his crowns; And, captain, you must needs be friends with him. 65

Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you; and I pray you to serve God, and keep you out of prawls, and prabbles, and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warrant you, it is the better for you. 71

Will. I will none of your money.

Flu. It is with a good will; I can tell you, it will serve you to mend your shoes. Come, wherefore should you be so pashful? Your shoes is not so good. 'Tis a good silling, I warrant you, or I will change it. 77

Enter [an English] HERALD.

K. Hen. Now, herald, are the dead numb'red?

Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.

K. Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle? 80

Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the King;

John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciqualt; Of other lords and barons, knights and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French 85

That in the field lie slain; of princes, in this number,

And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead One hundred twenty-six; added to these,

Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which, 90

Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights;

So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries;

The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,

And gentlemen of blood and quality. 95

The names of those their nobles that lie dead: Charles Delabreth, High Constable of France;

Jacques of Chatillon, Admiral of France; The master of the cross-bows, Lord Rambures;

Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dauphin, 100

John Duke of Alençon, Anthony Duke of Brabant,

The brother to the Duke of Burgundy, And Edward Duke of Bar; of lusty earls, Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconberg and Foix, Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Le- 105

strale. Here was a royal fellowship of death!

Where is the number of our English dead? [Herald shows him another paper.]

Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk, Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire;

None else of name; and of all other men 110

But five and twenty. — O God, thy arm was here;

And not to us, but to thy arm alone, Ascribe we all! When, without stratagem,

But in plain shock and even play of battle, Was ever known so great and little loss 115

On one part and on the other? Take it, God, For it is none but thine!

Exe. 'Tis wonderful!
K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village;

And be it death proclaimed through our host To boast of this or take that praise from God 120

Which is His only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your Majesty, to tell how many is kill'd?

K. Hen. Yes, captain, but with this acknowledgement,

That God fought for us. 125

Flu. Yes, my conscience, He did us great good.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites,
Let there be sung Non nobis and Te Deum,
The dead with charity enclos'd in clay,
And then to Calais; and to England then, 130
Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

[PROLOGUE]

Enter CHORUS.

[Chor.] Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story,

That I may prompt them; and of such as have,
I humbly pray them to admit the excuse
Of time, of numbers, and due course of things,
Which cannot in their huge and proper life 5
Be here presented. Now we bear the King Toward Calais; grant him there; there seen,
Heave him away upon your winged thoughts
Athwart the sea. Behold, the English beach Pales in the flood with men, with wives and boys, 10

Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea,

Which like a mighty whiffler 'fore the King
Seems to prepare his way. So let him land,
And solemnly see him set on to London. 15
So swift a pace hath thought that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath,
Where that his lords desire him to have borne
His bruised helmet and his bended sword
Before him through the city. He forbids it, Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride; 20

Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent
Quite from himself to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working-house of
thought,

How London doth pour out her citizens!
The mayor and all his brethren in best sort, 25
Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,
Go forth and fetch their conquering Cæsar in;
As, by a lower but loving likelihood, 29
Were now the general of our gracious empress,
As in good time he may, from Ireland com-
ing,

Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
To welcome him! Much more, and much more
cause,

Did they this Harry. Now in London place
him; 35

As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the King of England's stay at home, —
The Emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them; — and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd, 40

Till Harry's back-return again to France.
There must we bring him; and myself have play'd

The interim, by rememb'ring you 't is past.
Then brook abridgement, and your eyes advance

After your thoughts, straight back again to France. [Exit. 45]

[SCENE I. France. The English camp.]

Enter FLUELLEN and GOWER.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things. I will tell you asse my friend, Captain Gower. The rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, praggling knave, Pis- [5] tol, which you and yourself and all the world know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits, he is come to me and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I 10 could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter PISTOL.

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock. 16

Flu. 'T is no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God pless you, Aunchient Pistol!
you scurfy, lousy knave, God pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? Dost thou thirst, base Trojan, 20

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurfy, lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek. Because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affec- [25]
tions and your appetites and your disgestions doo's not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.
Flu. There is one goat for you. (Strikes him.) Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat
it? 31

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when God's will is. I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals. Come, there is sauce for it. (Strikes him.) You call'd me [35] yesterday mountain-squire; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain; you have astonish'd
him. 41

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days.
Bite, I pray you; it is good for your green wound and your bloody coxcomb. 45

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too, and ambiguities,

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge. I eat and eat, I swear — ⁵⁰

Flu. Eat, I pray you. Will you have some more sauce to your leek? There is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost see I eat. ⁵⁴

Flu. Much good do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good. ⁶⁰

Flu. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat. ⁶⁶

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you anything, I will pay you in cudgels. You shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. ⁷¹

[Exit.]

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, [76] and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeing and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an [80] English cudgel. You find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well. [Exit.]

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now? ⁸⁵

News have I, that my Doll is dead i' the spital Of malady of France;
And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.
Old I do wax; and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgell'd. Well, bawd I'll turn, ⁹⁰
And something lean to cuspouse of quick hand.
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal;
And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars,
And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. ⁹⁵

[Exit.]

[SCENE II. France. A royal palace.]

Enter, at one door, KING HENRY, EXETER, BEDFORD, [GLOUCESTER,] WARWICK, [WEST-MORELAND,] and other Lords; at another, the FRENCH KING, QUEEN ISABEL, [the PRINCESS KATHARINE, ALICE, and other Ladies;] the DUKE OF BURGUNDY, and other French.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Unto our brother France, and to our sister, Health and fair time of day; joy and good wishes

To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;

And, as a branch and member of this royalty, ⁵
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy;
And, princes French, and peers, health to you all!

Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face,

Most worthy brother England; fairly met! ¹⁰
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,

Of this good day and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them ¹⁵

Against the French that met them in their bent

The fatal balls of murdering basilisks.

The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love. ²⁰

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear.

Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.

Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love,
Great Kings of France and England! That I have labour'd,

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours, ²⁵

To bring your most imperial Majesties
Unto this bar and royal interview,
Your mightiness on both parts best can witness.

Since then my office hath so far prevail'd
That, face to face and royal eye to eye, ³⁰

You have congregated, let it not disgrace me,
If I demand, before this royal view,

What rub or what impediment there is,
Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace,
Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births, ³⁵

Should not in this best garden of the world,
Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage?

Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd,

And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps,
Corrupting in it own fertility. ⁴⁰

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart,
Unpruned dies; her hedges even-pleach'd,
Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair,
Put forth disorder'd twigs; her fallow leas

The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory ⁴⁵

Doth root upon, while that the coulter rusts
That should deracinate such savagery;

The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth

The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover,

Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, ⁵⁰

Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kexes, burs,

Losing both beauty and utility;
And all our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges,

Defective in their natures, grow to wildness. ⁵⁵

Even so our houses and ourselves and children

Have lost, or do not learn for want of time,
The sciences that should become our country;

But grow like savages, — as soldiers will
That nothing do but meditate on blood, — 60
To swearing and stern looks, diffus'd attire,

And everything that seems unnatural.
Which to reduce into our former favour
You are assembled; and my speech entreats
That I may know the let, why gentle Peace 65
Should not expel these inconveniences
And bless us with her former qualities.

K. Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,

Whose want gives growth to the imperfections

Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands; 71
Whose tenours and particular effects
You have enschedul'd briefly in your hands.

Bur. The King hath heard them; to the which as yet. 74

There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well, then, the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.

Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'er-glanc'd the articles. Pleaseth your Grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed 80
To re-survey them, we will suddenly
Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle Exeter,

And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester,

Warwick, and Huntingdon, go with the King;
And take with you free power to ratify, 86
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageous for our dignity,
Anything in or out of our demands,
And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister, 90

Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them.

Haply a woman's voice may do some good,
When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here
with us: 95

She is our capital demand, compris'd
Within the fore-rank of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all except Henry, Katharine and Alice.]

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair,
Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear 100
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your Majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your England.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate? 107

Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell wat is “like me.”

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel. 111

Kath. Que dit-il? Que je suis semblable à les anges?

Alice. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it. 117

Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? That the tongues of men are full of deceits?

Alice. Oui, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits: dat is de Princess. 123

K. Hen. The Princess is the better Englishwoman. I' faith, Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding. I am glad thou canst speak no better English; for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say, “I love you”; then if you 130 urge me farther than to say, “Do you in faith?” I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; I' faith, do; and so clap hands and a bargain. How say you, lady?

Kath. *Sauf votre honneur, me understand
well.* 136

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me; for the one, I have neither words nor measure, and for the other I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable mea- 140 sure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife. Or if I might buffet for 145 my love, or bound my horse for her favours,
I could lay on like a butcher and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in pro-testation; only downright oaths, which 150
I never use till urg'd, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of anything he sees there, let thine eye be 155 thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier. If thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou liv'st, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy; for he per- 161 force must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker 165 is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop;
a black beard will turn white; a curl'd pate will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow; but a good heart, 170

Kate, is the sun and the moon; or rather the sun and not the moon; for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what say'st thou then to my love? [176] Speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I should love de enemy of France? 179

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it, I will have it all mine; and, Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine. 186

Kath. I cannot tell wat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je [190] quand sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de moi,—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—donc votre est France et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to [195] speak so much more French. I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le François que vous parlez, il est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle. 201

K. Hen. No, faith, is't not, Kate; but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly-falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English: canst thou love me? 206

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me; and at night, when you come into your [210] closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart. But, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou beest mine, [215] Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shalt not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, [220] half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? Shall we not? What say'st thou, my fair flower-de-luce?

Kath. I do not know dat. 225

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise. Do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and for my English moiety, take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus-belle Katharine du monde, mon très-cher et dévot dresseé? 232

Kath. Your Majesty ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France. 235

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate; by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and [240] untempering effect of my visage. Now, be-shrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I [245] fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear. My comfort is, that old age, that ill layer up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face. Thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better; [250] and therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say, Harry of England, I am thine; which [255] word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud, England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow [260] with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English. Will thou have me? 266

Kath. Dat is as it shall please de roi mon pere.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me. 270

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and call you my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez! Ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaïssez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une indigne serviteur. Excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon très-puissant seigneur. 271

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames et demoiselles pour être baisées devant leur nocés, il n'est pas la coutume de France. 281

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,—I cannot tell wat is baiser en English. 286

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your Majesty entendre better que moi.

K. Hen. It is not the fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Oui, vraiment.

K. Hen. O Kate, nice customs curtsy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's [295] fashion. We are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss; therefore, patiently and [300] yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate; there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father. 306

Re-enter the FRENCH POWER and the ENGLISH LORDS.

Bur. God save your Majesty! My royal cousin, teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English. 311

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness. 317

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up Love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked and blind. Can you blame her then, being a maid yet ros'd over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to. 326

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforces.

Bur. They are then excus'd, my lord, when they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking. 332

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning; for maids, well summer'd and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes; and then they will endure handling, which before would not abide looking on. 338

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves. 342

K. Hen. It is so; and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way. 346

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them respectively, the cities turn'd into a maid; for they are all girdled with maiden walls that war hath [never] ent'red. 350

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her; so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will. 356

Fr. King. We have consented to all terms of reason.

K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?

West. The King hath granted every article;

His daughter first, and then in sequel all, According to their firm proposed natures. 363

Eze. Only he hath not yet subscribed this: where your Majesty demands, that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your Highness in this form and with this addition, in French, Notre très-cher fils Henri, Roi d'Angleterre, Héritier de France; and thus in Latin, Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Angliæ, et Hæres Franciæ. 376

Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,

But your request shall make me let it pass.

K. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance,

Let that one article rank with the rest;

And thereupon give me your daughter. 375

Fr. King. Take her, fair son, and from her blood raise up

Issue to me; that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale

With envy of each other's happiness,

May cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction 380

Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance

His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.

Lords. Amen!

K. Hen. Now, welcome, Kate; and bear me witness all, 385

That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen, [Flourish.]

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages,

Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love, So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal, 390

That never may ill office, or fell jealousy, Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,

Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms,

To make divorce of their incorporate league; That English may as French, French Englishmen, 395

Receive each other. God speak this Amen!

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage; on which day,

My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers', for surety of our leagues. 400 Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me; And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be! [Sennet. Exeunt.]

[EPILOGUE]

Enter CHORUS.

[Chor.] Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,

Our bending author hath pursu'd the story,

In little room confining mighty men, Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time, but in that small-most greatly lived
This star of England. Fortune made his
sword,
By which the world's best garden he achieved,
And of it left his son imperial lord.

Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd King
Of France and England, did this king succeed;
Whose state so many had the managing,
That they lost France and made his England
bleed;
Which oft our stage hath shown; and, for their sake,
In your fair minds let this acceptance take.
[Exit.]

THE THREE PARTS OF HENRY THE SIXTH

THE three parts of Henry VI present a more difficult problem with regard to authorship than any other group contained in the First Folio. The obscurities caused by the processes of revision and collaboration are increased by the fact that the plays belong to the period of Shakespeare's apprenticeship, when it is to be presumed that his style was less individual and more under the influence of his predecessors than it was later.

The First Part of Henry VI is not found in print till it appears in the First Folio. But on March 3, 159½, a play called Henry VI was acted at the Rose Theatre by Lord Strange's company, and had a successful run. From a reference by Nash we learn that Talbot had been a popular figure in a recent play, and this may have been our 1 Henry VI, either as we have it, or in an earlier form.

As to authorship, there is no external evidence but the fact of its inclusion in the First Folio. Internal evidence has led almost all critics to the conclusion that it is the work of several hands. But there is little general agreement as to who the other dramatists were, and which parts ought to be assigned to each. Shakespeare is usually credited with the scene (ii. iv.) in the Temple Gardens, in which the red and white roses are chosen as emblems of the rival houses; by many with the wooing of Margaret by Suffolk (v. iii.); and by others, with the last fight of Talbot (iv. ii.-vii.). His collaborators, or, according to others, his predecessors, in the construction of the drama, are supposed to have been Marlowe and Greene, with less assurance Peele, and with still less Lodge. But the grounds of the assignment of the various passages to these authors are in the highest degree precarious.

The material for the plot was drawn chiefly from the Chronicles of Holinshed, or of Halle, whose narrative for this period Holinshed paraphrases. A few details may have been derived from Fabian. The material thus obtained was treated with great freedom. Verbal borrowings are very rare, and chronological sequence is often entirely disregarded. Thus the calamities to the English reported by the First Messenger in i. i. as having occurred by the date of the funeral of Henry V in 1422 are either quite unhistorical, as in the case of the loss of Orleans and Poitiers, which were not held by the English at that time, or are antedated by from seven to twenty-nine years, as in the case of the loss of Rheims, Guisors, Paris, and Guienne. Again, Talbot's death in the drama precedes the capture of Jeanne d'Arc; but in fact he lived till 1453, while the Maid was burned in 1431. The reconciliation which she is represented as bringing about between Burgundy and Charles VII did not occur till four years after her death. Nor is there more care for internal consistency. Paris is represented as lost by the English in i. i., yet Henry VI is crowned there in iv. i., and in v. ii. the Parisians are revolting to the French. Several picturesque incidents have no basis in the chronicle. Such are the interview of Talbot with the Countess of Auvergne in ii. iii., and the plucking of the roses in iii. iv. 28-45, with its sequel in iv. i. 78-161. The device of disguising soldiers as countrymen bearing sacks for the capture of Rouen is unhistorical. Rouen was not lost by the English till 1449; but a trick similar to that in the play is described by Holinshed as having been used by the French for the capture of Cornill in 1441.

In the case of 2 and 3 Henry VI, the situation is complicated by the existence of two other plays on the same subject, which contain a large amount of matter in common with the two Shakespearean dramas. The First Part of the Contention of the two famous Houses of Yorke and Lancaster was printed in quarto in 1594, reprinted in 1600, and again with alterations in 1619. The True Tragedie of Richard Duke of Yorke appeared in quarto in 1595, was reprinted in 1600, and again with alterations in 1619. These two third editions formed a single quarto, called The Whole Contention. The Second and Third Parts of Henry VI are found first in the Folio of 1623. "Out of 3075 lines, there are in Part 2 some 1715 new lines; some 840 altered lines (many but very slightly altered); and some 520 old lines. In Part 3, out of 2902 lines, there are about 1021 new lines, about 871 altered lines, and about 1010 old lines." (J. Lee.) With regard to the authorship of these plays a great variety of views has been put forth, ranging from the ascription of all four to Shakespeare to the substantial denial of any significant Shakespearean element in any of them. As to chronological order, some have argued that The First Part of the Contention and The True Tragedie are corrupt transcripts of 2 and 3 Henry VI; others, and these greatly in the majority, that 2 and 3 Henry VI are founded upon the other two plays. The following positions may now be regarded as accepted by the safer modern critics: — (1) that The First Part of the Contention and The True Tragedie are the earlier plays; (2) that these are the work of several authors, including Marlowe and Greene, and perhaps Peele; (3) that 2 and 3 Henry VI are a revision by Shakespeare of the other two plays. Opinion is still divided on these points: — (1) whether Shakespeare had a hand in the earlier plays; (2) whether he had the assistance of Marlowe in the revision. Miss J. Lee's conclusion is as follows: — "I believe that Shakespeare was the author of Henry VI, Parts 2 and 3, and that there is some ground for concluding that Marlowe was his fellow-worker: that Henry VI, Parts 2 and 3, were written about the year 1590: that they were not original plays, but were founded on . . . The Contention and The True Tragedie: and that Marlowe and Greene, and possibly Peele, were the writers of these older plays, which were written some time, perhaps some years, before 2 and 3 Henry VI."

The most important modification of this view by later critics is in the direction of finding Shakespearean elements in the two earlier plays, especially in the scenes in which Jack Cade plays a part. This may be accounted for by supposing either that Shakespeare had an incidental share in them when they were first composed, or (as is perhaps more likely) that "passages in the impressions of 1594 and 1595 of the two old plays were borrowed for use from the Second and Third Parts, as then performed on the stage." (Ward.) The chief objection to the former alternative lies in the charge of plagiarism implied in a famous passage in Greene's Groatsworth of Wit; which, being undoubtedly aimed at Shakespeare, tends, but not conclusively, to exclude him from collaboration in the plays to which Greene is supposed to allude as the source of the plagiarism.

The more general argument against Shakespeare's having had to do with the writing of any of these plays lies in the facts that the two earlier were acted by a company for whom he is not known to have written, and that the two later are not known to have been acted by his own company. These points seem more than counterbalanced, however, by the fact of their inclusion in the First Folio by Heminge and Condell.

The results of modern investigation, then, while far from conclusive, tend to the belief that there may be a slight Shakespearean element in the two older plays, that 2 and 3 Henry VI were produced by Shakespeare, working on the basis of the earlier plays, probably with the assistance of Marlowe, and that they were re-cast between 1590 and 1592.

The present text is based upon that of the First Folio, for all three parts.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Westminster Abbey.]

Dead March. Enter the Funeral of KING HENRY THE FIFTH, attended on by the DUKE OF BEDFORD, Regent of France; the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, Protector; the DUKE OF EXETER, the EARL OF WARWICK, the BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Heralds, etc.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars
That have consented unto Henry's death!
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glou. England ne'er had a king until his time.

Virtue he had, deserving to command.
His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;

His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.
What should I say? His deeds exceed all speech.

He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black; why mourn we not in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive.

Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
And death's dishonourable victory
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that afraid of him
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King of kings.

Unto the French the dreadful judgement-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight.
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought;
The Church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glou. The Church! where is it? Had not churchmen pray'd,

His thread of life had not so soon decay'd.
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.

Win. Gloucester, whate'er we like, thou art Protector

And lookest to command the Prince and realm.
Thy wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
More than God or religious churchmen may.

Glou. Name not religion, for thou lov'st the flesh,

And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st

Except it be to pray against thy foes

Bed. Cease, cease these jars and rest your minds in peace;
 Let's to the altar. Heralds, wait on us. 45
 Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms,
 Since arms avail not now that Henry's dead.
 Posterity, await for wretched years,
 When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck,
 Our isle be made a marish of salt tears, 50
 And none but women left to wail the dead.
Henry the Fifth, thy ghost I invoke:
 Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils,
 Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
 A far more glorious star thy soul will make 55
 Than Julius Cæsar or bright —

Enter a MESSENGER.

1. Mess. My honourable lords, health to you all!
 Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
 Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture.
 Guienne, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans, 60
 Paris, Guysors, Poitiers, are all quite lost.

Bed. What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?
 Speak softly, or the loss of those great towns
 Will make him burst his lead and rise from death.

Glou. Is Paris lost? Is Rouen yielded up? 65
 If Henry were recall'd to life again,
 These news would cause him once more yield the ghost.

Exe. How were they lost? What treachery was us'd?

1. Mess. No treachery, but want of men and money.

Amongst the soldiers this is muttered, 70
 That here you maintain several factions,
 And whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,

You are disputing of your generals.
 One would have ling'ring wars with little cost;
 Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings; 75
 A third thinks, without expense at all,
 By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
 Awake, awake, English nobility!
 Let not sloth dim your honours new-begot.
 Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms; 80
 Of England's coat one half is cut away.

Exe. Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
 These tidings would call forth their flowing tides.

Bed. Me they concern; Regent I am of France.

Give me my steeled coat; I'll fight for France.
 Away with these disgraceful wailing robes! 85
 Wounds will I lend the French instead of eyes,
 To weep their intermissive miseries.

Enter to them a second MESSENGER.

2. Mess. Lords, view these letters full of bad mischance.
 France is revolted from the English quite, 90
 Except some petty towns of no import.
 The Dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;
 The Bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;

Reignier, Duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
 The Duke of Alençon fleeth to his side. 95

Exe. The Dauphin crowned king! All fly to him!
 O, whether shall we fly from this reproach?

Glou. We will not fly, but to our enemies' throats.

Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

Bed. Gloucester, why doubt'st thou of my forwardness? 100

An army have I muster'd in my thoughts,
 Wherewith already France is overrun.

Enter a third MESSENGER.

3. Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry's hearse,

I must inform you of a dismal fight 105
 Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame?
 Is 't so?

3. Mess. O, no; wherein Lord Talbot was o'erthrown.

The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
 The tenth of August last this dreadful lord, 110

Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
 Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,

By three and twenty thousand of the French
 Was round encompassed and set upon.

No leisure had he to enrank his men. 115
 He wanted pikes to set before his archers;

Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck'd out of hedges

They pitched in the ground confusedly,
 To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.

More than three hours the fight continued, 120
 Where valiant Talbot above human thought

Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.
 Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand

him;

Here, there, and everywhere, enrag'd he slew.
 The French exclaim'd, the devil was in arms;

All the whole army stood amaz'd on him, 125
 His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,

"A Talbot! a Talbot!" cried out amain
 And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.

Here had the conquest fully been seal'd up, 130
 If Sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward.

He, being in the vaward, plac'd behind
 With purpose to relieve and follow them,

Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
 Hence grew the general wreck and massacre; 135

 Enclosed were they with their enemies.

A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin's grace,
 Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back,

Whom all France with their chief assembled strength

Durst not presume to look once in the face. 140
Bed. Is Talbot slain? Then I will slay myself

For living idly here in pomp and ease
 Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,

Unto his dastard foemen is betray'd. 144
 3. Mess. O no, he lives, but is took prisoner,

And Lord Scales with him and Lord Hungerford.

Most of the rest slaughter'd or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay.

I'll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne;
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend. ¹⁵⁰
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.
Farewell, my masters! To my task will I.
Bonfires in France forthwith I am to make,
To keep our great Saint George's feast withal.
Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take, ¹⁵⁵
Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

3. Mess. So you had need, for Orleans is besieged.

The English army is grown weak and faint.

The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply,
And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, ¹⁶⁰
Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Eze. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn,

Either to quell the Dauphin utterly,
Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave, ¹⁶⁵

To go about my preparation. [Exit.]

Glou. I'll to the Tower with all the haste I can,

To view the artillery and munition;
And then I will proclaim young Henry king. [Exit.]

Eze. To Eltham will I, where the young King is, ¹⁷⁰

Being ordain'd his special governor,
And for his safety there I'll best devise. [Exit.]

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend.

I am left out; for me nothing remains.

But long I will not be Jack out of office. ¹⁷⁵
The King from Eltham I intend to steal
And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. France. Before Orleans.]

A flourish. Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, marching with drum and Soldiers.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens

So in the earth, to this day is not known.
Late did he shine upon the English side;

Now we are victors, upon us he smiles.
What towns of any moment but we have? ⁵

At pleasure here we lie near Orleans;
Otherwhiles the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,

Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves.

Either they must be dieted like mules ¹⁰
And have their provender tied to their mouths,
Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

Reig. Let's raise the siege; why live we idly here?

Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear;

Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury, ¹⁵
And he may well in fretting spend his gall.
Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, sound alarum! We will rush on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French!
Him I forgive my death that killeth me ²⁰

When he sees me go back one foot or fly. [Exeunt.]

Alarum; they are beaten back by the English with great loss. Re-enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER.

Char. Who ever saw the like? What men have I!

Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne'er have fled,

But that they left me 'midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide; ²⁵
He fighteth as one weary of his life.

The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froissart, a countryman of ours, records,

England all Olivers and Rolands bred ³⁰
During the time Edward the Third did reign.

More truly now may this be verified,
For none but Samsons and Goliases

It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!
Lean raw-bon'd rascals! who would e'er suppose ³⁵

They had such courage and audacity?

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hare-brain'd slaves,

And hunger will enforce them to be more eager.
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth

The walls they'll tear down than forsake the siege. ⁴⁰

Reig. I think, by some odd gimmicks or device

Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on;
Else ne'er could they hold out so as they do.

By my consent, we'll even let them alone. ⁴⁵
Alen. Be it so.

Enter the BASTARD of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the Prince Dauphin? I have news for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your cheer appall'd.

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand. ⁵⁰

A holy maid hither with me I bring,
Which by a vision sent to her from heaven

Ordained is to raise this tedious siege
And drive the English forth the bounds of France. ⁵⁵

The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome;

What's past and what's to come she can descry.
Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,

For they are certain and unfallible.
Char. Go, call her in. [Exit Bastard.]

But first, to try her skill, ⁶⁰
Reignier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place;

Question her proudly ; let thy looks be stern.
By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

Re-enter [the BASTARD of Orleans, with] JOAN LA PUCELLE.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?

Puc. Reignier, is't thou that thinkest to beguile me?

Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind;

I know thee well, though never seen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me.

In private will I talk with thee apart.
Stand back, you lords, and give us leave a while.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,

My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate.

Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
God's mother deigned to appear to me,
And in a vision full of majesty

Will'd me to leave my base vocation
And free my country from calamity.

Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success;
In complete glory she reveal'd herself;
And, whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infus'd on me

That beauty am I bless'd with which you see.
Ask me what question thou canst possible,
And I will answer unpremeditated.

My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.
Resolve on this, thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms.

Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me,
And if thou vanquishest, thy words are true;
Otherwise I renounce all confidence.

Puc. I am prepar'd: here is my keen-edg'd sword,

Deck'd with five flower-de-luces on each side;
The which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine's churchyard,

Out of a great deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come, o' God's name; I fear no woman.

Puc. And while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[Here they fight, and Joan la Pucelle overcomes.]

Char. Stay, stay thy hands! Thou art an Amazon

And fightest with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Whoe'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me.

Impatiently I burn with thy desire;
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdu'd.
Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,

Let me thy servant and not sovereign be.
'Tis the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any rites of love,
For my profession's sacred from above.

When I have chased all thy foes from hence,
Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.
Alen. Doubtless he shrives this woman to her smock;

Else ne'er could he so long protract his speech.

Reig. Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?

Alen. He may mean more than we poor men do know.

These women are shrewd tempters with their tongues.

Reig. My lord, where are you? What devise you on?

Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!
Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says I'll confirm. We'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.
This night the siege assuredly I'll raise.

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days,
Since I have entered into these wars.

Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.
With Henry's death the English circle ends;

Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship

Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once.
Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?

Thou with an eagle art inspired then.

Helen, the mother of great Constantine,
Not yet Saint Philip's daughters, were like thee.

Bright star of Venus, fallen down on the earth,
How may I reverently worship thee enough?

Alen. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours.

Drive them from Orleans and be immortaliz'd.

Char. Presently we'll try; come, let's away about it.

No prophet will I trust, if she prove false.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. London. Before the Tower.]

Enter the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, with his SERVING-MEN [in blue coats].

Glos. I am come to survey the Tower this day;

Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance.

Where be these warders, that they wait not here?

Open the gates; 'tis Gloucester that calls.

1. Warder. [Within.] Who's there that knocks so imperiously?

1. Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.

2. Warder. [Within.] Whoe'er he be, you may not be let in.

1. Serv. Villains, answer you so the Lord Protector?

1. Warder. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him.

We do no otherwise than we are will'd.

Glou. Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine?

There's none Protector of the realm but I. Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize. Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

[Gloucester's men rush at the Tower Gates, and Woodville the Lieutenant speaks within.]

Woodv. What noise is this? What traitors have we here?

Glou. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?

Open the gates; here's Gloucester that would enter.

Woodv. Have patience, noble Duke, I may not open;

The Cardinal of Winchester forbids.

From him I have express commandment

That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.

Glou. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him fore me?

Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate, Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook?

Thou art no friend to God or to the King.

Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

Serving-men. Open the gates unto the Lord Protector,

Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly. [They rush again at the gates.]

Enter to the Lord Protector at the Tower Gates WINCHESTER and his men in tawny coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this?

Glou. Peel'd priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor, And not Protector, of the King or realm.

Glou. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, Thou that contriv'st to murder our dead lord, Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin.

I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat, If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot.

This be Damascus, be thou cursed Cain To slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.

Glou. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back.

Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth I'll use to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I beard thee to thy face.

Glou. What! am I dar'd and bearded to my face?

Draw, men, for all this privileged place;

Blue coats to tawny coats! Priest, beware your beard;

I mean to tug it and to cuff you soundly. Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat.

In spite of Pope or dignities of church,

Here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.

Win. Gloucester, thou wilt answer this before the Pope.

Glou. Winchester goose, I cry, "A rope! a rope!"

Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay?

Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array.

Out, tawny coats! Out, scarlet hypocrite!

Here Gloucester's men beat out the Cardinal's men, and enter in the hurly-burly the MAYOR of London and his OFFICERS.

May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,

Thus contumeliously should break the peace!

Glou. Peace, mayor, thou know'st little of my wrongs.

Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king,

Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.

Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens, One that still motions war and never peace, O'ercharging your free purses with large fines, That seeks to overthrow religion

Because he is Protector of the realm, And would have armour here out of the Tower, To crown himself king and suppress the Prince.

Glou. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again.]

May. Nought rests for me in this tumultuous strife

But to make open proclamation.

Come, officer; as loud as e'er thou canst, Cry.

[2. Off.] All manner of men assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the King's, we charge and command you, in his Highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glou. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law;

But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.

Win. Gloucester, we'll meet to thy cost, be sure.

Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.

May. I'll call for clubs, if you will not away.

This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.

Glou. Mayor, farewell; thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Gloucester, guard thy head;

For I intend to have it ere long.

[Exeunt [severally, Gloucester and Winchester with their Serving-men].]

May. See the coast clear'd, and then we will depart.
Good God, these nobles should such stomachs bear!
I myself fight not once in forty year. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. France. Before Orleans.]

Enter [on the walls,] a MASTER GUNNER and his BOY.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans is besieg'd,

And how the English have the suburbs won.

Boy. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,

Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim.

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rul'd by me.

Chief master-gunner am I of this town;

Something I must do to procure me grace.

The Prince's espials have informed me

How the English, in the suburbs close in-trench'd,

Went through a secret grate of iron bars

In yonder tower to overpeer the city

And thence discover how with most advantage

They may vex us with shot or with assault.

To intercept this inconvenience,

A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd;

And even these three days have I watch'd

If I could see them.

Now do thou watch, for I can stay no longer.

If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;

And thou shalt find me at the governor's.

[Exit.]

Boy. Father, I warrant you; take you no care.

I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

[Exit.]

Enter, on the turret, the LORDS SALISBURY and TALBOT, [SIR WILLIAM GLANSDALE, SIR THOMAS GARGRAVE,] and others.

Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!

How wert thou handled being prisoner?

Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd?

Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top.

Tal. The Earl of Bedford had a prisoner

Call'd the brave Lord Ponton de Santrailles;

For him was I exchang'd and ransomed.

But with a baser man of arms by far

Once in contempt they would have barter'd

me;

Which I disdain'd scorn'd, and craved death

Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd.

In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd.

But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart,

Whom with my bare fists I would execute,

If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs and scorns and contumelious taunts.

In open market-place produc'd they me,

To be a public spectacle to all.

Here, said they, is the terror of the French,

The scarecrow that affrights our children so.

Then broke I from the officers that led me,

And with my nails digg'd stones out of the ground,

To hurl at the beholders of my shame.

My grisly countenance made others fly;

None durst come near for fear of sudden death.

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;

So great fear of my name 'mongst them were spread

That they suppos'd I could rend bars of steel

And spurn in pieces posts of adamant;

Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had

That walk'd about me every minute while;

And if I did but stir out of my bed,

Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Enter the Boy with a linstock.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endure'd,

But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.

Now it is supper-time in Orleans.

Here, through this secret grate, I count each one

And view the Frenchmen how they fortify.

Let us look in; the sight will much delight thee.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, and Sir William Glansdale,

Let me have your express opinions

Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gar. I think, at the north gate; for there stands lords.

Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd,

Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot [from the town], and Salisbury

[and Gargrave] fall.]

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!

Gar. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeful man!

Tal. What chance is this that suddenly hath cross'd us?

Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst, speak.

How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?

One of thy eyes and thy cheek's side struck off!

Accurs'd tower! accurs'd fatal hand

That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!

In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame.

Henry the Fifth he first train'd to the wars.

Whilst any trumpet did sound, or drum struck up,

His sword did ne'er leave striking in the field. Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? Though thy speech doth fail,

One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace;

The sun with one eye vieweth all the world.

Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,

If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands!

Bear hence his body; I will help to bury it.

Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?

Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.
Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort; 90
Thou shalt not die whiles —
He beckons with his hand and smiles on me,
As who should say, "When I am dead and gone,

Remember to avenge me on the French."
Plantagenet, I will; and like thee, [Nero,] 95
Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn.
Wretched shall France be only in my name.

[Here an alarum, and it thunders and lightens.

What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?

Whence cometh this alarum and the noise?

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gathered head. 100

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,
A holy prophetess new risen up,
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

[Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans.

Tal. Hear, hear how dying Salisbury doth groan!

It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd. 105
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you.

Pucelle, or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,

And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.

Convey me Salisbury into his tent, 110
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

[Alarum. Exeunt [bearing out the bodies].

[SCENE V. The same.]

Here an alarum again: and TALBOT pursueth the DAUPHIN, and driveth him. Then enter JOAN LA PUCELLE, driving Englishmen before her [and exit after them]. Then re-enter TALBOT.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?

Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Re-enter LA PUCELLE.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee;

Devil or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee. 5
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,

And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come, 't is only I that must disgrace thee. [Here they fight.

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?

My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage 10

And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet.

[They fight again.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come.

I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

[A short alarum: then La Pucelle enters the town with soldiers.

O'ertake me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength. 15

Go, go, cheer up thy hungry, starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament.

This day is ours, as many more shall be. [Exit.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;

I know not where I am, nor what I do. 20
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal,

Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists;

So bees with smoke and doves with noisome stench

Are from their hives and houses driven away.
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;

Now, like to whelps, we crying run away. 25
[A short alarum.

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat,

Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead.
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf, 30

Or horse or oxen from the leopard,

As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.
[Alarum. Another skirmish.

It will not be. Retire into your trenches.
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,

For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Pucelle is ent'red into Orleans 35

In spite of us or aught that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!

The shame hereof will make me hide my head.
[Exit Talbot. Alarum; retreat; flourish.

[SCENE VI. The same.]

Enter, on the walls, LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, REIGNIER, ALENÇON, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;

Rescu'd is Orleans from the English!
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.

Char. Divinest creature, Astræa's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success? 5

Thy promises are like Adonis' garden
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!
Recover'd is the town of Orleans.

More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state. 10
Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town?

Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires

And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.

Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy, 15

When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.

Char. 'T is Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;

For which I will divide my crown with her,

And all the priests and friars in my realm
 Shall in procession sing her endless praise. 20
 A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear
 Than Rhodope's or Memphis' ever was.
 In memory of her when she is dead,
 Her ashes, in an urn more precious
 Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius, 25
 Transported shall be at high festivals
 Before the kings and queens of France.
 No longer on Saint Denis will we cry,
 But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
 Come in, and let us banquet royally, 30
 After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Before Orleans.]

Enter a [French] SERGEANT, with two SENTINELS.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.
 If any noise or soldier you perceive
 Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
 Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

1. Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.]

These are poor servitors,
 When others sleep upon their quiet beds,
 Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY, [and forces,] with scaling-ladders, their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy,
 By whose approach the regions of Artois,
 Wallon and Picardy are friends to us, 10
 This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
 Having all day carous'd and banqueted.
 Embrace we then this opportunity
 As fitting best to quittance their deceit
 Contriv'd by art and baleful sorcery. 15

Bed. Coward of France! how much he wrongs his fame,
 Despairing of his own arm's fortitude,
 To join with witches and the help of hell!

Bur. Traitors have never other company.
 But what's that Pucelle whom they term so pure? 20

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial!

Bur. Pray God she prove not masculine ere long,

If underneath the standard of the French
 She carry armour as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits. 25

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name
 Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow
 thee.

Tal. Not all together. Better far, I guess,
 That we do make our entrance several ways; 30
 That, if it chance the one of us do fail,
 The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed. I'll to yond corner.

Bur. And I to this.
 Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

Now, Salisbury, for thee, and for the right 35
 Of English Henry, shall this night appear
 How much in duty I am bound to both.

Sent. Arm! arm! the enemy doth make assault!

[Cry: "St. George," "A Talbot."
 [The English scale the walls.]

The French leap over the walls in their shirts.
 Enter, several ways, the BASTARD of Orleans, ALENÇON, and REIGNIER, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords! what, all unready
 so?

Bast. Unready! Ay, and glad we scap'd so
 well. 40

Reig. 'Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,

Hearing alarums at our chamber-doors.

Alen. Of all exploits since first I follow'd
 arms,

Ne'er heard I of a warlike enterprise

More venturesome or desperate than this. 45

Bast. I think this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reig. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles; I marvel how he sped.

Enter CHARLES and LA PUCELLE.

Bast. Tut, holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame? 50

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,

Make us partakers of a little gain,

That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike? 55

Sleeping or waking must I still prevail,

Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?

Improvident soldiers! had your watch been
 good,

This sudden mischief never could have fallen.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default, 60

That, being captain of the watch to-night,

Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept

As that whereof I had the government,

We had not been thus shamefully surpris'd. 65

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reig. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this
 night,

Within her quarter and mine own precinct

I was employ'd in passing to and fro,

About relieving of the sentinels. 70

Then how or which way should they first break
 in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,

How or which way. 'Tis sure they found some place
But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.

And now there rests no other shift but this, ⁷⁵
To gather our soldiers, scatter'd and dispers'd,
And lay new platforms to endamage them.

Alarum. Enter an [English] SOLDIER, crying,
"A Talbot! a Talbot!" They fly, leaving their clothes behind.

Sold. I'll be so bold to take what they have left.

The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;
For I have loaden me with many spoils, ⁸⁰
Using no other weapon but his name. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. Orleans. Within the town.]

Enter TALBOT, BEDFORD, BURGUNDY [a CAPTAIN, and others].

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,

Whose pitchy mantle over-veil'd the earth.
Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit. [Retreat sounded.]

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury,
And here advance it in the market-place, ⁵
The middle centre of this cursed town.
Now have I paid my vow unto his soul;
For every drop of blood was drawn from him
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.

And that hereafter ages may behold ¹⁰
What ruin happened in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest temple I'll erect
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be interr'd;
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans, ¹⁵
The treacherous manner of his mournful death,
And what a terror he had been to France.
But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace,
His new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc, ²⁰

Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, Lord Talbot, when the fight began,

Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
They did amongst the troops of armed men
Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field. ²⁵

Bur. Myself, as far as I could well discern
For smoke and dusky vapours of the night,
Am sure I scar'd the Dauphin and his trull,
When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,

Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves ³⁰
That could not live asunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. All hail, my lords! Which of this princely train

Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts ³⁵
So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,

With modesty admiring thy renown,
By me entreats, great lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe ⁴⁰

To visit her poor castle where she lies,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars

Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport, ⁴⁵
When ladies crave to be encount'ed with.

You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men

Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-ru'd; ⁵⁰

And therefore tell her I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.

Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly, 't is more than manners will;
And I have heard it said, unbidden guests ⁵⁵

Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,

I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.

Come hither, captain. (Whispers.) You perceive my mind?

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly. ⁶⁰
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Auvergne. The Countess's castle.]

Enter the COUNTESS [and her PORTER].

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;

And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Count. The plot is laid. If all things fall out right

I shall as famous be by this exploit ⁵
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death.

Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account;

Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,

To give their censure of these rare reports. ¹⁰

Enter MESSENGER and TALBOT.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd,

By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad ¹⁵

That with his name the mothers still their babes?

I see report is fabulous and false.
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,

A second Hector, for his grim aspect, ²⁰
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.

Alas, this is a child, a silly dwarf!

It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble
you;

But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you. [Going.]

Count. What means he now? Go ask him whither he goes.

Mess. Stay, my Lord Talbot; for my lady craves

To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter with keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! To whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.
Long time thy shadow hath been thrall to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs;
But now the substance shall endure the like,
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny these many years
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? Thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow

Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself.
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity.
I tell you, madam, were the whole frame
here,

It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain't.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;

He will be here, and yet he is not here.

How can these contrarities agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently.

[*Winds his horn. Drums strike up:
a peal of ordnance. [The gates are forced.]*]

Enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? Are you now persuaded
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

These are his substance, sinews, arms, and
strength,

With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,
Razeth your cities and subverts your towns
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse.
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited
And more than may be gathered by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;
For I am sorry that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue

The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.

What you have done hath not offended me;
Nor other satisfaction do I crave,

But only, with your patience, that we may Taste of your wine and see what cates you

have;
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them

well.

Count. With all my heart, and think me honoured

To feast so great a warrior in my house.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. London. The Temple-garden.]

Enter the EARLS of SOMERSET, SUFFOLK, and WARWICK; RICHARD PLANTAGENET [VER-NON, and another Lawyer].

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple-hall we were too loud;

The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth;

Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?

Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, then, between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch;

Between two dogs, which hath the deeper
mouth;

Between two blades, which bears the better temper;

Between two horses, which doth bear him best;

Between two girls, which hath the merriest
eye;

I have perhaps some shallow spirit of judgement;

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance.

The truth appears so naked on my side
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparell'd,

So clear, so shining, and so evident
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-tied and so loath to speak,

In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts.
Let him that is a true-born gentleman

And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,

From off this brier pluck a white rose with me.
Som. Let him that is no coward nor no flatterer,

But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours, and without all colour

Of base insinuating flattery 35

I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose with young Somerset

And say withal I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen, and pluck no more

Till you conclude that he upon whose side 40

The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree

Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good Master Vernon, it is well objected.

If I have fewest, I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I. 45

Ver. Then for the truth and plainness of the case,

I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,

Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off,

Lest bleeding you do paint the white rose red

And fall on my side so, against your will. 51

Ver. If I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,

Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt

And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on; who else? 55

Law. Unless my study and my books be false,

The argument you held was wrong in you;

[To Somerset.]

In sign whereof I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here in my scabbard, meditating that Shall dye your white rose in a bloody red. 61

Plan. Meantime your cheeks do counterfeit our roses;

For pale they look with fear, as witnessing

The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet, 'Tis not for fear but anger that thy cheeks 65

Blush for pure shame to counterfeit our roses,

And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth; 70

Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,

That shall maintain what I have said is true,

Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand, 75

I scorn thee and thy faction, peevish boy.

Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way, Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Pole, I will, and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof into thy throat. 79

Som. Away, away, good William de la Pole! We grace the yeoman by conversing with him.

War. Now, by God's will, thou wrong'st him, Somerset;

His grandfather was Lionel Duke of Clarence, Third son to the third Edward King of England. 84

Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege, Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By Him that made me, I'll maintain my words

On any plot of ground in Christendom.

Was not thy father, Richard Earl of Cambridge, 90

For treason executed in our late king's days?

And, by his treason, stand'st not thou tainted,

Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?

His trespass yet lives guilty in thy blood;

And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attached, not tainted, 96

Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;

And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,

Were growing time once ripened to my will.

For your partaker Pole and you yourself, 100

I'll note you in my book of memory,

To scourge you for this apprehension.

Look to it well and say you are well warn'd.

Som. Ah, thou shalt find us ready for thee still;

And know us by these colours for thy foes, 105

For these my friends in spite of thee shall wear.

Plan. And, by my soul, this pale and angry rose,

As cognizance of my blood-drinking hate,

Will I for ever and my faction wear,

Until it wither with me to my grave 110

Or flourish to the height of my degree.

Suf. Go forward and be chok'd with thy ambition!

And so farewell until I meet thee next. [Exit.]

Som. Have with thee, Pole. Farewell, ambitious Richard. [Exit.]

Plan. How I am brav'd and must perforce endure it! 115

War. This blot that they object against your house

Shall be wip'd out in the next parliament

Call'd for the truce of Winchester and Gloucester;

And if thou be not then created York,

I will not live to be accounted Warwick. 120

Meantime, in signal of my love to thee,

Against proud Somerset and William Pole,

Will I upon thy party wear this rose;

And here I prophesy: this brawl to-day,

Grown to this faction in the Temple-garden, 125

Shall send between the red rose and the white A thousand souls to death and deadly night.

Plan. Good Master Vernon, I am bound to you,

That you on my behalf would pluck a flower.

Ver. In your behalf still will I wear the same. 130

Law. And so will I.

Plan. Thanks, gentle sir.

Come, let us four to dinner. I dare say
This quarrel will drink blood another day.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. The Tower of London.]

Enter MORTIMER, brought in a chair, and GAOLERS.

Mor. Kind keepers of my weak decaying
age,

Let dying Mortimer here rest himself.
Even like a man new haled from the rack,
So fare my limbs with long imprisonment;
And these grey locks, the pursuivants of death,
Nestor-like aged in an age of care, 6
Argue the end of Edmund Mortimer.
These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,

Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent;
Weak shoulders, overborne with burdening
grief, 10

And pitiless arms, like to a withered vine
That droops his sapless branches to the ground.
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb,

Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave, 15
As witting I no other comfort have.
But tell me, keeper, will my nephew come?

1. Gaol. Richard Plantagenet, my lord, will come.

We sent unto the Temple, unto his chamber;
And answer was return'd that he will come. 20

Mor. Enough; my soul shall then be satisfied.

Poor gentleman! his wrong doth equal mine.
Since Henry Monmouth first began to reign,
Before whose glory I was great in arms,
This loathsome sequestration have I had; 25
And even since then hath Richard been ob-scur'd,

Deprived of honour and inheritance.
But now the arbitrator of despairs,
Just Death, kind umpire of men's miseries,
With sweet enlargement doth dismiss me
hence, 30

I would his troubles likewise were expir'd,
That so he might recover what was lost.

Enter RICHARD PLANTAGENET.

1. Gaol. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend, is he
come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd, 35
Your nephew, late despised Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms I may embrace his neck,

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp.
O, tell me when my lips do touch his cheeks,
That I may kindly give one fainting kiss. 40
And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock,

Why didst thou say, of late thou wert despis'd?

Plan. First, lean thine aged back against mine arm;

And, in that ease, I'll tell thee my disease.
This day, in argument upon a case, 45
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and
me;

Among which terms he us'd his lavish tongue
And did upbraid me with my father's death;
Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,
Else with the like I had requited him. 50

Therefore, good uncle, for my father's sake,
In honour of a true Plantagenet
And for alliance sake, declare the cause
My father, Earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, fair nephew, that impris-on'd me 55

And hath detain'd me all my flowering youth
Within a loathsome dungeon, there to pine,
Was cursed instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was,

For I am ignorant and cannot guess. 60

Mor. I will, if that my fading breath permit
And death approach not ere my tale be done.
Henry the Fourth, grandfather to this king,
Deposed his nephew Richard, Edward's son,
The first-begotten and the lawful heir 65
Of Edward king, the third of that descent;
During whose reign the Percies of the north,
Finding his usurpation most unjust,
Endeavour'd my advancement to the throne.
The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this Was, for that — young King Richard thus re-mov'd, 71

Leaving no heir begotten of his body —
I was the next by birth and parentage;
For by my mother I derived am
From Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son 75
To King Edward the Third; whereas he
From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,
Being but fourth of that heroic line.

But mark: as in this haughty great attempt
They labour'd to plant the rightful heir, 80
I lost my liberty and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the Fifth,
Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, did reign,
Thy father, Earl of Cambridge, then deriv'd
From famous Edmund Langley, Duke of York,
Marrying my sister that thy mother was, 85
Again in pity of my hard distress
Levied an army, weening to redeem
And have install'd me in the diadem.
But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl 90
And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,
In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest that I no issue
have 94

And that my fainting words do warrant death.
Thou art my heir; the rest I wish thee gather,
But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with
me.

But yet, methinks, my father's execution
Was nothing less than bloody tyranny. 100

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic.
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster
And like a mountain, not to be remov'd.

But now thy uncle is removing hence,
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd 106

With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle, would some part of my young years

Might but redeem the passage of your age!

Mor. Thou dost then wrong me, as that slaughterer doth

Which giveth many wounds when one will kill. 110

Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;

Only give order for my funeral.

So and farewell, and fair be all thy hopes

And prosperous be thy life in peace and war!

[Dies.

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul! 115

In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage

And like a hermit overpass'd thy days.

Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;

And what I do imagine, let that rest.

Keepers, convey him hence, and I myself 120

Will see his burial better than his life.

[Exeunt [Gaolers, bearing out the body of Mortimer].

Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,

Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort;

And for those wrongs, those bitter injuries

Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house, 125

I doubt not but with honour to redress.

And therefore haste I to the parliament,

Either to be restored to my blood,

Or make my ill the advantage of my good.

[Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I. [London. The Parliament-house.]

Flourish. Enter KING, EXETER, GLOUCESTER, WARWICK, SOMERSET, and SUFFOLK; the
BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, RICHARD PLAN-TAGENET [and others]. Gloucester offers to put up a bill; Winchester snatches it, and tears it.

Win. Com'st thou with deep premeditated lines,

With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloucester? If thou canst accuse,

Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,

Do it without invention, suddenly; 5

As I with sudden and extemporal speech

Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glow. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience,

Or thou shouldst find thou hast dishonour'd me.

Think not, although in writing I prefer'd 10

The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,

That therefore I have forg'd, or am not able

Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen.

No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,

Thy lewd, pestiferous, and dissentious pranks,

As very infants prattle of thy pride. 16

Thou art a most pernicious usurer,

Froward by nature, enemy to peace;

Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems

A man of thy profession and degree; 20
And for thy treachery, what's more manifest?

In that thou laid'st a trap to take my life,

As well at London Bridge as at the Tower.

Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,

The King, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt 25

From envious malice of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloucester, I do defy thee. Lords, vouchsafe

To give me hearing what I shall reply.

If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse, 30

As he will have me, how am I so poor?

Or how haps it I seek not to advance

Or raise myself, but keep my wanted calling?

And for dissension, who preferreth peace

More than I do? — except I be provok'd.

No, my good lords, it is not that offends; 35

It is not that that hath incens'd the Duke.

It is because no one should sway but he,

No one but he should be about the King;

And that engenders thunder in his breast

And makes him roar these accusations forth. 40

But he shall know I am as good —

Glow. As good!

Thou bastard of my grandfather!

Win. Ay, lordly sir; for what are you, I
pray,

But one imperious in another's throne?

Glow. Am I not Protector, saucy priest? 45

Win. And am not I a prelate of the Church?

Glow. Yes, as an outlaw in a castle keeps

And useth it to patronage his theft.

Win. Unreverent Gloucester!

Glow. Thou art reverend

Touching thy spiritual function, not thy life. 50

Win. Rome shall remedy this.

War. Roam thither, then.

[Som.] My lord, it were your duty to forbear.

[War.] Ay, see the Bishop be not overborne.

Som. Methinks my lord should be religious

And know the office that belongs to such. 55

War. Methinks his lordship should be humbler;

It fitteth not a prelate so to plead.

Som. Yes, when his holy state is touch'd so near.

War. State holy or unhallow'd, what of that?

Is not his Grace Protector to the King? 60

Plan. [Aside.] Plantagenet, I see, must hold his tongue,

Lest it be said, "Speak, sirrah, when you should;

Must your bold verdict enter talk with lords?"

Else would I have a fling at Winchester.

King. Uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester, 65

The special watchmen of our English weal,

I would prevail, if prayers might prevail,

To join your hearts in love and amity.

O, what a scandal is it to our crown,

That two such noble peers as ye should jar! 70

Believe me, lords, my tender years can tell

Civil dissension is a viperous worm

That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.

[A noise within, "Down with the tawny-coats!"

What tumult's this?

War. An uproar, I dare warrant, ⁷⁵
Began through malice of the Bishop's men.

[A noise again, "Stones! stones!"]

Enter the MAYOR [of London, attended].

May. O, my good lords, and virtuous Henry,
Pity the city of London, pity us!

The Bishop and the Duke of Gloucester's
men,

Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill'd their pockets full of pebble stones ⁸⁰
And banding themselves in contrary parts
Do pelt so fast at one another's pate
That many have their giddy brains knock'd
out.

Our windows are broke down in every street
And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops. ⁸⁵

Enter [SERVING-MEN of both parties, in skirmish, with bloody pates.

King. We charge you, on allegiance to ourselves,

To hold your slaught'ring hands and keep the peace.

Pray, uncle Gloucester, mitigate this strife.

1. Serv. Nay, if we be forbidden stones, we 'll fall to it with our teeth. ⁹⁰

2. Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.
[Skirmish again.]

Glou. You of my household, leave this peevish
broil

And set this unaccustom'd fight aside.

3. Serv. My lord, we know your Grace to be a man

Just and upright; and, for your royal birth, ⁹⁵
Inferior to none but to his Majesty:

And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We and our wives and children all will fight ¹⁰⁰
And have our bodies slaught'ring by thy foes.

1. Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails

Shall pitch a field when we are dead.

[Begin again.]

Glou. Stay, stay, I say!

And if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear a while. ¹⁰⁵

King. O, how this discord doth afflict my soul!

Can you, my Lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears and will not once relent?

Who should be pitiful, if you be not?

Or who should study to prefer a peace, ¹¹⁰

If holy churchmen take delight in broils?

War. Yield, my Lord Protector; yield, Winchester;

Except you mean with obstinate repulse
To slay your sovereign and destroy the realm.

You see what mischief and what murder too ¹¹⁵
Hath been enacted through your enmity.

Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.

Glou. Compassion on the King commands me stoop;

Or I would see his heart out, ere the priest ¹²⁰
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my Lord of Winchester, the Duke

Hath banish'd moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothen'd brows it doth appear.

Why look you still so stern and tragical? ¹²⁵

Glou. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.

King. Fie, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach

That malice was a great and grievous sin;
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,

But prove a chief offender in the same? ¹³⁰

War. Sweet king! the Bishop hath a kindly gird.

For shame, my Lord of Winchester, relent!
What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, Duke of Gloucester, I will yield to thee;

Love for thy love and hand for hand I give. ¹³⁵

Glou. [Aside.] Ay, but, I fear me, with a hollow heart. —

See here, my friends and loving countrymen,
This token serveth for a flag of truce

Betwixt ourselves and all our followers.

So help me God, as I dissemble not! ¹⁴⁰

Win. [Aside.] So help me God, as I intend it not!

King. O loving uncle, kind Duke of Gloucester,

How joyful am I made by this contract!

Away, my masters! trouble us no more; ¹⁴⁴
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.

1. Serv. Content; I'll to the surgeon's.

2. Serv. And so will I.

3. Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt [Serving-men, Mayor, etc.].

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign,

Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet ¹⁵⁰
We do exhibit to your Majesty.

Glou. Well urg'd, my Lord of Warwick; for,
sweet prince,

An if your Grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right;

Especially for those occasions ¹⁵⁵
At Eltham Place I told your Majesty.

King. And those occasions, uncle, were of force.

Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is
That Richard be restored to his blood.

War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father's wrongs be recompens'd. ¹⁶¹

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.

King. If Richard will be true, not that alone
But all the whole inheritance I give

That doth belong unto the house of York, ¹⁶⁶
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience
And humble service till the point of death.

King. Stoop then and set your knee against my foot;

And, in reuerdion of that duty done, ¹⁷⁰
I gird thee with the valiant sword of York.

Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet,
And rise created princely Duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard as thy foes may fall!

And as my duty springs, so perish they 175
That grudge one thought against your Majesty!
All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty Duke of York!

Som. [Aside.] Perish, base prince, ignoble
Duke of York!

Glou. Now will it best avail your Majesty
To cross the seas and to be crown'd in France.
The presence of a king engenders love 181
Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends,
As it disanimates his enemies.

King. When Gloucester says the word, King
Henry goes;

For friendly counsel cuts off many foes. 185

Glou. Your ships already are in readiness.
[Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt [all but Exeter].]

Exe. Ay, we may march in England or in
France,

Not seeing what is likely to ensue.
This late dissension grown betwixt the peers
Burns under feigned ashes of forg'd love, 190
And will at last break out into a flame:
As fest'ring members rot but by degree,
Till bones and flesh and sinews fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal prophecy 195
Which in the time of Henry named the Fifth
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,
That Henry born at Monmouth should win all,
And Henry born at Windsor lose all.
Which is so plain that Exeter doth wish 200
His days may finish ere that hapless time.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. [France. Before Rouen.]

Enter LA PUCELLE disguised, with four SOL-DIERS with sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen,

Through which our policy must make a breach.
Take heed, be wary how you place your words;
Talk like the vulgar sort of market men
That come to gather money for their corn. 5

If we have entrance, as I hope we shall,
And that we find the slothful watch but weak,
I'll by a sign give notice to our friends,
That Charles the Dauphin may encounter them.

1. Sol. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city, 10

And we be lords and rulers over Rouen;
Therefore we'll knock. [Knock.]

Watch. [Within.] Qui est là?

Puc. Paysans, pauvres gens de France;
Poor market folks that come to sell their
corn. 15

Watch. Enter, go in; the market bell is rung.

Puc. Now, Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground. [Exeunt [to the town].]

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD of Orleans, ALENÇON [REIGNIER, and forces].

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy strata-gem!

And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen.

Bast. Here ent'red Pucelle and her practi-sants. 20

Now she is there, how will she specify
Where is the best and safest passage in?

Reig. By thrusting out a torch from yonder
tower;

Which, once discern'd, shows that her meaning is,

No way to that, for weakness, which she ent'red. 25

Enter LA PUCELLE on the top, thrusting out a torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch

That joineth Rouen unto her countrymen,
But burning fatal to the Talbotites! [Exit.]

Bast. See, noble Charles, the beacon of our
friend;

The burning torch in yonder turret stands. 30

Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge,

A prophet to the fall of all our foes!

Reig. Defer no time, delays have dangerous ends.

Enter, and cry "The Dauphin!" presently,
And then do execution on the watch. 35

[Alarum. [Exeunt.]]

An alarum. Enter TALBOT in an excursion.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears,

If Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Pucelle, that witch, that damned sorceress,
Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares,
That hardly we escap'd the pride of France. 40
[Exit.]

An alarum: excursions. BEDFORD, brought in sick in a chair. Enter TALBOT and BURGUNDY without: within LA PUCELLE, CHARLES, BAS-TARD, [ALENÇON,] and REIGNIER, on the walls.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread?

I think the Duke of Burgundy will fast

Before he'll buy again at such a rate.

'T was full of darnel; do you like the taste?

Bur. Scoff on, vile fiend and shameless courtezan! 45

I trust ere long to choke thee with thine own
And make thee curse the harvest of that corn.

Char. Your Grace may starve perhaps before that time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge
this treason!

Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard?
Break a lance, 50

And run a tilt at Death within a chair?

Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite,

Encompass'd with thy lustful paramours!

Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age
And twit with cowardice a man half dead? 55

Damsel, I'll have a bout with you again,
Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are ye so hot, sir? Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.

[The English whisper together in council.]

God speed the parliament! Who shall be the speaker?

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field?

Puc. Belike your lordship takes us then for fools,

To try if that our own be ours or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate, But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest.

Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out?

Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior, hang! Base muleteers of France!

Like peasant foot-boys do they keep the walls And dare not take up arms like gentlemen.

Puc. Away, captains! let's get us from the walls

For Talbot means no goodness by his looks.

God b'uy, my lord! we came but to tell you That we are here.

[Exeunt [La Pucelle, etc.,] from the walls.]

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long, Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame!

Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house, Prick'd on by public wrongs sustain'd in

France,

Either to get the town again or die:

And I, as sure as English Henry lives And as his father here was conqueror,

As sure as in this late-betrayed town

Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried,

So sure I swear to get the town or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But, ere we go, regard this dying prince, The valiant Duke of Bedford. Come, my lord,

We will bestow you in some better place,

Fitter for sickness and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me. You here will I sit before the walls of Rouen

And will be partner of your weal or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read

That stout Pendragon in his litter sick Came to the field and vanquished his foes.

Methinks I should revive the soldiers' hearts,

Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!

Then be it so. Heavens keep old Bedford safe!

And now no more ado, brave Burgundy,

But gather we our forces out of hand

And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt [into the town all but Bedford and Attendants].]

An alarum: excursions. Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE and a CAPTAIN.

Cap. Whither away, Sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?

Fast. Whither away! to save myself by flight.

We are like to have the overthrow again.

Cap. What! will you fly, and leave Lord Talbot?

Fast. Ay, All the Talbots in the world, to save my life.

[Exit.]

Cap. Cowardly knight! ill fortune follow thee! [Exit [into the town].]

Retreat: excursions. LA PUCELLE, ALENÇON, and CHARLES [enter from the town and] fly.

Bed. Now, quiet soul, depart when heaven please,

For I have seen our enemies' overthrow.

What is the trust or strength of foolish man?

They that of late were daring with their scoffs

Are glad and fain by flight to save themselves.

[Bedford dies, and is carried in by two in his chair.]

An alarum. Re-enter TALBOT, BURGUNDY, and the rest.

Tal. Lost, and recovered in a day again! This is a double honour, Burgundy;

Yet heavens have glory for this victory!

Bur. Warlike and martial Talbot, Burgundy Enshrines thee in his heart and there erects

Thy noble deeds as valour's monuments.

Tal. Thanks, gentle duke. But where is Pucelle now?

I think her old familiar is asleep.

Now where 's the Bastard's braves, and Charles his gleeks?

What, all amot? Rouen hangs her head for grief That such a valiant company are fled.

Now will we take some order in the town,

Placing therein some expert officers,

And then depart to Paris to the King,

For there young Henry with his nobles lie.

Bur. What wills Lord Talbot pleaseth Burgundy.

Tal. But yet, before we go, let's not forget The noble Duke of Bedford late deceas'd,

But see his exequies fulfill'd in Rouen.

A braver soldier never couched lance,

A gentler heart did never sway in court.

But kings and mightiest potentates must die,

For that 's the end of human misery.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The plains near Rouen.]

Enter CHARLES, the BASTARD of Orleans, ALENÇON, LA PUCELLE [and forces].

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident, Nor grieve that Rouen is so recovered.

Care is no cure, but rather corrosive,

For things that are not to be remedy'd.

Let frantic Talbot triumph for a while

And like a peacock sweep along his tail;

We'll pull his plumes and take away his train,

If Dauphin and the rest will be but rul'd.

Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto

And of thy cunning had no diffidence.

One sudden foil shall never breed distrust.

Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies,
And we will make thee famous through the world.

Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place,

And have thee reverenc'd like a blessed saint. ¹⁵
Employ thee then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise:

By fair persuasions mix'd with sug'red words
We will entice the Duke of Burgundy
To leave the Talbot and to follow us. ²⁰

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that,

France were no place for Henry's warriors;
Nor should that nation boast it so with us,
But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd from France ²⁵

And not have title of an earldom here.

Puc. Your honours shall perceive how I will work

To bring this matter to the wished end.

[Drum sounds afar off.
Hark! by the sound of drum you may perceive

Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward. ³⁰

Here sound an English march. [Enter, and pass over at a distance, TALBOT and his forces.]

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread,
And all the troops of English after him.

French march. [Enter the DUKE OF BURGUNDY and forces.]

Now in the rearward comes the Duke and his.
Fortune in favour makes him lag behind.
Summon a parley; we will talk with him. ³⁵

[Trumpets sound a parley.
Char. A parley with the Duke of Burgundy!

Bur. Who craves a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Bur. What say'st thou, Charles? for I am marching hence.

Char. Speak, Pucelle, and enchant him with thy words. ⁴⁰

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France!

Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over-tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France,

And see the cities and the towns defac'd ⁴⁵
By wasting ruin of the cruel foe.

As looks the mother on her lowly babe
When death doth close his tender dying eyes,
See, see the pining malady of France!

Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds, ⁵⁰

Which thou thyself hast given her woeful breast.

O, turn thy edged sword another way;
Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help.

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom

Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore. ⁵⁵

Return thee therefore with a flood of tears,
And wash away thy country's stained spots.

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words,

Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France ex-claims on thee, ⁶⁰

Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny.

Who join'st thou with but with a lordly nation
That will not trust thee but for profit's sake?

When Talbot hath set footing once in France
And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill, ⁶⁵

Who then but English Henry will be lord
And thou be thrust out like a fugitive?

Call we to mind, and mark but this for proof,
Was not the Duke of Orleans thy foe?

And was he not in England prisoner? ⁷⁰

But when they heard he was thine enemy,
They set him free without his ransom paid.

In spite of Burgundy and all his friends.
See, then, thou fight'st against thy country-
men

And join'st with them will be thy slaughter-
men. ⁷⁵

Come, come, return; return, thou wandering lord!

Charles and the rest will take thee in their arms.

Bur. I am vanquished. These haughty words of hers

Have batt'red me like roaring cannon-shot,
And made me almost yield upon my knees. ⁸⁰

Forgive me, country, and sweet countrymen,
And, lords, accept this hearty kind embrace;

My forces and my power of men are yours.
So farewell, Talbot; I'll no longer trust thee.

Puc. [Aside.] Done like a Frenchman; turn,
and turn again! ⁸⁵

Char. Welcome, brave duke! thy friendship makes us fresh.

Bast. And doth beget new courage in our breasts.

Alen. Pucelle hath bravely play'd her part in this,

And doth deserve a coronet of gold.

Char. Now let us on, my lords, and join our powers, ⁹⁰

And seek how we may prejudice the foe.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [Paris. The palace.]

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, EXETER [VERNON, BASSET, and others]. To them with his Soldiers, TALBOT.

Tal. My gracious prince, and honourable peers,

Hearing of your arrival in this realm,
I have a while given truce unto my wars

To do my duty to my sovereign;
In sign whereof, this arm, that hath reclaim'd

To your obedience fifty fortresses,

Twelve cities, and seven walled towns of strength,
Beside five hundred prisoners of esteem,
Lest fall his sword before your Highness' feet,
And with submissive loyalty of heart
Ascribes the glory of his conquest got
First to my God and next unto your Grace.

[Kneels.]
King. Is this the Lord Talbot, uncle Gloucester,
That hath so long been resident in France?
Glou. Yes, if it please your Majesty, my liege.

King. Welcome, brave captain and victorious lord!

When I was young, as yet I am not old,
I do remember how my father said
A stouter champion never handled sword.
Long since we were resolved of your truth,
Your faithful service, and your toil in war;
Yet never have you tasted our reward,
Or been requerdon'd with so much as thanks,
Because till now we never saw your face.
Therefore, stand up; and, for these good deserts,

We here create you Earl of Shrewsbury;
And in our coronation take your place.

[Sennet. Flourish. Exeunt all but Vernon and Basset.]

Ver. Now, sir, to you, that were so hot at sea,

Disgracing of these colours that I wear
In honour of my noble Lord of York;
Dar'st thou maintain the former words thou spak'st?

Bas. Yes, sir; as well as you dare patronage

The envious barking of your saucy tongue
Against my lord the Duke of Somerset.

Ver. Sirrah, thy lord I honour as he is.
Bas. Why, what is he? As good a man as York.

Ver. Hark ye, not so; in witness, take ye that.

Bas. Villain, thou know'st the law of arms is such

That whoso draws a sword, 't is present death,
Or else this blow should broach thy dearest blood.

But I'll unto his Majesty, and crave
I may have liberty to vengeance this wrong;
When thou shalt see I'll meet thee to thy cost.

Ver. Well, miscreant, I'll be there as soon as you;

And, after, meet you sooner than you would.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [Paris. A hall of state.]

Enter KING HENRY, GLOUCESTER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, SOMERSET, WARWICK, TALBOT, EXETER, the GOVERNOR of Paris [and others].

Glou. Lord Bishop, set the crown upon his head

Win. God save King Henry, of that name the sixth!

Glou. Now, governor of Paris, take your oath,

That you elect no other king but him;

[Governor kneels.]
Esteem none friends but such as are his friends,
And none your foes but such as shall pretend
Malicious practices against his state.

This shall ye do, so help you righteous God!
[Exeunt Governor, etc.]

Enter SIR JOHN FASTOLFE.

Fast. My gracious sovereign, as I rode from Calais,

To haste unto your coronation,

A letter was deliver'd to my hands,

Writ to your Grace from the Duke of Burgundy.
Tal. Shame to the Duke of Burgundy and thee!

I vow'd, base knight, when I did meet thee next,

To tear the Garter from thy craven's leg,

[Plucking it off.]

Which I have done, because unworthily
Thou wast installed in that high degree.

Pardon me, princely Henry, and the rest.
This dastard, at the battle of Poitiers,

When but in all I was six thousand strong
And that the French were almost ten to one,

Before we met or that a stroke was given,
Like to a trusty squire did run away;

In which assault we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself and divers gentlemen beside

Were there surpris'd and taken prisoners.
Then judge, great lords, if I have done amiss;

Or whether that such cowards ought to wear
This ornament of knighthood, yea or no.

Glou. To say the truth, this fact was infamous

And ill beseming any common man,
Much more a knight, a captain, and a leader.

Tal. When first this order was ordain'd, my lords,

Knights of the Garter were of noble birth,
Valiant and virtuous, full of haughty courage,

Such as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,

But always resolute in most extremes.
He then that is not furnish'd in this sort

Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight,
Profaning this most honourable order,

And should, if I were worthy to be judge,
Be quite degraded, like a hedge-born swain

That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.
King. Stain to thy countrymen, thou hear'st thy doom!

Be packing, therefore, thou that wast a knight;
Henceforth we banish thee, on pain of death.

[Exit Fastolfe.]

And now, my Lord Protector, view the letter Sent from our uncle Duke of Burgundy.

Glou. What means his Grace, that he hath chang'd his style?

No more but, plain and bluntly, "To the King!"

Hath he forgot he is his sovereign?

Or doth this churlish superscription
Pretend some alteration in good will?
What's here?

[Reads.] "I have, upon especial cause,⁵⁵
Mov'd with compassion of my country's wreck,
Together with the pitiful complaints
Of such as your oppression feeds upon,
Forsaken your pernicious faction
And join'd with Charles, the rightful King of France."

O monstrous treachery! can this be so,
That in alliance, amity, and oaths,
There should be found such false dissembling
guile?

King. What! doth my uncle Burgundy revolt?

Glou. He doth, my lord, and is become your foe.⁵⁶

King. Is that the worst this letter doth contain?

Glou. It is the worst, and all, my lord, he writes.

King. Why, then, Lord Talbot there shall talk with him

And give him chastisement for this abuse.

How say you, my lord? Are you not content?

Tal. Content, my liege? Yes. But that I am prevented,⁵⁷

I should have begg'd I might have been employ'd.

King. Then gather strength and march unto him straight.

Let him perceive how ill we brook his treason,
And what offence it is to flout his friends.⁵⁸

Tal. I go, my lord, in heart desiring still
You may behold confusion of your foes. [Exit.]

Enter VERNON and BASSET.

Ver. Grant me the combat, gracious sovereign.

Bas. And me, my lord, grant me the combat too.

York. This is my servant; hear him, noble prince.⁵⁹

Som. And this is mine; sweet Henry, favour
him.

K. Hen. Be patient, lords; and give them leave to speak.

Say, gentlemen, what makes you thus exclaim?
And wherefore crave you combat? or with whom?

Ver. With him, my lord; for he hath done me wrong.⁶⁰

Bas. And I with him; for he hath done me
wrong.

K. Hen. What is that wrong whereof you both complain?

First let me know, and then I'll answer you.

Bas. Crossing the sea from England into
France,

This fellow here, with envious carping tongue,
Upbraided me about the rose I wear,⁶¹

Saying the sanguine colour of the leaves
Did represent my master's blushing cheeks,

When stubbornly he did repugn the truth
About a certain question in the law⁶²

Argued betwixt the Duke of York and him:

With other vile and ignominious terms;
In confutation of which rude reproach,
And in defence of my lord's worthiness,
I crave the benefit of law of arms.¹⁰⁰

Ver. And that is my petition, noble lord.
For though he seem with forged quaint conceit
To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;
And he first took exceptions at this badge,¹⁰⁵
Pronouncing that the paleness of this flower
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.

York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my Lord of York, will out,

Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.¹¹⁰

K. Hen. Good Lord, what madness rules in brainsick men,

When for so slight and frivolous a cause
Such factious emulations shall arise!

Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.¹¹⁵

York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight,

And then your Highness shall command a peace.

Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us
alone;

Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.

York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.¹²⁰

Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.

Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.

Glou. Confirm it so! Confounded be your strife!

And perish ye, with your audacious prate!
Presumptuous vassals, are you not asham'd¹²⁵

With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the King and us?

And you, my lords, methinks you do not well
To bear with their perverse objections;

Much less to take occasion from their mouths¹³⁰
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves.

Let me persuade you take a better course.
Ere. It grieves his Highness. Good my lords, be friends.

K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be combatants.

Henceforth I charge you, as you love our favour,¹³⁵

Quite to forget this quarrel and the cause.
And you, my lords, remember where we are;

In France, amongst a fickle, wavering nation.
If they perceive dissension in our looks

And that within ourselves we disagree,¹⁴⁰
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd

To wilful disobedience, and rebel!
Beside, what infamy will there arise,

When foreign princes shall be certified
That for a toy, a thing of no regard,¹⁴⁵

King Henry's peers and chief nobility
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France!

O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years, and let us not forgo

That for a trifle that was bought with blood!¹⁵⁰
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.

I see no reason, if I wear this rose,
[Putting on a red rose.]

That any one should therefore be suspicious
 I more incline to Somerset than York.
 Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both. 155
 As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
 Because, forsooth, the King of Scots is crown'd.
 But your discretions better can persuade
 Than I am able to instruct or teach;
 And therefore, as we hither came in peace, 160
 So let us still continue peace and love.
 Cousin of York, we institute your Grace
 To be our regent in these parts of France;
 And, good my Lord of Somerset, unite Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot; 165
 And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
 Go cheerfully together and digest
 Your angry choler on your enemies.
 Ourself, my Lord Protector, and the rest
 After some respite will return to Calais; 170
 From thence to England; where I hope ere long
 To be presented, by your victories,
 With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

[*Exeunt all but York, Warwick,
 Exeter and Vernon.*]

War. My Lord of York, I promise you, the
 King
 Prettily, methought, did play the orator. 175
 York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
 In that he wears the badge of Somerset.
 War. Tush, that was but his fancy, blame him not.
 I dare presume, sweet prince, he thought no harm.

York. An if I wist he did, — but let it rest;
 Other affairs must now be managed. 181

[Flourish. Exeunt all but Exeter.]

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;
 For, had the passions of thy heart burst out,
 I fear we should have seen decipher'd there
 More rancorous spite, more furious raging
 broils, 185
 Than yet can be imagin'd or suppos'd.
 But howso'er, no simple man that sees
 This jarring discord of nobility,
 This shouldering of each other in the court,
 This factious bandying of their favourites, 190
 But that it doth presage some ill event.
 'Tis much when sceptres are in children's
 hands;
 But more when envy breeds unkind division.
 There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.]

[SCENE II.] Before Bourdeaux.

Enter TALBOT, with trumpet and drum.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter;
 Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds. Enter GENERAL [and others,] aloft.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
 Servant in arms to Harry King of England,

And thus he would: Open your city gates; 5
 Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
 And do him homage as obedient subjects;
 And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power.
 But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
 You tempt the fury of my three attendants, 10
 Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing
 fire;

Who in a moment even with the earth
 Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
 If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thon ominous and fearful owl of
 death, 15

Our nation's terror and their bloody scourge!
 The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
 On us thou canst not enter but by death;
 For, I protest, we are well fortified
 And strong enough to issue out and fight. 20
 If thou retire, the Dauphin, well appointed,
 Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee.
 On either hand thee there are squadrons
 pitch'd,

To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
 And no way canst thou turn thee for redress 25
 But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,

And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
 Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament

To rive their dangerous artillery
 Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot. 30
 Lo, there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant
 man,

Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit!
 This is the latest glory of thy praise
 That I, thy enemy, due thee withal;
 For ere the glass, that now begins to run, 35
 Finish the process of his sandy hour,
 These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
 Shall see thee withered, bloody, pale, and dead. [Drum afar off.]

Hark! hark! the Dauphin's drum, a warning
 bell,

Sings heavy music to thy timorous soul; 40
 And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt [General, etc.].]

Tal. He fables not; I hear the enemy.
 Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.

O, negligent and heedless discipline!
 How are we park'd and bounded in a pale, 45
 A little herd of England's timorous deer,
 Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
 If we be English deer, be then in blood;
 Not rascal-like, to fall down with a pinch,
 But rather, moody-mad and desperate stags, 50
 Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel

And make the cowards stand aloof at bay.
 Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
 And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.

God and Saint George, Talbot and England's
 right, 55

Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!
 [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Plains in Gascony.]

Enter YORK, with trumpet and many Soldiers: to him a MESSENGER.

York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the Dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord, and give it out
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot. As he march'd along, s
By your espials were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the Dauphin led,
Which join'd with him and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset,
That thus delays my promised supply 10
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid,
And I am louted by a traitor villain
And cannot help the noble chevalier.
God comfort him in this necessity! 15
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France!

Enter another Messenger [SIR WILLIAM LUCY].

[Lucy.] Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot,
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron 20
And hemm'd about with grim destruction.
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux,
York!
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour!

York. O God, that Somerset, who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets, were in Talbot's place! 25

So should we save a valiant gentleman
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire and wrathful fury makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

[Lucy.] O, send some succour to the distress'd lord! 30

York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike word;
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;

All long of this vile traitor Somerset.

[Lucy.] Then God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul,
And on his son young John, who two hours since 35

I met in travel toward his warlike father!
This seven years did not Talbot see his son,
And now they meet where both their lives are done.

York. Alas, what joy shall noble Talbot have
To bid his young son welcome to his grave? 40
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That sund' red friends greet in the hour of death.

Lucy, farewell; no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.

Maine, Blois, Poitiers, and Tours, are won away, 45
Long all of Somerset and his delay.

[Exit [with his soldiers].]
[Lucy.] Thus, while the vulture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping neglectation doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce cold conqueror, 50
That ever living man of memory,
Henry the Fifth. Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lands, and all hurry to loss.
[Exit.]

[SCENE IV. Other plains in Gascony.]

Enter SOMERSET, with his army [a CAPTAIN of Talbot's with him].

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now.
This expedition was by York and Talbot
Too rashly plotted. All our general force Might with a sally of the very town
Be buckled with. The over-daring Talbot 5
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure.
York set him on to fight and die in shame,
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.

Cap. Here is Sir William Lucy, who with me 10
Set from our o'ermatch'd forces forth for aid.

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY.

Som. How now, Sir William! whither were you sent?

Lucy. Whither, my lord? From bought and sold Lord Talbot;

Who, ring'd about with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset 15
To beat assailing death from his weak legions;
And whiles the honourable captain there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wearied limbs,
And, in advantage ling'ring, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour, 20

Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The levied succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yield up his life unto a world of odds. 25
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, Burgundy,
Alençon, Reignier, compass him about,
And Talbot perisheth by your default.

Som. York set him on; York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your Grace exclaims, 30
Swearing that you withhold his levied host,
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse.

I owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France, 35
Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot.
Never to England shall he bear his life,
But dies, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight. 40

Within six hours they will be at his aid.

Lucy. Too late comes rescue. He is ta'en or
slain;

For fly he could not, if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.

Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot, then adieu! 45

Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. The English camp near Bourdeaux.]

Enter TALBOT and [JOHN] his son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for
thee

To tutor thee in stratagems of war,
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd
When sapless age and weak unable limbs
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair. 5
But, O malignant and ill-boding stars!
Now thou art come unto a feast of death,
A terrible and unavowed danger.

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest
horse;

And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape 10
By sudden flight. Come, dally not, be gone.

John. Is my name Talbot? and am I your
son?

And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard and a slave of me! 15
The world will say, he is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.

John. He that flies so will ne'er return again.

Tal. If we both stay, we both are sure to
die. 20

John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly.

Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost. 25
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won,
But mine it will, that no exploit have done.
You fled for vantage, every one will swear;
But, if I bow, they'll say it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay, 30
If the first hour I shrink and run away.
Here on my knee I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserv'd with infamy.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?

John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb. 35

Tal. Upon my blessing, I command thee go.

John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.

Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in
thee.

John. No part of him but will be shame in
me.

Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it. 40

John. Yes, your renowned name. Shall flight abuse it?

Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.
If death be so apparent, then both fly.

Tal. And leave my followers here to fight and die? 45

My age was never tainted with such shame.

John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?

No more can I be severed from your side,
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide.

Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I; 50
For live I will not, if my father die.

Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair
son,

Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die;

And soul with soul from France to heaven fly. 55
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. A field of battle.]

Alarum: excursions, wherein JOHN TALBOT is hemmed about, and TALBOT rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight!

The Regent hath with Talbot broke his word
And left us to the rage of France his sword.

Where is John Talbot? Pause, and take thy
breath;

I gave thee life and rescu'd thee from death. 5
John. O, twice my father, twice am I thy
son!

The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done,
Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate,

To my determin'd time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the Dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire, 10

It warm'd thy father's heart with proud desire
Of bold-fac'd victory. Then leaden age,

Quicken'd with youthful spleen and warlike rage,

Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy,
And from the pride of Gallia rescued thee. 15

The ireful bastard Orleans, that drew blood
From thee, my boy, and had the maidenhood

Of thy first fight, I soon encountered,
And interchanging blows I quickly shed

Some of his bastard blood; and in disgrace 20
Bespoke him thus: "Contaminated, base,

And misbegotten blood I spill of thine, Mean and right poor, for that pure blood of
mine

Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave
boy."

Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy, 25 Came in strong rescue. Speak, thy father's care,

Art thou not weary, John? How dost thou fare?

Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly,
Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry?

Fly, to revenge my death when I am dead; 30
The help of one stands me in little stead.

O, too much folly is it, well I wot,
To hazard all our lives in one small boat!

If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage,

To-morrow I shall die with mickle age. 35
 By me they nothing gain an if I stay;
 'Tis but the short'ning of my life one day.
 In thee thy mother dies, our household's name,
 My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame.

All these and more we hazard by thy stay; 40
 All these are sav'd if thou wilt fly away.

John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart;

These words of yours draw life-blood from my
 heart.

On that advantage, bought with such a shame,
 To save a paltry life and slay bright fame, 45

Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly,
 The coward horse that bears me fall and die!

And like me to the peasant boys of France,
 To be shame's scorn and subject of mischance!

Surely, by all the glory you have won, 50
 An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son.

Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot;
 If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot.

Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete,

Thou Icarus. Thy life to me is sweet. 55
 If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side;

And, commendable prov'd, let 's die in pride.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VII. Another part of the field.]

Alarum: excursions. Enter old TALBOT led [by a SERVANT].

Tal. Where is my other life? mine own is gone.

O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant
 John?

Triumphant Death, smear'd with captivity,
 Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee.

When he perceiv'd me sink and on my knee, 5
 His bloody sword he brandish'd over me;

And, like a hungry lion, did commence
 Rough deeds of rage and stern impatience;

But when my angry guardant stood alone,
 Tend'ring my ruin and assail'd of none, 10

Dizzy-ey'd fury and great rage of heart
 Suddenly made him from my side to start

Into the clust'ring battle of the French;
 And in that sea of blood my boy did drench

His over-mounting spirit, and there died, 15
 My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter [Soldiers,] with the body of JOHN TALBOT.

Serv. O my dear lord, lo, where your son is borne!

Tal. Thou antic Death, which laugh'st us here to scorn,

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny,
 Coupled in bonds of perpetuity, 20

Two Talbots, winged through the lither sky,
 In thy despite shall scape mortality.

O thou, whose wounds become hard-favoured
 Death,

Speak to thy father ere thou yield thy breath!
 Brave Death by speaking, whether he will or 25

no;
 Imagine him a Frenchman and thy foe.

Poor boy! he smiles, methinks, as who should say,

Had Death been French, then Death had died
 to-day.

Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms.

My spirit can no longer bear these harms. 30
 Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have,

Now my old arms are young John Talbot's
[Dies.]

Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BURGUNDY, BAS-TARD, LA PUCELLE [and forces].

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in,

We should have found a bloody day of this.
Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wood, 35

 Did flesh his puny sword in Frenchmen's blood!

Puc. Once I encount'ed him, and thus I
 said:

"Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid!"

But, with a proud majestic high scorn,
 He answer'd thus: "Young Talbot was not 40

born
 To be the pillage of a giglot wench."

So, rushing in the bowels of the French,
 He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Bur. Doubtless he would have made a noble
 knight.

See, where he lies inhearsed in the arms 45
 Of the most bloody nurser of his harms!

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder,

Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O, no, forbear! for that which we have fed

During the life, let us not wrong it dead. 50

Enter SIR WILLIAM LUCY [attended; Herald of the French preceding].

Lucy. Herald, conduct me to the Dauphin's
 tent

To know who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.
Char. On what submissive message art thou 55 sent?

Lucy. Submission, Dauphin! 't is a mere French word;

We English warriors wot not what it means. 55
 I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en

And to survey the bodies of the dead.
Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? Hell our prison is.

 But tell me whom thou seek'st.

Lucy. But where's the great Alcides of the field, 60

Valiant Lord Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury,
 Created, for his rare success in arms,

Great Earl of Washford, Waterford, and Va-
 lence;

Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
 Lord Strange of Blackmere, Lord Verdun of 65

Alton,
 Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, Lord Furnival of Sheffield,

The thrice-victorious Lord of Falconbridge ;
Knight of the noble Order of Saint George,
Worthy Saint Michael, and the Golden Fleece ;
Great marshal to Henry the Sixth 70
Of all his wars within the realm of France ?

Puc. Here is a silly stately style indeed !
The Turk, that two and fifty kingdoms hath,
Writes not so tedious a style as this.
Him that thou magnifi'st with all these titles
Stinking and fly-blown lies here at our feet. 75

Lucy. Is Talbot slain, the Frenchmen's only scourge,

Your kingdom's terror and black Nemesis ?
O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,
That I in rage might shoot them at your faces !
O, that I could but call these dead to life ! 81
It were enough to fright the realm of France.
Were but his picture left amongst you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.

Give me their bodies, that I may bear them
hence 85

And give them burial as beseems their worth.

Puc. I think this upstart is old Talbot's ghost,

He speaks with such a proud commanding
spirit.

For God's sake, let him have him. To keep them here,

They would but stink, and putrefy the air. 90
Char. Go, take their bodies hence.

Lucy. I'll bear them hence ; but from their ashes shall be rear'd

A phoenix that shall make all France afear'd.

Char. So we be rid of them, do with them what thou wilt.

And now to Paris, in this conquering vein ; 95
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.]

[ACT V]

SCENE [I. London. The palace.]

Sennet. Enter KING, GLOUCESTER, and EXETER.

King. Have you perus'd the letters from the Pope,

The Emperor, and the Earl of Armagnac ?

Glou. I have, my lord ; and their intent is
this :

They humbly sue unto your excellence
To have a godly peace concluded of 5

Between the realms of England and of France.

King. How doth your Grace affect their motion ?

Glou. Well, my good lord ; and as the only means

To stop effusion of our Christian blood
And stablish quietness on every side. 10

King. Ay, marry, uncle ; for I always thought
It was both impious and unnatural

That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.

Glou. Beside, my lord, the sooner to effect 15
And surer bind this knot of amity,

The Earl of Armagnac, near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,

Proffers his only daughter to your Grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.

King. Marriage, uncle ! Alas, my years are young ! 21

And fitter is my study and my books
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.

Yet call the ambassadors ; and, as you please,
So let them have their answers every one. 25

I shall be well content with any choice
Tends to God's glory and my country's weal.

Enter WINCHESTER [in Cardinal's habit, a
LEGATE, and two] Ambassadors.

Exe. What ! is my Lord of Winchester in-stall'd,

And call'd unto a cardinal's degree ?
Then I perceive that will be verified 30

Henry the Fifth did sometime prophesy,
" If once he come to be a cardinal,

He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown."

King. My lords ambassadors, your several suits

Have been consider'd and debated on. 35
Your purpose is both good and reasonable ;

And therefore are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace ;

Which by my Lord of Winchester we mean
Shall be transported presently to France. 40

Glou. And for the proffer of my lord your master,

I have inform'd his Highness so at large ;
As liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,

Her beauty, and the value of her dower,
He doth intend she shall be England's queen. 45

King. [To the Amb.] In argument and proof of which contract,

Bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection.
And so, my Lord Protector, see them guarded

And safely brought to Dover ; where inshipp'd
Commit them to the fortune of the sea. 50

[Exeunt [all but Winchester and Legate].

Win. Stay, my lord legate ; you shall first receive

The sum of money which I promised
Should be delivered to his Holiness

For clothing me in these grave ornaments.
Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's 55

leisure.
Win. [Aside.] Now Winchester will not submit, I trow,

Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humphrey of Gloucester, thou shalt well perceive

That, neither in birth or for authority,
The Bishop will be overborne by thee. 60

I'll either make thee stoop and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny. [Exeunt.]

SCENE [II. France. Plains in Anjou.]

Enter CHARLES, BURGUNDY, ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER, LA PUCELLE [and forces].

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits.

'Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt
And turn again unto the warlike French. 65

Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles of France,
And keep not back your powers in dalliance. 5
Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn to us;
Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter SCOUT.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general,
And happiness to his accomplices!
Char. What tidings send our scouts? I prithee, speak. 10

Scout. The English army, that divided was Into two parties, is now conjoin'd in one,
And means to give you battle presently.

Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the warning is;

But we will presently provide for them. 15

Bur. I trust the ghost of Talbot is not there.

Now he is gone, my lord, you need not fear.

Puc. Of all base passions, fear is most accurs'd.

Command the conquest, Charles, it shall be thine,

Let Henry fret and all the world repine. 20

Char. Then on, my lords; and France be fortunate!
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Before Angiers.]

Alarum. Excursions. Enter LA PUCELLE.

Puc. The Regent conquers, and the Frenchmen fly.

Now help, ye charming spells and periapts;
And ye choice spirits that admonish me
And give me signs of future accidents. [Thunder.]

You speedy helpers, that are substitutes
Under the lordly monarch of the north,
Appear and aid me in this enterprise.

Enter Fiends.

This speedy and quick appearance argues proof
Of your accustom'd diligence to me.

Now, ye familiar spirits, that are cull'd 10

Out of the powerful regions under earth,
Help me this once, that France may get the field.

[They walk, and speak not.]

O, hold me not with silence over-long!

Where I was wont to feed you with my blood,
I'll lop a member off and give it you 15

In earnest of a further benefit,
So you do condescend to help me now.

[They hang their heads.]

No hope to have redress? My body shall Pay recompense, if you will grant my suit.

[They shake their heads.]

Cannot my body nor blood-sacrifice 20

Entreat you to your wonted furtherance?

Then take my soul, my body, soul, and all,

Before that England give the French the foil.

[They depart.]

See, they forsake me! Now the time is come

That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest

And let her head fall into England's lap. 25

My ancient incantations are too weak,

And hell too strong for me to buckle with.
Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.
[Exit.]

Excursions. Enter BURGUNDY and YORK fighting hand to hand. The French fly. [LA PUCELLE is brought in captive.]

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast. 30

Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms

And try if they can gain your liberty.

A goodly prize, fit for the devil's grace!

See, how the ugly wench doth bend her brows,

As if with Circe she would change my shape! 35

Puc. Chang'd to a worse shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the Dauphin is a proper

man;

No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles and thee!

And may ye both be suddenly surpris'd 40

By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell banning hag, enchantress, hold thy tongue!

Puc. I prithee, give me leave to curse a while.

York. Curse, misereant, when thou com'st to the stake. [Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter SUFFOLK, with MARGARET in his hand.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

[Gazes on her.]

O fairest beauty, do not fear nor fly, 45

For I will touch thee but with reverent hands.

I kiss these fingers for eternal peace,

And lay them gently on thy tender side.

Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee. 50

Mar. Margaret my name, and daughter to a

king,

The King of Naples, whosoe'er thou art.

Suf. An earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle,

Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me; 55

So doth the swan her downy cygnets save,

Keeping them prisoner underneath her wings.

Yet, if this servile usage once offend,

Go and be free again as Suffolk's friend.

[She is going.]

O, stay! [Aside.] I have no power to let her

pass; 60

My hand would free her, but my heart says no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams,

Twinkling another counterfeited beam,

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak. 65

I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.

Fie, De la Pole! disable not thyself,

Hast not a tongue? Is she not here?

Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?

Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such, 70

Confounds the tongue and makes the senses

rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk — if thy name be

so —

What ransom must I pay before I pass?

For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. [Aside.] How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit, 75
Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? What ransom must I pay?

Suf. [Aside.] She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom? yea, or no, 80

Suf. [Aside.] Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife;

Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. [Aside.] There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad. 85

Suf. [Aside.] And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. [Aside.] I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king. Tush, that's a wooden thing!

Mar. He talks of wood; it is some carpenter.

Suf. [Aside.] Yet so my fancy may be satisfied, 91

And peace established between these realms. But there remains a scruple in that too;

For though her father be the King of Naples, Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor, 95

And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. [Aside.] It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much.

Henry is youthful and will quickly yield. Madam, I have a secret to reveal. 100

Mar. [Aside.] What though I be enthralld? He seems a knight,

And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. [Aside.] Perhaps I shall be rescu'd by the French;

And then I need not crave his courtesy. 105

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. [Aside.] Tush, women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo.

Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not suppose 110

Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile Than is a slave in base servility;

For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you, If happy England's royal king be free. 115

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,

To put a golden sceptre in thy hand

And set a precious crown upon thy head, If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What? 120

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am To woo so fair a dame to be his wife

And have no portion in the choice myself. 125

How say you, madam, are ye so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth.

And, madam, at your father's castle walls We'll crave a parley, to confer with him. 130

A parley sounded. Enter REIGNIER on the walls.

See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner!

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy? I am a soldier and unapt to weep

Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord. 135

Consent, and for thy honour give consent, Thy daughter shall be wedded to my king,

Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;

And this her easy-held imprisonment Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty. 140

Suf. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Reig. Fair Margaret knows That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.

Suf. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit from the walls.]

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming. 145

Trumpets sound. Enter REIGNIER [below].

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories!

Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,

Fit to be made companion with a king.

What answer makes your Grace unto my suit? 150

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth

To be the princely bride of such a lord;

Upon condition I may quietly Enjoy mine own, the country Maine and Anjou,

Free from oppression or the stroke of war, 155

My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her; And those two counties I will undertake Your Grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name, 160

As deputy unto that gracious king,

Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,

Because this is in traffic of a king.

[Aside.] And yet, methinks, I could be well content 165

To be mine own attorney in this case.
I'll over then to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemniz'd.
So farewell, Reignier! Set this diamond safe
In golden palaces, as it becomes. 170

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, King Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord! Good wishes, praise, and prayers
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret. [Going.
Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! But hark
you, Margaret; 175

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as becomes a
maid,

A virgin, and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd and modestly directed.

But, madam, I must trouble you again; 180
No loving token to his Majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord, a pure unspotted
heart,

Never yet taint with love, I send the King.

Suf. And this withal. [Kisses her.

Mar. That for thyself; I will not so presume 185

To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reignier and Margaret.]
Suf. O, wert thou for myself! But, Suffolk,
stay,

Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth;
There Minotaurs and ugly treasurs lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise; 190
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount,
And natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's
feet,

Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wonder. [Exit. 195

[SCENE IV. Camp of the Duke of York in Anjou.]

Enter YORK, WARWICK [and others].

York. Bring forth that sorceress condemn'd to burn.

[Enter LA PUCELLE, guarded, and a SHEP-HERD.]

Skep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's heart outright!

Have I sought every country far and near,
And, now it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death? 5

Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die with
thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wretch!
I am descended of a gentler blood.

Thou art no father nor no friend of mine.

Skep. Out, out! My lords, an please you, it is not so. 10

I did beget her, all the parish knows.
Her mother liveth yet, can testify
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy parent-age?

York. This argues what her kind of life hath been, 15

Wicked and vile; and so her death concludes.

Skep. Pie, Joan, that thou wilt be so obstacle!

God knows thou art a collop of my flesh,
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear.

Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan. 20

Puc. Peasant, avaunt! — You have suborn'd
this man,

Of purpose to obscure my noble birth.

Skep. 'Tis true, I gave a noble to the priest

The morn that I was wedded to her mother. 24

Kneel down and take my blessing, good my girl.

Wilt thou not stoop? Now cursed be the time

Of thy nativity! I would the milk

Thy mother gave thee when thou suck'dst her breast,

Had been a little ratsbane for thy sake!

Or else, when thou didst keep my lambs
a-field, 30

I wish some ravenous wolf had eaten thee!

Dost thou deny thy father, cursed drab?

O, burn her, burn her! hanging is too good.

[Exit.

York. Take her away; for she hath liv'd too long,

To fill the world with vicious qualities. 35

Puc. First, let me tell you whom you have condemn'd:

Not me begotten of a shepherd swain,

But issued from the progeny of kings;

Virtuous and holy; chosen from above, 40

By inspiration of celestial grace,

To work exceeding miracles on earth.

I never had to do with wicked spirits;

But you, that are polluted with your lusts,

Stain'd with the guiltless blood of innocents, 45

Corrupt and tainted with a thousand vices,

Because you want the grace that others have,

You judge it straight a thing impossible

To compass wonders but by help of devils.

No; misconceived! Joan of Arc hath been 50

A virgin from her tender infancy,

Chaste and immaculate in very thought;

Whose maiden blood, thus rigorously effus'd,

Will cry for vengeance at the gates of heaven.

York. Ay, ay; away with her to execution!

War. And hark ye, sirs; because she is a maid, 55

Spare for no faggots, let there be enow.

Place barrels of pitch upon the fatal stake,

That so her torture may be shortened.

Puc. Will nothing turn your unrelenting hearts?

Then, Joan, discover thine infirmity, 60

That warranteth by law to be thy privilege.

I am with child, ye bloody homicides!

Murder not then the fruit within my womb,

Although ye hale me to a violent death.

York. Now heaven forbid! the holy maid
with child! 65

War. The greatest miracle that e'er ye wrought!

Is all your strict preciseness come to this?

York. She and the Dauphin have been juggling.

I did imagine what would be her refuge.

War. Well, go to; we'll have no bastards live, 70

Especially since Charles must father it.

Puc. You are deceiv'd; my child is none of his.

It was Alençon that enjoy'd my love.

York. Alençon! that notorious Machiavel!

It dies, an if it had a thousand lives. 75

Puc. O, give me leave, I have deluded you.

'T was neither Charles nor yet the duke I nam'd,

But Reignier, King of Naples, that prevail'd.

War. A married man! that's most intolerable.

York. Why, here's a girl! I think she knows not well, 80

There were so many, whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.

Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee.

Use no entreaty, for it is in vain. 85

Puc. Then lead me hence; with whom I leave my curse:

May never glorious sun reflex his beams

Upon the country where you make abode,

But darkness and the gloomy shade of death

Environ you, till mischief and despair 90

Drive you to break your necks or hang yourselves!

[Exit guarded].

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,

Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL [BEAUFORT, Bishop of Winchester, attended].

Car. Lord Regent, I do greet your excellence

With letters of commission from the King. 95

For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,

Mov'd with remorse of these outrageous broils,

Have earnestly implor'd a general peace

Between our nation and the aspiring French;

And here at hand the Dauphin and his train 100

Approacheth, to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?

After the slaughter of so many peers,

So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,

That in this quarrel have been overthrown 105

And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,

Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?

Have we not lost most part of all the towns,

By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,

Our great progenitors had conquered? 110

O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief

The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York. If we conclude a peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants

As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby. 115

Enter CHARLES, ALENÇON, BASTARD, REIGNIER [and others].

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,

We come to be informed by yourselves

What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes 120

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,

By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:

That, in regard King Henry gives consent,

Of mere compassion and of lenity, 125

To ease your country of distressful war,

And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,

You shall become true liegemen to his crown;

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear 130

To pay him tribute and submit thyself,

Thou shalt be plac'd as viceroy under him,

And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then as shadow of himself?

Adorn his temples with a coronet,

And yet, in substance and authority, 135

Retain but privilege of a private man?

This proffer is absurd and unreasonable.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd

With more than half the Gallian territories,

And therein reverenc'd for their lawful king: 140

Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish'd,

Detract so much from that prerogative

As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?

No, lord ambassador, I'll rather keep

That which I have than, coveting for more, 145

Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means

Used intercession to obtain a league,

And, now the matter grows to compromise,

Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison? 150

Either accept the title thou usurp'st,

Of benefit proceeding from our king

And not of any challenge of desert,

Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy 155

To cavil in the course of this contract.

If once it be neglected, ten to one

We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy

To save your subjects from such massacre 160

And ruthless slaughters as are daily seen

By our proceeding in hostility;

And therefore take this compact of a truce,

Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? Shall our condition stand? 165

Char. It shall;

Only reserv'd, you claim no interest

In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his Majesty,
As thou art knight, never to disobey 170
Nor be rebellious to the crown of England,
Thou, nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.
[Charles and his party give signs of fidelity.]

So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. 175
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE] V. [London. The palace.]

Enter SUFFOLK in conference with the KING;
GLOUCESTER and EXETER [following].

King. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,

Of beauties Margaret hath astonish'd me.
Her virtues graced with external gifts
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart;
And like as rigour of tempestuous gusts 5
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwreck or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush, my good lord, this superficial tale 10

Is but a preface of her worthy praise.
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
Had I sufficient skill to utter them,
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit; 15
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full-replete with choice of all delights,
But with as humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents,
To love and honour Henry as her lord. 21

King. And otherwise will Henry ne'er presume.

Therefore, my Lord Protector, give consent
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glou. So should I give consent to flatter sin. 25
You know, my lord, your Highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem.

How shall we then dispense with that contract,
And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths; 30
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds.

A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offence. 35

Glou. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that?

Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my lord, her father is a king, 40
The King of Naples and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace

And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glou. And so the Earl of Armagnac may do,
Because he is near kinsman unto Charles. 45

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant a liberal dower,

Where Reigner sooner will receive than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so
your king,

That he should be so abject, base, and poor,
To choose for wealth and not for perfect love. 50

Henry is able to enrich his queen
And not to seek a queen to make him rich.

So worthless peasants bargain for their wives,
As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse.

Marriage is a matter of more worth 55
Than to be dealt in by attorneyship.

Not whom we will, but whom his Grace affects,
Must be companion of his nuptial bed.

And therefore, lords, since he affects her most,
[It] most of all these reasons bindeth us, 60

In our opinions she should be preferr'd.
For what is wedlock forced but a hell,

An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,

And is a pattern of celestial peace. 65
Whom should we match with Henry, being a king,
But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?

Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none but for a king.

Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit, 70
More than in women commonly is seen,
Will answer our hope in issue of a king;

For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,

If with a lady of so high resolve 75
As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love.

Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me
That Margaret shall be Queen, and none but she.

King. Whether it be through force of your report,

My noble Lord of Suffolk, or for that
My tender youth was never yet attain'd 80

With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,

I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarms both of hope and fear, 85

As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to

France;
Agree to any covenants, and procure

That Lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the seas to England and be crown'd. 90

King Henry's faithful and anointed queen.
For your expenses and sufficient charge,

Among the people gather up a tenth.
Be gone, I say; for, till you do return,

I rest perplexed with a thousand cares. 95
And you, good uncle, banish all offence.

If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse

This sudden execution of my will.
And so, conduct me where, from company, 100

I may revolve and ruminate my grief. [Exit.]

Glou. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last. [Exeunt Gloucester [and Exeter].]

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd; and thus he goes,

As did the youthful Paris once to Greece,
With hope to find the like event in love, 105

But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be Queen, and rule the King;

But I will rule both her, the King, and realm.
[Exit.]

SCENE : England.]

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. The palace.]

Flourish of trumpets : then hautboys. Enter the KING, HUMPHREY DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, SALISBURY, WARWICK, and CARDINAL BEAUFORT, on the one side ; the QUEEN, SUFFOLK, YORK, SOMERSET, and BUCKINGHAM, on the other.

Suf. As by your high imperial Majesty I had in charge at my depart for France, As procurator to your Excellence, To marry Princess Margaret for your Grace, So, in the famous ancient city Tours, In presence of the Kings of France and Sicil, The Dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon, Seven earls, twelve barons, and twenty reverend bishops,

I have perform'd my task and was espous'd ; And humbly now upon my bended knee, In sight of England and her lordly peers, Deliver up my title in the Queen To your most gracious hands, that are the substance

Of that great shadow I did represent ; The happiest gift that ever marquess gave, The fairest queen that ever king receiv'd.

King. Suffolk, arise. Welcome, Queen Margaret !

I can express no kinder sign of love Than this kind kiss. O Lord, that lends me life, Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness !

For thou hast given me in this beauteous face
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Queen. Great King of England and my gracious lord,

The mutual conference that my mind hath had,

By day, by night, waking and in my dreams,
In courtly company or at my beads,

With you, mine alder-lieft sovereign,
Makes me the bolder to salute my king

With ruder terms, such as my wit affords
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

King. Her sight did ravish ; but her grace in speech,

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me from wond'ring fall to weeping joys,

Such is the fulness of my heart's content.
Lords, with one cheerful voice welcome my

love.

All (kneeling). Long live Queen Margaret,
England's happiness !

Queen. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My Lord Protector, so it please your
Grace,

Here are the articles of contracted peace
Between our sovereign and the French king

Charles,
For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glou. (Reads.) "Imprimis, It is agreed between the French king Charles, and William de la Pole, Marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry King of England, that the said ⁴⁵

Henry shall espouse the Lady Margaret, daughter unto Reignier King of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem, and crown her Queen of England ere the thirtieth of May next ensuing. Item, that the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered to the King her father." — [Lets the paper fall. ⁵²

King. Uncle, how now!
Glou. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the
heart
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

King. Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on. ⁵⁵
Car. [Reads.] "Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the King her father, and she sent over of the King of England's own proper cost and charges, without having any dowry." ⁶²

King. They please us well. Lord marquess, kneel down.

We here create thee the first Duke of Suffolk,
And gird thee with the sword. Cousin of York,
We here discharge your Grace from being regent
I' the parts of France, till term of eighteen months

Be full expir'd. Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloucester, York, Buckingham, Somerset,
Salisbury, and Warwick; ⁷⁰

We thank you all for this great favour done
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.

Glou. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, ⁷⁵

To you Duke Humphrey must unload his grief,
Your grief, the common grief of all the land.
What! did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people, in the wars?

Did he so often lodge in open field, ⁸⁰

In winter's cold and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toil his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?

Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick, ⁹⁰

Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?

Or hath mine uncle Beaufort and myself,

With all the learned council of the realm, ⁹⁵

Studied so long, sat in the council-house

Early and late, debating to and fro

How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe,

And hath his Highness in his infancy

Crowned in Paris in despite of foes? ⁹⁴

And shall these labours and these honours
die?

Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,

Your deeds of war, and all our counsel die?

O peers of England, shameful is this league,

Fatal this marriage, cancelling your fame,

Blotting your names from books of memory, ¹⁰⁰

Razing the characters of your renown,

Defacing monuments of conquer'd France,
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse,

This peroration with such circumstance? ¹⁰⁵

For France, 't is ours; and we will keep it still.

Glou. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;

But now it is impossible we should.

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,

Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine ¹¹⁰

Unto the poor King Reignier, whose large style

Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for

all,

These counties were the keys of Normandy.

But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son? ¹¹⁵

War. For grief that they are past recovery;

For, were there hope to conquer them again,

My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no

tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both.

Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer; ¹²⁰

And are the cities, that I got with wounds,

Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk's duke, may he be suffocate,

That dims the honour of this warlike isle! ¹²⁵

France should have torn and rent my very heart,

Before I would have yielded to this league.

I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;

And our King Henry gives away his own, ¹³⁰

To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glou. A proper jest, and never heard before,

That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth

For costs and charges in transporting her!

She should have stay'd in France and starv'd ¹³⁵

in France,

Before—

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now ye grow too hot.

It was the pleasure of my lord the King.

Glou. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind.

'T is not my speeches that you do mislike, ¹⁴⁰

But 't is my presence that doth trouble ye.

Rancour will out. Proud prelate, in thy face

I see thy fury. If I longer stay,

We shall begin our ancient bickerings.

Lordings, farewell; and say, when I am gone,

I prophesied France will be lost ere long. ¹⁴⁵

[Exit.

Car. So, there goes our Protector in a rage.

'T is known to you he is mine enemy,

Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,

And no great friend, I fear me, to the King. ¹⁵⁰

Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,

And heir apparent to the English crown.

Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,

And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,

There's reason he should be displeas'd at it. ¹⁵⁵

Look to it, lords! Let not his smoothing words

Bewitch your hearts. Be wise and circum-spect.

What though the common people favour him,
Calling him "Humphrey, the good Duke of Gloucester,"

Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice, 160

"Jesu maintain your royal Excellence!"

With "God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!"

I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss,
He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he, then, protect our sovereign, 165

He being of age to govern of himself?

Cousin of Somerset, join you with me,

And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk,

We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat.

Car. This weighty business will not brook delay. 170

I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit.

Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride

And greatness of his place be grief to us,

Yet let us watch the haughty Cardinal.

His insolence is more intolerable 175

Than all the princes in the land beside.

If Gloucester be displac'd, he'll be Protector.

Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be Protectors,

Despite Duke Humphrey or the Cardinal.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him. 180

While these do labour for their own prefer-
ment,

Behoves it us to labour for the realm.

I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloucester

Did bear him like a noble gentleman.

Of late I seen the haughty Cardinal, 185

More like a soldier than a man o' the church,

As stout and proud as he were lord of all,

Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself

Unlike the ruler of a commonweal.

Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age, 190

Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy housekeep-
ing,

Hath won the greatest favour of the commons,

Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey;

And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland,

In bringing them to civil discipline, 195

Thy late exploits done in the heart of France,

When thou wert regent for our sovereign,

Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people.

Join we together, for the public good,

In what we can, to bridle and suppress 200

The pride of Suffolk and the Cardinal,

With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition;

And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's
deeds,

While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the
land, 205

And common profit of his country!

York. [Aside.] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost!

That Maine which by main force Warwick did win, 210

And would have kept so long as breath did last!

Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine,

Which I will win from France, or else be slain.
[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury.]

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French;

Paris is lost; the state of Normandy 215
Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone.

Suffolk concluded on the articles,

The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleas'd

To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter.

I cannot blame them all; what is 't to them? 220

'T is thine they give away, and not their own;

Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage

And purchase friends and give to courtezans,

Still revelling like lords till all be gone;

While as the silly owner of the goods 225

Weeps over them and wrings his hapless hands
And shakes his head and trembling stands

aloof,

While all is shar'd and all is borne away,

Ready to starve and dare not touch his own;

So York must sit and fret and bite his
tongue, 230

While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold.

Methinks the realms of England, France, and Ireland

Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood

As did the fatal brand Althæa burn'd

Unto the Prince's heart of Calydon. 235

Anjou and Maine both given unto the French!

Cold news for me, for I had hope of France,

Even as I have of fertile England's soil.

A day will come when York shall claim his
own;

And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts 240

And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey;

And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown,

For that's the golden mark I seek to hit.

Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right,

Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist, 245

Nor wear the diadem upon his head,

Whose church-like humours fits not for a
crown.

Then, York, be still a while, till time do serve.

Watch thou and wake when others be asleep,

To pry into the secrets of the state; 250

Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love

With his new bride and England's dear-bought
queen,

And Humphrey with the peers be fallen at jars.

Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose,

With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd,²⁶⁵
And in my standard bear the arms of York,
To grapple with the house of Lancaster;
And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the
crown,
Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. The Duke of Gloucester's house.]

Enter DUKE HUMPHREY and his wife ELEA-NOR.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd
corn,
Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load?
Why doth the great Duke Humphrey knit his brows,
As frowning at the favours of the world?
Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth,⁵
Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight?
What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem,
Enchas'd with all the honours of the world?
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the same.¹⁰
Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold.
What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with
mine;
And, having both together heav'd it up,
We'll both together lift our heads to heaven,
And never more abase our sight so low.¹⁵
As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glou. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord,
Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts!
And may that thought, when I imagine ill
Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry,
Be my last breathing in this mortal world!²¹
My troublous dreams this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? Tell me, and I'll requite it

With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glou. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,²⁵

Was broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,
But, as I think, it was by the Cardinal;
And on the pieces of the broken wand
Were plac'd the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset,

And William de la Pole, first Duke of Suffolk,
This was my dream; what it doth bode, God knows.³¹

Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument
That he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove

Shall lose his head for his presumption.
But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet Duke.
Methought I sat in seat of majesty³⁶
In the cathedral church of Westminster,
And in that chair where kings and queens are
crown'd;

Where Henry and Dame Margaret kneel'd to
me

And on my head did set the diadem.⁴⁰

Glou. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide out-
right.

Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor,
Art thou not second woman in the realm,
And the Protector's wife, belov'd of him?
Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command,⁴⁵
Above the reach or compass of thy thought?
And wilt thou still be hammering treachery,
To tumble down thy husband and thyself
From top of honour to disgrace's feet?
Away from me, and let me hear no more!⁵⁰

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric

With Eleanor, for telling but her dream?
Next time I'll keep my dreams unto myself,
And not be check'd.

Glou. Nay, be not angry; I am pleas'd again.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My Lord Protector, 'tis his Highness' pleasure⁵⁶

You do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's,
Where as the King and Queen do mean to hawk.

Glou. I go. Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us?

Duch. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently.⁶⁰

[Exeunt Gloucester [and Messenger].]

Follow I must; I cannot go before,
While Gloucester bears this base and humble
mind.

Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks
And smooth my way upon their headless necks;
And, being a woman, I will not be slack⁶⁶
To play my part in Fortune's pageant.

Where are you there? Sir John! Nay, fear not,
man,

We are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter HUME.

Hume. Jesus preserve your royal Majesty!⁷⁰

Duch. What say'st thou? Majesty? I am but Grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,

Your Grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? Hast thou as yet conferr'd

With Margery Jordan, the cunning witch,⁷⁵
With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?
And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised, to show your Highness

A spirit rais'd from depth of under-ground,
That shall make answer to such questions⁸⁰
As by your Grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions.

When from Saint Alban's we do make return,
We'll see these things effected to the full.

Here, Hume, take this reward. Make merry, man,⁸⁶

With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit.]

Hume. Hume must make merry with the Duchess' gold;

Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume!

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum;
 The business asketh silent secrecy. 90
 Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch.
 Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
 Yet have I gold flies from another coast,
 I dare not say from the rich Cardinal
 And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk. 96
 Yet I do find it so; for, to be plain,
 They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,
 Have hired me to undermine the Duchess
 And buzz these conjurations in her brain.
 They say, "A crafty knave does need no
 broker;" 100
 Yet am I Suffolk and the Cardinal's broker.
 Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
 To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
 Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last
 Hume's knavery will be the Duchess' wreck,
 And her attainure will be Humphrey's fall. 106
 Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all.

[Exit.]

[SCENE III. The palace.]

Enter three or four PETITIONERS, [PETER] the Armourer's man being one.

1. Petit. My masters, let's stand close. My Lord Protector will come this way by and by,
 and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

2. Petit. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him! 6

Enter SUFFOLK and QUEEN.

Peter. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the Queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

2. Petit. Come back, fool. This is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my Lord Protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst anything
 with me? 12

1. Petit. I pray, my lord, pardon me. I took ye for my Lord Protector.

Queen. [Reading.] "To my Lord Protector!" Are your supplications to his lordship?
 Let me see them. What is thine? 17

1. Petit. Mine is, an 't please your Grace, against John Goodman, my Lord Cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife, and all from me. 21

Suf. Thy wife too! that's some wrong, indeed. What's yours? What's here! [Reads.]
 "Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford." How now, sir
 knave! 25

2. Petit. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Giving his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown. 30

Queen. What say'st thou? Did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth.
 My master said that he was, and that the King was an usurper. 35

Suf. Who is there? (Enter Servant.) Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently. We'll hear more of your matter before the King.

[Servant with Peter.]
Queen. And as for you, that love to be protected. 40

Under the wings of our Protector's grace,
 Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Tears the supplications.]
 Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt.]

Queen. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise, 45

Is this the fashion in the court of England?

Is this the government of Britain's isle,

And this the royalty of Albion's king?

What, shall King Henry be a pupil still

Under the surly Gloucester's governance? 50

Am I a queen in title and in style,

And must be made a subject to a duke?

I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours

Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love

And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France, 55

I thought King Henry had resembled thee

In courage, courtship, and proportion.

But all his mind is bent to holiness,

To number Ave-Maries on his beads.

His champions are the prophets and apostles, 60

His weapons holy saws of sacred writ,

His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves

Are brazen images of canonized saints.

I would the college of the cardinals

Would choose him Pope and carry him to

Rome, 65

And set the triple crown upon his head.

That were a state fit for his holiness.

Suf. Madam, be patient. As I was cause

Your Highness came to England, so will I

In England work your Grace's full content. 70

Queen. Beside the haughty Protector, have we Beaufort

The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham,

And grumbling York; and not the least of these

But can do more in England than the King.

Suf. And he of these that can do most of
 all 75

Cannot do more in England than the Nevils.

Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Queen. Not all these lords do vex me half so much

As that proud dame, the Lord Protector's wife.
 She sweeps it through the court with troops of

ladies, 80

More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's

wife.

Strangers in court do take her for the Queen.

She bears a duke's revenues on her back,

And in her heart she scorns our poverty.

Shall I not live to be aveng'd on her? 85

Contemtuously base-born callet as she is,

She vaunted 'mongst her minions t' other day,

The very train of her worst wearing gown

Was better worth than all my father's lands,

Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daugh-
 ter. 90

Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her,

And placed a quire of such enticing birds
That she will light to listen to the lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest; and, madam, list to me, 95
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the Cardinal,
Yet must we join with him and with the lords,
Till we have brought Duke Humphrey in disgrace.

As for the Duke of York, this late complaint 100
Will make but little for his benefit.
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Sound a sennet. Enter the KING, DUKE HUMPHREY, CARDINAL BEAUFORT, BUCKINGHAM, YORK, [SOMERSET,] SALISBURY, WARWICK, and the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER.

King. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;

Or Somerset or York, all's one to me. 105

York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,

Then let him be deny'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be Regent; I will yield to him.

War. Whether your Grace be worthy, yea or no, 110

Dispute not that York is the worthier.

Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.

War. The Cardinal's not my better in the field.

Buck. All in this presence are thy betters, Warwick.

War. Warwick may live to be the best of all. 115

Sal. Peace, son! and show some reason, Buckingham,

Why Somerset should be prefer'd in this.

Queen. Because the King, forsooth, will have it so.

Glou. Madam, the King is old enough himself

To give his censure. These are no women's matters. 120

Queen. If he be old enough, what needs your Grace

To be protector of his Excellence?

Glou. Madam, I am Protector of the realm;
And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.

Suf. Resign it then and leave thine insolence. 125

Since thou wert king—as who is king but thou?—

The commonwealth hath daily run to wreck,
The Dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas,
And all the peers and nobles of the realm
Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty. 130

Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags

Are lank and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings and thy wife's attire

Have cost a mass of public treasury.

Buck. Thy cruelty in execution
Upon offenders hath exceeded law
And left thee to the mercy of the law. 135

Queen. Thy sale of offices and towns in France,

If they were known, as the suspect is great,
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head. 140

[Exit Gloucester. [The Queen drops her fan.]]

Give me my fan. What, minion! can ye not?
[She gives the Duchess a box on the ear.]

I cry you mercy, madam; was it you?

Duch. Was't I! Yea, I it was, proud French-woman.

Could I come near your beauty with my nails,

I'd set my ten commandments in your face. 145

King. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 't was against her will.

Duch. Against her will! Good king, look to 't in time;

She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby.

Though in this place most masters wear no breeches, 149

She shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreveng'd. [Exit.]

Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds.

She's tickled now; her fume needs no spurs,
She'll gallop far enough to her destruction. [Exit.]

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Now, lords, my choler being overblown 155

With walking once about the quadrangle,
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.

As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law;

But God in mercy so deal with my soul, 160

As I in duty love my king and country!
But, to the matter that we have in hand,

I say, my sovereign, York is meekest man
To be your regent in the realm of France.

Suf. Before we make election, give me leave 165

To show some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.

York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.

First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride;
Next, if I be appointed for the place, 170

My Lord of Somerset will keep me here
Without discharge, money, or furniture,

Till France be won into the Dauphin's hands.
Last time, I danc'd attendance on his will

Till Paris was besieg'd, famish'd, and lost. 175

War. That can I witness; and a fouler fact

Did never traitor in the land commit.
Suf. Peace, headstrong Warwick!

War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter [HORNER, the] Armourer; and his man
[PETER, guarded].

Suf. Because here is a man accused of treason.¹⁸⁰
Pray God the Duke of York excuse himself!

York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

King. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? Tell me, what are these?

Suf. Please it your Majesty, this is the man That doth accuse his master of high treason.¹⁸⁵ His words were these: that Richard Duke of York

Was rightful heir unto the English crown And that your Majesty was an usurper.

King. Say, man, were these thy words? ¹⁸⁹

Hor. An't shall please your Majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter. God is my witness, I am falsely accus'd by the villain.

Pet. By these ten bones, my lords [holding up his hands] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour.¹⁹⁵

York. Base dunghill villain and mechanical, I'll have thy head for this traitor's speech. I do beseech your royal Majesty,

Let him have all the rigour of the law.¹⁹⁹

Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my 'prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me. I have good witness of this; therefore I beseech your Majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.²⁰⁶

King. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glou. This doom, my lord, if I may judge: Let Somerset be regent o'er the French, Because in York this breeds suspicion;²¹⁰ And let these have a day appointed them For single combat in convenient place, For he hath witness of his servant's malice. This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom.

Som. I humbly thank your royal Majesty.²¹⁵

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pet. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, pity my case. The spite of man prevail-eth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow. O Lord, my heart!²²¹

Glou. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to prison; and the day of combat shall be the last of the next month. Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.^[Flourish. Exeunt. 226]

[SCENE IV. Gloucester's garden.]

Enter the witch [MARGERY JORDAN], the two priests, HUME and SOUTHWELL, and BOLINGBROKE.

Hume. Come, my masters; the Duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefor provided. Will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay, what else? Fear you not her courage.⁷

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit; but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go, in God's name, and leave us. [Exit Hume. Mother Jordan, be you prostrate and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.¹⁵

Enter DUCHESS aloft [HUME following].

Duch. Well said, my masters, and welcome all. To this gear, the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times.

Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night, The time of night when Troy was set on fire,²⁰ The time when screech-owls cry and ban-dogs howl

And spirits walk and ghosts break up their graves,

That time best fits the work we have in hand. Madam, sit you and fear not. Whom we raise, We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.²⁵

[Here they do the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads, "Conjuro te," etc. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adsum.

M. Jord. Asmath, By the eternal God, whose name and power Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask; For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence.³⁰

Spir. Ask what thou wilt. That I had said and done!

Boling. "First of the King: what shall of him become?" [Reading out of a paper.]

Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;

But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Bolingbroke writes the answer.]

Boling. "What fates await the Duke of Suffolk?"³⁵

Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.

Boling. "What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?"

Spir. Let him shun castles.

Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains Than where castles mounted stand.⁴⁰

Have done, for more I hardly can endure.

Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake!

False fiend, avoid!

[Thunder and lightning. Exit Spirit.]

Enter the DUKE OF YORK and the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM with their Guard, and break in.

York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.

Beldam, I think we watch'd you at an inch. 45
What, madam, are you there? The King and commonweal

Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains.
My Lord Protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.

Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's
king, 50

Injurious duke, that threatest where's no
cause.

Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this? [Showing the papers.]

Away with them! let them be clapp'd up close,
And kept asunder. You, madam, shall with us.
Stafford, take her to thee. 55

[*Exeunt above Duchess and Hume,
guarded.*]

We'll see your trinkets here all forthcoming.
All, away!

[Exeunt [guard with Jordan, South-well, etc.].]

York. Lord Buckingham, methinks you watch'd her well.

A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon! 60
Now, pray, my lord, let's see the devil's writ.
What have we here?

[Reads.]
"The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death."

Why, this is just
"Aio [te.] Æacida, Romanos vincere posse." 65

Tell, to the rest:
"Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?"

By water shall he die, and take his end.
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?

Let him shun castles;
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains 70
Than where castles mounted stand."

Come, come, my lords;
These oracles are hardly attain'd,
And hardly understood. 75

The King is now in progress towards Saint Alban's.

With him the husband of this lovely lady.
Thither goes these news, as fast as horse can carry them,

A sorry breakfast for my Lord Protector.
Buck. Your Grace shall give me leave, my Lord of York, 80

To be the post, in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord.
Who's within there, ho!

Enter a Servingman.

Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To sup with me to-morrow night. Away!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

[SCENE I. Saint Alban's.]

Enter the KING, QUEEN, GLOUCESTER, CARDI-NAL, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers, halloing.

Queen. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook,

I saw not better sport these seven years' day;

Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high,
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

King. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made, 5

And what a pitch she flew above the rest!
To see how God in all His creatures works!

Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.
Suf. No marvel, an it like your Majesty,

My Lord Protector's hawks do tower so well. 10
They know their master loves to be aloft
And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glou. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much. He would be above the clouds. 15

Glou. Ay, my Lord Cardinal? How think you by that?

Were it not good your Grace could fly to heaven?

King. The treasury of everlasting joy.
Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and
thoughts

Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart, 20
Pernicious Protector, dangerous peer,
That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal!

Glou. What, Cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantene animis celestibus ira?
Churchmen so hot? Good uncle, hide such malice. 25

With such holiness can you do it?
Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well becomes

So good a quarrel and so bad a peer.
Glou. As who, my lord?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord,
An't like your lordly Lord-protectorship. 30

Glou. Why, Suffolk, England knows thine insolence.

Queen. And thy ambition, Gloucester.
King. I prithee, peace, good queen,
And whet not on these furious peers;

For blessed are the peacemakers on earth. 35
Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I
make,

Against this proud Protector, with my sword!
Glou. [Aside to Car.] Faith, holy uncle, would 't were come to that!

Car. [Aside to Glou.] Marry, when thou dar'st.

Glou. [Aside to Car.] Make up no factious numbers for the matter; 40

In thine own person answer thy abuse.
Car. [Aside to Glou.] Ay, where thou dar'st not peep. An if thou dar'st,

This evening, on the east side of the grove.
King. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester,
Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, 45

We had had more sport. [Aside to Glou.] Come with thy two-hand sword.

Glou. True, uncle.
[Car. Aside to Glou.] Are ye advis'd? The east side of the grove.

Glou. [Aside to Car.] Cardinal, I am with you.
King. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester!
Glou. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord.
[Aside to Car.] Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown for this,
 Or all my fence shall fail.
Car. [Aside to Glou.] Medice, teipsum — Protector, see to 't well, protect yourself.
King. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.
 How irksome is this music to my heart!
 When such strings jar, what hope of harmony?
 I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.
Enter [a TOWNSMAN of Saint Alban's,] crying,
 "A miracle!"
Glou. What means this noise?
 Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?
Towns. A miracle! a miracle!
Suf. Come to the King and tell him what miracle.
Towns. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine,
 Within this half-hour, hath receiv'd his sight;
 A man that ne'er saw in his life before.
King. Now, God be prais'd, that to believing souls
 Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!
Enter the MAYOR of Saint Alban's and his brethren, bearing the man [SIMPCOX] between two in a chair [SIMPCOX's WIFE and others following].
Car. Here comes the townsmen on procession,
 To present your Highness with the man.
King. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,
 Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.
Glou. Stand by, my masters. Bring him near the King;
 His Highness' pleasure is to talk with him.
King. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,
 That we for thee may glorify the Lord.
 What, hast thou been long blind and now restor'd?
Simp. Born blind, an't please your Grace.
Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.
Suf. What woman is this?
Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.
Glou. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.
King. Where wert thou born?
Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your Grace.
King. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee.
 Let never day nor night unhallowed pass,
 But still remember what the Lord hath done.
Queen. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,
 Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?
Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd

A hundred times and oftener, in my sleep,
 By good Saint Alban, who said, "Simpeox, come;
 Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee."
Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so.
Car. What, art thou lame?
Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!
Suf. How cam'st thou so?
Simp. A fall off of a tree.
Wife. A plum-tree, master.
Glou. How long hast thou been blind?
Simp. O, born so, master.
Glou. What, and wouldst climb a tree?
Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.
Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.
Glou. Mass, thou lov'dst plums well, that wouldst venture so.
Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some daimsons,
 And made me climb, with danger of my life.
Glou. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.
 Let me see thine eyes. Wink now; now open them.
 In my opinion yet thou see'st not well.
Simp. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.
Glou. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?
Simp. Red, master; red as blood.
Glou. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?
Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black as jet.
King. Why, then, thou know'st what colour jet is of?
Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.
Glou. But cloaks and gowns, before this day, a many.
Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.
Glou. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?
Simp. Alas, master, I know not.
Glou. What's his name?
Simp. I know not.
Glou. Nor his?
Simp. No, indeed, master.
Glou. What's thine own name?
Simp. Saunder Simpeox, an if it please you, master.
Glou. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lying'st knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou mightst as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think his cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again?
Simp. O master, that you could!
Glou. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beadles in your town, and things call'd whips?
May. Yes, my lord, if it please your Grace.

Glou. Then send for one presently. 139

May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight. [Exit an Attendant.]

Glou. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. [A stool brought.] Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away.

Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone. 145

You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a BEADLE with whips.

Glou. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.

Bead. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly. 151

Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away; and they follow and cry, "A miracle!"]

King. O God, seest Thou this, and bearest so long? 155

Queen. It made me laugh to see the villain run.

Glou. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.

Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need.

Glou. Let them be whipp'd through every market-town, till they come to Berwick, from whence they came. 160

[Exeunt [Wife, Beadle, Mayor, etc.].]

Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.

Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away.

Glou. But you have done more miracles than I;

You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

King. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham? 165

Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.

A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent, Under the countenance and confederacy Of Lady Eleanor, the Protector's wife, The ringleader and head of all this rout, Have practis'd dangerously against your state, Dealing with witches and with conjurers; Whom we have apprehended in the fact, Raising up wicked spirits from under ground, Demanding of King Henry's life and death, And other of your Highness' privy-council, As more at large your Grace shall understand. 170 175

Car. [Aside to Glou.] And so, my Lord Protector, by this means

Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge; 180

'T is like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

Glou. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflict my heart.

Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers;

And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee, Or to the meanest groom. 185

King. O God, what mischiefs work the wicked ones,

Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby!

Queen. Gloucester, see here the tainture of thy nest,

And look thyself be faultless, thou wert best. Glou. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal. 190

How I have lov'd my king and commonweal; And, for my wife, I know not how it stands.

Sorry I am to hear what I have heard. Noble she is, but if she have forgot

Honour and virtue, and convers'd with such As, like to pitch, defile nobility, 195

I banish her my bed and company And give her as a prey to law and shame,

That hath dishonoured Gloucester's honest name.

King. Well, for this night we will repose us here; 200

To-morrow toward London back again, To look into this business thoroughly

And call these foul offenders to their answers, And poise the cause in justice' equal scales,

Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt. 205

[SCENE II. London. The Duke of York's garden.]

Enter YORK, SALISBURY, and WARWICK.

York. Now, my good Lords of Salisbury and Warwick,

Our simple supper ended, give me leave In this close walk to satisfy myself,

In craving your opinion of my title, Which is infallible, to England's crown. 210

Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.

War. Sweet York, begin; and if thy claim be good,

The Nevils are thy subjects to command. York. Then thus:

Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons: 215 The first, Edward the Black Prince, Prince of Wales;

The second, William of Hatfield; and the third,

Lionel Duke of Clarence; next to whom Was John of Gaunt, the Duke of Lancaster;

The fifth was Edmund Langley, Duke of York; The sixth was Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester; 220

William of Windsor was the seventh and last. Edward the Black Prince died before his father

And left behind him Richard, his only son, Who after Edward the Third's death reign'd as king, 225 Till Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster, The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt, Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth, Seiz'd on the realm, depos'd the rightful king,

Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came, 230

And him to Pomfret; where, as all you know,
Harmless Richard was murdered traitorously.

War. Father, the Duke hath told the truth;
Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.

York. Which now they hold by force and not by right;

For Richard, the first son's heir, being dead,
The issue of the next son should have reign'd.

Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.

York. The third son, Duke of Clarence, from whose line

I claim the crown, had issue, Philippe, a daughter,

Who married Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March;

Edmund had issue, Roger Earl of March;
Roger had issue, Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Boling-
broke,

As I have read, laid claim unto the crown; 40
And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king,
Who kept him in captivity till he died.
But to the rest.

York. His eldest sister, Anne,
My mother, being heir unto the crown, Married Richard Earl of Cambridge, who was
son 45

To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth
son.

By her I claim the kingdom. She was heir
To Roger Earl of March, who was the son
Of Edmund Mortimer, who married Philippe,
Sole daughter unto Lionel Duke of Clarence; 50
So, if the issue of the elder son
Succeed before the younger, I am king.

War. What plain proceeding is more plain than this?

Henry doth claim the crown from John of Gaunt,

The fourth son; York claims it from the third. 55

Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign.
It fails not yet, but flourishes in thee

And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock.
Then, father Salisbury, kneel we together;

And in this private plot be we the first 60
That shall salute our rightful sovereign
With honour of his birthright to the crown.

Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!

York. We thank you, lords. But I am not
your king

Till I be crown'd, and that my sword be
stain'd 65

With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster;
And that's not suddenly to be perform'd,

But with advice and silent secrecy.
Do you as I do in these dangerous days;

Wink at the Duke of Suffolk's insolence, 70
At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition,
At Buckingham and all the crew of them,

Till they have snar'd the shepherd of the flock,
That virtuous prince, the good Duke Humphrey.

'T is that they seek, and they in seeking that 75
Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.

Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick

Shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, 80
Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick

The greatest man in England but the King.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. A hall of justice.]

Sound trumpets. Enter the KING [the QUEEN,
GLOUCESTER, YORK, SUFFOLK, and SALIS-BURY; the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER, MAR-GERY JORDAN, SOUTHWELL, HUME, and BOLINGBROKE, under guard].

King. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife.

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great.
Receive the sentence of the law for sins

Such as by God's book are adjudg'd to death.
You four, from hence to prison back again; 5

From thence unto the place of execution.
The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes,

And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.

You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Despoiled of your honour in your life, 10

Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here in banishment,

With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.
Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glou. Eleanor, the law, thou see'st, hath judged thee. 15

I cannot justify whom the law condemns.

[Exeunt Duchess and other prisoners, guarded.]

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age

Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!
I beseech your Majesty, give me leave to go; 20

Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.
King. Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester!

Ere thou go,
Give up thy staff. Henry will to himself

Protector be; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet; 25

And go in peace, Humphrey, no less belov'd
Than when thou wert Protector to thy king.

Queen. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.

God and King Henry govern England's realm. 30
Give up your staff, sir, and the King his realm.

Glou. My staff? Here, noble Henry, is my staff.

As willingly do I the same resign
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;

And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it 35
As others would ambitiously receive it.

Farewell, good king! When I am dead and
gone,

May honourable peace attend thy throne!
[Exit.]

Queen. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;
And Humphrey Duke of Gloucester scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a maim; two pulls at once;

His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off.
This staff of honour raght, there let it stand
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays;

Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.
York. Lords, let him go. Please it your Majesty,

This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your Highness to behold the fight.

Queen. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore

Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

King. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit.

Here let them end it; and God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter at one door [HORNER,] the Armourer, and his NEIGHBOURS, drinking to him so much that he is drunk: and he enters with a drum before him and his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; and at the other door [PETER,] his man, with a drum and sand-bag, and 'PRENTICES drinking to him.

1. Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.

3. Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour. Drink, and fear not your man.

Hor. Let it come, i' faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!

1. 'Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2. 'Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master. Fight for credit of the 'prentices.

Peter. I thank you all. Drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer; and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me! I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth.

Sal. Peter! What more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! Then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man; and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the King, nor the Queen; and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow!

York. Dispatch. This knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants!

[Alarum.] They fight, and Peter strikes him down.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, thank God, and the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O God, have I overcome mine enemy in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevail'd in right!

King. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight,

For by his death we do perceive his guilt;
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us

The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully.

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Sound a flourish. Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. A street.]

Enter GLOUCESTER and his SERVING-MEN, in mourning cloaks.

Glou. Thus sometimes hath the brightest day a cloud;

And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold;
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.

Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glou. Ten is the hour that was appointed me
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess.

Uneath may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.

Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people gazing on thy face,

With envious looks laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot-wheels

When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.

But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prepare

My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER [bare-foot], in a white sheet [with verses pinned upon her back], and a taper burning in her hand; with [SIR JOHN STANLEY,] the SHERIFF, and Officers.

Serv. So please your Grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glou. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame?

Now thou dost penance too. Look how they gaze!

See how the giddy multitude do point,

And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee!

Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful looks,

And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame,
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine! 25

Glou. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief,

Duch. Ah, Gloucester, teach me to forget myself!

For whilst I think I am thy married wife
And thou a prince, Protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along, 30
Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back,
And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groans.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh 35
And bid me be advised how I tread.
Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke?
Trow'st thou that e'er I'll look upon the world,

Or count them happy that enjoys the sun?
No; dark shall be my light and night my day;
To think upon my pomp shall be my hell. 41
Sometime I'll say, I am Duke Humphrey's wife,
And he a prince and ruler of the land;
Yet so he rul'd and such a prince he was
As he stood by whilst I, his forlorn duchess, 45
Was made a wonder and a pointing-stock
To every idle rascal follower.

But be thou mild and blush not at my shame,
Nor stir at nothing till the axe of death
Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will; 50
For Suffolk, he that can do all in all
With her that hateth thee and hates us all,
And York and impious Beaufort, that false priest,
Have all him'd bushes to betray thy wings,
And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle 55
thee.

But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd,
Nor never seek prevention of thy foes.

Glou. Ah, Nell, forbear! thou aimest all awry.

I must offend before I be attainted;
And had I twenty times so many foes, 60
And each of them had twenty times their power,

All these could not procure me any scath
So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless.
Wouldst have me rescue thee from this reproach?

Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away, 65
But I in danger for the breach of law.
Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell.
I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience;
These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a HERALD.

Her. I summon your Grace to his Majesty's parliament, 70

Holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glou. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before!

This is close dealing. Well, I will be there.

[Exit Herald.]

My Nell, I take my leave; and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the King's commission. 75

Sher. An't please your Grace, here my commission stays,

And Sir John Stanley is appointed now
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glou. Must you, Sir John, protect my lady here?

Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your Grace. 80

Glou. Entreat her not the worse in that I pray

You use her well. The world may laugh again,
And I may live to do you kindness if

You do it her. And so, Sir John, farewell!

Duch. What, gone, my lord, and bid me not farewell! 85

Glou. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exeunt Gloucester [and Serving-men].]

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee,

For none abides with me. My joy is death;
Death, at whose name I oft have been afraid,
Because I wish'd this world's eternity. 90

Stanley, I prithee, go, and take me hence;
I care not whither, for I beg no favour,
Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man;

There to be us'd according to your state. 95

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach;

And shall I then be us'd reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady.

According to that state you shall be us'd.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell; and better than I fare, 100

Although thou hast been conduct of my shame.
Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharged.

Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet, 105

And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet.

No, it will hang upon my richest robes
And show itself, attire me how I can.

Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. 110

[Exeunt.]

[ACT III]

[SCENE I. The Abbey at Bury St. Edmund's.]

A sennet. Enter the KING, the QUEEN, CARDINAL, SUFFOLK, YORK, BUCKINGHAM, SALISBURY, and WARWICK to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come;

'T is not his wont to be the hindmost man,
Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.

Queen. Can you not see, or will ye not observe
The strangeness of his alter'd countenance? 5
With what a majesty he bears himself,
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike him-
self?

We know the time since he was mild and affable,

And if we did but glance a far-off look, 10
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admir'd him for submission;
But meet him now, and, be it in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow and shows an angry eye 15
And passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs.

Small curs are not regarded when they grin,
But great men tremble when the lion roars;
And Humphrey is no little man in England. 20
First note that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he is the next will mount.
Me seemeth then it is no policy,

Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears
And his advantage following your decease, 25
That he should come about your royal person
Or be admitted to your Highness' council.
By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts,
And when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him. 30
Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

Suffer them now, and they 'll o'ergrow the garden

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
The reverent care I bear unto my lord
Made me collect these dangers in the Duke. 35
If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say I wrong'd the Duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
Reprove my allegation, if you can, 40
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your Highness seen into this
duke;

And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your Grace's tale.
The Duchess by his subornation, 45
Upon my life, began her devilish practices;
Or, if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by reputing of his high descent,
As next the King he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility, 50
Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick Duchess
By wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.
No, no, my sovereign; Gloucester is a man 55
Unsound yet and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devise strange deaths for small offences done?

York. And did he not, in his protectorship,
Levy great sums of money through the realm 61
For soldiers' pay in France, and never sent it,
By means whereof the towns each day revolted?

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown

Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke
Humphrey. 65

King. My lords, at once; the care you have
of us,

To mow down thorns that would annoy our
foot,

Is worthy praise; but, shall I speak my conscience,

Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person 70
As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove.
The Duke is virtuous, mild, and too well given
To dream on evil or to work my downfall.

Queen. Ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!

Seems he a dove? His feathers are but borrow'd, 75

For he's disposed as the hateful raven.
Is he a lamb? His skin is surely lent him,
For he's inclin'd as is the ravenous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all 80
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter SOMERSET.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!

King. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories

Is utterly bereft you. All is lost. 85

King. Cold news, Lord Somerset; but God's will be done!

York. [Aside.] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France

As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud 90

And caterpillars eat my leaves away.
But I will remedy this gear ere long,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. All happiness unto my lord the King!
Pardon, my liege, that I have stay'd so long.

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou art come too soon, 95

Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art.
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glou. Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see me
blush

Nor change my countenance for this arrest;
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. 100

The purest spring is not so free from mud
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.

Who can accuse me? Wherein am I guilty?

York. 'Tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of France, 104

And, being Protector, stay'd the soldiers' pay,
By means whereof his Highness hath lost
France.

Glou. Is it but thought so? What are they that think it?

I never robb'd the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.

So help me God, as I have watch'd the night, 110
Ay, night by night, in studying good for Eng-
land,

That do it that e'er I wrested from the King,
Or any groat I hoarded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial-day!
No; many a pound of mine own proper store, 115
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispursed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.

Glou. I say no more than truth, so help me God! 120

York. In your protectorship you did devise Strange tortures for offenders never heard of,
That England was defam'd by tyranny.

Glou. Why, 'tis well known that, whiles I was Protector,

Pity was all the fault that was in me; 125
For I should melt at an offender's tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that fleec'd poor passengers,

I never gave them condign punishment. 130
Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortur'd
Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, quickly
answer'd;

But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself. 135
I do arrest you in his Highness' name;
And here commit you to my Lord Cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

King. My Lord of Gloucester, 'tis my special hope

That you will clear yourself from all suspect. 140
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glou. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous.

Virtue is chok'd with foul ambition,
And charity chas'd hence by rancour's hand.
Foul subornation is predominant, 145
And equity exil'd your Highness' land.
I know their complot is to have my life,
And if my death might make this island happy
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness; 150
But mine is made the prologue to their play;
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
Beaufort's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's malice,

And Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate; 155
Sharp Buckingham unburdens with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
By false accuse doth level at my life; 160

And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgraces on my head
And with your best endeavour have stirr'd up
My liefest liege to be mine enemy.
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together — 165
Myself had notice of your conventicles —
And all to make away my guiltless life.
I shall not want false witness to condemn
me,

Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt.

The ancient proverb will be well effected, 170
"A staff is quickly found to beat a dog."

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable.
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason's secret knife and traitors' rage
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at, 175
And the offender granted scope of speech,
'T will make them cool in zeal unto your Grace.

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here
With ignominious words, though clerkly
couch'd,

As if she had suborned some to swear 180
False allegations to o'erthrow his state?

Queen. But I can give the loser leave to chide.

Glou. Far truer spoke than meant. I lose,
indeed.

Beshrew the winners, for they play'd me
false!

And well such losers may have leave to speak.
Buck. He'll wrest the sense and hold us here all day. 186

Lord Cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the Duke, and guard him sure.

Glou. Ah! thus King Henry throws away his crutch

Before his legs be firm to bear his body. 190
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side
And wolves are gnawing who shall gnaw thee
first.

Ah, that my fear were false! Ah, that it were!
For, good King Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exit guarded].

King. My lords, what to your wisdoms seemeth best, 195

Do or undo, as if myself were here.

Queen. What, will your Highness leave the parliament?

King. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief,

Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes,
My body round engirt with misery, 200
For what's more miserable than discontent?

Ah, uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come
That e'er I prov'd these false or fear'd thy faith. 205

What luring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords and Margaret our queen
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?

Thou never didst them wrong nor no man
wrong;

And as the butcher takes away the calf 210
And binds the wretch and beats it when it strays,

Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house,
Even so remorseless have they borne him hence;
And as the dam runs lowing up and down, 214
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss,
Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case
With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd
eyes

Look after him and cannot do him good,
So mighty are his vowed enemies. 220

His fortunes I will weep, and 'twixt each groan Say, "Who's a traitor? Gloucester he is none."

[Exeunt [all but Queen, Cardinal, Suffolk, and York; Somerset remains apart].]

Queen. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.

Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity, and Gloucester's show
Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile 226
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
Or as the snake roll'd in a flow'ring bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a
child

That for the beauty thinks it excellent. 230
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I—

And yet herein I judge mine own wit good—This Gloucester should be quickly rid the
world,

To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die is worthy policy, 235
But yet we want a colour for his death.

'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy.
The King will labour still to save his life,
The commons haply rise, to save his life; 240
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy
death.

York. So that, by this you would not have him die.

Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I!
York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death. 245

But, my Lord Cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,

Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Were 't not all one, an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place Duke Humphrey for the King's Protector? 250

Queen. So the poor chicken should be sure of
death.

Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and, were 't not madness, then,

To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over, 255
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my
liege. 260

And do not stand on quilets how to slay him;
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first that first intends deceit. 265

Queen. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.

Suf. Not resolute, except so much were
done,

For things are often spoke and seldom meant;

But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious, 270
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.

Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,

Ere you can take due orders for a priest.
Say you consent and censure well the deed, 275
And I'll provide his executioner,
I tender so the safety of my liege.

Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.

Queen. And so say I.

York. And I; and now we three have spoke
it, 280

It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great lords, from Ireland am I come
again,

To signify that rebels there are up
And put the Englishmen unto the sword.

Send succours, lords, and stop the rage be-
time, 285

Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.

Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!

What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as Regent thither. 290

'Tis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.

Som. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the Regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France 300
long. 295

York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast
done.

I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burden of dishonour home
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin. 300
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole do seldom win.

Queen. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire,

If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with.
No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still.
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been Regent
there, 305

Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.

York. What, worse than nought? Nay, then,
a shame take all!

Som. And, in the number, thee that wishest
shame!

Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.

The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms 310
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen.
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choicely, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?

York. I will, my lord, so please his Majesty. 315

Suf. Why, our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish he confirms.

Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.

York. I am content. Provide me soldiers,
lords,
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs. 320
Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will see perform'd.

But now return we to the false Duke Humphrey.

Car. No more of him ; for I will deal with him
That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.
And so break off ; the day is almost spent. 325
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.

York. My Lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days

At Bristol I expect my soldiers ;
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.

Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York. [Exeunt all but York. 330

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,

And change misdoubt to resolution.
Be that thou hop'st to be, or what thou art
Resign to death ; it is not worth the enjoying.
Let pale-fac'd fear keep with the mean-born
man, 335

And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought,

And not a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain more busy than the labouring spider
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies. 341

Well, nobles, well, 't is politely done,
To send me packing with an host of men.
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.

'T was men I lack'd and you will give them
me. 345

I take it kindly ; yet be well assur'd
You put sharp weapons in a madman's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
I will stir up in England some black storm Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell ; 350

And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw.

And, for a minister of my intent, 355
I have seduc'd a headstrong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.

In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade 360
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts

Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine ;
And, in the end being rescued, I have seen
Him caper upright like a wild Morisco, 365
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And undiscover'd come to me again
And given me notice of their villainies. 370
This devil here shall be my substitute,
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead,

In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble.
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind,
How they affect the house and claim of York.
Say he be taken, rack'd, and tortured, 375
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I mov'd him to those arms.
Say that he thrive, as 't is great like he will,
Why, then from Ireland come I with my
strength 380
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow'd ;
For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me. [Exit.

[SCENE II. Bury St. Edmund's. A room of state.]

Enter two or three [MURDERERS] running over the stage, from the murder of Duke Humphrey.

1. Mur. Run to my Lord of Suffolk ; let him know
We have dispatch'd the Duke, as he commanded.

2. Mur. O that it were to do ! What have we done ?

Didst ever hear a man so penitent ?

Enter SUFFOLK.

1. Mur. Here comes my lord. 5
Suf. Now, sirs, have you dispatch'd this thing ?

1. Mur. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.
Suf. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to my house ;

I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The King and all the peers are here at hand. 10
Have you laid fair the bed ? Is all things well,
According as I gave directions ?

1. Mur. 'T is, my good lord.
Suf. Away ! be gone. [Exeunt [Murderers].

Sound trumpets. Enter the KING, the QUEEN,
CARDINAL, SOMERSET, with Attendants.

King. Go, call our uncle to our presence
straight. 15

Say we intend to try his Grace to-day,
If he be guilty, as 't is published.

Suf. I'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit.

King. Lords, take your places ; and, I pray you all,

Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloucester
Than from true evidence of good esteem 21
He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Queen. God forbid any malice should prevail,

That faultless may condemn a nobleman !
Pray God he may acquit him of suspicion ! 25

King. I thank thee, [Meg ;] these words content me much.

Re-enter SUFFOLK.

How now ! why look'st thou pale ? Why tremblest thou ?

Where is our uncle ? What's the matter, Suffolk ?

Suf. Dead in his bed, my lord ; Gloucester
is dead.

Queen. Marry, God forfend!
Car. God's secret judgement. I did dream
 to-night

The Duke was dumb and could not speak a word. [The King swoons.]

Queen. How fares my lord? Help, lords!
 the King is dead.

Som. Rear up his body; wring him by the nose.

Queen. Run, go, help, help! O Henry, ope
 thine eyes!

Suf. He doth revive again. Madam, be patient.

King. O heavenly God!

Queen. How fares my gracious lord?

Suf. Comfort, my sovereign! gracious Henry,
 comfort!

King. What, doth my Lord of Suffolk comfort me?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note,

Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;

And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,

By crying comfort from a hollow breast,

Can chase away the first-conceived sound?

Hide not thy poison with such sug'red words.

Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say!

Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.

Thou bateful messenger, out of my sight!

Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny

Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.

Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wound-

ing.

Yet do not go away. Come, basilisk,

And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;

For in the shade of death I shall find joy;

In life but double death, now Gloucester's

dead.

Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk

thus?

Although the Duke was enemy to him,

Yet he most Christian-like laments his death;

And for myself, foe as he was to me,

Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans

Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,

I would be blind with weeping, sick with

groans,

Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,

And all to have the noble Duke alive.

What know I how the world may deem of me,

For it is known we were but hollow friends?

It may be judg'd I made the Duke away;

So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,

And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.

This get I by his death. Ay me, unhappy!

To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

King. Ah, woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man!

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What, dost thou turn away and hide thy face?

I am no loathsome leper; look on me.

What! art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?

Be poisonous too and kill thy forlorn queen.

Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?

Why, then, Dame [Margaret] was ne'er thy joy.

Erect his statuë and worship it,

And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this high wreck'd upon the sea

And twice by awkward wind from England's bank

Drove back again unto my native clime?

What boded this, but well forewarning wind

Did seem to say, "Seek not a scorpion's nest,

Nor set no footing on this unkind shore!"

What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts

And he that loos'd them forth their brazen caves;

And bid them blow towards England's blessed

shore,

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?

Yet Æolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee.

The pretty-vaulting sea refus'd to drown me,

Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd

on shore,

With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkind-

ness.

The splitting rocks cower'd in the sinking

sands

And would not dash me with their ragged sides,

Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,

Might in thy palace perish [Margaret].

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,

When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,

I stood upon the hatches in the storm;

And when the dusky sky began to rob

My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,

I took a costly jewel from my neck,

A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,

And threw it towards thy land. The sea re-ceiv'd it,

And so I wish'd thy body might my heart.

And even with this I lost fair England's view,

And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart

And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,

For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.

How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue,

The agent of thy foul inconstancy,

To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did

When he to madding Dido would unfold

His father's acts commenc'd in burning Troy!

Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?

Ay me, I can no more! Die, [Margaret!]

For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter WARWICK, [SALISBURY,] and many COMMONS.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,

That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is mur'd

By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means.

The commons, like an angry hive of bees

That want their leader, scatter up and down

And care not who they sting in his revenge.

Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,

Until they hear the order of his death.

King. That he is dead, good Warwick, 't is too true;

But how he died God knows, not Henry.

Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,

And comment then upon his sudden death.

War. That shall I do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude till I return. 135
[Exit Warwick and Salisbury, severally.]

King. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts,
My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life!

If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
For judgement only doth belong to thee. 140
Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling.
But all in vain are these mean obsequies; 146

Re-enter WARWICK and others, bearing Gloucester's body on a bed.

And to survey his dead and earthy image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.

King. That is to see how deep my grave is made; 150

For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
And seeing him I see my life in death.

War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him

To free us from his father's wrathful curse, 155
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!

What instance gives Lord Warwick for his vow?

War. See how the blood is settled in his face.
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, 161
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the same for aidance 'gainst the enemy; 165

Which with the heart there cools and ne'er returneth

To blush and beautify the cheek again.

But see, his face is black and full of blood,
His eye-balls further out than when he lived,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man; 170
His hair uprear'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;

His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tug'd for life and was by strength subdu'd.

Look, on the sheets his hair, you see, is sticking;

His well-proportion'd beard made rough and rugged, 175

Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodged.

It cannot be but he was murder'd here;
The least of all these signs were probable.

Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the Duke to death?

Myself and Beaufort had him in protection, 180
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.

War. But both of you were vow'd Duke Humphrey's foes,
And you, forsooth, had the good Duke to keep.

'T is like you would not feast him like a friend;
And 't is well seen he found an enemy. 185

Queen. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen

As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death.

War. Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect 't was he that made the slaughter? 190

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.

Queen. Are you the butcher, Suffolk?

Where's your knife? 195
Is Beaufort term'd a kite? Where are his talons?

Suf. I wear no knife to slaughter sleeping men;

But here's a vengeful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scoured in his rancorous heart
That slanders me with murder's crimson badge.
Say, if thou dar'st, proud Lord of Warwickshire, 201

That I am faulty in Duke Humphrey's death.
[Exeunt Cardinal, Somerset, and others.]

War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?

Queen. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit

Nor cease to be an arrogant controller, 205
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.

War. Madam, be still, with reverence may I say;

For every word you speak in his behalf
Is slander to your royal dignity.

Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour! 210

If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her blameful bed

Some stern, untutor'd churl, and noble stock
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art

And never of the Nevils' noble race. 215

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee

And I should rob the deathsman of his fee,
Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames,
And that my sovereign's presence make me mild, 219

I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee
Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech
And say it was thy mother that thou meant'st,

That thou thyself wast born in bastardy;

And after all this fearful homage done,

Give thee thy hire and send thy soul to hell, 225

Pernicious blood-sucker of sleeping men!

Suf. Thou shalt be waking while I shed thy blood,

If from this presence thou dar'st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence. 229

Unworthy though thou art, I'll cope with thee
And do some service to Duke Humphrey's ghost. [Exeunt [Suffolk and Warwick].]

King. What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted!

Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just,
And he but naked, though lock'd up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.
[A noise within.]

Queen. What noise is this? 236

Re-enter SUFFOLK and WARWICK, with their weapons drawn.

King. Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence! Dare you be so bold?
Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here?

Suf. The traitorous Warwick with the men of Bury 240

Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. [To the Commons.] Sirs, stand apart; the King shall know your mind.

Dread lord, the commons send you word by
me,

Unless Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
Or banished fair England's territories, 245

They will by violence tear him from your palace
And torture him with grievous ling'ring death.

They say, by him the good Duke Humphrey
died;

They say, in him they fear your Highness'
death;

And mere instinct of love and loyalty, 250
Free from a stubborn opposite intent.

As being thought to contradict your liking,
Makes them thus forward in his banishment.

They say, in care of your most royal person,
That if your Highness should intend to sleep,

And charge that no man should disturb your
rest 256

In pain of your dislike or pain of death,
Yet, notwithstanding such a strait edict,

Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
That slyly glided towards your Majesty, 260

It were but necessary you were wak'd,
Lest, being suffer'd in that harmful slumber,

The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal;
And therefore do they cry, though you forbid,

That they will guard you, wh'er you will or no,
From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is, 266

With whose envenomed and fatal sting,
Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth,

They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. (Within.) An answer from the King, my Lord of Salisbury! 270

Suf. 'T is like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,

Could send such message to their sovereign.
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,

To show how quaint an orator you are;
But all the honour Salisbury hath won 275

Is, that he was the lord ambassador
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the King.

Commons. (Within.) An answer from the
King, or we will all break in!

King. Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from
me,

I thank them for their tender loving care; 280
And had I not been cited so by them,

Yet did I purpose as they do entreat,
For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy

Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means;
And therefore, by His majesty I swear, 285

Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe infection in this air

But three days longer, on the pain of death.
[Exit Salisbury.]

Queen. O Henry, let me plead for gentle
Suffolk!

King. Ungentle queen, to call him gentle
Suffolk! 290

No more, I say! If thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.

Had I but said, I would have kept my word;
But when I swear, it is irrevocable.

If, after three days' space, thou here be'st
found 295

On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.

Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with
me;

I have great matters to impart to thee.

[Exeunt [all but Queen and Suffolk].]

Queen. Mischance and Sorrow go along with
you! 300

Heart's Discontent and sour Affliction

Be playfellows to keep you company!

There's two of you; the devil make a third!
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Suf. Cease, gentle queen, these execra-
tions, 305

And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Queen. Fie, coward woman and soft-hearted
wretch!

Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?

Suf. A plague upon them! wherefore should
I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan, 310

I would invent as bitter searching terms,

As curst, as harsh and horrible to hear,

Deliver'd strongly through my fixed teeth,

With full as many signs of deadly hate,

As lean-faced Envy in her loathsome cave, 315
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest

words;

Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;

Mine hair be fix'd on end, as one distract;

Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban;

And even now my burden'd heart would break, 320

Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they taste!

Their sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!
Their chiefest prospect murd'ring basilisks!

Their softest touch as smart as lizards'
stings! 325

Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,

And boding screech-owls make the consort
full!

All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—

Queen. Enough, sweet Suffolk! Thou torment'st thyself;

And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,

Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,
And turn the force of them upon thyself.

Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?

Now, by the ground that I am banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a winter's night,

Though standing naked on a mountain top
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,

And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Queen. O, let me entreat thee cease. Give me thy hand,

That I may dew it with my mournful tears; 340
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,

To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,

That thou mightst think upon these by the seal,

Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee! 345

So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief.
'T is but surmis'd whiles thou art standing by,

As one that surfeits thinking on a want.
I will repeat thee, or, be well assur'd,

Adventure to be banished myself; 350
And banished I am, if but from thee.

Go; speak not to me; even now be gone.
O, go not yet! Even thus two friends condemn'd

Embrace and kiss and take ten thousand leaves,
Leather a hundred times to part than thee. 355

Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished;

Once by the King, and three times thrice by thee.

'T is not the land I care for, wert thou thence.
A wilderness is populous enough, 360

So Suffolk had thy heavenly company;
For where thou art, there is the world itself,

With every several pleasure in the world,
And where thou art not, desolation.

I can no more. Live thou to joy thy life; 365
Myself to joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

Enter VAUX.

Queen. Whither goes Vaux so fast? What news, I prithee?

Vaux. To signify unto his Majesty
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;

For suddenly a grievous sickness took him, 370
That makes him gasp and stare and catch the air,

Blaspheming God and cursing men on earth.
Sometime he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost

Were by his side; sometime he calls the King
And whispers to his pillow as to him 375

The secrets of his overcharged soul;
And I am sent to tell his Majesty

That even now he cries aloud for him.

Queen. Go tell this heavy message to the King.

[Exit Vaux.
Ay me! what is this world! What news are these! 380

But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?

Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears,

Theirs for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrow's? 385

Now get thee hence; the King, thou know'st, is coming.

If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.
Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live;

And in thy sight to die, what were it else
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap? 390

Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe

Dying with mother's dug between its lips;
Where, from thy sight, I should be raging mad

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes, 395
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth.

So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,

And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.
To die by thee were but to die in jest; 400

From thee to die were torture more than death.
O, let me stay, befall what may befall!

Queen. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,

It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk! Let me hear from thee; 405

For wheresoe'er thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.
Queen. And take my heart with thee.

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woefullest cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth. 410

Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we;
This way fall I to death.

Queen. This way for me.
[Exeunt [severally].]

[SCENE III. London. Beaufort's bedchamber.]

Enter the KING, SALISBURY, WARWICK, to the CARDINAL in bed.

King. How fares my lord? Speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,

Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

King. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
Where death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.
Died he not in his bed? Where should he die?

Can I make men live, wh'er they will or no?
O, torture me no more! I will confess. 415

Alive again? Then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.

He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.
Comb down his hair; look, look! it stands up-
right, 420

Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul.
Give me some drink ; and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

King. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,
Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch !
O, beat away the busy meddling fiend

That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,
And from his bosom purge this black despair !

War. See, how the pangs of death do make him grin !

Sal. Disturb him not ; let him pass peaceably.

King. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be !

Lord Cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope. —
He dies, and makes no sign. O God, forgive
him !

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous
life.

King. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners
all.

Close up his eyes and draw the curtain close ;
And let us all to meditation. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

[SCENE I. The coast of Kent.]

Alarm. Fight at sea. Ordnance goes off.

Enter a LIEUTENANT, [a MASTER, a MAS-TER'S MATE, WALTER WHITMORE, and others ; with them] SUFFOLK [disguised, and other gentlemen, prisoners].

Lieu. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful
day

Is crept into the bosom of the sea ;
And now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades
That drag the tragic melancholy night ;

Who, with their drowsy, slow, and flagging
wings,

Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws

Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air.
Therefore bring forth the soldiers of our prize ;

For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs, Here shall they make their ransom on the sand,

Or with their blood stain this discoloured shore.
Master, this prisoner freely give I thee ;

And thou that art his mate, make boot of this ;
The other, Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

1. Gent. What is my ransom, master ? Let me know.

Master. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

Lieu. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,

And bear the name and port of gentlemen ?
Cut both the villains' throats ; for die you shall.

The lives of those which we have lost in fight
Be counterpois'd with such a petty sum !

1. Gent. I'll give it, sir ; and therefore spare my life.

2. Gent. And so will I, and write home for it
straight.

Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize
aboard,

And therefore to revenge it shalt thou die ;
[To Suffolk.]

And so should these, if I might have my will.
Lieu. Be not so rash ; take ransom, let him live.

Suf. Look on my George ; I am a gentleman.
Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

Whit. And so am I ; my name is Walter Whitmore.

How now ! why start'st thou ? What, doth death affright ?

Suf. Thy name affrights me, in whose sound is death.

A cunning man did calculate my birth
And told me that by water I should die :

Yet let not this make thee be bloody-minded ;
Thy name is Gualtier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gualtier, or Walter, which it is, I care not.

Never yet did base dishonour blur our name,
But with our sword we wip'd away the blot ;

Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd,

And I proclaim'd a coward through the world !
[Lays hold of Suffolk.]

Suf. Stay, Whitmore ; for thy prisoner is a
prince,

The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.

Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags !

Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke :

[Jove sometime went disguised, and why not I ?] Lieu. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt
be.

Suf. Obscure and lousy swain, King Henry's
blood,

The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrup ?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule
And thought thee happy when I shook my head ?

How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,

When I have feasted with Queen Margaret ?
Remember it and let it make thee crest-fallen,

Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride,
How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood
And duly waited for my coming forth.

This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain ?

Lieu. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suf. Base slave, thy words are blunt and so art thou.

Lieu. Convey him hence and on our long-boat's side

Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not, for thy own.

[Lieu. Yes, Pole.

Suf. Pole!]

Lieu. Pool! Sir Pool! lord! 70

As kennel, puddle, sink; whose filth and dirt Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth
For swallowing the treasure of the realm.
Thy lips that kiss'd the Queen shall sweep the
ground; 75

And thou that smil'd'st at good Duke Humphrey's death

Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again;
And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,

For daring to affy a mighty lord 80

Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.
By devilish policy art thou grown great
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorg'd

With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart. 85

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,
The false revolting Normans thorough thee
Disdain to call us lord, and Picardy

Hath slain their governors, surpris'd our forts,

And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home. 90

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,

As hating thee, are rising up in arms;

And now the house of York, thrust from the
crown

By shameful murder of a guiltless king 95

And lofty, proud, encroaching tyranny,
Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours

Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,

Under the which is writ, "Invitis nubibus."

The commons here in Kent are up in arms; 100

And, to conclude, reproach and beggary

Is crept into the palace of our king,

And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.

Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder

Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges! 105

Small things make base men proud. This villain here,

Being captain of a pinnacle, threatens more
Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob beehives.

It is impossible that I should die 110

By such a lowly vassal as thyself.

Thy words move rage and not remorse in me.

I go of message from the Queen to France;

I charge thee waft me safely cross the Channel.

Lieu. Walter, — 115

Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.

Suf. Gelidus timor occupat artus: it is thee I
fear.

Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before
I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? Now will ye stoop?

1. Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair. 120

Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,

Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.

Far be it we should honour such as these

With humble suit. No, rather let my head

Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any

Save to the God of heaven and to my king; 125

And sooner dance upon a bloody pole

Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.

True nobility is exempt from fear;

More can I bear than you dare execute. 130

Lieu. Hail him away, and let him talk no
more.

Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,

That this my death may never be forgot!

Great men oft die by vile besonians.

A Roman sworder and banditto slave 135

Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand

Stabb'd Julius Caesar; savage islanders

Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exeunt Whitmore with Suffolk.

Lieu. And as for these whose ransom we have set,

It is our pleasure one of them depart; 140

Therefore come you with us and let him go.

[Exeunt all but the First Gentleman.

Re-enter WHITMORE with Suffolk's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body

lie,

Until the Queen his mistress bury it. [Exit.

1. Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!

His body will I bear unto the King. 145

If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;

So will the Queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit with the body.]

[SCENE II. Blackheath.]

Enter GEORGE BEVIS and JOHN HOLLAND.

Bevis. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath. They have been up these two days.

Holl. They have the more need to sleep now,
then.

Bevis. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.

Holl. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare.

Well, I say it was never merry world in England since gentlemen came up. 150

Bevis. O miserable age! virtue is not regarded in handicrafts-men.

Holl. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.

Bevis. Nay, more, the King's council are no good workmen. 155

Holl. True; and yet it is said, labour in thy vocation; which is as much to say as, let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates. 160

Bevis. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand.

Holl. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham, —

Bevis. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's-leather of. 26

Holl. And Dick the Butcher, —

Bevis. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.

Holl. And Smith the weaver, — 30

Bevis. Argo, their thread of life is spun.

Holl. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter CADE, DICK the Butcher, SMITH the Weaver, and a Sawyer, with infinite numbers.

Cade. We John Cade, so term'd of our supposed father, —

Dick. [Aside.] Or rather, of stealing a cade of herrings. 38

Cade. For our enemies shall fail before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes, — Command silence.

Dick. Silence! 40

Cade. My father was a Mortimer, —

Dick. [Aside.] He was an honest man, and a good bricklayer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet, — 44

Dick. [Aside.] I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies, —

Dick. [Aside.] She was, indeed, a pedler's daughter, and sold many laces. 49

Smith. [Aside.] But now of late, not able to travel with her furr'd pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.

Dick. [Aside.] Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable; and there was he born, under a hedge, for his father had never a house but the cage. 66

Cade. Valiant I am.

Smith. [Aside.] 'A must needs; for beggary is valiant.

Cade. I am able to endure much. 60

Dick. [Aside.] No question of that; for I have seen him whipp'd three market-days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.

Smith. [Aside.] He need not fear the sword; for his coat is of proof. 65

Dick. [Aside.] But methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt i' the hand for stealing of sheep. 68

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be in England seven halfpenny loaves sold for a penny; the three-hoop'd pot shall have ten hoops, and I will make it felony to drink small beer. All the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfrey go to grass; and when I am king, as king I will be, — 76

All. God save your Majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people, — there shall be no money. All shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers and worship me their lord.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers. 84

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say the bee stings; but I say, 'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now! who's there? 91

Enter [some, bringing forward the] CLERK [of Chatham].

Smith. The clerk of Chatham. He can write and read and cast account.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain! 96

Smith. Has a book in his pocket with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then, he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand. 101

Cade. I am sorry for't. The man is a proper man, of mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. Come hither, sirrah, I must examine thee. What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel. 106

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters; 't will go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone. Dost thou use to write thy name, or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man? 111

Clerk. Sir, I thank God, I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.

All. He hath confess'd! Away with him! He's a villain and a traitor. 115

Cade. Away with him, I say! Hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck.

[Exit one with the Clerk.]

Enter MICHAEL.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow. 119

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the King's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down. He shall be encount'ed with a man as good as himself. He is but a knight, is 'a? 125

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels.] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises.] Now have at him!

Enter SIR HUMPHREY STAFFORD and his BROTHER, with drum and soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, 130

Mark'd for the gallows, lay your weapons down! Home to your cottages, forsake this groom! The King is merciful, if you revolt.

Bro. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood,

If you go forward; therefore yield, or die. 135

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not.

It is to you, good people, that I speak,
Over whom, in time to come, I hope to reign,
For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staff. Villain, thy father was a plasterer, ¹⁴⁰
And thou thyself a shearmen, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March,
Married the Duke of Clarence' daughter, did he not? ¹⁴⁶

Staff. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question; but I say,
'tis true.

The elder of them, being put to nurse, ¹⁵⁰
Was by a beggar-woman stolen away;
And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,
Became a bricklayer when he came to age.
His son am I; deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king. ¹⁵⁵

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staff. And will you credit this base drudge's
words,

That speaks he knows not what? ¹⁶⁰

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye
gone.

Bro. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. [Aside.] He lies; for I invented it myself. — ¹⁶³

Go to, sirrah, tell the King from me, that, for his father's sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I'll be Protector over him.

Dick. And furthermore, we'll have the Lord
Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine. ¹⁷⁰

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England maim'd, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the commonwealth, and made it an eunuch; and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor. ¹⁷⁷

Staff. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can. The Frenchmen are our enemies. Go to, then, I ask but this: can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, ¹⁸⁴

Assail them with the army of the King.

Staff. Herald, away; and throughout every town

Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;
That those which fly before the battle ends
May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
Be hang'd up for example at their doors. ¹⁹⁰

And you that be the King's friends, follow me.

[Ereunt the two Staffords, and soldiers].

Cade. And you that love the commons, follow me.

Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty.

We will not leave one lord, one gentleman.

Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon; ¹⁹⁵

For they are thrifty honest men and such

As would, but that they dare not, take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. ²⁰⁰

[Ereunt.]

[SCENE III. Another part of Blackheath.]

Alarums to the fight, wherein both the STAF-FORDS are slain. Enter CADE and the rest.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir.

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavedst thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house;
therefore thus will I reward thee: the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more. ¹⁰

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear [putting on Stafford's armour]; and the bodies shall be dragg'd at my horse heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us. ¹⁶

Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. ²⁰

[Ereunt.]

[SCENE IV. London. The palace.]

Enter the KING with a supplication, and the QUEEN with Suffolk's head; the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD SAY.

Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind

And makes it fearful and degenerate;

Think therefore on revenge and cease to weep.

But who can cease to weep and look on this?

Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast;
But where's the body that I should embrace? ⁶

Buck. What answer makes your Grace to the rebels' supplication?

King. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat,
For God forbid so many simple souls ¹⁰

Should perish by the sword! And I myself,

Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,

Will parley with Jack Cade their general.

But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Queen. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face ¹⁵

Rul'd, like a wandering planet, over me,

And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have thy head.

Say. Ay, but I hope your Highness shall have his. ²⁰

King. How now, madam!

Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death?

I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for me.

Queen. No, my love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a MESSENGER.

King. How now! what news? Why comest thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, my lord!

Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,
Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house,
And calls your Grace usurper openly,
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
His army is a ragged multitude
Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless.
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed.

All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
They call false caterpillars and intend their death.

King. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killingworth,

Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Queen. Ah, were the Duke of Suffolk now alive,

These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd!

King. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee;
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.

Say. So might your Grace's person be in danger.

The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another MESSENGER.

Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London Bridge.
The citizens fly and forsake their houses.
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor, and they jointly swear
To spoil the city and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.

King. Come, Margaret. God, our hope, will succour us.

Queen. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.

King. Farewell, my lord; trust not the Kentish rebels.

Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betray'd.

Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. London. The Tower.]

*Enter LORD SCALES upon the Tower, walking.
Then enter two or three CITIZENS below.*

Scales. How now! is Jack Cade slain?

1. Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain;

for they have won the Bridge, killing all those that withstand them. The Lord Mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare you shall command,

But I am troubled here with them myself.
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.

But get you to Smithfield and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Goffe.

Fight for your king, your country, and your lives;

And so, farewell, for I must hence again.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. London. Cannon Street.]

Enter JACK CADE and the rest, and strikes his staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city.
And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command that, of the city's cost, the pissing-conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now henceforward it shall be treason for any that calls me other than Lord Mortimer.

Enter a SOLDIER, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there.

[They kill him.]

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call ye Jack Cade more. I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come, then, let's go fight with them.
But first go and set London Bridge on fire;
and, if you can, burn down the Tower too.
Come, let's away.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VII. London. Smithfield.]

Alarums. Matthew Goffe is slain, and all the rest. Then enter JACK CADE with his company.

Cade. So, sirs. Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

Holl. [Aside.] Mass, 't will be sore law, then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole yet.

Smith. [Aside.] Nay, John, it will be stinking law; for his breath stinks with eating toasted cheese.

Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm. My mouth shall be the parliament of England.

Holl. [Aside.] Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pull'd out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! Here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fifteens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. 25

Enter GEORGE BEVIS, with the LORD SAY.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my Majesty for giving up of Nor-³⁰ mandy unto Mounsieur Basimeon, the Dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth³⁵ of the realm in erecting a grammar school; and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be us'd, and, contrary to the King, his crown and dignity, thou⁴⁰ hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about⁴⁵ matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hang'd them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not? 53

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent, —

Dick. What say you of Kent? 60

Say. Nothing but this; 'tis "bona terra, mala gens."

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ, 65
Is term'd the civil't place of all this isle.
Sweet is the country, because full of riches;
The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy;
Which makes me hope you are not void of pity.

I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy, 70
Yet, to recover them, would lose my life.
Justice with favour have I always done;
Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never.

When have I aught exacted at your hands,
But to maintain the King, the realm, and you? 75

Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks,
Because my book preferr'd me to the King;
And seeing ignorance is the curse of God,

Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven,

Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, 80
You cannot but forbear to murder me.

This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings
For your behoof, —

Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field? 85

Say. Great men have reaching hands. Oft have I struck

Those that I never saw and struck them dead.

Geo. O monstrous coward! What, to come behind folks?

Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good. 90

Cade. Give him a box o' the ear and that will make 'em red again.

Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes

Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.

Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then and the help of hatchet. 95

Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?

Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.

Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as who should say, I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and behead him. 105

Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most? Have I affected wealth or honour? Speak.

Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold?

Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? 108

Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death? These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding,

This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts.

O, let me live! 110

Cade. [Aside.] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it. He shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not o' God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither. 115

All. It shall be done.

Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,

God should be so obdurate as yourselves,

How would it fare with your departed souls?

And therefore yet relent, and save my life. 120

Cade. Away with him! and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some with Lord Say.] The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute. There shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it. Men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell. 125

Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheap-side and take up commodities upon our bills?

Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O, brave!

Re-enter one with the heads [of Say and Cromer].

Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they lov'd well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night; for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride through the streets; and at every corner have them kiss. Away! [Exeunt. 145]

[SCENE VIII. Southwark.]

Alarum and retreat. Enter again CADE and all his rabblement.

Cade. Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus' Corner! Kill and knock down! Throw them into Thames! (Sound a parley.) What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill? 5

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD [attended].

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee.

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the King

Unto the commons whom thou hast misled; And here pronounce free pardon to them all That will forsake thee and go home in peace.

Clif. What say ye, countrymen? Will ye relent 11

And yield to mercy whilst 't is offered you; Or let a rabble lead you to your deaths?

Who loves the King and will embrace his pardon,

Fling up his cap, and say, "God save his Majesty!" 15

Who hateth him and honours not his father, Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake, Shake he his weapon at us and pass by.

All. God save the King! God save the King! 19

Cade. What, Buckingham and Clifford, are ye so brave? And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? Will you needs be hang'd with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never 25 have given out these arms till you had recovered your ancient freedom. But you are all recreants and dastards, and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces. For me, I will make shift for one; and so, God's curse light upon you all! 34

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade!

Clif. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth, That thus you do exclaim you'll go with him? Will he conduct you through the heart of France,

And make the meanest of you earls and dukes? Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to; 40

Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil, Unless by robbing of your friends and us. Were 't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,

The fearful French, whom you late vanquished, Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you? 45

Methinks already in this civil broil

I see them lording it in London streets,

Crying "Villago!" unto all they meet.

Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy. 50

To France, to France, and get what you have lost!

Spare England, for it is your native coast.

Henry hath money, you are strong and manly; God on our side, doubt not of victory.

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! We'll follow the King and Clifford. 55

Cade. [Aside.] Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro as this multitude? The name of Henry the Fifth hales them to an hundred mischiefs and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together 60 to surprise me. My sword make way for me, for here is no staying. In despite of the devils and hell, have through the very midst of you! And heavens and honour be witness that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels. [Exit. 67]

Buck. What, is he fled? Go some, and follow him;

And he that brings his head unto the King Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward.

[Exeunt some of them.]
Follow me, soldiers; we'll devise a mean 71 To reconcile you all unto the King. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IX. Kenilworth Castle.]

Trumpets. Enter KING, QUEEN, and SOMERSET, on the terrace.

King. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,

And could command no more content than I?

No sooner was I crept out of my cradle

But I was made a king, at nine months old.

Was never subject long'd to be a king As I do long and wish to be a subject. 85

Enter BUCKINGHAM and old CLIFFORD.

Buck. Health and glad tidings to your Majesty!

King. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade surpris'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

Enter [below,] multitudes with halters about their necks.

Clif. He is fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield; 90

And humbly thus, with halters on their necks, Expect your Highness' doom, of life or death.

King. Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting gates,

To entertain my vows of thanks and praise !
 Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives 15
 And show'd how well you love your prince and country.

Continue still in this so good a mind,
 And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
 Assure yourselves, will never be unkind.
 And so, with thanks and pardon to you all, 20
 I do dismiss you to your several countries.

All. God save the King! God save the King!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Please it your Grace to be advertised
 The Duke of York is newly come from Ireland,
 And with a puissant and a mighty power 25
 Of gallowglasses and stout kerns
 Is marching hitherward in proud array,
 And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
 His arms are only to remove from thee
 The Duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor. 30

King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;

Like to a ship that, having scap'd a tempest,
 Is straightway calm'd and boarded with a pirate.

But now is Cade driven back, his men dis-pers'd,

And now is York in arms to second him. 35

I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him,
 And ask him what's the reason of these arms.
 Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;
 And, Somerset, we will commit thee hither,
 Until his army be dismiss'd from him. 40

Som. My lord,
 I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
 Or unto death, to do my country good.

King. In any case, be not too rough in terms;

For he is fierce and cannot brook hard language. 45

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal

As all things shall redound unto your good.

King. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better;

For yet may England curse my wretched reign. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

[SCENE X. Kent. Iden's garden.]

Enter CADE.

Cade. Fie on ambition! Fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish!
 These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand 5 years I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climb'd into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this 10 word "sallet" was born to do me good; for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill; and many a time, when I have been dry and bravely marching, it hath serv'd me instead of a quart pot to drink in; and now the word "sallet" must serve me to feed on. 17

Enter IDEN.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,

And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
 This small inheritance my father left me 20
 Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy.
 I seek not to wax great by others' waning,
 Or gather wealth, I care not, with what envy.
 Sufficeth that I have maintains my state
 And sends the poor well pleased from my gate. 25

Cade. [Aside.] Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. — Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the King by carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part. 30

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou
 be,

I know thee not; why, then, should I betray
 thee?

Is 't not enough to break into my garden, 35

And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,
 Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
 But thou wilt brave me with these saucy
 terms? 40

Cade. Brave thee? Ay, by the best blood that ever was broach'd, and beard thee too.
 Look on me well. I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more. 44

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,

That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
 Took odds to combat a poor famish'd man.

Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine,
 See if thou canst outface me with thy looks.

Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser; 50

Thy hand is but a finger to my fist,
 Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon;

My foot shall fight with all the strength thou
 hast;

And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
 Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth. 54

As for words, whose greatness answers words, Let this my sword report what speech for-bears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-bon'd clown in chins of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech Jove on my knees thou mayst be turn'd to hobnails. 60

[Here they fight. [Cade falls.]]

O, I am slain! Famine and no other hath slain me. Let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all. Wither, garden, and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled. ⁷⁰

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed, And hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead. Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point; But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat, ⁷⁵ To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell, and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies. ⁸¹

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge.

Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee;

And as I thrust thy body in with my sword, So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell. ⁸⁵

Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave, And there cut off thy most ungracious head; Which I will bear in triumph to the King, Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon. ⁹⁰

[Exit.]

[ACT V]

[SCENE I. Fields between Dartford and Blackheath.]

Enter YORK, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,

And pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head. Ring, bells, aloud! burn, bonfires, clear and bright,

To entertain great England's lawful king! Ah! sancta majestas, who would not buy thee dear? ⁵

Let them obey that knows not how to rule; This hand was made to handle nought but gold,

I cannot give due action to my words, Except a sword or sceptre balance it. ¹⁰ A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul, On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me?

The King hath sent him, sure. I must dissemble.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting. ¹⁵

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,

To know the reason of these arms in peace; Or why thou, being a subject as I am, Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn, ²⁰

Should raise so great a power without his leave, Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside.] Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.

O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint, I am so angry at these abject terms; ²⁵

And now, like Ajax Telamonius, On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury.

I am far better born than is the King, More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts;

But I must make fair weather yet a while, ³⁰ Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.— Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me,

That I have given no answer all this while; My mind was troubled with deep melancholy.

The cause why I have brought this army hither Is to remove proud Somerset from the King, ³⁵ Seditious to his Grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part;

But if thy arms be to no other end, The King hath yielded unto thy demand. ⁴⁰

The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?

Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves. ⁴⁵ Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,

You shall have pay and everything you wish. And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,

Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons, As pledges of my fealty and love; ⁵⁰

I'll send them all as willing as I live. Lands, goods, horse, armour, anything I have,

Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submission.

We twain will go into his Highness' tent. ⁵⁵

Enter KING and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,

That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm? York. In all submission and humility

York doth present himself unto your Highness. King. Then what intends these forces thou dost bring? ⁶⁰

York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence,

And fight against that monstrous rebel Cade, Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter IDEN, with Cade's head.

Iden. If one so rude and of so mean condition May pass into the presence of a king, ⁶⁵

Lo, I present your Grace a traitor's head, The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

King. The head of Cade! Great God, how just art Thou!

O, let me view his visage, being dead, That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.

Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him? ⁷¹

Iden. I was, an't like your Majesty.

King. How art thou call'd, and what is thy degree?

Idea. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
 A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king. 75
Buck. So please it you, my lord, 't were not amiss
 He were created knight for his good service.
King. Iden, kneel down. [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.
 We give thee for reward a thousand marks,
 And will that thou henceforth attend on us. 80
Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
 And never live but true unto his liege! [Rises.]

Enter QUEEN and SOMERSET.

King. See, Buckingham, Somerset comes with the Queen.
 Go, bid her hide him quickly from the Duke.
Queen. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide his head, 85
 But boldly stand and front him to his face.
York. How now! is Somerset at liberty?
 Then, York, unloose thy long-imprisoned
 thoughts,
 And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
 Shall I endure the sight of Somerset? 90
 False king! why hast thou broken faith with
 me,
 Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
 King did I call thee? No, thou art not King,
 Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
 Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a
 traitor. 95
 That head of thine doth not become a crown,
 Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
 And not to grace an awful princely sceptre.
 That gold must round engirt these brows of
 mine,
 Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles'
 spear, 100
 Is able with the change to kill and cure.
 Here is a hand to hold a sceptre up
 And with the same to act controlling laws.
 Give place! By heaven, thou shalt rule no
 more
 O'er him whom heaven created for thy ruler.
Som. O monstrous traitor! I arrest thee,
 York, 106
 Of capital treason 'gainst the King and crown.
 Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.
York. Wouldst have me kneel? First let me ask of these,
 If they can brook I bow a knee to man. 110
 Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail.
 [Exit Attendant.]
 I know, ere they will have me go to ward,
 They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchise-
 ment.
Queen. Call hither Clifford; bid him come amain,
 To say if that the bastard boys of York 115
 Shall be the surety for their traitor father.
 [Exit Buckingham.]
York. O blood-besotted Neapolitan,
 Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
 The sons of York, thy betters in their birth,
 Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
 That for my surety will refuse the boys! 121

Enter EDWARD and RICHARD, with forces.

See where they come; I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Enter CLIFFORD [and his Son, YOUNG CLIF-FORD, with forces].

Queen. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord the King! [Kneels.]

York. I thank thee, Clifford. Say, what news with thee? 125

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look.
 We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;
 For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my king, York, I do not mistake;

But thou mistakes me much to think I do. 130
 To Bedlam with him! Is the man grown mad?

King. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
 And chop away that factious pate of his. 135

Queen. He is arrested, but will not obey.
 His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall. 140

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we
 here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so.
 I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.
 Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,
 That with the very shaking of their chains 145
 They may astonish these fell-lurking curs.
 Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the EARLS OF WARWICK and SALISBURY [with forces].

Clif. Are these thy bears? We'll bait thy bears to death,

And manacle the bear-ward in their chains, 150
 If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting place.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur

Run back and bite, because he was withheld;
 Who being suffer'd, with the bear's fell paw,
 Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried;

And such a piece of service will you do, 155
 If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves. 160

King. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair,

Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son!
What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,

And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles? 165
O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty?
If it be banish'd from the frosty head,
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
And shame thine honourable age with blood?
Why art thou old and want'st experience? 171
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame! In duty bend thy knee to me
That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have considered with myself 175

The title of this most renowned duke;
And in my conscience do repute his Grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

King. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have. 180

King. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin,
But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murd'rous deed, to rob a man, 185
To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right,
And have no other reason for this wrong
But that he was bound by a solemn oath? 190

Queen. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,

I am resolv'd for death or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true. 195

War. You were best to go to bed and dream
again.

To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, 200
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Nevil's
crest,

The rampant bear chaif'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
As on a mountain top the cedar shows 205
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,
Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear

And tread it under foot with all contempt,
Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear. 210

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels and their complices.

Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite,

For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Clif. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell. 215

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely sup in hell. [Exeunt severally.]

[SCENE II. Saint Alban's, near the Castle inn.]

[Alarums to the battle.] Enter WARWICK.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 't is Warwick calls!

An if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarum
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me. 5
Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter YORK.

How now, my noble lord! what, all afoot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed,

But match to match I have encount'ed him 10
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter old CLIFFORD.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death. 15

War. Then, nobly, York; 't is for a crown thou fight'st.

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

[Exit.]

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? Why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love, 20

But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,

But that 't is shown ignobly and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy
sword

As I in justice and true right express it. 25

Clif. My soul and body on the action both!

York. A dreadful lay! Address thee instantly. [They fight, and Clifford falls.]

Clif. La fin couronne les œuvres. [Dies.]

York. Thus war hath given thee peace, for thou art still.

Peace with his soul, Heaven, if it be thy will! 30
[Exit.]

Enter YOUNG CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. Shame and confusion! all is on the roust;

Fear frames disorder, and disorder wounds
Where it should guard. O war, thou son of hell,

Whom angry heavens do make their minister,
Throw in the frozen bosoms of our part 35

Hot coals of vengeance! Let no soldier fly.

He that is truly dedicate to war

Hath no self-love, nor he that loves himself

Hath not essentially but by circumstance

The name of valour. [Seeing his dead father.]

O, let the vile world end,

And the premised flames of the last day 40

Knit earth and heaven together!

Now let the general trumpet blow his blast,

Particularities and petty sounds
To cease! Wast thou ordain'd, dear father, 45
To lose thy youth in peace, and to achieve
The silver livery of advised age,
And, in thy reverence and thy chair-days, thus
To die in ruffian battle? Even at this sight My heart is turn'd to stone; and while 't is
mine, 50

It shall be stony. York not our old men spares;
No more will I their babes. Tears virginal
Shall be to me even as the dew to fire,
And beauty that the tyrant oft reclaims
Shall to my flaming wrath be oil and flax. 55
Henceforth I will not have to do with pity.
Meet I an infant of the house of York,
Into as many gobbets will I cut it
As wild Medea young Absyrtus did.
In cruelty will I seek out my fame. 60
Come, thou new ruin of old Clifford's house.
As did Æneas old Anchises bear,
So bear I thee upon my manly shoulders;
But then Æneas bare a living load,
Nothing so heavy as these woes of mine. 65
[Exit, bearing off his father.]

Enter RICHARD and SOMERSET to fight. [SOMERSET is killed.]

Rich. So, lie thou there;
For underneath an alehouse' paltry sign,
The Castle in Saint Alban's, Somerset
Hath made the wizard famous in his death.
Sword, hold thy temper; heart, be wrathful
still. 70
Priests pray for enemies, but princes kill.
[Exit.]

Fight: excursions. Enter KING, QUEEN, and others.

Queen. Away, my lord! you are slow; for shame, away!

King. Can we outrun the heavens? Good
Margaret, stay.

Queen. What are you made of? You'll nor fight nor fly.

Now is it manhood, wisdom, and defence, 75
To give the enemy way, and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.

[Alarum afar off.]
If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes; but if we haply scape, 79
As well we may, if not through your neglect,
We shall to London get, where you are lov'd,
And where this breach now in our fortunes made
May readily be stopp'd.

Re-enter YOUNG CLIFFORD.

Y. Clif. But that my heart's on future mischief set,

I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly. 85
But fly you must. Uncurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts.
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day and them our fortune give.
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt. 90]

[SCENE III. Fields near Saint Alban's.]

Alarum. Retreat. Enter YORK, RICHARD,
WARWICK, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,
That winter lion, who in rage forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time,
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,
Repairs him with occasion? This happy day 95
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I help him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him; thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act: 10
But still, where danger was, still there I met
him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body.
But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter SALISBURY.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day; 15
By the mass, so did we all. I thank you,
Richard.

God knows how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleas'd Him that three times to-
day

You have defended me from imminent death.
Well, lords, we have not got that which we
have. 20

'T is not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the King is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament. 25
Let us pursue him ere the writs go forth.

What says Lord Warwick? Shall we after
them?

War. After them? Nay, before them, if we can.

Now, by my hand, lords, 't was a glorious
day.

Saint Alban's battle won by famous York 30
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come.
Sound drum and trumpets, and to London all;
And more such days as these to us befall!

[Exeunt.]

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. The Parliament-house.]

Alarum. Enter the DUKE OF YORK, EDWARD, RICHARD, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

War. I wonder how the King escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He slyly stole away and left his men;
 Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
 Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
 Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
 Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charg'd our main battle's front, and breaking
 in

Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain or wounded dangerous;
 I cleft his beaver with a downright blow.
 That this is true, father, behold his blood.

Mont. And, brother, here 's the Earl of Wiltshire's blood,

Whom I encount' red as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me and tell them what I did.

[Showing the Duke of Somerset's head.]

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons.

But is your Grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?
Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry's head.

War. And so do I. Victorious prince of York,

Before I see thee seated in that throne
 Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
 I vow by heaven these eyes shall never close.
 This is the palace of the fearful king,
 And this the regal seat. Possess it, York;
 For this is thine and not King Henry's heirs'.

York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick, and I will;

For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you; he that flies shall die.

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk. Stay by me, my lords;

And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this night.

War. And when the King comes, offer him no violence,

Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.

York. The Queen this day here holds her parliament,

But little thinks we shall be of her council.

By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house.

War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd,

Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king,
 And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice
 Hath made us by-words to our enemies.

York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute;

I mean to take possession of my right.

War. Neither the King, nor he that loves him best,
The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells.

I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares.
Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.
[York takes the throne.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLIFFORD, NORTHUMBERLAND, WESTMORELAND, EXETER, and the rest [wearing red roses].

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits,
Even in the chair of state. Belike he means,
Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,

To aspire unto the crown and reign as king.
Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father,
And thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge

On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends.

North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me!

Clif. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

West. What, shall we suffer this? Let's pluck him down.

My heart for anger burns; I cannot brook it.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

Clif. Patience is for poltroons, such as he.
He durst not sit there, had your father liv'd.

My gracious lord, here in the parliament
Let us assail the family of York.

North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin; be it so.

K. Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them,
And they have troops of soldiers at their beck?

West. But when the Duke is slain, they'll quickly fly.

K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart,

To make a shambles of the parliament-house!
Cousin of Exeter, frowns, words, and threats
Shall be the war that Henry means to use.
Thou factious Duke of York, descend my throne,

And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet.
I am thy sovereign.

York. I am thine.
Eze. For shame, come down. He made thee Duke of York.

York. 'T was my inheritance, as the earldom was.

Eze. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown

In following this usurping Henry.

Clif. Whom should he follow but his natural king?

War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard Duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?

York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself.

War. Be Duke of Lancaster; let him be King.

West. He is both King and Duke of Lancaster;
And that the Lord of Westmoreland shall maintain.

War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget
That we are those which chas'd you from the field

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread
March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. No, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it.

West. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy sons,

Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more lives

Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.
Clif. Urge it no more; lest that, instead of words,

I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger
As shall revenge his death before I stir.

War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you we show our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;
Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March:

I am the son of Henry the Fifth,
Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop

And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The Lord Protector lost it, and not I.

When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose.

Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head,

Edw. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, as thou lov'st and honour'st arms,

Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the King will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace, thou! and give King Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first. Hear him, lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,
For he that interrupts him shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne,
Wherein my grandsire and my father sat?

No! First shall war unpeople this my realm;
 Ay, and their colours, often borne in France,
 And now in England to our heart's great
 sorrow,
 Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint you,
 lords?

My title's good, and better far than his. 130
War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be
 King.

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. [Aside.] I know not what to say;
 my title's weak. —

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir? — 135
York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful
 king;

For Richard, in the view of many lords,
 Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth,
 Whose heir my father was, and I am his. 140

York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it uncon-strain'd,

Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Exe. No; for he could not so resign his
 crown 145

But that the next heir should succeed and
 reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon
 me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful
 king. 150

K. Hen. [Aside.] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,

Think not that Henry shall be so depos'd.

War. Depos'd he shall be, in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceiv'd. 'Tis not thy southern power, 155

Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent, Which makes thee thus presumptuous and
 proud,

Can set the Duke up in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
 Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence. 160

May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
 Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive
 my heart!

York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown.
 What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely Duke of
 York. 165

Or I will fill the house with armed men,
 And over the chair of state, where now he
 sits,

Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves.]

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear but one
 word. 170

Let me for this my life-time reign as king.

York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine
 heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.

King. I am content. Richard Plantagenet,
 Enjoy the kingdom after my decease. 175

Clif. What wrong is this unto the Prince your son!

War. What good is this to England and himself!

West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us!

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles. 180

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the Queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a-prey unto the house of
 York. 185

And die in bands for this unmanly deed!

Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be over-
 come,

Or live in peace abandon'd and despis'd!

[Exeunt North., Clif., and West.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge and therefore will not yield. 190

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick,
 but my son,

Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.

But be it as it may. [To York.] I here entail
 The crown to thee and to thine heirs for ever,

Conditionally, that here thou take an oath 195
 To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,

To honour me as thy king and sovereign,

And neither by treason nor hostility

To seek to put me down and reign thyself. 200

York. This oath I willingly take and will perform.

War. Long live King Henry! Plantagenet, embrace him.

K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!

York. Now York and Lancaster are recon-cil'd.

Exe. Accurs'd be he that seeks to make them foes! 205

[Sennet. Here they come down.]

York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.

War. And I'll keep London with my soldiers.

Nor. And I to Norfolk with my followers.

Mont. And I unto the sea from whence I came.

K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court. 210

[Exeunt York and his sons, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, their Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Enter QUEEN MARGARET [and the PRINCE OF WALES].

Eze. Here comes the Queen, whose looks bewray her anger.
I'll steal away.

K. Hen. Exeter, so will I.

Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me; I will follow thee.

K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.

Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes? 215

Ah, wretched man! would I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?
Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I, 220
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourish'd him as I did with my blood,
Thou wouldst have left thy dearest heart-blood there,

Rather than have made that savage duke thine heir

And disinherited thine only son. 225

Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me.
If you be King, why should not I succeed?

K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret; pardon me, sweet son.

The Earl of Warwick and the Duke enforce'd me.

Q. Mar. Enforce'd thee! art thou King, and wilt be forc'd? 230

I shame to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!

Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;
And given unto the house of York such head
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entail him and his heirs unto the crown, 235
What is it, but to make thy sepulchre
And creep into it far before thy time?

Warwick is chancellor and the lord of Calais;
Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow seas;
The Duke is made Protector of the realm; 240
And yet shalt thou be safe? Such safety finds
The trembling lamb environed with wolves.

Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes

Before I would have granted to that act. 245
But thou prefer'st thy life before thine honour;

And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself
Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed,
Until that act of parliament be repeal'd
Whereby my son is disinherited. 250

The northern lords that have forsworn thy colours

Will follow mine, if once they see them spread;
And spread they shall be, to thy foul disgrace
And utter ruin of the house of York.

Thus do I leave thee. Come, son, let's away.
Our army is ready; come, we'll after them. 255

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.

K. Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.
Prince. When I return with victory from the field 261

I'll see your Grace; till then I'll follow her.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus.

[Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me and to her son

Hath made her break out into terms of rage!
Revenge'd may she be on that hateful duke, 266
Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire,
Will coast my crown, and like an empty eagle
Tire on the flesh of me and of my son!
The loss of those three lords torments my heart. 270

I'll write unto them and entreat them fair.

Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Eze. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Sandal Castle.]

Enter RICHARD, EDWARD, and MONTAGUE.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

Edw. No, I can better play the orator.

Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strife?

What is your quarrel! How began it first? 2

Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

York. About what?

Rich. About that which concerns your Grace and us;

The crown of England, father, which is yours.

York. Mine, boy? Not till King Henry be dead. 10

Rich. Your right depends not on his life or death.

Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now.

By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe,

It will outrun you, father, in the end.

York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign. 11

Edw. But for a kingdom any oath may be broken.

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid your Grace should be forsworn.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak. 20

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took

Before a true and lawful magistrate,
That hath authority over him that swears.

Henry had none, but did usurp the place: 25

Then, seeing 't was he that made you to de-
pose,
Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.
Therefore, to arms! And, father, do but think
How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
Within whose circuit is Elysium 50
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest
Until the white rose that I wear be dy'd
Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.
York. Richard, enough; I will be King, or
die. 35

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,
And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.
Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk,
And tell him privily of our intent.
You, Edward, shall unto my Lord Cobham, 40
With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise.
In them I trust; for they are soldiers,
Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.
While you are thus employ'd, what resteth
more
But that I seek occasion how to rise, 45
And yet the King not privy to my drift,
Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter [a MESSENGER].

But, stay, — What news? Why com'st thou in such post?

[Mess.] The Queen with all the northern earls and lords

Intend here to besiege you in your castle. 50
She is hard by with twenty thousand men;
And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;
My brother Montague shall post to London. 55
Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,
Whom we have left protectors of the King,
With powerful policy strengthen themselves,
And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it
not. 60

And thus most humbly I do take my leave.
[Exit.]

Enter SIR JOHN MORTIMER and SIR HUGH MORTIMER.

York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles,

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;
The army of the Queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need; we'll meet her in the field. 65

York. What, with five thousand men?
Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.

A woman's general; what should we fear?
[A march afar off.]

Edw. I hear their drums. Let's set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight. 70

York. Five men to twenty! Though the odds be great,

I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.
Many a battle have I won in France

When as the enemy hath been ten to one;
Why should I not now have the like success? 75
[Alarum. Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Field of battle betwixt Sandal Castle and Wakefield.]

[Alarums.] Enter RUTLAND and his TUTOR.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to scape their hands?

Ah, tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter CLIFFORD [and Soldiers].

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.

As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father, he shall die. 5

Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.

Clif. Soldiers, away with him!

Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent
child,

Lest thou be hated both of God and man!
[Exit [dragged off by soldiers].]

Clif. How now, is he dead already? Or is it
fear 10
That makes him close his eyes? I'll open
them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,
And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder. 15
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threat'ning look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die.
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath.

Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live. 20

Clif. In vain thou speak'st, poor boy; my father's blood

Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it
again.

He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine 25

Were not revenge sufficient for me;
No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the house of York 30
Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore — [Lifting his hand.]

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death!
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me! 35

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm; why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 't was ere I was born.
Thou hast one son; for his sake pity me. 40

Lest in revenge thereof, sith God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.

Ah, let me live in prison all my days;
And when I give occasion of offence,

Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause. 45

Clif. No cause!
Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.
[Stabs him.]
Rut. Di faciant laudis summa sit ista tunc!
[Dies.]

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!
And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both.
[Exit.]

[SCENE IV. Another part of the field.]

Alarum. Enter the DUKE OF YORK.

York. The army of the Queen hath got the field.

My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back and fly, like ships before the wind
Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves.
My sons, God knows what hath bechanced them;

But this I know, they have demean'd themselves

Like men born to renown by life or death.
Three times did Richard make a lane to me,
And thrice cried, "Courage, father! fight it out!"

And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt
In blood of those that had encount'ed him.

And when the hardest warriors did retire,
Richard cried, "Charge! and give no foot of ground!"

And cried, "A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!"

With this, we charg'd again; but, out, alas!
We budg'd again; as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide
And spend her strength with over-matching waves.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue,
And I am faint and cannot fly their fury;
And were I strong, I would not shun their fury.
The sands are numb'ed that makes up my life;

Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, CLIFFORD, NORTH-UMBERLAND, the young PRINCE, and Soldiers.

Come bloody Clifford, rough Northumberland,
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage.
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.

Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless arm,
With downright payment, show'd unto my father.

Now Phaëthon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide prick.

York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may bring forth

A bird that will revenge upon you all;
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning whate'er you can afflict me with.

Why come you not? What! multitudes, and fear?

Clif. So cowards fight when they can fly no further;

So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invectives 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again,

And in thy thought o'er-run my former time;
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face,
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice,

Whose frown hath made thee faint and fly ere this!

Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word,

But buckle with thee blows, twice two for one.

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes

I would prolong a while the traitor's life.
Wrath makes him deaf; speak thou, Northumberland.

North. Hold, Clifford! do not honour him so much

To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart.

What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages;
And ten to one is no impeach of valour.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles.]

Clif. Ay, ay, so strives the woodcock with the gin.

North. So doth the cony struggle in the net.

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;

So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd.

North. What would your Grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,

Come, make him stand upon this molehill here,
That rag'd at mountains with outstretched arms,

Yet parted but the shadow with his hand.
What! was it you that would be England's king?

Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preaching of your high descent?

Where are your mess of sons to back you now,
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George?

And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dickie your boy, that with his grumbling voice

Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?

Look, York! I stain'd this napkin with the blood

That valiant Clifford, with his rapier's point,

Made issue from the bosom of the boy;
And if thine eyes can water for his death,

I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,

I should lament thy miserable state.
I prithee, grieve, to make me merry, York.

What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails

That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death?
Why art thou patient, man? Thou shouldst be mad;

And I, to make thee mad, do mock thee thus. 90
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.

Thou wouldest be fee'd, I see, to make me sport.
York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown.
A crown for York! and, lords, bow low to him;
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on. 95

[Putting a paper crown on his head.]

Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!

Ay, this is he that took King Henry's chair,

And this is he was his adopted heir.

But how is it that great Plantagenet

Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?

As I bethink me, you should not be King 101

Till our King Henry had shook hands with
death.

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory,

And rob his temples of the diadem,

Now in his life, against your holy oath? 105

O, 'tis a fault too too unpardonable!

Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his
head;

And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him
dead.

Clif. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons
he makes. 110

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,

Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!

How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex

To triumph, like an Amazonian trull,

Upon their woes whom fortune captivates! 115

But that thy face is, visard-like, unchanging,

Made impudent with use of evil deeds,

I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush.

To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom deriv'd,

Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless. 120

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples,

Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem,

Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.

Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?

It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud
queen. 125

Unless the adage must be verifi'd,

That beggars mounted run their horse to death.

'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud;

But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small.

'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd; 130

The contrary doth make thee wond'ring at.

'T is government that makes them seem divine;

The want thereof makes thee abominable.

Thou art as opposite to every good

As the Antipodes are unto us, 135

Or as the south to the septentrion.

O tiger's heart wrapt in a woman's hide!

How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the
child,

To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,

And yet be seen to wear a woman's face? 140

Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorse-
less.

Bid'st thou me rage? Why, now thou hast thy wish.

Wouldst thou me weep? Why, now thou hast thy will;

For raging wind blows up incessant showers, 145

And when the rage allays, the rain begins.

These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies;

And every drop cries vengeance for his death

'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passion moves me so 150

That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals

Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood;

But you are more inhuman, more inexorable,

O, ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania. 155

See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears!

This cloth thou dipp'dst in blood of my sweet
boy,

And I with tears do wash the blood away.

Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this;

And if thou tell'st the heavy story right, 160

Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;

Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,

And say, "Alas, it was a piteous deed!"

There, take the crown, and, with the crown,
my curse;

And in thy need such comfort come to thee 165

As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!

Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world.

My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,

I should not for my life but weep with him, 170

To see how inly sorrow gripes his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,

And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Clif. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.] 175

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king. [Stabbing him.]

York. Open Thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out Thee. [Dies.]

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;

So York may overlook the town of York. 180

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

[ACT II]

[SCENE I. A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.]

A march. Enter EDWARD, RICHARD, and their power.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father
scap'd,

Or whether he be scap'd away or no

From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit:
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the
news;

Had he been slain, we should have heard the
news;

Or had he scap'd, methinks we should have heard

The happy tidings of his good escape.

How fares my brother? Why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd
Where our right valiant father is become. 10
I saw him in the battle range about.

And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth.

Methought he bore him in the thickest troop

As doth a lion in a herd of neat;

Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs, 15
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,

The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.

So far'd our father with his enemies;

So fled his enemies my warlike father.

Methinks, 't is prize enough to be his son. 20

See how the morning opes her golden gates,

And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!

How well resembles it the prime of youth,

Trimmi'd like a younker prancing to his love!

Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns? 25

Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect
sun,

Not separated with the racking clouds,

But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.

See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss,

As if they vow'd some league inviolable. 30

Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.

In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'T is wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of.

I think it cites us, brother, to the field,

That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet, 35

Each one already blazing by our meeds,

Should notwithstanding join our lights together

And over-shine the earth as this the world.

Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I slay,

Upon my target three fair-shining suns. 40

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters; by your leave I speak it,

You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter [a MESSENGER] blowing.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?

Mess. Ah, one that was a woeful looker-on 45

When as the noble Duke of York was slain,

Your princely father and my loving lord!

Edw. O, speak no more, for I have heard too
much.

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environed he was with many foes, 50

And stood against them, as the hope of Troy

Against the Greeks that would have ent'red.

Troy.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds;

And many strokes, though with a little axe,

Hews down and fells the hardest-timber'd oak.

By many hands your father was subdu'd; 55

But only slaught'red by the ireful arm

Of unrelenting Clifford and the Queen,

Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite,

Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he wept, 60

The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheeks

A napkin steeped in the harmless blood

Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain.

And after many scorns, many foul taunts, 64

They took his head, and on the gates of York

They set the same; and there it doth remain,

The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to lean
upon,

Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay.

O Clifford, boist'rous Clifford! thou hast slain

The flower of Europe for his chivalry; 71

And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him,

For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd thee.

Now my soul's palace is become a prison;

Ah, would she break from hence, that this my body 75

Might in the ground be closed up in rest!

For never henceforth shall I joy again,

Never, O never, shall I see more joy!

Rich. I cannot weep, for all my body's moisture

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
heart; 80

Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden,

For self-same wind that I should speak withal

Is kindling coals that fires all my breast,

And burns me up with flames that tears would quench.

To weep is to make less the depth of grief. 85

Tears then for babes; blows and revenge for me.

Richard. I bear thy name; I'll venge thy
death,

Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edw. His name that valiant duke hath left
with thee;

His dukedom and his chair with me is left. 90

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird,

Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun;

For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom
say,

Either that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter WARWICK, MARQUESS OF MON-TAGUE, and their army.

War. How now, fair lords! What fare?
What news abroad? 95

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount

Our baleful news, and at each word's deliverance

Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told,

The words would add more anguish than the wounds.

O valiant lord, the Duke of York is slain! 100

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet,

Which held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,

Is by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears;

And now, to add more measure to your woes,
I come to tell you things sith then befallen. ¹⁰⁶
After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp,

Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run,
Were brought me of your loss and his depart.
I, then in London, keeper of the King, ¹¹¹
Muster'd my soldiers, gathered flocks of
friends,

[And very well appointed, as I thought,] March'd toward Saint Alban's to intercept the Queen,

Bearing the King in my behalf along; ¹¹⁵
For by my scouts I was advertised
That she was coming with a full intent
To dash our late decree in parliament
Touching King Henry's oath and your succe-
sion.

Short tale to make, we at Saint Alban's met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought. ¹²¹

But whether 't was the coldness of the King,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;
Or whether 't was report of her success; ¹²⁵
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives blood and death,
I cannot judge; but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers', like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like an idle thresher with a flail, ¹³¹ Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.

I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay and great rewards.
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight, ¹³⁵
And we in them no hope to win the day,
So that we fled; the King unto the Queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and my-
self,

In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here we heard you were, ¹⁴⁰
Making another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is the Duke of Norfolk, gentle
Warwick?

And when came George from Burgundy to England?

War. Some six miles off the Duke is with the soldiers;

And for your brother, he was lately sent ¹⁴⁵
From your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

Rich. 'T was odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled.

Off have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er till now his scandal of retire. ¹⁵⁰

War. Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear;

For thou shalt know this strong right hand of
mine

Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous and as bold in war ¹⁵⁵
As he is famed for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick; blame me not.

'T is love I bear thy glories make me speak.
But in this troublous time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel, ¹⁶⁰
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Numb'ring our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say ay, and to it, lords. ¹⁶⁵

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;

And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haught Northumber-
land,

And of their feather many more proud birds, ¹⁷⁰
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what beside ¹⁷⁵
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong.

Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March, ¹⁷⁹

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry "Charge!" upon our foes,
But never once again turn back and fly. ¹⁸⁵

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak.

Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries "Retire!" if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;

And when thou fail'st—as God forbid the hour!— ¹⁹⁰

Must Edward fall, which peril Heaven forbend!
War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York;

The next degree is England's royal throne,
For King of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In every borough as we pass along; ¹⁹⁵

And he that throws not up his cap for joy
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,
Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task. ²⁰⁰

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,

As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up drums. God and Saint George for us!

Enter a MESSENGER.

War. How now! what news? ²⁰⁵

Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word
by me

The Queen is coming with a puissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel.

War. Why then it sorts. Brave warriors, let's away. ^[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Before York.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, QUEEN MARGARET, the PRINCE OF WALES, CLIFFORD, and NORTHUMBERLAND, with drum and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.

Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy That sought to be encompass'd with your crown. Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck.

To see this sight, it irks my very soul. Withhold revenge, dear God! 't is not my fault, Nor wittingly have I infring'd my vow.

Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity And harmful pity must be laid aside.

To whom do lions cast their gentle looks? Not to the beast that would usurp their den.

Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick? Not his that spoils her young before her face.

Who scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting? Not he that sets his foot upon her back.

The smallest worm will turn being trodden on, And doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

Ambitious York did level at thy crown, Thou smiling while he knit his angry brows;

He, but a duke, would have his son a king, And raise his issue, like a loving sire;

Thou, being a king, blest with a goodly son, Didst yield consent to disinherit him,

Which argued thee a most unloving father. Unreasonable creatures feed their young;

And though man's face be fearful to their eyes, Yet, in protection of their tender ones,

Who hath not seen them, even with those wings Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,

Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest, Offering their own lives in their young's defence?

For shame, my liege, make them your precedent!

Were it not pity that this goodly boy Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,

And long hereafter say unto his child, "What my great-grandfather and grandsire got

My careless father fondly gave away?" Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy;

And let his manly face, which promiseth Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart

To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,

Inferring arguments of mighty force. But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear

That things ill-got had ever bad success? And happy always was for that son

Whose father for his hoarding went to hell? I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind,

And would my father had left me no more! For all the rest is held at such a rate

As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep Than in possession any jot of pleasure.

Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends did know

How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits! Our foes are nigh,

And this soft courage makes your followers faint.

You promis'd knighthood to our forward son. Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently.

Edward, kneel down.

K. Hen. Edward Plantagenet, arise a knight;

And learn this lesson, draw thy sword in right.

Prince. My gracious father, by your kingly leave,

I'll draw it as apparent to the crown, And in that quarrel use it to the death.

Clif. Why, that is spoken like a toward prince.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness; For with a band of thirty thousand men

Comes Warwick, backing of the Duke of York; And in the towns, as they do march along, Proclaims him king, and many fly to him. Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Clif. I would your Highness would depart the field;

The Queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution then to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords

And hearten those that fight in your defence. Unsheathe your sword, good father; cry

"Saint George!"

March. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, WARWICK, NORFOLK, MONTAGUE, and Soldiers.

Edu. Now, perjur'd Henry! wilt thou kneel for grace,

And set thy diadem upon my head; Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?

Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy!

Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?

Edu. I am his king, and he should bow his knee.

I was adopted heir by his consent; Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,

You, that are king, though he do wear the crown,

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament, To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Clif. And reason too.

Who should succeed the father but the son?

Rich. Are you there, butcher? O, I cannot speak!

Clif. Ay, crook-back, here I stand to answer thee,
 Or any he the proudest of thy sort.
Rich. 'T was you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?
Clif. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.
Rich. For God's sake, lords, give signal to the fight.
War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?
Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick! dare you speak?
 When you and I met at Saint Alban's last, Your legs did better service than your hands.
War. Then 't was my turn to fly, and now 't is thine.
Clif. You said so much before, and yet you fled.
War. 'T was not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.
North. No, nor your manhood that durst make you stay.
Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently.
 Break off the parley; for scarce I can refrain The execution of my big-swoln heart
 Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.
Clif. I slew thy father, call'st thou him a child?
Rich. Ay, like a dastard and a treacherous coward,
 As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland; But ere sunset I'll make thee curse the deed.
K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.
Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips.
K. Hen. I prithee, give no limits to my tongue.
 I am a king, and privileg'd to speak.
Clif. My liege, the wound that bred this meeting here Cannot be cur'd by words; therefore be still.
Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword.
 By Him that made us all, I am resolv'd That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.
Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no?
 A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day, That ne'er shall dine unless thou yield the crown.
War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head;
 For York in justice puts his armour on.
Prince. If that be right which Warwick says is right,
 There is no wrong, but everything is right.
Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands;
 For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue.
Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire nor dam,
 But like a foul mis-shapen stigmatic, Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided
 As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings.
Rich. Iron of Naples hid with English gilt,

Whose father bears the title of a king,
 As if a channel should be call'd the sea — Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art extraught,
 To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?
Edw. A wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns
 To make this shameless callet know herself.
 Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou, Although thy husband may be Menelaus;
 And ne'er was Agamemnon's brother wrong'd By that false woman, as this king by thee.
 His father revell'd in the heart of France,
 And tam'd the King, and made the Dauphin stoop;
 And had he match'd according to his state, He might have kept that glory to this day;
 But when he took a beggar to his bed, And grac'd thy poor sire with his bridal-day,
 Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him,
 That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,
 And heap'd sedition on his crown at home. For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?
 Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept;
 And we, in pity of the gentle king, Had slipp'd our claim until another age.
Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
 And that thy summer bred us no increase, We set the axe to thy usurping root;
 And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,
 Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike, We'll never leave till we have hewn thee down,
 Or bath'd thy growing with our heated bloods.
Edw. And, in this resolution, I defy thee,
 Not willing any longer conference, Since thou deny'st the gentle king to speak.
 Sound trumpets! Let our bloody colours wave! And either victory, or else a grave.
Q. Mar. Stay, Edward.
Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay.
 These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.
 [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. A field of battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.]

Alarum. Excursions. Enter WARWICK.
War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
 I lay me down a little while to breathe;
 For strokes receiv'd, and many blows repaid, Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,
 And spite of spite needs must I rest a while.

Enter EDWARD, running.
Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death!

For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord! what hap?
What hope of good?

Enter GEORGE.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;

Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us. 10
What counsel give you? Whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings;

And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter RICHARD.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?

Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk, 15

Broach'd with the steely point of Clifford's lance;

And in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,
"Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!"

So, underneath the belly of their steeds, 20
That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood,

The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood!

I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here, 25

Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage;
And look upon, as if the tragedy

Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors?
Here on my knee I vow to God above,

I'll never pause again, never stand still, 30
Till either death hath clos'd these eyes of mine

Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thine;

And in this vow do chain my soul to thine!
—And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold 35

face,

I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings,

Beseeking thee, if with thy will it stands
That to my foes this body must be prey,

Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope, 40
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul!

Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and,
gentle Warwick,

Let me embrace thee in my weary arms. 45
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe

That winter should cut off our spring-time so.
War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords,

farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay, 50

And call them pillars that will stand to us;
And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards

As victors wear at the Olympian games.
This may plant courage in their quailing 55

breasts;

For yet is hope of life and victory. 55
Forslow no longer, make we hence amain.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Another part of the field.]

Excursions. Enter RICHARD and CLIFFORD.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone.

Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall.

Clif. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone. 5

This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York;
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rut-

land;

And here's the heart that triumphs in their death

And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother

To execute the like upon thyself. 10
And so, have at thee!

[They fight. Warwick comes; Clifford flies.]

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;

For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Another part of the field.]

Alarum. Enter KING HENRY alone.

K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning's war,

When dying clouds contend with growing light,
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,

Can neither call it perfect day nor night.
Now ways it this way, like a mighty sea 5

Forc'd by the tide to combat with the wind;
Now ways it that way, like the self-same sea

Forc'd to retire by fury of the wind.
Sometime the flood prevails, and then the 10

wind;

Now one the better, then another best;
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,

Yet neither conqueror nor conquered;
So is the equal poise of this fell war.

Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory! 15

For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle; swearing both

They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so;

For what is in this world but grief and woe? 20
O God! methinks it were a happy life,

To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now,

To carve out dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run, 25

How many makes the hour full complete,
How many hours brings about the day,

How many days will finish up the year,
How many years a mortal man may live.

When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock, 30

So many hours must I take my rest,

So many hours must I contemplate,
 So many hours must I sport myself;
 So many days my ewes have been with young, 55
 So many weeks ere the poor fools will ean,
 So many years ere I shall shear the fleece.
 So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
 Pass'd over to the end they were created,
 Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave. 40
 Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!

Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade
 To shepherds looking on their silly sheep,
 Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy
 To kings that fear their subjects' treachery? 45
 O, yes, it doth; a thousand-fold it doth.
 And to conclude, the shepherd's homely curds,
 His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
 His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade,
 All which secure and sweetly he enjoys, 50
 Is far beyond a prince's delicates, —
 His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
 His body couched in a curious bed,
 When Care, Mistrust, and Treason waits on
 him.

Alarum. Enter a SON that hath killed his father [dragging in the dead body].

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.
 This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight,
 May be possessed with some store of crowns; 57
 And I, that haply take them from him now,
 May yet ere night yield both my life and them
 To some man else, as this dead man doth me. 60
 Who's this? O God! it is my father's face,
 Whom in this conflict I unwares have kill'd.
 O heavy times, begetting such events!
 From London by the King was I press'd forth;
 My father, being the Earl of Warwick's man,
 Came on the part of York, press'd by his master; 65

And I, who at his hands receiv'd my life,
 Have, by my hands, of life bereaved him.
 Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did!
 And pardon, father, for I knew not thee! 70
 My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
 And no more words till they have flow'd their fill.

K. Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody
 times!

Whiles lions war and battle for their dens,
 Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity. 75
 Weep, wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;

And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
 Be blind with tears, and break o'ercharg'd
 with grief.

Enter a FATHER, bearing of his son.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
 Give me thy gold, if thou hast any gold, 80
 For I have bought it with an hundred blows.
 But let me see: is this our foeman's face?
 Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son!
 Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
 Throw up thine eye! See, see what showers arise, 85
 Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,

Upon thy wounds, that kills mine eye and
 heart!

O, pity, God, this miserable age!
 What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly,
 Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural, 90
 This deadly quarrel daily doth beget!
 O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
 And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!

O that my death would stay these ruthless
 deeds! 95

O, pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity!
 The red rose and the white are on his face,
 The fatal colours of our striving houses;
 The one his purple blood right well resembles,
 The other his pale cheeks, methinks, present-
 eth. 100

Wither one rose, and let the other flourish;
 If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.
Son. How will my mother for a father's
 death

Take on with me and ne'er be satisfi'd!
Fath. How will my wife for slaughter of my
 son 105

Shed seas of tears and ne'er be satisfi'd!
K. Hen. How will the country for these woeful chances

Misthink the King and not be satisfi'd!
Son. Was ever son so ru'd a father's death?

Fath. Was ever father so bemoan'd his son?

K. Hen. Was ever king so griev'd for subjects' woe? 111

Much is your sorrow; mine ten times so much.

Son. I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill. [Exit with the body.]

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;

My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre, 115
 For from my heart thine image ne'er shall
 go;

My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
 And so obsequious will thy father be,
 E'en for the loss of thee, having no more,
 As Priam was for all his valiant sons, 120
 I'll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,

For I have murdered where I should not kill.
[Exit [with the body].]

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overgone with care,

Here sits a king more woeful than you are.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter QUEEN MAR-GARET, the PRINCE, and EXETER.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled, 125

And Warwick rages like a chafed bull.
 Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post again.

Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds

Having the fearful flying hare in sight, 130
 With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,
 And bloody steel grasp'd in their ireful hands,
 Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Eze. Away! for vengeance comes along with them.

Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed; 135
Or else come after. I'll away before.

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter;

Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whither the Queen intends. Forward; away! 140
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. Another part of the field.]

A loud alarum. Enter CLIFFORD, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies,

Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow

More than my body's parting with my soul!
My love and fear glu'd many friends to thee; 5
And, now I fall, thy tough commixtures melts.
Impairing Henry, strength'ning misproud York,

[The common people swarm like summer flies;]
And whither fly the gnats but to the sun?

And who shines now but Henry's enemies? 10
O Phœbus, hadst thou never given consent
That Phaëthon should check thy fiery steeds,

Thy burning car never had scorched the earth!
And, Henry, hadst thou sway'd as kings should do,

Or as thy father and his father did, 15
Giving no ground unto the house of York,
They never then had sprung like summer flies;

I and ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death;
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace. 20

For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootless are plights, and cureless are my wounds.

No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight.
The foe is merciless, and will not pity, 25

For at their hands I have deserv'd no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,

And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.
Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest; 30

I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.
[He faints.]

Alarm and retreat. Enter EDWARD, GEORGE, RICHARD, MONTAGUE, WARWICK, and Soldiers.

Edu. Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us pause

And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.

Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,

As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust, 35
Command an argosy to stem the waves.

But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?

War. No, 't is impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,

Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave; 40

And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.
[Clifford groans [and dies].]

Rich. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

A deadly groan, like life and death's departing.
See who it is.

Edu. And, now the battle's ended,
If friend or foe, let him be gently used. 45

Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 't is Clifford;

Who, not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,

But set his murd'ring knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring, 50

I mean our princely father, Duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there;

Instead whereof let this supply the room.
Measure for measure must be answered. 55

Edu. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,

That nothing sung but death to us and ours.
Now death shall stop his dismal threat'ning sound,

And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.
War. I think his understanding is bereft. 60

Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?

Dark cloudy death o'er shades his beams of life,
And he nor sees nor hears us what we say.

Rich. O, would he did! and so perhaps he doth.

'T is but his policy to counterfeit, 65
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts
Which in the time of death he gave our father.

Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace.

Edu. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence. 70
War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edu. Thou pitied'st Rutland; I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's that Captain Margaret, to fence you now? 75

War. They mock thee, Clifford; swear as thou wast wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? Nay, then the world goes hard

When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.

I know by that he's dead; and, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life, 80

That I in all despite might rail at him,
This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood

Stifle the villain whose unstanched thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy. 85

War. Ay, but he's dead. Off with the traitor's head, ⁸⁵

And rear it in the place your father's stands.
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal king;
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,

And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen. ⁹⁰
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread

The scatt' red foe that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt,
Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears. ⁹⁵

First will I see the coronation;
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be;

For in thy shoulder do I build my seat, ¹⁰⁰
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester,
And George, of Clarence. Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best. ¹⁰⁵

Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, George of Gloucester;

For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.
War. Tut, that's a foolish observation.

Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now to London,

To see these honours in possession. [Exeunt. ¹¹⁰

[ACT III]

[SCENE I. A forest in the north of England.]

Enter [two KEEPERS,] with cross-bows in their hands.

[1. Keeper.] Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves,
For through this laund anon the deer will come;

And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer.

[2. Keeper.] I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot. ⁵

1. Keeper. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow

Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best;

And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day ¹⁰

In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2. Keeper. Here comes a man; let's stay till he be past.

Enter KING HENRY [disguised], with a prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stolen, even of pure love,

To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No, Harry, Harry, 't is no land of thine; ¹⁵

Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptre wrung from thee,

Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou was anointed.

No bending knee will call thee Cæsar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee; ²⁰
For how can I help them, and not myself?

1. Keeper. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee.

This is the quondam king; let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace thee, sour Adversity,

For wise men say it is the wisest course. ²⁵

2. Keeper. Why linger we? Let us lay hands upon him.

1. Keeper. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son are gone to France for aid;

And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister ³⁰

To wife for Edward. If this news be true,
Poor queen and son, your labour is but lost;

For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.

By this account, then, Margaret may win him,
For she's a woman to be pitied much. ³⁵

Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;

The tiger will be mild whiles she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse, ⁴⁰

To hear and see her plaints, her brinish tears.
Ay, but she's come to beg, Warwick, to give;

She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry,
He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.

She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd; ⁴⁵
He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;

That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more;

Whiles Warwick tells his title, smooths the wrong,

Inferreth arguments of mighty strength,
And in conclusion wins the King from her, ⁵⁰

With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support King Edward's place.

O Margaret, thus 't will be; and thou, poor soul,

Art then forsaken, as thou went'st forlorn!

2. Keeper. Say, what art thou that talk'st of kings and queens? ⁵⁵

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to.

A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

2. Keeper. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough. ⁶⁰

2. Keeper. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;

Not deck'd with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen. My crown is called content;

A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy. ⁶⁵

2. Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,

Your crown content and you must be contented
To go along with us; for, as we think,
You are the king King Edward hath depos'd;
And we his subjects sworn in all allegiance
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear and break an oath?

2. Keep. No, never such an oath; nor will not now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell when I was King of England?

2. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;

My father and my grandfather were kings,
And you were sworn true subjects unto me;
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

1. Keep. No;

For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? Do I not breathe a man?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear!
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,

Obeys with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,

Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men;

But do not break your oaths; for of that sin
My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.

Go where you will, the King shall be commanded;

And be you kings, command, and I'll obey.

1. Keep. We are true subjects to the King, King Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry, if he were seated as King Edward is.

1. Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and the King's

To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd.

And what God will, that let your king perform;

And what He will, I humbly yield unto.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. London. The palace.]

Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and LADY GREY.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Alban's field

This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain,

His land then seiz'd on by the conqueror.

Her suit is now to repossess those lands;

Which we in justice cannot well deny,

Because in quarrel of the house of York

The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glou. Your Highness shall do well to grant her suit.

It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Yea, is it so?

I see the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the King will grant her humble suit.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] He knows the game;
how true he keeps the wind!

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Silence!

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;

And come some other time to know our mind.

[L. Grey.] Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay.

May it please your Highness to resolve me now;

And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Ay, widow? Then I'll warrant you all your lands,

An if what pleases him shall pleasure you.

Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] I fear her not, unless she chance to fall.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] God forbid that! for he'll take vantages.

K. Edw. How many children hast thou, widow? Tell me.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] I think he means to beg a child of her.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Nay, then whip me; he'll rather give her two.

L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] You shall have four, if you'll be rul'd by him.

K. Edw. 'T were pity they should lose their father's lands.

L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.

K. Edw. Lords, give us leave. I'll try this widow's wit.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave,

Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch.

[Glou. and Clar. retire.]

K. Edw. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.

K. Edw. And would you not do much to do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.

K. Edw. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your Majesty.

K. Edw. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your Highness' service.

K. Edw. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

K. Edw. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edw. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your Grace commands.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble. ⁵⁰

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] As red as fire! Nay, then her wax must melt.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? Shall I not hear my task?

K. Edw. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.

K. Edw. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee. ⁵⁵

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy.

K. Edw. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.

K. Edw. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense. ⁶⁰

What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?

L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks, my prayers;

That love which virtue begs and virtue grants.

K. Edw. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.

L. Grey. Why, then you mean not as I thought you did. ⁶⁵

K. Edw. But now you partly may perceive my mind.

L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive

Your Highness aims at, if I aim aright.

K. Edw. To tell thee plain, I aim to lie with thee.

L. Grey. To tell you plain, I had rather lie in prison. ⁷⁰

K. Edw. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.

L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower;

For by that loss I will not purchase them.

K. Edw. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.

L. Grey. Herein your Highness wrongs both them and me. ⁷⁵

But, mighty lord, this merry inclination Accords not with the sadness of my suit.

Please you dismiss me, either with ay or no.

K. Edw. Ay, if thou wilt say ay to my request;

No, if thou dost say no to my demand. ⁸⁰

L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] The widow likes him not, she knits her brows.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.

K. Edw. [Aside.] Her looks doth argue her replete with modesty;

Her words doth show her wit incomparable; ⁸⁵

All her perfections challenge sovereignty.
One way or other, she is for a king;
And she shall be my love, or else my queen.—
Say that King Edward take thee for his queen?

L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious lord. ⁹⁰

I am a subject fit to jest withal,
But far unfit to be a sovereign.

K. Edw. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to thee

I speak no more than what my soul intends;
And that is, to enjoy thee for my love. ⁹⁵

L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto.

I know I am too mean to be your queen,
And yet too good to be your concubine.

K. Edw. You cavil, widow. I did mean, my queen.

L. Grey. 'T will grieve your Grace my sons should call you father. ¹⁰⁰

K. Edw. No more than when my daughters call thee mother.

Thou art a widow, and thou hast some children;
And, by God's mother, I, being but a bachelor,
Have other some. Why, 'tis a happy thing
To be the father unto many sons. ¹⁰⁵

Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] The ghostly father now hath done his shrift.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] When he was made a shriver, 't was for shift.

K. Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we two have had.

Glou. The widow likes it not, for she looks very sad. ¹¹⁰

K. Edw. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.

Clar. To who, my lord?

K. Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.

Glou. That would be ten days' wonder at the least.

Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

Glou. By so much is the wonder in extremes. ¹¹⁵

K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers. I can tell you both

Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a NOBLEMAN.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.

K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower; ¹²⁰

And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.

Widow, go you along. Lords, use her honourably. [Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Glou. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.

Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all, ¹²⁵

That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,
To cross me from the golden time I look for!

And yet, between my soul's desire and me —
The lustful Edward's title buried —
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward, 130

And all the unlook'd for issue of their bodies
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why, then, I do but dream on sovereignty,
Like one that stands upon a promontory 135
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye,
And chides the sea that sunders him from
thence,

Saying, he'll lade it dry to have his way.
So do I wish the crown, being so far off; 140
And so I chide the means that keeps me from it;
And so I say, I'll cut the causes off,
Flattering me with impossibilities.
My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweenes too
much,

Unless my hand and strength could equal
them. 145

Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll make my heaven in a lady's lap,
And deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and
looks. 150

O miserable thought! and more unlikely
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
Why, love forswore me in my mother's womb;
And, for I should not deal in her soft laws,
She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe, 155
To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back,
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part, 160
Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp
That carries no impression like the dam.
And am I then a man to be belov'd?
O monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
Then, since this earth affords no joy to me, 165
But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I'll make my heaven to dream upon the crown,
And, whiles I live, to account this world but
hell,

Until my mis-shap'd trunk that bears this
head 170

Be round impaled with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown,
For many lives stand between me and home;
And I, — like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rends the thorns and is rent with the thorns, 175

Seeking a way and straying from the way,
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out, —
Torment myself to catch the English crown;
And from that torment I will free myself, 180
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
Why, I can smile, and murder whiles I smile,
And cry "Content" to that which grieves my
heart,

And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions. 185

I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid
shall;

I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
Deceive more slyly than Ulysses could,
And, like a Sinon, take another Troy. 190
I can add colours to the chameleon,
Change shapes with Proteus for advantages,
And set the murderous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut, were it farther off, I'll pluck it down. 195
[Exit.]

[SCENE III. France. The King's palace.]

Flourish. Enter LEWIS the French King, his sister BONA, his Admiral, call'd BOURBON; PRINCE EDWARD, QUEEN MARGARET, and the EARL OF OXFORD. LEWIS sits, and riseth up again.

K. Lew. Fair Queen of England, worthy
Margaret,

Sit down with us. It ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France; now
Margaret

Must strike her sail and learn a while to serve
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days;
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground,
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself. 11

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?

Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears

And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself, 15

And sit thee by our side. (Seats her by him.)
Yield not thy neck

To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief. 20

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts

And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak.

Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is of a king become a banish'd man, 25
And forced to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward, Duke of York,
Usurps the regal title and the seat
Of England's true-anointed lawful king.

This is the cause that I, poor Margaret, 30
With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir,
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And if thou fail us, all our hope is done.
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help.
Our people and our peers are both misled, 35
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
And, as thou see'st, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm,

While we bethink a means to break it off.

Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe. 40

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll sac-cour thee.

Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow.

And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow!

Enter WARWICK.

K. Lew. What's he approacheth boldly to our presence?

Q. Mar. Our Earl of Warwick, Edward's greatest friend. 45

K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[He descends. She ariseth.]

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;

For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion,

My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
I come, in kindness and unfeigned love, 51

First, to do greetings to thy royal person;

And then to crave a league of amity;

And lastly, to confirm that amity

With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister, 56

To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. [Aside.] If that go forward,
Henry's hope is done.

War. (To Bona.) And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf, 59

I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humbly to kiss your hand and with my tongue

To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart;

Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image and thy virtue.

Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak 65

Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest

love,
But from deceit bred by necessity;

For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance? 70

To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice,
That Henry liveth still; but were he dead,

Yet here Prince Edward stands, King Henry's
son.

Look, therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage

Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour; 75

For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth

wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret!
Prince. And why not queen?

War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art prince than she is queen.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great John of Gaunt, 81

Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;

And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;

And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France. 86

From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth
discourse,

You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten? 90

Methinks these peers of France should smile at
that.

But for the rest, you tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time

To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege, 95

Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the
right,

Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame! Leave Henry, and call Edward 100

king.

Oxf. Call him my king by whose injurious doom

My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death? and more than so, my

father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,

When nature brought him to the door of
death? 105

No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

K. Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward,
and Oxford,

Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside, 110

While I use further conference with Warwick.
[They stand aloof.]

Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,

Is Edward your true king? for I were loath
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.

War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine
honour, 115

K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?

War. The more that Henry was unfortunate.

K. Lew. Then further, all dissembling set aside,

Tell me for truth the measure of his love 120

Unto our sister Bona.

War. Such it seems
As may beseech a monarch like himself.

Myself have often heard him say and swear
That this his love was an eternal plant,

Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's 125

sun,
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,

Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain.

K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve, 130

Bona. Your grant, or your denial, shall be
mine;

Yet I confess that often ere this day, [To War.
When I have heard your king's desert recounted,

Mine ear hath tempted judgement to desire.

K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's;

And now forthwith shall articles be drawn ¹³⁵
Touching the jointure that your king must
make,

Which with her dowry shall be counterpois'd.
Draw near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness

That Bona shall be wife to the English king.

Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king. ¹⁴⁰

Q. Mar. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy device

By this alliance to make void my suit.

Before thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend.

K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret.

But if your title to the crown be weak, ¹⁴⁵

As may appear by Edward's good success,

Then 't is but reason that I be releas'd

From giving aid which late I promised.

Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand

That your estate requires and mine can yield.

War. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ease, ¹⁵¹

Where having nothing, nothing can he lose.

And as for you yourself, our quondam queen,

You have a father able to maintain you;

And better 'twere you troubled him than France. ¹⁵⁵

Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless
Warwick, peace,

Proud setter up and puller down of kings!

I will not hence, till, with my talk and tears,

Both full of truth, I make King Lewis behold

Thy sly conveyance and thy lord's false love;

[Post blows a horn within.
For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us or thee. ¹⁶³

Enter a Post.

Post. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you, [To War.

Sent from your brother, Marquess Montague:

These from our king unto your Majesty: ¹⁶⁵
[To Lewis.

And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not. [To Margaret.

[They all read their letters.

Oxf. I like it well that our fair queen and mistress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his.

Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps, as he were nettled.

I hope all's for the best. ¹⁷⁰

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhop'd joys.

War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the Lady Grey?

And now, to soothe your forgery and his, ¹⁷⁵

Sends me a paper to persuade me patience?

Is this the alliance that he seeks with France?

Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your Majesty as much before.
This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. ¹⁸⁰

War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight
of heaven,

And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss,

That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's,

No more my king, for he dishonours me,

But most himself, if he could see his shame.

Did I forget that by the house of York ¹⁸⁵

My father came untimely to his death?

Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece?

Did I impale him with the regal crown?

Did I put Henry from his native right? ¹⁹⁰

And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame?

Shame on himself! for my desert is honour;

And to repair my honour lost for him,

I here renounce him and return to Henry.

My noble queen, let former grudges pass, ¹⁹⁵

And henceforth I am thy true servitor.

I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona

And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love;

And I forgive and quite forget old faults, ²⁰⁰

And joy that thou becom'st King Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned
friend,

That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us

With some few bands of chosen soldiers,

I'll undertake to land them on our coast ²⁰⁵

And force the tyrant from his seat by war.

'T is not his new-made bride shall succour him;

And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me,

He's very likely now to fall from him

For matching more for wanton lust than honour, ²¹⁰

Or than for strength and safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be re-veng'd

But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor
Henry live,

Unless thou rescue him from foul despair? ²¹⁵

Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one.

War. And mine, fair Lady Bona, joins with
yours.

K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore at last I firmly am resolv'd
You shall have aid. ²²⁰

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.

K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return
in post,

And tell false Edward, thy supposed king,

That Lewis of France is sending over masquers

To revel it with him and his new bride. ²²⁵

Thou seest what's past, go fear thy king withal.

Bona. Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I wear the willow garland for his sake.

Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside,

And I am ready to put armour on. 230

War. Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,

And therefore I'll uncrown him ere 't be long. There's thy reward; be gone. [Exit Post.]

K. Lew. But, Warwick, Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men, Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle; 235

And, as occasion serves, this noble queen And prince shall follow with a fresh supply.

Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt, What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty? 239

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty, That if our queen and this young prince agree, I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion.

Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, 245
Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick;

And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable, That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine.

Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it;

And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand. 250
[He gives his hand to Warwick.]

K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied,

And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral, Shall waft them over with our royal fleet. I long till Edward fall by war's mischance, For mocking marriage with a dame of France. 255

[Exeunt all but Warwick.]
War. I came from Edward as ambassador, But I return his sworn and mortal foe.

Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me, But dreadful war shall answer his demand.

Had he none else to make a stale but me? 260
Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow.

I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown, And I'll be chief to bring him down again;

Not that I pity Henry's misery, But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. 265

[Exit.]

[ACT IV]

[SCENE I. London. The palace.]

Enter GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, SOMERSET, and MONTAGUE.

Glou. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you

Of this new marriage with the Lady Grey? Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?

Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;

How could he stay till Warwick made return? 2

Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the King.

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD [attended], LADY GREY [as Queen], PEMBROKE, STAFFORD, HASTINGS [and others]. Four stand on one side, and four on the other.

Glou. And his well-chosen bride.

Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.

K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,

That you stand pensive, as half malcontent? 10
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the Earl of Warwick,

Which are so weak of courage and in judgement That they'll take no offence at our abuse.

K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,

They are but Lewis and Warwick. I am Edward, 15

Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.

Glou. And shall have your will, because our king.

Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.

K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?

Glou. Not I. 20

No, God forbid that I should wish them sever'd Whom God hath join'd together; ay, and 't were pity

To sunder them that yoke so well together.

K. Edw. Setting your scorns and your mislike aside,

Tell me some reason why the Lady Grey 25
Should not become my wife and England's queen.

And you too, Somerset and Montague, Speak freely what you think.

Clar. Then this is mine opinion: that King Lewis

Becomes your enemy, for mocking him 30
About the marriage of the Lady Bona.

Glou. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,

Is now dishonoured by this new marriage.

K. Edw. What if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd

By such invention as I can devise? 35

Mont. Yet, to have join'd with France in such alliance

Would more have strength'n'd this our commonwealth

'Gainst foreign storms than any home-bred marriage.

Hast. Why, knows not Montague that of itself

England is safe, if true within itself? 40

Mont. But the safer when 'tis back'd with France.

Hast. 'Tis better using France than trusting France.

Let us be back'd with God and with the seas Which He hath given for fence impregnable,

And with their helps only defend ourselves. 45
In them and in ourselves our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech Lord Hastings well deserves

To have the heir of the Lord Hungerford.

K. Edw. Ay, what of that? It was my will and grant;
And for this once my will shall stand for law. ⁵⁰
Glou. And yet methinks your Grace hath not done well

To give the heir and daughter of Lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride.
She better would have fitted me or Clarence;
But in your bride you bury brotherhood. ⁵⁵

Clar. Or else you would not have bestow'd the heir
Of the Lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.

K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.

Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgement, ⁶¹

Which being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And to that end I shortly mind to leave you.

K. Edw. Leave me or tarry, Edward will be king, ⁶⁵

And not be tied unto his brother's will.

Q. Eliz. My lords, before it pleas'd his Majesty

To raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent; ⁷⁰
And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Doth cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.

K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns. ⁷⁵

What danger or what sorrow can befall thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands; ⁸⁰
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.

Glou. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more. ^[Aside.]

Enter a Post.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters or what news
From France? ⁸⁵

Post. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words,

But such as I, without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.

K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee; therefore, in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them. ⁹⁰

What answer makes King Lewis unto our letters?

Post. At my depart, these were his very words:

"Go tell false Edward, the supposed king,
That Lewis of France is sending over masquers
To revel it with him and his new bride." ⁹⁵

K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? Belike he thinks me Henry.

But what said Lady Bona to my marriage?

Post. These were her words, utt'red with mild disdain:

"Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,

I'll wear the willow garland for his sake." ¹⁰⁰
K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;

She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen?

For I have heard that she was there in place.

Post. "Tell him," quoth she, "my mourning weeds are done,

And I am ready to put armour on." ¹⁰⁵

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.

But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Post. He, more incens'd against your Majesty

Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these words: ¹⁰⁹

"Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere 't be long."

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?

Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd.
They shall have wars and pay for their presumption.

But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret? ¹¹⁵

Post. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,

That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;

That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage ¹²¹

I may not prove inferior to yourself.
You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.]

Glou. [Aside.] Not I;
My thoughts aim at a further matter. I ¹²⁵

Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!

Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case.

Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf ¹³⁰
Go levy men, and make prepare for war;
They are already, or quickly will be landed.

Myself in person will straight follow you.
[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.]

But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague, ¹³⁴

Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance.

Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him;

I rather wish you foes than hollow friends.
But if you mind to hold your true obedience, ¹⁴⁰

Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us? ¹⁴⁵

Glou. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.

Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. A plain in Warwickshire.]

Enter WARWICK and OXFORD, with French soldiers.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;

The common people by numbers swarm to us.

Enter CLARENCE and SOMERSET.

But see where Somerset and Clarence comes!
Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my lord. ⁵

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick,

And welcome, Somerset! I hold it cowardice
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;
Else might I think that Clarence, Edward's brother, ¹⁰

Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings.
But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.

And now what rests but, in night's coverture,
Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about, ¹⁵
And but attended by a simple guard,
We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?

Our scouts have found the adventure very easy,
That as Ulysses and stout Diomed
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents ²⁰

And brought from thence the Thracian fatal
steeds,

So we, well cover'd with the night's black mantle,

At unawares may beat down Edward's guard
And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him,
For I intend but only to surprise him. ²⁵

You that will follow me to this attempt,
Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.

[They all cry, "Henry!"]

Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort.
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George! ^[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Edward's camp, near Warwick.]

Enter three WATCHMEN, to guard the King's tent.

1. Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand.

The King by this is set him down to sleep.

2. Watch. What, will he not to bed?

1. Watch. Why, no; for he hath made a solemn vow

Never to lie and take his natural rest ⁵
Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress'd.

2. Watch. To-morrow then belike shall be
the day,

If Warwick be so near as men report.

3. Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that

That with the King here resteth in his tent? ¹⁰

1. Watch. 'Tis the Lord Hastings, the King's chiefest friend.

3. Watch. O, is it so? But why commands
the King

That his chief followers lodge in towns about
him,

While he himself keeps in the cold field?

2. Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous. ¹⁵

3. Watch. Ay, but give me worship and quietness;

I like it better than a dangerous honour.

If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,

'Tis to be doubted he would waken him.

1. Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage. ²⁰

2. Watch. Ay, wherefore else guard we his royal tent

But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter WARWICK, CLARENCE, OXFORD, SOMERSET, and French soldiers, silent all.

War. This is his tent; and see where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters! honour now or never!

But follow me, and Edward shall be ours. ²⁵

1. Watch. Who goes there?

2. Watch. Stay, or thou diest!

[Warwick and the rest cry all,

"Warwick! Warwick!" and set upon the Guard, who fly, crying, "Arm! arm!"

Warwick and the rest following them.

The drum playing and trumpet sounding, re-enter

WARWICK, SOMERSET, and the rest, bringing the KING out in his gown, sitting in a chair.

Richard and Hastings fly over the stage.

Som. What are they that fly there?

War. Richard and Hastings. Let them go; here is

The Duke.

K. Edw. The Duke! Why, Warwick, when we parted, ³⁰

Thou call'dst me king.

War. Ay, but the case is alter'd.

When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,

Then I degraded you from being king,

And come now to create you Duke of York.

Alas! how should you govern any kingdom, ³⁵

That know not how to use ambassadors,

Nor how to be contented with one wife,

Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,

Nor how to study for the people's welfare,

Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies? ⁴⁰

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?

Nay, then I see that Edward needs must down.

Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,

Of thee thyself and all thy complices,

Edward will always bear himself as king. 45
Though Fortune's malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind, be Edward England's king: [Takes off his crown.]

But Henry now shall wear the English crown
And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow.
My Lord of Somerset, at my request, 51
See that forthwith Duke Edward be convey'd Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.
When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,

I'll follow you, and tell what answer 55
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.
Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York.

[They lead him out forcibly.]

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;

It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit guarded.]

Oxf. What now remains, my lords, for us to do 60

But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do;

To free King Henry from imprisonment
And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. London. The palace.]

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and RIVERS.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?

Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn

What late misfortune is befallen King Edward?

Riv. What! loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?

Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person. 5

Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?

Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner,

Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard
Or by his foe surpris'd at unawares;

And, as I further have to understand, 10
Is new committed to the Bishop of York,
Fell Warwick's brother and by that our foe.

Riv. These news I must confess are full of grief;

Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may.

Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day. 15

Q. Eliz. Till then fair hope must hinder life's decay;

And I the rather wean me from despair

For love of Edward's offspring in my womb.

This is it that makes me bridle passion

And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;

Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear 21

And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,

Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.

Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become? 25

Q. Eliz. I am inform'd that he comes towards London

To set the crown once more on Henry's head.
Guess thou the rest; King Edward's friends must down,

But, to prevent the tyrant's violence, —
For trust not him that hath once broken faith, — 35

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward's right;
There shall I rest secure from force and fraud.
Come, therefore, let us fly while we may fly; 35
If Warwick take us we are sure to die.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. A park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.]

Enter GLOUCESTER, LORD HASTINGS, and SIR WILLIAM STANLEY.

Glou. Now, my Lord Hastings and Sir William Stanley,

Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither
Into this chiefest thicket of the park.

Thus stands the case: you know our king, my brother,

Is prisoner to the Bishop here, at whose hands 5
He hath good usage and great liberty;

And, often but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.

I have advertis'd him by secret means
That if about this hour he make this way 10

Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with horse and men

To set him free from his captivity.

Enter KING EDWARD and a HUNTSMAN with him.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man; see where the huntsmen stand. 15

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,

Stand you thus close, to steal the Bishop's deer?

Glou. Brother, the time and case requireth haste.

Your horse stands ready at the park-corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast. To Lynn, my lord,
And, shipp'd from thence, to Flanders. 21

Glou. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.

Glou. But wherefore stay we? 'Tis no time to talk.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? Wilt thou go along? 25

Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.

Glou. Come then, away; let's ha' no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell! Shield thee from Warwick's frown,

And pray that I may repossess the crown. 35

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. London. The Tower.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, CLARENCE, WARWICK, SOMERSET, young RICHMOND, OXFORD, MONTAGUE, and LIEUTENANT of the Tower.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees? ⁵
Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your Majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? For well using me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness, ¹⁰

For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive when, after many moody thoughts,
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty. ¹⁵

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee.

He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer Fortune's spite

By living low, where Fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land ²¹

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds. ²⁵

War. Your Grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying and avoiding Fortune's malice,
For few men rightly temper with the stars.

Yet in this one thing let me blame you Grace,
For choosing me when Clarence is in place. ³¹

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,

To whom the heavens in thy nativity
Adjug'd an olive branch and laurel crown,

As likely to be blest in peace and war; ³⁵
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for Protector.

K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands.

Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,

That no dissension hinder government. ⁴⁰
I make you both Protectors of this land,

While I myself will lead a private life
And in devotion spend my latter days,

To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.
War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will? ⁴⁵

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why, then, though loath, yet must I be content.

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place; ⁵⁰
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his ease.
And, Clarence, now then it is more than needful

Forthwith that Edward be pronounc'd a traitor,

And all his lands and goods be confiscate. ⁵⁵
Clar. What else? and that succession be determined.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, for I command no more, ⁵⁹
That Margaret your queen and my son Edward

Be sent for, to return from France with speed;
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear

My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that, ⁶⁵

Of whom you seem to have so tender care?
Som. My liege, it is young Henry, Earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope.
(Lays his hand on his head.) If secret powers

Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss.

His looks are full of peaceful majesty, ⁷¹
His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,

His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself
Likely in time to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords, for this is he ⁷⁵
Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.

War. What news, my friend?

Post. That Edward is escaped from your brother,

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsavoury news! but how made he escape? ⁸⁰

Post. He was convey'd by Richard Duke of Gloucester

And the Lord Hastings, who attended him
In secret ambush on the forest side

And from the Bishop's huntsmen rescu'd him;
For hunting was his daily exercise. ⁸⁵

War. My brother was too careless of his charge.

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exeunt all but Somerset, Richmond, and Oxford.]

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's;

For doubtless Burgundy will yield him help, ⁹⁰
And we shall have more wars before 't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy
Did glad my heart with hope of this young

Richmond,
So doth my heart misgive me, in these conflicts
What may befall him to his harm and ours. ⁹⁵

Therefore, Lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,
Forthwith we'll send him hence to Brittany,
Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay, for if Edward repossess the crown,
'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall down. ¹⁰⁰

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Brittany.
Come, therefore, let's about it speedily. ^[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VII. Before York.]

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER,
HASTINGS, and Soldiers.

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Yet thus far Fortune maketh us amends,
And says that once more I shall interchange
My waned state for Henry's regal crown.
Well have we pass'd and now repass'd the seas [■]

And brought desired help from Burgundy.
What then remains, we being thus arriv'd
From Ravenspurgh haven before the gates of York,

But that we enter, as into our dukedom?

Glow. The gates made fast! Brother, I like not this; ¹⁰

For many men that stumble at the threshold
Are well foretold that danger lurks within.

K. Edw. Tush, man, abodements must not now affright us.

By fair or foul means we must enter in,
For hither will our friends repair to us. ¹⁵

Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the walls, the MAYOR of York, and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming,

And shut the gates for safety of ourselves,
For now we owe allegiance unto Henry.

K. Edw. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king, ²⁰

Yet Edward at the least is Duke of York.

May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less.

K. Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom,

As being well content with that alone.

Glow. [Aside.] But when the fox hath once got in his nose, ²⁵

He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt?

Open the gates; we are King Henry's friends.

May. Ay, say you so? The gates shall then be opened. ^[They descend.]

Glow. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded! ³⁰

Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well,

So 't were not long of him; but being ent'red,
I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade
Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Enter the MAYOR and two Aldermen, below.

K. Edw. So, master mayor; these gates must not be shut ³⁵

But in the night or in the time of war.

What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; ^[Takes his keys.]

For Edward will defend the town and thee,
And all those friends that deign to follow me.

March. Enter MONTGOMERY, with drum and SOLDIERS.

Glow. Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery,
Out trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd. ⁴¹

K. Edw. Welcome, Sir John! But why come you in arms?

Mont. To help King Edward in his time of storm,

As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edw. Thanks, good Montgomery; but we now forget ⁴⁵

Our title to the crown and only claim

Our dukedom till God please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence
again;

I came to serve a king and not a duke.

Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. ⁵⁰
^[The drum begins to march.]

K. Edw. Nay, stay, Sir John, a while, and we'll debate

By what safe means the crown may be re-
cover'd.

Mont. What talk you of debating? In few
words,

If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king,
I'll leave you to your fortune and be gone. ⁵⁵

To keep them back that come to succour you.
Why shall we fight, if you pretend no title?

Glow. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Edw. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim.

Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning. ⁶⁰

Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! Now arms must rule.

Glow. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns.

Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand;

The bruit thereof will bring you many friends.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right, ⁶⁵

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaim'd.

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation. ^{[Giving him a paper.] Flourish. 70}

Sold. [Reads.] "Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland," etc.

Mont. And whoso'er gainsays King Edward's right,

By this I challenge him to single fight. ⁷⁵
^[Throws down his gauntlet.]

All. Long live Edward the Fourth!

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery, and thanks unto you all.

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness. Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York;

And when the morning sun shall raise his ear⁸⁰ Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates;

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.

Ah, froward Clarence! how evil it beseems thee,

To flatter Henry and forsake thy brother!⁸⁵

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers! doubt not of the day, And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VIII. London. The palace.]

Flourish. Enter KING HENRY, WARWICK, MONTAGUE, CLARENCE, [EXETER,] and OXFORD.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia,

With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders, Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas, And with his troops doth march amain to London;

And many giddy people flock to him.⁵

K. Hen. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out, Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;¹⁰ Those will I muster up; and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk, and in Kent, The knights and gentlemen to come with thee.

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham, Northampton, and in Leicestershire, shalt find¹⁵

Men well inclin'd to hear what thou command'st;

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well beloved,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends. My sovereign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girt in with the ocean,²⁰ Or, modest Dian, circled with her nymphs,

Shall rest in London till we come to him. Fair lords, take leave and stand not to reply.

Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.²⁵

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your Highness' hand.

K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!

Mont. Comfort, my lord! and so I take my leave.

Oxf. And thus [kissing Henry's hand] I seal my truth, and bid adieu.

K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,³⁰

And all at once, once more a happy farewell.

War. Farewell, sweet lords! Let's meet at Coventry.

[Exeunt [all but King Henry and Exeter].]

K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest a while.

Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship? Methinks the power that Edward hath in field³⁵

Should not be able to encounter mine.

Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.

K. Hen. That's not my fear; my meed hath got me fame.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands, Nor posted off their suits with slow delays.⁴⁰

My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds, My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,

My mercy dried their water-flowing tears. I have not been desirous of their wealth,

Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies, Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd.⁴⁵ Then why should they love Edward more than me?

No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace; And when the lion fawns upon the lamb,

The lamb will never cease to follow him.⁵⁰

[Shout within, "A Lancaster! A Lancaster!"]

Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter KING EDWARD, [GLOUCESTER,] and soldiers.

K. Edw. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear him hence;

And once again proclaim us King of England. You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow;

Now stops thy spring, my sea shall suck them dry,⁵⁵

And swell so much the higher by their ebb. Hence with him to the Tower, let him not speak. [Exeunt some with King Henry.]

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,

Where peremptory Warwick now remains. The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,⁶⁰

Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.

Glou. Away betimes, before his forces join, And take the great-grown traitor unawares.

Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.
[Exeunt.]

[ACT V]

[SCENE I. Coventry.]

Enter WARWICK, the MAYOR of Coventry, two MESSENGERS, and others upon the walls.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?

How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?

[1.] Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague? Where is the post that came from Montague? ⁵

[2.] Mess. By this at Daintry with a puissant troop.

Enter SIR JOHN SOMERVILLE.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?

And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?

Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,

And do expect him here some two hours hence. [Drum heard.]

War. Then Clarence is at hand; I hear his drum. 11

Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies.

The drum your honour hears marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? Belike unlook'd-for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know. 15

March. Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, and soldiers.

K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

Glou. See how the surly Warwick mans the wall!

War. O unbid spite! is sportful Edward come?

Where slept our scouts, or how are they seduc'd That we could hear no news of his repair? 20

K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou ope the city gates,

Speak gentle words and humbly bend thy knee, Call Edward king, and at his hands beg mercy, And he shall pardon thee these outrages.

War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy forces hence, 25

Confess who set thee up and pluck'd thee down, Call Warwick patron, and be penitent,

And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York.

Glou. I thought, at least, he would have said the King;

Or did he make the jest against his will? 30

War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly gift?

Glou. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to give.

I'll do thee service for so good a gift.

War. 'T was I that gave the kingdom to thy brother.

K. Edw. Why then 't is mine, if but by Warwick's gift. 35

War. Thou art no Atlas for so great a weight;

And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again, And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.

K. Edw. But Warwick's king is Edward's prisoner.

And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this: 40
What is the body when the head is off?

Glou. Alas, that Warwick had no more forecast,

But, whiles he thought to steal the single ten, The king was slyly finger'd from the deck!

You left poor Henry at the Bishop's palace, ⁴⁵
And, ten to one, you'll meet him in the Tower.

K. Edw. 'T is even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Glou. Come, Warwick, take the time; kneel down, kneel down.

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow, 50

And with the other fling it at thy face, Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

K. Edw. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend,

This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, 54

Shall, whiles thy head is warm and new cut off, Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood:

"Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more."

Enter OXFORD, with drum and colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes!

Oxf. Oxford, Oxford, for Lancaster! [He and his forces enter the city.]

Glou. The gates are open, let us enter too. 58

K. Edw. So other foes may set upon our backs.

Stand we in good array; for they no doubt Will issue out again and bid us battle.

If not, the city being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same. 65

War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter MONTAGUE, with drum and colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster! [He and his forces enter the city.]

Glou. Thou and thy brother both shall buy this treason

Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edw. The harder match'd, the greater victory. 70

My mind presageth happy gain and conquest.

Enter SOMERSET, with drum and colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster! [He and his forces enter the city.]

Glou. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset,

Have sold their lives unto the house of York; 74
And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter CLARENCE, with drum and colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along,

Of force enough to bid his brother battle; With whom an upright zeal to right prevails

More than the nature of a brother's love! Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick call. 80

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means?

[Taking his red rose out of his helmet.]

Look here, I throw my infamy at thee.
I will not ruinate my father's house,
Who gave his blood to lime the stones together,
And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou,
Warwick,

That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural,
To bend the fatal instruments of war
Against his brother and his lawful king?
Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath.
To keep that oath were more impiety
Than Jephthah's when he sacrific'd his daughter.

I am so sorry for my trespass made
That, to deserve well at my brother's hands,
I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe,
With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee —
As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad —
To plague thee for thy foul misleading me.
And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee,
And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks.
Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends;
And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults,
For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more below'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.
Glou. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjurd and unjust!
K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?
War. Alas, I am not coop'd here for defence!

I will away towards Barnet presently,
And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way.

Lords, to the field! Saint George and victory!
[Exeunt [King Edward and his company]. March. Warwick and his company follow.]

[SCENE II. A field of battle near Barnet.]

Alarum and excursions. Enter KING EDWARD, bringing forth WARWICK wounded.

K. Edw. So, lie thou there. Die thou, and die our fear;

For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.
Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee,
That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.

War. Ah, who is nigh? Come to me, friend or foe,

And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick?

Why ask I that? My mangled body shows,
My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows

That I must yield my body to the earth
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.
Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge,
Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle,
Under whose shade the ramping lion slept,
Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree

And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind.

These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's
black veil,

Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun
To search the secret treasons of the world.
The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with
blood,

Were lik'ned oft to kingly sepulchres;
For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave?
And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow?

Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood!
My parks, my walks, my manors that I had,
Even now forsake me, and of all my lands
Is nothing left me but my body's length.

Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?

And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter OXFORD and SOMERSET.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are,

We might recover all our loss again.
The Queen from France hath brought a puissant power;

Even now we heard the news. Ah, couldst thou
fly!

War. Why, then I would not fly. Ah, Montague,

If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul a while!
Thou lov'st me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood
That glues my lips and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague hath breath'd his last;

And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick.
And said, "Commend me to my valiant
brother."

And more he would have said, and more he spoke,

Which sounded like a clamour in a vault,
That might not be distinguish'd; but at last
I well might hear, delivered with a groan,
"O, farewell, Warwick!"

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves;

For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the Queen's great
power!

[Here they bear away his body.
Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Another part of the field.]

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD in triumph; with GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,

And we are grac'd with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threat'ning cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easeful western bed.

I mean, my lords, those powers that the Queen
Hath rais'd in Gallia have arriv'd our coast
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud

And blow it to the source from whence it came.
The very beams will dry those vapours up,
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glow. The Queen is valued thirty thousand strong,

And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her.
If she have time to breathe, be well assur'd
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertis'd by our loving friends

That they do hold their course toward Tewks-
bury.

We, having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingness rids way;
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented

In every county as we go along.
Strike up the drum! Cry, "Courage!" and away.

[SCENE IV. Plains near Tewksbury.]

March. Enter QUEEN MARGARET, PRINCE
EDWARD, SOMERSET, OXFORD, and soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wait their loss,

But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard,
The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?
Yet lives our pilot still. Is't meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad
With tearful eyes add water to the sea
And give more strength to that which hath too
much,

Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have sav'd?
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!
Say Warwick was our anchor; what of that?
And Montague our topmast; what of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; what of these?

Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goodly mast?
The friends of France our shrouds and tackles?

And, though unskilful, why not Ned and I
For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
We will not from the helm to sit and weep,
But keep our course, though the rough wind
say no,

From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.
And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?

All these the enemies to our poor bark.
Say you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while!
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly sink.

Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you off,

Or else you famish; that's a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
If case some one of you would fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers

More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks.

Why, courage then! What cannot be avoided
'T were childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valiant
spirit

Should, if a coward heard her speak these
words,

Infuse his breast with magnanimity
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.

I speak not this as doubting any here;
For did I but suspect a fearful man,

He should have leave to go away betimes,
Lest in our need he might infect another

And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here—as God forbid!—

Let him depart before we need his help.
Oxf. Women and children of so high a cour-
age,

And warriors faint! Why, 'twere perpetual
shame.

O brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee. Long may'st thou live
To bear his image and renew his glories!

Som. And he that will not fight for such a hope

Go home to bed, and like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wond'ered at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset; sweet
Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at
hand,

Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.
Oxf. I thought no less. It is his policy

To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.
Som. But he's deceiv'd; we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.

Oxf. Here pitch our battle; hence we will not budge.

Flourish and march. Enter KING EDWARD,
GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, and soldiers.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,

Which, by the heavens' assistance and your
strength,

Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
I need not add more fuel to your fire,

For well I wot ye blaze to burn them out.
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords!

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen,
what I should say

My tears gainsay; for, every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of my eye.

Therefore, no more but this: Henry, your sovereign

Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,

His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
You fight in justice; then, in God's name, lords, ⁸¹
Be valiant and give signal to the fight.

[Alarum. Retreat. Excursions.
Exeunt.

[SCENE V. Another part of the field.]

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD, GLOUCESTER, CLARENCE, [and soldiers; with] QUEEN MARGARET, OXFORD, and SOMERSET [prisoners].

K. Edw. Now here a period of tumultuous broils.

Away with Oxford to Hames Castle straight;
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.
Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Oxf. For my part, I'll not trouble thee with words. ⁵

Som. Nor I, but stoop with patience to my fortune.

[Exeunt [Oxford and Somerset, guarded].

Q. Mar. So part we sadly in this troublous world.

To meet with joy in sweet Jerusalem.

K. Edw. Is proclamation made, that who finds Edward

Shall have a high reward, and he his life? ¹⁰

Glou. It is; and lo, where youthful Edward comes!

Enter [soldiers, with] PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What! can so young a thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects, ¹⁵

And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?

Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth;
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,

Whilst I propose the self-same words to thee, ²⁰

Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.

Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolv'd!

Glou. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
And ne'er have stolen the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Æsop fable in a winter's night; ²⁵

His currish riddles sorts not with this place.

Glou. By heaven, brat, I'll plague ye for that word.

Q. Mar. Ay, thou wast born to be a plague to men.

Glou. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather. ³⁰

K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue.

Clar. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all undutiful.

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjurd George,
And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all ³⁵

I am your better, traitors as ye are;
And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.

K. Edw. Take that, thou likeness of this railer here. ^[Stabs him.]

Glou. Sprawl'st thou? Take that, to end thy agony. ^[Stabs him.]

Clar. And there's for twitting me with perjury. ^[Stabs him.] ⁴⁰

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glou. Marry, and shall. ^[Offers to kill her.]

K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold; for we have done too much.

Glou. Why should she live, to fill the world with words?

K. Edw. What, doth she swoon? Use means for her recovery. ⁴⁵

Glou. Clarence, excuse me to the King my brother;

I'll hence to London on a serious matter.

Ere ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clar. What? what?

Glou. The Tower, the Tower. ^[Exit.] ⁵⁰

Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers!

They that stabb'd Cæsar shed no blood at all,

Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,
If this foul deed were by to equal it. ⁵⁵

He was a man; this, in respect, a child,
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.

What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?

No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak;
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst. ⁶⁰

Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals!

How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!
You have no children, butchers! if you had,

The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse;

But if you ever chance to have a child, ⁶⁵
Look in his youth to have him so cut off

As, deathmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!

K. Edw. Away with her! Go, bear her hence perforce.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here;

Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death. ⁷⁰

What, wilt thou not? Then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself; 75

'T was sin before, but now 't is charity.

What, wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher, Richard,

Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?

Thou art not here. Murder is thy alms-deed; Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back. 80

K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her hence.

Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince! [Exit [led out forcibly].]

K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?

Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,

To make a bloody supper in the Tower. 85

K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.

Now march we hence. Discharge the common sort

With pay and thanks, and let's away to London

And see our gentle queen how well she fares. By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. 90

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. London. The Tower.]

Enter KING HENRY and GLOUCESTER, with the Lieutenant, on the walls.

Glou. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather.

'T is sin to flatter; "good" was little better. "Good Gloucester" and "good devil" were alike,

And both preposterous; therefore, not "good lord." 5

Glou. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves. We must confer. [Exit Lieutenant.]

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;

So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.

What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glou. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind. 11

The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush,

With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush; And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird, 15

Have now the fatal object in my eye Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and kill'd.

Glou. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,

That taught his son the office of a fowl! And yet, for all his wings, the fool was drown'd. 20

K. Hen. I, Dædalus; my poor boy, Icarus; Thy father, Minos, that deni'd our course;

The sun that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,

Thy brother Edward; and thyself, the sea Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life. 25 Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words! My breast can better brook thy dagger's point Than can my ears that tragic history. But wherefore dost thou come? Is 't for my life?

Glou. Think'st thou I am an executioner? 30

K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art. If murdering innocents be executing,

Why, then thou art an executioner.

Glou. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption.

K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when first thou didst presume, 35

Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.

And thus I prophesy, that many a thousand, Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear,

And many an old man's sigh and many a widow's,

And many an orphan's water-standing eye— 40 Men for their sons, wives for their husbands,

And orphans for their parents' timeless death— Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.

The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign; The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time; 45

Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook down trees;

The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top, And chattering pies in dismal discords sung.

Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain, And yet brought forth less than a mother's 50

hope,

To wit, an indigested and deformed lump, Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.

Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou wast born,

To signify thou cam'st to bite the world; And, if the rest be true which I have heard, 55

Thou cam'st— Glou. I'll hear no more; die, prophet, in thy speech. [Stabs him.]

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.

K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this.

O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee! 60

[Dies.]

Glou. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster

Sink in the ground? I thought it would have mounted.

See how my sword weeps for the poor king's death!

O, may such purple tears be alway shed From those that wish the downfall of our house! 65

If any spark of life be yet remaining, Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither, [Stabs him again.]

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear. Indeed, 't is true that Henry told me of;

For I have often heard my mother say 70 I came into the world with my legs forward.

Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste, And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?

The midwife wonder'd and the women cried, "O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!" 75

And so I was; which plainly signified

That I should snarl and bite and play the dog.

Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,

Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother; ⁸⁰
And this word "love," which greybeards-eall divine,

Be resident in men like one another

And not in me. I am myself alone.

Clarence, beware! Thou keep'st me from the light,

But I will sort a pitchy day for thee; ⁸⁵

For I will buzz abroad such prophecies

That Edward shall be fearful of his life,

And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.

King Henry and the Prince his son are gone.

Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest, ⁹⁰

Counting myself but bad till I be best.

I'll throw thy body in another room

And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.

[Exit [with the body].]

[SCENE VII. London. The palace.]

Flourish. KING EDWARD, [upon the throne];
QUEEN ELIZABETH, CLARENCE, GLOUCESTER,
HASTINGS, a Nurse [with the young Prince,] and Attendants.

K. Edw. Once more we sit in England's royal throne,

Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.

What valiant foemen, like to autumn's corn,

Have we mow'd down in tops of all their pride!

Three Dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd ⁵

For hardy and undoubted champions;

Two Cliffords, as the father and the son,

And two Northumberlands; two braver men

Ne'er spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound;

With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Montague, ¹⁰

That in their chains fetter'd the kingly lion

And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.

Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat

And made our footstool of security.

Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy. ¹⁵

Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself

Have in our armours watch'd the winter's

night,

Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,

That thou might'st repossess the crown in peace;

And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain. ²⁰

Glou. [Aside.] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid,

For yet I am not look'd on in the world.

This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;

And heave it shall some weight, or break my back.

Work thou the way, — and thou shalt execute.

K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen; ²⁵

And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty that I owe unto your Majesty I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

[Q. Eliz.] Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks. ³⁰

Glou. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.

[Aside.] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,

And cried, "All hail!" when as he meant all harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights, ³⁵

Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.

Clar. What will your Grace have done with Margaret?

Reignier, her father, to the King of France

Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,

And hither have they sent it for her ransom. ⁴⁰

K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.

And now what rests but that we spend the time

With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,

Such as befits the pleasure of the court?

Sound drums and trumpets! Farewell sour annoy! ⁴⁵

For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

[Exeunt.]

THE TRAGEDY OF RICHARD THE THIRD

THE only external evidence for the date of Richard III is the publication of the First Quarto in 1597. The marks of Shakespeare's early style, and especially of the influence of Marlowe, are, however, so pronounced as to have led to a general agreement that the play was composed some years before that date, probably about 1593.

The Quarto of 1597 was reprinted in 1598, with the name of Shakespeare on the title-page, but without further change. Other quartos appeared in 1602, 1605, 1612, 1622, 1629, and 1634, but all derive ultimately from the text of 1597. The version in the First Folio is independent, and differs widely in detail from the text of the Quartos. The question of the comparative authority of these texts is exceedingly complicated. Each contains passages essential to the context but lacking in the other. The Folio has besides many additions quite apposite and in the manner of Shakespeare, though the corresponding place in the Quartos shows no lacuna. The difficulty is thus to determine which goes back to the earlier original, and whether Shakespeare himself is responsible for the variations. Opinions still differ widely on these points, but are for the most part agreed that the Folio is to be regarded as the more authentic version; and it is, accordingly, made the basis of the present text. A striking peculiarity of the case is that the variations are too numerous to be plausibly accounted for as mistakes of copyist or printer, and are often so slight in their effect on meaning or rhythm that it is hard to believe them the result of conscious revision. They are very frequently such differences as might be explained by lapse of memory; and it is probable that in the First Quarto we have an exceptionally correct short-hand writer's report of the play, the variations being largely due to the slips of the actors.

The chief basis of the action is, as usual, Holinshed, who, in dealing with the events of Acts I, II, III, and part of IV, follows the history of the reigns of Edward V and Richard III ascribed to Sir Thomas More, as it had been transmitted in the Chronicles of Hardyng and Halle; and who, in the story corresponding to the rest of Act IV and to Act V, follows Halle. But before Shakespeare's there had been two, if not more, dramatic treatments of the theme. The Richardus Tertius of Dr. Legge is a Latin chronicle play written, perhaps as early as 1573, for performance at the University of Cambridge. The True Tragedie of Richard III is anonymous and of uncertain date, but was apparently a sequel to 3 Henry VI. Both of these contributed to the dramatic tradition of Richard, but whether they affected Shakespeare directly or through a lost intermediary remains to be proved. Details seem also to have been gathered from such narratives as those in The Mirror for Magistrates.

But it was the Chronicles of Holinshed or Halle which supplied almost all the episodes and the outlines of most of the characters, especially the men. These outlines, however, are in every case filled in by Shakespeare, whose imagination caught up and vitalized the merest hints of character. Most of the famous speeches are purely the invention of the dramatist. The opening soliloquy, the wooing of Anne, the two great cursing scenes in which Margaret of Anjou plays the chief part, the dream and the murder scene of Clarence, and the exchange of repartee between Gloucester and the little Duke of York, are all without foundation in Holinshed. Gloucester's hypocritical pre-occupation with holy exercises on the occasion of the visit of the Mayor and Buckingham with the offer of the crown, is based on the parenthetical phrase, "with a bishop on every hand of him." The substance and tone of the addresses of the rival leaders to their armies in v. iii. are suggested by the Chronicle.

The historical accuracy, in its main lines, of the portrait of Richard is still a matter of dispute among historians. But the falsification, if such there be, is only in a small degree due to Shakespeare; it had already occurred in the authorities from whom he drew the facts for which he supplied a plausible psychological explanation.

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. A street.]

Enter RICHARD, DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, solus.

Glou. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.

Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;

Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd War hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;

And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds ¹⁰
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber

To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass; ¹⁵
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's
majesty

To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time ²⁰
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me as I halt by them;
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace,

Have no delight to pass away the time, ²⁵
Unless to see my shadow in the sun
And descant on mine own deformity.

And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determin'd to prove a villain ³⁰

And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the King

In deadly hate the one against the other; ³⁵
And if King Edward be as true and just
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous,

This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up
About a prophecy, which says that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be. ⁴⁰

Dive, thoughts, down to my soul; here Clarence comes.

Enter CLARENCE, guarded, and BRAKENBURY.

Brother, good day. What means this armed guard

That waits upon your Grace?

Clar. His Majesty,
Tend'ring my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower. ⁴⁵

Glou. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is George.

Glou. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of
yours;

He should, for that, commit your godfathers.
O, belike his Majesty hath some intent

That you should be new christ'ned in the Tower.

But what's the matter, Clarence? May I know?

Clar. Yea, Richard, when I know, for I protest

As yet I do not; but, as I can learn, He hearkens after prophecies and dreams, And from the cross-row plucks the letter G, ⁵⁵ And says a wizard told him that by G His issue disinherited should be; And, for my name of George begins with G, It follows in his thought that I am he.

These, as I learn, and such like toys as these ⁶⁰ Have mov'd his Highness to commit me now.

Glou. Why, this it is, when men are rul'd by women,

'Tis not the King that sends you to the Tower; My Lady Grey his wife, Clarence, 't is she That tempts him to this harsh extremity. ⁶⁵ Was it not she and that good man of worship, Anthony Woodville, her brother there, That made him send Lord Hastings to the Tower,

From whence this present day he is delivered? We are not safe, Clarence; we are not safe. ⁷⁰

Clar. By heaven, I think there is no man secure

But the Queen's kindred, and night-walking heralds

That trudge betwixt the King and Mistress Shore.

Heard you not what an humble suppliant Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery? ⁷⁵

Glou. Humbly complaining to her deity Got my Lord Chamberlain his liberty.

I'll tell you what; I think it is our way, If we will keep in favour with the King,

To be her men and wear her livery. ⁸⁰

The jealous o'erworn widow and herself, Since that our brother dubb'd them gentle-

women,

Are mighty gossips in our monarchy.

Brak. I beseech your Graces both to pardon me;

His Majesty hath straitly given in charge ⁸⁵ That no man shall have private conference, Of what degree soever, with your brother.

Glou. Even so? An't please your worship, Brakenbury,

You may partake of anything we say. We speak no treason, man. We say the King

Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen ⁹¹ Well struck in years, fair, and not jealous;

We say that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot, A cherry lip, a bonny eye, a passing pleasing

tongue;

And that the Queen's kindred are made gentle- ⁹⁵ folks.

How say you, sir? Can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself have nought to do.

Glou. Naught to do with Mistress Shore! I tell thee, fellow,

He that doth naught with her, excepting one, Were best to do it secretly, alone. ¹⁰⁰

Brak. What one, my lord?

Glou. Her husband, knave. Wouldst thou betray me?

Brak. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, and withal

Forbear your conference with the noble Duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey. ¹⁰⁵

Glou. We are the Queen's abjects, and must obey.

Brother, farewell! I will unto the King; And whatsoe'er you will employ me in,

Were it to call King Edward's widow sister, I will perform it to enfranchise you. ¹¹⁰

Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glou. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long; I will deliver you, or else lie for you. ¹¹⁵

Meantime, have patience.

Clar. I must perforce. Farewell. [Exeunt Clarence [Brakenbury, and Guard].]

Glou. Go, tread the path that thou shalt ne'er return,

Simple, plain Clarence! I do love thee so, That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven,

If heaven will take the present at our hands. But who comes here? The new-delivered ¹²¹ Hastings?

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

Glou. As much unto my good Lord Chamberlain!

Well are you welcome to the open air. How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must; ¹²⁵

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glou. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his, ¹³⁰ And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagles should be mew'd,

Whiles kites and buzzards play at liberty.

Glou. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad as this at home. ¹³⁵

The King is sickly, weak, and melancholy, And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glou. Now, by Saint John, that news is bad indeed.

O, he hath kept an evil diet long, And overmuch consum'd his royal person. ¹⁴⁰

'T is very grievous to be thought upon. Where is he? In his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glou. Go you before, and I will follow you. [Exit Hastings.]

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die ¹⁴⁵ Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence

With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments ;
 And, if I fail not in my deep intent,
 Clarence hath not another day to live ; 150
 Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,
 And leave the world for me to bustle in !
 For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.
 What though I kill'd her husband and her father ?

The readiest way to make the wench amends
 Is to become her husband and her father ; 156
 The which will I ; not all so much for love
 As for another secret close intent,
 By marrying her which I must reach unto.
 But yet I run before my horse to market. 160
 Clarence still breathes ; Edward still lives and reigns ;
 When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.]

SCENE II. [The same. Another street.]

Enter the corpse of KING HENRY VI, [GENTLE-
 MEN] with halberds to guard it, [among them
 TRESSEL and BERKELEY ;] LADY ANNE being the mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,
 If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
 Whilst I a while obsequiously lament
 The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.

[The coffin is set down.]
 Poor key-cold figure of a holy king !
 Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster !
 Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood !
 Be it lawful that I invoke thy ghost
 To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
 Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, 10 Stabb'd by the self-same hand that made these wounds !

Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life,
 I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.
 O cursed be the hand that made these holes !
 Cursed the heart that had the heart to do
 it ! 15

Cursed the blood that let this blood from
 hence !

More direful hap betide that hated wretch
 That makes us wretched by the death of
 thee,

Than I can wish to wolves, to spiders, toads,
 Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives ! 20
 If ever he have child, abortive be it,
 Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
 Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
 May fright the hopeful mother at the view ;
 And that be heir to his unhappiness ! 25
 If ever he have wife, let her be made
 More miserable by the death of him
 Than I am made by my young lord and thee !
 Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy
 load,

Taken from Paul's to be interred there ; 30
 And still, as you are weary of this weight,
 Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corpse.
 [The bearers take up the coffin.]

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glou. Stay, you that bear the corpse, and set
 it down.

Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend

To stop devoted charitable deeds ? 35

Glou. Villains, set down the corpse ; or, by Saint Paul,

I'll make a corpse of him that disobeys.

Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin
 pass.

Glou. Unmanner'd dog ! stand thou, when I command.

Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40
 Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
 And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.
 [The coffin is set down again.]

Anne. What, do you tremble ? Are you all afraid ?

Alas, I blame you not, for you are mortal,
 And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil. 45
 Avaunt, thou dreadful minister of hell !
 Thou hadst but power over his mortal body,
 His soul thou canst not have ; therefore, be
 gone.

Glou. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curst.

Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence, and trouble us not ; 50

For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell,
 Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaims.
 If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
 Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.
 O, gentlemen, see, see ! dead Henry's wounds 55
 Open their congeal'd mouths and bleed afresh !
 Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity ;
 For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
 From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells.

Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, 60
 Provokes this deluge most unnatural.

O God, which this blood mad'st, revenge his
 death !

O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his
 death !

Either heaven with lightning strike the mur-derer dead,

Or earth gape open wide and eat him quick, 65
 As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood,
 Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered !

Glou. Lady, you know no rules of charity,
 Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses.

Anne. Villain, thou know'st nor law of God nor man. 70

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

Glou. But I know none, and therefore am no beast.

Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth !

Glou. More wonderful, when angels are so angry.

Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, 75
 Of these supposed crimes, to give me leave
 By circumstance but to acquit myself.

Anne. Vouchsafe, defus'd infection of a man,
 For these known evils, but to give me leave,
 By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. 80
Glou. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself.
Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make
 No excuse current but to hang thyself.
Glou. By such despair I should accuse myself. 85
Anne. And by despairing shalt thou stand excus'd
 For doing worthy vengeance on thyself,
 That didst unworthy slaughter upon others.
Glou. Say that I slew them not?
Anne. Then say they were not slain.
 But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee. 90
Glou. I did not kill your husband.
Anne. Why, then he is alive.
Glou. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hands.
Anne. In thy foul throat thou liest! Queen Margaret saw Thy murderous falchion smoking in his blood;
 The which thou once didst bend against her breast, 95
 But that thy brothers beat aside the point.
Glou. I was provoked by her slanderous tongue,
 That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders.
Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind,
 That never dreamst on aught but butcheries. 100
 Didst thou not kill this king?
Glou. I grant ye.
Anne. Dost grant me, hedgehog? Then, God grant me too
 Thou mayst be damned for that wicked deed!
 O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous!
Glou. The better for the King of heaven, that hath him. 105
Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come.
Glou. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither;
 For he was fitter for that place than earth.
Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell.
Glou. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it. 110
Anne. Some dungeon.
Glou. Your bed-chamber.
Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest!
Glou. So will it, madam; till I lie with you.
Anne. I hope so.
Glou. I know so. But, gentle Lady Anne,
 To leave this keen encounter of our wits 115
 And fall something into a slower method,
 Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
 Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
 As blameful as the executioner?

Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accurs'd effect. 120
Glou. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;
 Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep
 To undertake the death of all the world,
 So I might live one hour in your sweet bosom.
Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide, 125
 These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.
Glou. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck;
 You should not blemish it, if I stood by.
 As all the world is cheered by the sun,
 So I by that; it is my day, my life. 130
Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!
Glou. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.
Glou. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
 To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee. 135
Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
 To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.
Glou. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
 Did it to help thee to a better husband.
Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth. 140
Glou. He lives that loves thee better than he could.
Anne. Name him.
Glou. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why, that was he.
Glou. The self-same name, but one of better nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Glou. Here. (She spits at him.) Why dost thou spit at me? 145
Anne. Would it were mortal poison for thy sake!
Glou. Never came poison from so sweet a place.
Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.
 Out of my sight! Thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glou. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine. 150
Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!
Glou. I would they were, that I might die at once;
 For now they kill me with a living death.
 Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
 Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops. 155
 These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,
 No, when my father York and Edward wept
 To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made
 When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him;
 Nor when thy warlike father, like a child, 160
 Told the sad story of my father's death,
 And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,
 That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,

Like trees bedash'd with rain,—in that sad time

My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear; 165
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,

Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.

I never sued to friend nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words;

But, now thy beauty is propos'd my fee, 170
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak. [She looks scornfully at him.]

Teach not thy lip such scorn, for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.

If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive, 174
Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;

Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adoreth thee,

I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.

[He lays his breast open: she offers at it with his sword.]

Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry.
But 't was thy beauty that provoked me. 181

Nay, now dispatch; 't was I that stabb'd young Edward,

But 't was thy heavenly face that set me on.
[She falls the sword.]

Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler! Though I wish 185
thy death,

I will not be thy executioner.
Glou. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do 190
it.

Anne. I have already.
Glou. That was in thy rage.

Speak it again, and, even with the word,
This hand, which for thy love did kill thy 195
love,

Shall for thy love kill a far truer love;
To both their deaths shalt thou be accessary.

Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glou. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.

Anne. I fear me both are false. 200
Glou. Then never man was true.

Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glou. Say, then, my peace is made.

Anne. That shalt thou know hereafter.
Glou. But shall I live in hope? 205

Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
[Glou.] Vouchsafe to wear this ring.

[Anne. To take is not to give.]
[Puts on the ring.]

Glou. Look, how my ring encompasseth thy finger,

Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart. 208
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.

And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,

Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it? 210

Glou. That it may please you leave these sad designs

To him that hath most cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby House;

Where, after I have solemnly interr'd

At Chertsey monastery this noble king, 215
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,

I will with all expedient duty see you.
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,

Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys 220 me too,

To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.

Glou. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'T is more than you deserve;

But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already. 225

[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkeley.]

[Glou. Sirs, take up the corse.]
Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord?

Glou. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming. [Exeunt all but Gloucester.]

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?

I'll have her; but I will not keep her long. 230
What! I, that kill'd her husband and his father,

To take her in her heart's extremest hate,
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,

The bleeding witness of my hatred by;
Having God, her conscience, and these bars 235
against me,

And I no friends to back my suit withal
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,

And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!
Ha!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince, 240
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,

Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,

Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,

The spacious world cannot again afford. 245
And will she yet abase her eyes on me,

That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,

And made her widow to a woeful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?

On me, that halts and am misshapen thus? 250
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,

I do mistake my person all this while.
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,

Myself to be a marvellous proper man. 255
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,

And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body.

Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost. 260

But first I'll turn yon fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.

Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.]

SCENE III. [The palace.]

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, LORD RIVERS, and LORD GREY.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt his Majesty

Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes him worse;

Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good comfort,

And cheer his Grace with quick and merry eyes.

Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide on me?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord.

Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son

To be your comforter when he is gone.

Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young, and his minority is put unto the trust of Richard Gloucester,

A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded he shall be Protector?

Q. Eliz. It is determin'd, not concluded yet; But so it must be, if the King miscarry.

Enter BUCKINGHAM and DERBY.

Grey. Here comes the lords of Buckingham and Derby.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal Grace!

Der. God make your Majesty joyful as you have been!

Q. Eliz. The Countess Richmond, good my Lord of Derby,

To your good prayer will scarcely say amen. Yet, Derby, notwithstanding she's your wife,

And loves not me, be you, good lord, assur'd I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Der. I do beseech you, either not believe The envious slanders of her false accusers;

Or, if she be accus'd on true report, Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds

From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.

Q. Eliz. Saw you the King to-day, my Lord of Derby?

Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham and I

Are come from visiting his Majesty.

Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his Grace speaks cheerfully.

Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam. He desires to make atonement

Between the Duke of Gloucester and your brothers,

And between them and my Lord Chamberlain;

And sent to warn them to his royal presence.

Q. Eliz. Would all were well! but that will never be.

I fear our happiness is at the height.

Enter GLOUCESTER [HASTINGS, and DORSET].

Glou. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it.

Who is it that complains unto the King That I, forsooth, am stern and love them not?

By holy Paul, they love his Grace but lightly. That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours. Because I cannot flatter and look fair, Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog, Duck with French nods and apish courtesy, I must be held a rancorous enemy.

Cannot a plain man live and think no harm, But thus his simple truth must be abus'd

With silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To who in all this presence speaks your Grace?

Glou. To thee, that hast nor honesty nor grace.

When have I injur'd thee? When done thee wrong?

Or thee? or thee? or any of your faction? A plague upon you all! His royal Grace, —

Whom God preserve better than you would wish! —

Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while, But you must trouble him with lewd complaints.

Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloucester, you mistake the matter.

The King, on his own royal disposition, And not provok'd by any suitor else,

Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred, That in your outward action shows itself

Against my children, brothers, and myself, Makes him to send that he may learn the ground.

Glou. I cannot tell. The world is grown so bad

That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch.

Since every Jack became a gentleman, There's many a gentle person made a Jack.

Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloucester;

You envy my advancement and my friends' God grant we never may have need of you!

Glou. Meantime, God grants that I have need of you.

Our brother is imprison'd by your means, Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility

Held in contempt; while great promotions Are daily given to ennoble those

That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble.

Q. Eliz. By Him that rais'd me to this careful height

From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, I never did incense his Majesty

Against the Duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him.

My lord, you do me shameful injury, Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glou. You may deny that you were not the mean

Of my Lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord, for — Glou. She may, Lord Rivers! Why, who knows not so?

She may do more, sir, than denying that. She may help you to many fair preferments,

And then deny her aiding hand therein,

And lay those honours on your high desert.
What may she not? She may, ay, marry, may she, —

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glou. What, marry, may she! Marry with a king, 100

A bachelor, and a handsome stripling too.

I wis your grandam had a wouser match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne

Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs.
By heaven, I will acquaint his Majesty 108

Of those gross taunts that oft I have endur'd.

I had rather be a country servant-maid

Than a great queen, with this condition,

To be thus baited, scorn'd, and storm'd at.

Small joy have I in being England's Queen. 110

Enter old QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. And less'n'd be that small, God I beseech Him!

Thy honour, state, and seat is due to me.

Glou. What! threat you me with telling of the King?

[Tell him, and spare not. Look, what I have said]

I will avouch 't in presence of the King. 115

I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.

'T is time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.

Q. Mar. Out, devil! I do remember them too well:

Thou kill'dst my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury. 120

Glou. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king,

I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;

A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,

A liberal rewarder of his friends.

To royalize his blood I spent mine own. 125

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his or thine.

Glou. In all which time you and your husband Grey

Were factious for the house of Lancaster;

And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain? 130

Let me put in your minds, if you forget,

What you have been ere this, and what you are;

Withal, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art.

Glou. Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Warwick; 135

Ay, and forswore himself, — which Jesu pardon! —

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glou. To fight on Edward's party for the crown;

And for his meed, poor lord, he is mew'd up.

I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's; 140

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine.

I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world,

Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy days 145

Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our sovereign king.
So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glou. If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar.

Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof!

Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose 151

You should enjoy, were you this country's king,

As little joy you may suppose in me,

That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;

For I am she, and altogether joyless. 156

I can no longer hold me patient. [Advancing.]

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!

Which of you trembles not that looks on me? 160

Not that I am queen, you bow like subjects,

Yet that by you depos'd, you quake like rebels?

Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glou. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd; 165

That will I make before I let thee go.

Glou. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment

Than death can yield me here by my abode.

A husband and a son thou ow'st to me; 170

And thou a kingdom; all of you allegiance.

This sorrow that I have, by right is yours,

And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glou. The curse my noble father laid on thee,

When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper, 175

And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,

And then, to dry them, gav'st the Duke a clout Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rut-

land, —

His curses, then from bitterness of soul

Denounc'd against thee, are all fallen upon thee; 180

And God, not we, hath plagu'd thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 't was the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. 185

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all before I came,

Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me? 190

Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven

That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,

Their kingdom's loss, my woeful banishment,
Should all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?
Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick
curses! 196

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder to make him a king!
Edward thy son, that now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward our son, that was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence! 201
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's
death,

And see another, as I see thee now, 205
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine!

Long die thy happy days before thy death,
And, after many length'ned hours of grief,
Die neither mother, wife, nor England's Queen!
Rivers and Dorset, for me that was a queen,
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my son
Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God I pray
him,

That none of you may live his natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glou. Have done thy charm, thou hateful with'er'd hag! 215

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? Stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation 220
On thee, the troubler of the poor world's peace!
The worm of conscience still begnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv'st,

And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine, 225
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!

Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
Thou that wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell! 230
Thou slander of thy heavy mother's womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honour! thou detested —

Glou. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glou. Ha!

Q. Mar. I call thee not.

Glou. I cry thee mercy then, for I did think That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter
names. 235

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for no reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse!

Glou. 'Tis done by me, and ends in "Margaret."

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath'd your curse against yourself. 240

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottl'd spider,

Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thy-
self.

The day will come that thou shalt wish for
me 245

To help thee curse this poisonous bunch-back'd toad.

Hast. False-boding woman, end thy frantic curse.

Least to thy harm thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov'd mine.

Riv. Were you well serv'd, you would be taught your duty. 250

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,

Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects.

O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty!

Dor. Dispute not with her; she is lunatic.

Q. Mar. Peace, master marquess, you are malapert; 255

Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current.

O, that your young nobility could judge
What 't were to lose it, and be miserable!

They that stand high have many blasts to shake them;

And if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces. 260

Glou. Good counsel, marry; learn it, learn it, marquess.

Dor. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.

Glou. Ay, and much more; but I was born so high,

Our aery buildeth in the cedar's top,
And dallies with the wind and scorns the sun.

Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade; alas!
alas! 265

Witness my son, now in the shade of death,
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath

Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
Thy aery buildeth in our aery's nest. 270

O God, that seest it, do not suffer it!
As it is won with blood, lost be it so!

Buck. Peace, peace! for shame, if not for charity.

Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to
me.

Uncharitably with me have you dealt, 275
And shamefully my hopes by you are butcher'd.

My charity is outrage, life my shame;
And in that shame still live my sorrow's rage!

Buck. Have done, have done.

Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I'll kiss thy hand, 280

In sign of league and amity with thee.
Now fair befall thee and thy noble house!

Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never
pass 285

The lips of those that breathe them in the air.

Q. Mar. I will not think but they ascend the sky,

And there awake God's gentle-sleeping peace.
[Aside to Buck.] O Buckingham, take heed of yonder dog!

Look, when he fawns, he bites; and when he bites, — 290

His venom tooth will rankle to the death.
Have not to do with him, beware of him;
Sin, death, and hell have set their marks on
him,

And all their ministers attend on him.

Glou. What doth she say, my Lord of Buckingham? 295

Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious
lord.

Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel,

And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?

O, but remember this another day,

When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow,

And say poor Margaret was a prophetess! 301

Live each of you the subjects to his hate,

And he to yours, and all of you to God's!

[Exit.

Buck. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine. I muse why she's at liberty. 305

Glou. I cannot blame her. By God's holy mother,

She hath had too much wrong; and I repent

My part thereof that I have done to her,

Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.

Glou. Yet you have all the vantage of her
wrong. 310

I was too hot to do somebody good,

That is too cold in thinking of it now.

Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;

He is frank'd up to fattening for his pains.

God pardon them that are the cause thereof! 315

Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done scath to us.

Glou. So do I ever, being well advis'd.

[Speaks to himself.

For had I curs'd now, I had curs'd myself.

Enter CATESBY.

Cates. Madam, his Majesty doth call for
you; 320

And for your Grace; and yours, my noble lord.

Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come. Lords, will you go with me?

Riv. We wait upon your Grace.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.

Glou. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.

The secret mischiefs that I set abroad 325
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.

Clarence, who I, indeed, have cast in darkness,
I do bewep to many simple gulls,

Namely, to Derby, Hastings, Buckingham;

And tell them 't is the Queen and her allies 330
That stir the King against the Duke my brother.

Now, they believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Dorset, Grey.

But then I sigh; and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil; 335
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With odd old ends stolen forth of holy writ,
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two MURDERERS.

But, soft! here come my executioners.

How now, my hardy, stout, resolved mates! 340

Are you now going to dispatch this thing?

1. Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,

That we may be admitted where he is.

Glou. Well thought upon; I have it here about me. [Gives the warrant.] 345

When you have done, repair to Crosby Place. 345

But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,

Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;

For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps

May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

1. Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate. 350

Talkers are no good doers; be assur'd

We go to use our hands and not our tongues.

Glou. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools' eyes fall tears.

I like you, lads; about your business straight.

Go, go, dispatch.

1. Murd. We will, my noble lord. 355
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [London. The Tower.]

Enter CLARENCE and KEEPER.

Keep. Why looks your Grace so heavily to-
day?

Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,

So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,

That, as I am a Christian faithful man,

I would not spend another such a night, 5

Though 't were to buy a world of happy days,
So full of dismal terror was the time.

Keep. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methoughts that I had broken from the Tower,

And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy; 10

And, in my company, my brother Gloucester,
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk

Upon the hatches. There we look'd toward England,

And cited up a thousand heavy times,

During the wars of York and Lancaster 15

That had befallen us. As we pac'd along

Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,

Methought that Gloucester stumbled, and, in falling,

Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main. 20

O Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!

What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!

Methoughts I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
A thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon; 25

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,

All scatt'rd in the bottom of the sea.
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in the holes

Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept,
As 't were in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems, ⁵¹
That wou'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatt'rd
by.

Keep. Had you such leisure in the time of
death

To gaze upon these secrets of the deep? ⁵⁵

Clar. Methought I had. And often did I strive

To yield the ghost; but still the envious flood
Stopp'd in my soul, and would not let it forth
To find the empty, vast, and wandering air;
But smother'd it within my panting bulk, ⁶⁰
Who almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Keep. Awak'd you not in this sore agony?

Clar. No, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life.

O, then began the tempest to my soul.

I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood, ⁶⁵
With that sour ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.

The first that there did greet my stranger soul
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;

Who spake aloud, "What scourge for perjury ⁷⁰
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?"

And so he vanish'd. Then came wand'ring by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabb'd in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,
"Clarence is come; false, fleeting, perjur'd
Clarence, ⁷⁵

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury.
Seize on him, Furies, take him unto torment!"
With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that with the very noise ⁸⁰
I trembling wak'd, and for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Keep. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted
you;

I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it. ⁸⁵

Clar. Ah! Keeper, Keeper, I have done
these things

That now give evidence against my soul
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites
me!

O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds, ⁹⁰
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone!
O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor children!

Keeper, I prithee, sit by me a while.

My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Keep. I will, my lord. God give your Grace good rest! [Clarence sleeps.] ⁹⁵

Enter BRAKENBURY, the Lieutenant.

Brak. Sorrow breaks seasons and reposing
hours,

Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide
night.

Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations, ⁹⁹
They often feel a world of restless cares,
So that, between their titles and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two MURDERERS.

1. Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. What wouldst thou, fellow, and how cam'st thou hither? ¹⁰⁵

2. Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. What, so brief?

1. Murd. 'Tis better, sir, than to be tedious.
Let him see our commission, and talk no more. [Brakenbury reads it.] ¹¹¹

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble Duke of Clarence to your hands.
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless from the meaning. ¹¹⁵
There lies the Duke asleep, and there the keys.
I'll to the King, and signify to him
That thus I have resign'd to you my charge.

[Exit (with Keeper)].

1. Murd. You may, sir, 'tis a point of wisdom. Fare you well. ¹²⁰

2. Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?

1. Murd. No; he'll say 't was done cowardly, when he wakes.

2. Murd. Why, he shall never wake until the great judgement-day. ¹²⁵

1. Murd. Why, then he'll say we stabb'd him sleeping.

2. Murd. The urging of that word "judgement" hath bred a kind of remorse in me. ¹³⁰

1. Murd. What, art thou afraid?

2. Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant; but to be damn'd for killing him, from the which no warrant can defend me.

1. Murd. I thought thou hadst been resolute. ¹³⁵

2. Murd. So I am, to let him live.

1. Murd. I'll back to the Duke of Gloucester and tell him so.

2. Murd. Nay, I prithee, stay a little. I hope this passionate humour of mine will change. It was wont to hold me but while one tells twenty. ¹⁴⁰

1. Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?

2. Murd. Some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.

1. Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.

2. Murd. 'Zounds, he dies! I had forgot the reward. ¹⁴⁵

1. Murd. Where's thy conscience now?

2. Murd. O, in the Duke of Gloucester's purse.

1. Murd. When he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

2. Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go. There's few or none will entertain it. ¹⁵⁰

1. Murd. What if it come to thee again?

2. Murd. I'll not meddle with it; [it is a dangerous thing:] it makes a man a coward.

A man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him; a man cannot lie with his neighbour's wife, but it detects him. 'Tis a blushing shamefac'd spirit that mutinies in a man's bosom. It fills a man full of obstacles. It made me once restore a purse of gold that by chance I found. It beggars any man that keeps it. It is turn'd out of towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man that means to live well endeavours to trust to himself and live without it. [Zounds,] 'tis even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the Duke.

[1.] Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not; he would insinuate with thee but to make thee sigh.

[2.] Murd. I am strong-fram'd, he cannot prevail with me.

[1.] Murd. Spoke like a tall man that respects thy reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?

[2.] Murd. Take him on the costard with the hilts of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt in the next room.

[1.] Murd. O excellent device! and make a sop of him.

[2.] Murd. Soft! He wakes.

[1.] Murd. Strike!

[2.] Murd. No, we'll reason with him.

Clar. Where art thou, Keeper? Give me a cup of wine.

[1.] Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

Clar. In God's name, what art thou?

[2.] Murd. A man, as you are.

Clar. But not, as I am, royal.

[2.] Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

[2.] Murd. My voice is now the King's, my looks mine own.

Clar. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak!

Your eyes do menace me. Why look you pale? Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

[2.] Murd. To, to, to—

Clar. To murder me?

Both. Ay, ay.

Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,

And therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?

[1.] Murd. Offended us you have not, but the King.

Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again.

[2.] Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

Clar. Are you drawn forth among a world of men

To slay the innocent? What is my offence?

Where is the evidence that doth accuse me?

What lawful quest have given their verdict up

Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounce

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?

Before I be convict by course of law,

To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

I charge you, as you hope [to have redemption

By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins.]

That you depart and lay no hands on me.

The deed you undertake is damnable.

[1.] Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.

[2.] Murd. And he that hath commanded is our King.

Clar. Erroneous vassals! the great King of kings

Hath in the table of his law commanded

That thou shalt do no murder. Will you, then, Spurn at His edict and fulfil a man's?

Take heed; for He holds vengeance in His hand,

To hurl upon their heads that break His law.

[2.] Murd. And that same vengeance doth He hurl on thee

For false forswearing and for murder too.

Thou didst receive the sacrament to fight

In quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

[1.] Murd. And, like a traitor to the name of God,

Didst break that vow; and with thy treacherous blade

Unripp'd'st the bowels of thy sovereign's son.

[2.] Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend.

[1.] Murd. How canst thou urge God's dreadful law to us,

When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?

Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?

For Edward, for my brother, for his sake.

He sends you not to murder me for this,

For in that sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be avenged for the deed,

O, know you yet, He doth it publicly.

Take not the quarrel from His powerful arm;

He needs no indirect or lawless course

To cut off those that have offended Him.

[1.] Murd. Who made thee, then, a bloody minister,

When gallant-springing brave Plantagenet,

That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

[1.] Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy faults

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. If you do love my brother, hate not me!

I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloucester,

Who shall reward you better for my life

Than Edward will for tidings of his death.

[2.] Murd. You are deceiv'd. Your brother Gloucester hates you.

Clar. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear.

Go you to him from me.

[1.] Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York

Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,

[And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,]

He little thought of this divided friendship.
 Bid Gloucester think on this, and he will weep.

1. Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep. 246

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1. Murd. Right; as snow in harvest.

Come, you deceive yourself;

'T is he that sends us to destroy you here. 250

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune

And hugg'd me in his arms, and swore with sobs

That he would labour my delivery.

1. Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you

From this earth's thralldom to the joys of heaven. 255

2. Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Have you that holy feeling in your souls,

To counsel me to make my peace with God,
 And are you yet to your own souls so blind,

That you will war with God by murd'ring me? 260

O, sirs, consider, they that set you on
 To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

2. Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1. Murd. Relent! No! 't is cowardly and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish. 265

Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
 Being pent from liberty, as I am now,

If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,

Would not entreat for life?

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks. 270

O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,
 Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,

As you would beg, were you in my distress.
 A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2. Murd. Look behind you, my lord. 275

1. Murd. Take that, and that. If all this will not do, [Stabs him.

I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within. [Exit [with the body].

2. Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd!

How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
 Of this most grievous murder! 280

Re-enter FIRST MURDERER.

1. Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not?

By heaven, the Duke shall know how slack you have been!

2. Murd. I would he knew that I had sav'd his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;
 For I repent me that the Duke is slain. 285

1. Murd. So do not I. Go, coward as thou art. [Exit.

Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole
 Till that the Duke give order for his burial;

And when I have my meed, I will away;
 For this will out, and then I must not stay. 290
 [Exit.

ACT II

SCENE I. [London. The palace.]

Flourish. Enter KING EDWARD sick, QUEEN ELIZABETH, DORSET, RIVERS, HASTINGS, BUCKINGHAM, WOODVILLE [GREY, and others].

K. Edw. Why, so: now have I done a good day's work.

You peers, continue this united league.

I every day expect an embassy

From my Redeemer to redeem me hence; 4

And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,

Since I have made my friends at peace on earth.

Hastings and Rivers, take each other's hand;

Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my soul is purg'd from grudging hate;

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!

K. Edw. Take heed you dally not before your king,

Lest He that is the supreme King of kings

Confound your hidden falsehood, and award

Either of you to be the other's end. 15

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!

K. Edw. Madam, your self is not exempt from this,

Nor you, son Dorset, Buckingham, nor you;
 You have been factious one against the other.

Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;

And what you do, do it unfeignedly. 21

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; I will never more remember

Our former hatred, so thrive I and mine!

K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; Hastings, love lord marquess. 25

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
 Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I. [They embrace.]

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league

With thy embracements to my wife's allies, 30

And make me happy in your unity.

Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate

Upon your Grace [to the Queen], but with all duteous love

Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me
 With hate in those where I expect most love!

When I have most need to employ a friend, 35

And most assured that he is a friend,

Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile

Be he unto me! This do I beg of Heaven,

When I am cold in love to you or yours. 40

[They embrace.]
K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,

Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.

There wanteth now our brother Gloucester here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.
Buck. And, in good time, 45
Here comes Sir Richard Ratcliff and the Duke.

Enter GLOUCESTER and RATCLIFF.

Glou. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen; 46
And, princely peers, a happy time of day!
K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day.

Gloucester, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate, 50
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glou. A blessed labour, my most sovereign lord,

Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise, 55
Hold me a foe;

If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace.

'Tis death to me to be at enmity; 60
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.
First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous service;

Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us; 65
Of you and you, Lord Rivers and of Dorset;
That all without desert have frown'd on me;
Of you, Lord Woodville, and, Lord Scales, of you;

Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
I do not know that Englishman alive
With whom my soul is any jot at odds 70
More than the infant that is born to-night.
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy day shall this be kept hereafter.

I would to God all strifes were well compounded.

My sovereign lord, I do beseech your High- 75
ness

To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glou. Why, madam, have I off'red love for this,

To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not that the gentle Duke is dead? 80
[They all start.]

You do him injury to scorn his corse.
K. Edw. Who knows not he is dead! Who knows he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing Heaven, what a world is this!

Buck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest?

Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence

But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks. 85
K. Edw. Is Clarence dead? The order was revers'd.

Glou. But he, poor man, by your first order died,

And that a winged Mercury did bear;

Some tardy cripple bare the countermand,
That came too lag to see him buried. 90
God grant that some, less noble and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, but not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter DERBY.

Der. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done! 95
[Kneels.]

K. Edw. I prithee, peace; my soul is full of sorrow.

Der. I will not rise, unless your Highness hear me.

K. Edw. Then say at once what is it thou requests.

Der. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant's life,

Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman 100
Lately attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.

K. Edw. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?

My brother kill'd no man; his fault was thought,

And yet his punishment was bitter death. 105
Who sued to me for him? Who, in my wrath,

Kneel'd at my feet, and bid me be advis'd?

Who spoke of brotherhood? Who spoke of love?

Who told me how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me? 110
Who told me, in the field at Tewksbury,

When Oxford had me down, he rescued me,
And said, "Dear brother, live, and be a king"?

Who told me, when we both lay in the field
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me 115
Even in his garments, and did give himself,

All thin and naked, to the numb cold night?

All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfully pluck'd, and not a man of you

Had so much grace to put it in my mind. 120
But when your carters or your waiting-vassals

Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,

You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;

And I, unjustly too, must grant it you. 125
[Derby rises.]

But for my brother not a man would speak,
Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself

For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all
Have been beholding to him in his life;

Yet none of you would once beg for his life. 130
O God, I fear thy justice will take hold

On me, and you, and mine, and yours for this!

Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. Ah, poor Clarence!

[Exeunt some with King and Queen.]

Glou. This is the fruit of rashness! Mark'd you not

How that the guilty kindred of the Queen 135
Look'd pale when they did hear of Clarence' death?

O, they did urge it still unto the King!

God will revenge it. Come, lords, will you go
To comfort Edward with our company.

Buck. We wait upon your Graces. 140

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The palace.]

Enter the old DUCHESS OF YORK, with the two CHILDREN of Clarence.

Boy. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Girl. Why do you weep so oft, and beat your breast,

And cry, "O Clarence, my unhappy son!"

Boy. Why do you look on us, and shake
your head, 5

And call us orphans, wretches, castaways,

If that our noble father were alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me
both.

I do lament the sickness of the King,
As loath to lose him, not your father's death;

It were lost sorrow to wail one that's lost. 11

Boy. Then you conclude, my grandam, he is dead.

The King mine uncle is to blame for it.

God will revenge it, whom I will importune

With earnest prayers all to that effect. 15

Girl. And so will I.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the King doth love you well.

Incapable and shallow innocents,

You cannot guess who caus'd your father's
death.

Boy. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle
Gloucester 20

Told me the King, provok'd to it by the Queen,
Devis'd impeachments to imprison him.

And when my uncle told me so, he wept,

And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;

Bade me rely on him as on my father, 25

And he would love me dearly as a child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shape,

And with a virtuous vizard hide deep vice!

He is my son, ay, and therein my shame;

Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit. 30

Boy. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.

Boy. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is
this?

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, with her hair about her ears; RIVERS and DORSET after her.

Q. Eliz. Ah, who shall hinder me to wail and weep,

To chide my fortune, and torment myself? 35

I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence.

Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead. 40

Why grow the branches when the root is gone?

Why wither not the leaves that want their sap?

If you will live, lament; if die, be brief,

That our swift-winged souls may catch the King's;

Or, like obedient subjects, follow him 45
To his new kingdom of ne'er-changing night.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow

As I had title in thy noble husband!

I have bewept a worthy husband's death,

And liv'd with looking on his images; 50

But now two mirrors of his princely semblance

Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,

And I for comfort have but one false glass,

That grieves me when I see my shame in him.

Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother, 55

And hast the comfort of thy children left:

But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms,

And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble
hands,

Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I,

Thine being but a moiety of my moan, 60

To overgo thy woes and drown thy cries!

Boy. Ah! aunt, you wept not for our father's

death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Girl. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd;

Your widow-dolour likewise be unwept! 65

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation,

I am not barren to bring forth complaints.

All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,

That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,

May send forth plenteous tears to drown the
world! 70

Ah for my husband, for my dear lord Edward!

Chil. Ah for our father, for our dear lord

Clarence!

Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and

Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? and

he's gone.

Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? and

he's gone. 75

Duch. What stays had I but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss!

Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss!

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss! 80

Alas, I am the mother of these griefs!

Their woes are parcell'd, mine is general.

She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;

I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she;

These babes for Clarence weep, [and so do I;

I for an Edward weep,] so do not they. 85

Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd,

Pour all your tears! I am your sorrow's nurse,

And I will pamper it with lamentation.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother. God is much displeas'd

That you take with unthankfulness His doing. 90

In common worldly things, 'tis call'd ungrateful,

With dull unwillingness to repay a debt

Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;

Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,

For it requires the royal debt it lent you. 95

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful
mother,

Of the young prince your son. Send straight for him;

Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives.
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,

And plant your joys in living Edward's throne,

Enter GLOUCESTER, BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, and RATCLIFF.

Glou. Sister, have comfort. All of us have cause 101

To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can help our harms by wailing them.
Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy;
I did not see your Grace. Humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing. 106

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness in thy breast,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glou. [Aside.] Amen; and make me die a good old man!

That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing. 110
I marvel that her Grace did leave it out.

Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sorrow-ing peers,

That bear this heavy mutual load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love.

Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son. 116

The broken rancour of your high-sworn hates,
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept.
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fet 121

Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out; 126

Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green and yet un-govern'd.

Where every horse bears his commanding rein
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent, 130
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glou. I hope the King made peace with all of us;

And the compact is firm and true in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all.
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put 135
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which haply by much company might be urg'd;
Therefore I say with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the Prince.

Hast. And so say I. 140

Glou. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.

Madam, and you, my sister, will you go
To give your censures in this business?

[Q. Eliz.] With all our hearts. 145

[Duch.] [Exeunt all but Buckingham and Gloucester.]

Buck. My lord, whoever journeys to the Prince,

For God's sake, let not us two stay at home;
For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the Queen's proud kindred from the Prince. 150

Glou. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet, my dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.
Toward Ludlow then, for we'll not stay be-hind. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [London. A street.]

Enter one CITIZEN at one door, and another at the other.

1. Cit. Good morrow, neighbour; whither away so fast?

2. Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself.
Hear you the news abroad?

1. Cit. Yes, that the King is dead.
2. Cit. Ill news, by 'r lady; seldom comes the better.

I fear, I fear 't will prove a giddy world. 155

Enter another CITIZEN.

3. Cit. Neighbours, God speed!

1. Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.
3. Cit. Doth the news hold of good King Edward's death?

2. Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true; God help the while!

3. Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublous world.

1. Cit. No, no; by God's good grace his son shall reign. 160

3. Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!

2. Cit. In him there is a hope of government,
That in his nonage, council under him,
And in his full and ripened years himself,
No doubt, shall then and till then govern well.

1. Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth 165
Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

3. Cit. Stood the state so? No, no, good friends, God wot;

For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel; then the King 170
Had virtuous uncles to protect his Grace.

1. Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

2. Cit. Better it were they all came by his father,

Or by his father there were none at all;
For emulation, who shall now be nearest, 175
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.
O, full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester,
And the Queen's sons and brothers haught and proud!

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,
This sickly land might solace as before. 180

1. Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

3. Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand ;
When the sun sets, who doth not look for
night ?

Untimely storms makes men expect a dearth. ³⁵
All may be well ; but, if God sort it so,
'T is more than we deserve, or I expect.

2. Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear.

You cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of dread. ⁴⁰

3. Cit. Before the days of change, still is it
so.

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust
Ensuing danger ; as, by proof, we see
The water swell before a boisterous storm.
But leave it all to God. Whither away ? ⁴⁵

2. Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3. Cit. And so was I. I'll bear you company.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [London. The palace.]

Enter the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, the young DUKE OF YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Northampton ;

At Stony-Stratford they do rest to-night.
To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the Prince.

I hope he is much grown since last I saw him. ⁵
Q. Eliz. But I hear, no ; they say my son of
York

Has almost overta'en him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother ; but I would not have it
so.

Duch. Why, my good cousin, it is good to grow.

York. Grandam, one night, as we did sit at supper, ¹⁰

My uncle Rivers talk'd how I did grow
More than my brother. "Ay," quoth my uncle

Gloucester,
"Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace ;"

And since, methinks I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste. ¹⁵

Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold

In him that did object the same to thee.
He was the wretched'st thing when he was

young,
So long a-growing and so leisurely,

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious. ²⁰

[Arch.] And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious
madam.

Duch. I hope he is ; but yet let mothers
doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been rememb'rd,

I could have given my uncle's Grace a flout,
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine. ²⁵

Duch. How, my young York ? I prithee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast

That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old ;
'T was full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest. ³⁰

Duch. I prithee, pretty York, who told thee
this ?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse ! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 't were not she, I cannot tell who told me.

Q. Eliz. A parlous boy ! Go to, you are too shrewd. ³⁵

Duch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.

Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news ?
Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to report.

Q. Eliz. How doth the Prince ?
Mess. Well, madam, and in health.

Duch. What is thy news ? ⁴¹ Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,

With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.
Duch. Who hath committed them ?

Mess. The mighty dukes
Gloucester and Buckingham.

Arch. For what offence ? ⁴⁵
Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclos'd.

Why or for what the nobles were committed
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lord.

Q. Eliz. Ay me, I see the ruin of my house !
The tiger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind ; ⁵⁰

Insulting tyranny begins to jut
Upon the innocent and aweless throne.

Welcome, destruction, blood, and massacre !
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld ! ⁵⁵

My husband lost his life to get the crown,
And often up and down my sons were toss'd

For me to joy and weep their gain and loss ;
And being seated, and domestic broils ⁶⁰

Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves, brother to brother,

Blood to blood, self against self. O, preposterous

And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen ;
Or let me die, to look on earth no more ! ⁶⁵

Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy ; we will to sanctuary.

Madam, farewell.

Duch. Stay, I will go with you.
Q. Eliz. You have no cause.

Arch. [To the Queen.] My gracious lady, go ;
And thither bear your treasure and your goods.

For my part, I'll resign unto your Grace ⁷⁰
The seal I keep ; and so betide to me

As well I tender you and all of yours !
Go, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [London. A street.]

The trumpets sound. Enter the young PRINCE, the DUKES OF GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, CARDINAL [BOURCHIER, CATESBY,] and others.

Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your chamber.

Glou. Welcome, dear cousin, my thoughts' sovereign.

The weary way hath made you melancholy.

Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the way

Have made it tedious, wearisome, and heavy. ⁵
I want more uncles here to welcome me.

Glou. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years

Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit.

No more can you distinguish of a man

Than of his outward show; which, God he knows, ¹⁰

Seldom or never jumpeth with the heart.

Those uncles which you want were dangerous; Your Grace attended to their sug'red words,

But look'd not on the poison of their hearts.

God keep you from them, and from such false friends! ¹⁵

Prince. God keep me from false friends! but they were none.

Glou. My lord, the Mayor of London comes to greet you.

Enter the LORD MAYOR [and his train].

May. God bless your Grace with health and happy days!

Prince. I thank you, good my lord; and thank you all. [Mayor and train retire.]

I thought my mother and my brother York ²⁰
Would long ere this have met us on the way.

Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not To tell us whether they will come or no!

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Buck. And, in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

Prince. Welcome, my lord. What, will our mother come? ²⁵

Hast. On what occasion, God he knows, not I, The Queen your mother, and your brother York,

Have taken sanctuary. The tender prince Would fain have come with me to meet your Grace,

But by his mother was perforce withheld. ³⁰

Buck. Fie, what an indirect and peevish course

Is this of hers! Lord Cardinal, will your Grace Persuade the Queen to send the Duke of York

Unto his princely brother presently? ³⁵

If she deny, Lord Hastings, go with him, And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce. ⁴⁰

Card. My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak oratory

Can from his mother win the Duke of York,

Anon expect him here; but if she be obdurate To mild entreaties, God [in heaven] forbid ⁴⁰
We should infringe the holy privilege Of blessed sanctuary! Not for all this land Would I be guilty of so great a sin.

Buck. You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,

Too ceremonious and traditional. ⁴⁵

Weigh it but with the grossness of this age, You break not sanctuary in seizing him.

The benefit thereof is always granted To those whose dealings have deserv'd the place, ⁵⁰

And those who have the wit to claim the place.

This prince hath neither claim'd it nor deserv'd it, ⁵¹

And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it. Then, taking him from thence that is not there,

You break no privilege nor charter there.

Off have I heard of sanctuary men, ⁵⁵

But sanctuary children ne'er till now.

Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.

Come on, Lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedy haste you may. ⁶⁰

[Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings.]
Say, uncle Gloucester, if our brother come,

Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glou. Where think'st best unto your royal self.

If I may counsel you, some day or two Your Highness shall repose you at the Tower;

Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit ⁶⁵

For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place.

Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my lord? ⁷⁰

Buck. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place;

Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edif'd.

Prince. Is it upon record, or else reported

Successfully from age to age, he built it? ⁷⁵

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not regist'ed,

Methinks the truth should live from age to age, ⁸⁰
As 't were retail'd to all posterity,

Even to the general all-ending day.

Glou. [Aside.] So wise so young, they say, do never live long.

Prince. What say you, uncle? ⁸⁵

Glou. I say, without characters, fame lives long.

[Aside.] Thus, like the formal vice, Iniquity, I moralize two meanings in one word.

Prince. That Julius Cæsar was a famous man;

With what his valour did enrich his wit, ⁹⁰
His wit set down to make his valour live.

Death makes no conquest of this conqueror; For now he lives in fame, though not in life.

I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham, — ⁹⁵

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,

I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glou. [Aside.] Short summers lightly have a forward spring.

Enter young YORK, HASTINGS, and the CARDINAL.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the
Duke of York. 95

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our noble brother?

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is
yours.

Too late he died that might have kept that title,

Which by his death hath lost much majesty. 100

Glou. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said that idle weeds are fast in growth:

The Prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glou. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle? 105

Glou. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then is he more beholding to you than I.

Glou. He may command me as my sovereign;
But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glou. My dagger, little cousin? With all my
heart. 111

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;

And being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glou. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin. 115

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it.

Glou. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see, you will part but with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glou. It is too weighty for your Grace to wear. 120

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glou. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glou. How?

York. Little. 125

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk.

Uncle, your Grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear
with me.

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me.

Because that I am little, like an ape, 130

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. [Aside to Hastings.] With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,

He prettily and aptly taunts himself.

So cunning and so young is wonderful. 135

Glou. My lord, will 't please you pass along?

Myself and my good cousin Buckingham

Will to your mother, to entreat of her

To meet you at the Tower and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my
lord? 140

Prince. My Lord Protector needs will have
it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glou. Why, what should you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence' angry
ghost.

My grandam told me he was murder'd there. 145

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glou. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope I need not fear.

But come, my lord; and with a heavy heart,

Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower. 150

[A Sennet. Exeunt all but Gloucester, Buckingham, and Catesby.]

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating
York

Was not incensed by his subtle mother

To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

Glou. No doubt, no doubt. O, 't is a perilous
boy;

Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable. 155

He is all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither,
Catesby.

Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend

As closely to conceal what we impart. 159

Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the
way;

What think'st thou? Is it not an easy matter
To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,

For the instalment of this noble duke

In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the
Prince, 165

That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou, then, of Stanley?
Will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well, then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby,

And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings, 170

How he doth stand affected to our purpose;

And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,

To sit about the coronation.

If thou dost find him tractable to us,

Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons. 175

If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling,

Be thou so too; and so break off the talk,

And give us notice of his inclination;

For we to-morrow hold divided councils,

Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd. 180

Glou. Commend me to Lord William. Tell him, Catesby,

His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries

To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret Castle;

And bid my lord, for joy of this good news,
Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.

Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soudly.

Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed
I can.

Glou. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?

Cate. You shall, my lord.

Glou. At Crosby House, there shall you find us both. [Exit Catesby.]

Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive

Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glou. Chop off his head; something we will determine.

And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and all the movables
Whereof the King my brother was possess'd.

Buck. I'll claim that promise at your Grace's
hand.

Glou. And look to have it yielded with all kindness.

Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Before Lord Hastings' house.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord! my lord!

Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?

Mess. One from the Lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is 't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter LORD HASTINGS.

Hast. Can't my lord Stanley sleep these tedious nights?

Mess. So it appears by that I have to say.

First, he commends him to your noble self.

Hast. What then?

Mess. Then certifies your lordship that this
night

He dreamt the boar had razed off his helm.

Besides, he says there are two councils kept;

And that may be determin'd at the one

Which may make you and him to rue at the other.

Therefore he sends to know your lordship's
pleasure,

If you will presently take horse with him,
And with all speed post with him toward the
north,

To shun the danger that his soul divines.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;
Bid him not fear the separated councils.

His honour and myself are at the one,
And at the other is my good friend Catesby;

Where nothing can proceed that toucheth us
Whereof I shall not have intelligence.

Tell him his fears are shallow, without instance;

And for his dreams, I wonder he's so simple
To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers.

To fly the boar before the boar pursues,
Were to incense the boar to follow us

And make pursuit where he did mean no chase.
Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;

And we will both together to the Tower,
Where, he shall see, the boar will use us kindly.

Mess. I'll go, my lord, and tell him what you say. [Exit.]

Enter CATESBY.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!

Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring.

What news, what news, in this our tott'ring
state?

Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord,
And, I believe, will never stand upright
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.

Hast. How! wear the garland! Dost thou mean the crown?

Cate. Ay, my good lord.

Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders

Before I'll see the crown so foul misplac'd.
But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?

Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward

Upon his party for the gain thereof;
And thereupon he sends you this good news,

That this same very day your enemies,
The kindred of the Queen, must die at Pomfret.

Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that
news,

Because they have been still my adversaries;
But, that I'll give my voice on Richard's side,

To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows I will not do it, to the death.

Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious
mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelvemonth hence,

That they which brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
I'll send some packing that yet think not on 't.

Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my gracious
lord,

When men are unprepar'd and look not for
it.

Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out

With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey; and so 't will do With some men else, that think themselves as safe

As thou and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
To princely Richard and to Buckingham.

Cate. The Princes both make high account of you,

[Aside.] For they account his head upon the bridge.

Hast. I know they do; and I have well de-serv'd it.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

—Come on, come on [to Stanley]; where is your boar-spear, man?

Fear you the boar, and go so unprovided?

Stan. My lord, good morrow; good morrow,
Catesby.

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood,
I do not like these several councils, I.

Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as
yours; 80

And never in my days, I do protest,
Was it so precious to me as 't is now.
Think you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London, 85

Were jocund, and suppos'd their states were sure,

And they indeed had no cause to mistrust;
But yet, you see, how soon the day o'ercast.
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt.
Pray God, I say, I prove a needless coward! 90
What, shall we toward the Tower? The day is spent.

Hast. Come, come, have with you. Wot you what, my lord?

To-day the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They, for their truth, might better wear their heads

Than some that have accus'd them wear their hats. 95

But come, my lord, let us away.

Enter a PURSUIVANT.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow. [Exeunt Stanley and Catesby.]

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with
thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 't is better with me
now 100

Than when thou met'st me last where now we
meet.

Then was I going prisoner to the Tower
By the suggestion of the Queen's allies;
But now, I tell thee—keep it to thyself—
This day those enemies are put to death, 105
And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content!

Hast. Gramercy, fellow. There, drink that for me. [Throws him his purse.]

Purs. I thank your honour. [Exit.]

Enter a PRIEST.

Priest. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour. 110

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content
you.

Priest. I'll wait upon your lordship.

Enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, Lord Chamberlain?

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest; 115

Your honour hath no shriving work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy
man,
The men you talk of came into my mind.

What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay
there. 120

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner
there.

Buck. [Aside.] And supper too, although thou know'st it not.

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. 125
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Pomfret [Castle].

*Enter SIR RICHARD RATCLIFF, with halberds, carrying RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN to
death.*

[Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners.]

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee
this:

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God bless the Prince from all the pack
of you! 5

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaug. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch; the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison, 10

Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the guilty closure of thy walls

Richard the Second here was hack'd to death;

And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,

We give to thee our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon
our heads, 15

When she exclaim'd on Hastings, you, and I
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Riv. Then curs'd she Richard, then curs'd she Buckingham,

Then curs'd she Hastings. O, remember, God,
To hear her prayer for them, as now for us!

And for my sister and her princely sons, 20
Be satisfi'd, dear God, with our true blood,

Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.

Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.

Riv. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan, let us here embrace.

Farewell, until we meet again in heaven. 25
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [The Tower of London.]

Enter BUCKINGHAM, DERBY, HASTINGS, the BISHOP OF ELY, RATCLIFF, LOVEL, with others, [and take their seats] at a table.

Hast. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met

Is, to determine of the coronation.

In God's name speak, when is the royal day?

Buck. Is all things ready for the royal time?

Der. It is, and wants but nomination. 5

Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.

Buck. Who knows the Lord Protector's mind herein?

Who is most inward with the royal Duke?

Ely. Your Grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

Buck. [Who, I, my lord?] 10

We know each other's faces; for our hearts, He knows no more of mine than I of yours,

Or I of his, my lord, than you of mine.

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Hast. I thank his Grace, I know he loves me well; 15

But, for his purpose in the coronation,

I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd

His gracious pleasure any way therein:

But you, my honourable lords, may name the time;

And in the Duke's behalf I'll give my voice, 20 Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Ely. In happy time, here comes the Duke himself.

Glou. My noble lords and cousins all, good morrow.

I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust, My absence doth neglect no great design 25

Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had not you come upon your cue, my lord,

William Lord Hastings had pronounc'd your part,—

I mean, your voice, — for crowning of the King.

Glou. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder; 30

His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.

[Hast. I thank your Grace.]

Glou. My Lord of Ely!

[Ely. My lord?] 35

Glou. When I was last in Holborn,

I saw good strawberries in your garden there. I do beseech you send for some of them.

Ely. Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart. [Exit.]

Glou. Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you. [Drawing him aside.]

Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business,

And finds the testy gentleman so hot That he will lose his head ere give consent 40

His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself a while; I'll go with you.

[Exeunt [Gloucester and Buckingham].]

Der. We have not yet set down this day of triumph.

To-morrow, in my judgement, is too sudden; For I myself am not so well provided 45

As else I would be, were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter BISHOP OF ELY.

Ely. Where is my Lord, the Duke of Gloucester? I have sent for these strawberries.

Hast. His Grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning. 50

There's some conceit or other likes him well When that he bids good morrow with such spirit.

I think there's never a man in Christendom Can lesser hide his love or hate than he; For by his face straight shall you know his heart. 55

Der. What of his heart perceive you in his face

By any likelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marry, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

[Der. I pray God he be not, I say.] 60

Re-enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM.

Glou. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve

That do conspire my death with devilish plots Of damned witchcraft, and that have pre-vail'd

Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your Grace, my lord, 65

Makes me most forward in this princely presence

To doom the offenders, whosoe'er they be.

I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glou. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil.

Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up. 71

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch,

Consorted with that harlot strumpet Shore, That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord, — 75

Glou. If! Thou protector of this damned strumpet, Talk'st thou to me of "ifs"? Thou art a traitor!

Off with his head! Now, by Saint Paul I swear, I will not dine until I see the same.

Lovel and Ratcliff, look that it be done. 80

The rest, that love me, rise and follow me.

[Exeunt all but Hastings, Ratcliff, and Lovel.]

Hast. Woe, woe for England! not a whit for me;

For I, too fond, might have prevented this. Stanley did dream the boar did raze our helmets,

And I did scorn it and disdain to fly. 85

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble,

And started, when he look'd upon the Tower, As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O, now I need the priest that spake to me; I now repent I told the pursuivant, 90

As too triumphing, how mine enemies To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd,

And I myself secure in grace and favour. O Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head! 95

Rat. Come, come, dispatch; the Duke would be at dinner.

Make a short shrift; he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men,
Which we more hunt for than the grace of God!
Who builds his hope in air of your good looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast, 101
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

Lov. Come, come, dispatch; 't is bootless to exclaim.

Hast. O bloody Richard! miserable England! 105

I prophesy the fearful'st time to thee
That ever wretched age hath look'd upon.
Come, lead me to the block; bear him my head.

They smile at me who shortly shall be dead.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. The Tower-walls.]

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, in rotten armour, marvellous ill-favoured.

Glou. Come, cousin, canst thou quake, and change thy colour,
Murder thy breath in middle of a word,
And then again begin, and stop again,
As if thou were distraught and mad with terror?

Buck. Tut, I can counterfeit the deep tragedian; 5

Speak and look back, and pry on every side,
Tremble and start at wagging of a straw,
Intending deep suspicion. Ghastly looks
Are at my service, like enforced smiles;
And both are ready in their offices, 10
At any time, to grace my stratagems.
But what, is Catesby gone?

Glou. He is; and, see, he brings the Mayor along.

Enter the MAYOR and CATESBY.

Buck. Lord Mayor, —
Glou. Look to the drawbridge there! 15

Buck. Hark! a drum.
Glou. Catesby, o'erlook the walls.

Buck. Lord Mayor, the reason we have sent — Glou. Look back, defend thee, here are enemies.

Buck. God and our innocency defend and guard us! 20

Enter LOVEL and RATCLIFF, with Hastings' head.

Glou. Be patient, they are friends, Ratcliff and Lovel.

Lov. Here is the head of that ignoble traitor, The dangerous and unsuspected Hastings.

Glou. So dear I lov'd the man, that I must weep.

I took him for the plainest harmless creature 25
That breath'd upon the earth a Christian;
Made him my book, wherein my soul recorded
The history of all her secret thoughts.
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue

That, his apparent open guilt omitted, 30
I mean his conversation with Shore's wife,
He liv'd from all attainder of suspects.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor

That ever liv'd.

Would you imagine, or almost believe, 35

Were't not that, by great preservation,

We live to tell it, that the subtle traitor

This day had plotted, in the council-house

To murder me and my good lord of Gloucester?

May. Had he done so? 40

Glou. What, think you we are Turks or infidels?

Or that we would, against the form of law,

Proceed thus rashly in the villain's death,

But that the extreme peril of the case,

The peace of England, and our persons' safety

Enforc'd us to this execution? 45

May. Now, fair befall you! he deserv'd his death;

And your good Graces both have well proceeded

To warn false traitors from the like attempts.

I never look'd for better at his hands, 50

After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Glou. Yet had we not determin'd he should die,

Until your lordship came to see his end;

Which now the loving haste of these our friends,

Something against our meanings, have prevented; 55

Because, my lord, I would have had you heard

The traitor speak, and timorously confess

The manner and the purpose of his treasons;

That you might well have signify'd the same

Unto the citizens, who haply may 60

Misconstrue us in him and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your Grace's words shall serve

As well as I had seen and heard him speak;

And do not doubt, right noble princes both,

That I'll acquaint our duteous citizens 65

With all your just proceedings in this case.

Glou. And to that end we wish'd your lordship here,

To avoid the censures of the carping world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our intent,

Yet witness what you hear we did intend. 70

And so, my good Lord Mayor, we bid farewell.
[Exit Mayor.]

Glou. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post.

There, at your meetest vantage of the time,

Infer the bastardy of Edward's children. 75

Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,

Only for saying he would make his son

Heir to the crown; meaning indeed his house,

Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.

Moreover, urge his hateful luxury, 80

And bestial appetite in change of lust;

Which stretch'd unto their servants, daughters, wives,

Even where his raging eye or savage heart,

Without control, lusted to make a prey.

Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:

Tell them, when that my mother went with child

Of that insatiate Edward, noble York
My princely father then had wars in France;

And, by true computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;

Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble Duke my father.

Yet touch this sparingly, as 't were far off;
Because, my lord, you know my mother lives.

Buck. Doubt not, my lord, I'll play the orator

As if the golden fee for which I plead
Were for myself; and so, my lord, adieu.

Glou. If you thrive well, bring them to Baynard's Castle,

Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers and well-learned bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock

Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

Glou. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor Shaw;

[To Cate.] Go thou to Friar Penker; bid them both

Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle.

[Exeunt [all but Gloucester].
Now will I go to take some privy order,

To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give notice, that no manner person

Have any time recourse unto the princes.

[SCENE VI. The same. A street.]

Enter a SCRIVENER with a paper in his hand.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings,

Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.

And mark how well the sequel hangs together:
Eleven hours I've spent to write it over,

For yesternight by Catesby was it sent me;
The precedent was full as long a-doing;

And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamin'd, free, at liberty.

Here's a good world the while! Who is so gross

That cannot see this palpable device?
Yet who so bold, but says he sees it not?

Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such ill dealing must be seen in thought.

[SCENE VII. Baynard's Castle.]

Enter GLOUCESTER and BUCKINGHAM, at several doors.

Glou. How now, how now, what say the citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum, say not a word.

Glou. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,

And his contract by deputy in France;
The unsatiate greediness of his desire,

And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,

As being got, your father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the Duke.

Withal I did infer your lineaments,
Being the right idea of your father,

Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,

Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;

Indeed, left nothing fitting for your purpose
Untouch'd or slightly handled in discourse.

And when my oratory drew toward end,
I bid them that did love their country's good

Cry, "God save Richard, England's royal king!"

Glou. And did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake not a word;

But, like dumb statuettes or breathing stones,
Star'd each on other, and look'd deadly pale;

Which when I saw, I reprehended them,
And ask'd the Mayor what meant this wilful

silence.
His answer was, the people were not used

To be spoke to but by the Recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again,

"Thus saith the Duke, thus hath the Duke in-fer'd";

But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine

own,
At the lower end of the hall, hurl'd up their caps,

And some ten voices cried, "God save King

Richard!"
And thus I took the vantage of those few,

"Thanks, gentle citizens and friends," quoth I;
"This general applause and cheerful shout

Argues your wisdom and your love to Richard:"

And even here brake off, and came away.
Glou. What tongueless blocks were they!

Would they not speak?

[Buck. No, by my troth, my lord.]

Glou. Will not the Mayor then and his brethren come?

Buck. The Mayor is here at hand. Intend some fear;

Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit;
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand,

And stand between two churchmen, good my lord,—

For on that ground I'll make a holy descendant—
And be not easily won to our requests.

Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.

Glou. I go; and if you plead as well for them

As I can say nay to thee for myself,
No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go up to the leads; the Lord Mayor knocks.

[Exit [Gloucester].]

Enter the MAYOR and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord ! I dance attendance here ;
I think the Duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter CATESBY [from the castle].

[Here comes his servant.]

Now, Catesby, what says your lord to my request ?

Cate. He doth entreat your Grace, my noble lord,

To visit him to-morrow or next day. 60
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,
Divinely bent to meditation ;
And in no worldly suits would he be mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious Duke ; 65

Tell him, myself, the Mayor and Aldermen,
In deep designs, in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his Grace.

Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight. 70

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward ! 71

He is not lolling on a lewd love-bed,
But on his knees at meditation ;
Not dallying with a brace of courtézans,
But meditating with two deep divines ; 75
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul.
Happy were England, would this virtuous prince

Take on his Grace the sovereignty thereof ;
But, sure, I fear, we shall not win him to it. 80

May. Marry, God defend his Grace should say us nay !

Buck. I fear he will. Here Catesby comes again.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Now, Catesby, what says his Grace ? 85

Cate. [My lord,]
He wonders to what end you have assembled

Such troops of citizens to come to him,
His Grace not being warn'd thereof before. 90

He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should suspect me, that I mean no good to him.
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love ; 95

And so once more return and tell his Grace. 100

[Exit Catesby.]

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 't is much to draw them
thence,

So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter GLOUCESTER aloft, between two Bishops.
[CATESBY returns.]

May. See, where his Grace stands 'tween two clergymen ! 95

Buck. Two props of virtue for a Christian
prince,

To stay him from the fall of vanity ;
And, see, a book of prayer in his hand,

True ornaments to know a holy man.
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince, 100
Lend favourable ear to our requests ;
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion and right Christian zeal.

Glou. My lord, there needs no such apology.
I do beseech your Grace to pardon me, 105

Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Deferr'd the visitation of my friends.

But, leaving this, what is your Grace's pleasure ?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above,

And all good men of this ungovern'd isle. 110

Glou. I do suspect I have done some offence
That seems disgracious in the city's eye,

And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord. Would it might please your Grace,

On our entreaties, to amend your fault ! 115

Glou. Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian
land ?

Buck. Know then, it is your fault that you resign

The supreme seat, the throne majestic,
The scepter'd office of your ancestors,

Your state of fortune, and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house, 121

To the corruption of a blemish'd stock ;
Whiles, in the mildness of your sleepy thoughts,

Which here we waken to our country's good,
The noble isle doth want his proper limbs ; 125

His face defac'd with scars of infamy,
His royal stock graft with ignoble plants,

And almost should' red in the swallowing gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion. 130

Which to recure, we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge

And kingly government of this your land,
Not as protector, steward, substitute,

Or lowly factor for another's gain ;
But as successively from blood to blood, 135

Your right of birth, your empery, your own.
For this, consorted with the citizens,

Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,

In this just cause come I to move your Grace. 140

Glou. I cannot tell if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,

Best fitteth my degree or your condition.
If not to answer, you might haply think

Tongue-ti'd ambition, not replying, yielded 145
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me.

If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithful love to me,

Then, on the other side, I check'd my friends,
Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first, 151

And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,
Definitively thus I answer you :

Your love deserves my thanks ; but my desert
Unmeritable shuns your high request. 155

First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,

As my right revenue and due of birth ;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty and so many my defects, 160

That I would rather hide me from my greatness,
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.
But, God be thank'd, there is no need of me,
And much I need to help you, were there need. 166

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,
Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,
Will well become the seat of majesty,
And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign. 170
On him I lay that you would lay on me,
The right and fortune of his happy stars,
Which God defend that I should wring from him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your Grace;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial, 178
All circumstances well considered.

You say that Edward is your brother's son:
So say we too, but not by Edward's wife;

For first was he contract to Lady Lucy —
Your mother lives a witness to his vow — 180

And afterward by substitute betroth'd
To Bona, sister to the King of France.

These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A care-craz'd mother to a many sons,

A beauty-waning and distressed widow, 185
Even in the afternoon of her best days,

Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye,
Seduc'd the pitch and height of his degree

To base declension and loath'd bigamy.
By her, in his unlawful bed, he got 190

This Edward, whom our manners call the Prince.

More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that, for reverence to some alive,

I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self 195

This proffer'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,

Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,

Unto a lineal true-derived course. 200
May. Do, good my lord, your citizens entreat you.

Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.

Cate. O, make them joyful, grant them lawful suit!

Glou. Alas, why would you heap this care on
me?

I am unfit for state and majesty. 205
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;

I cannot nor I will not yield to you.
Buck. If you refuse it, — as, in love and zeal,

Loath to depose the child, your brother's
son;

As well we know your tenderness of heart 210
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,

Which we have noted in you to your kindred,
And equally indeed to all estates, —

Yet know, wh'er you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;

But we will plant some other in the throne, 215
To the disgrace and downfall of your house;

And in this resolution here we leave you. — Come, citizens! ['Zounds!'] we'll entreat no
more.

[Glou. O, do not swear, my Lord of Buckingham.] 220

[Exit Buckingham [with the Citizens].]

Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit.

If you deny them all the land will rue it.
Glou. Will you enforce me to a world of cares?

Call them again. [Catesby goes to the Mayor, and exit.] I am not made of stones,

But penetrable to your kind entreaties, 225
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM, [CATESBY] and the rest.

Cousin of Buckingham, and sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle Fortune on my back,

To bear her burden, wh'er I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load. 230

But if black scandal or foul-fac'd reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,

Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me
From all the impure blots and stains thereof;

For God doth know, and you may partly see, 235
How far I am from the desire of this.

May. God bless your Grace! we see it, and will say it.

Glou. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.

Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title:
Long live King Richard, England's worthy
king! 240

All. Amen.

Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd?

Glou. Even when you please, for you will have it so.

Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your
Grace;

And so most joyfully we take our leave. 245 Glou. [To the Bishops.] Come, let us to our holy work again.

Farewell, my cousins; farewell, gentle friends.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [Before the Tower.]

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH, the DUCHESS OF YORK, and MARQUESS OF DORSET at one door; ANNE, DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER,

[leading LADY MARGARET PLANTAGENET, Clarence's young Daughter] at another door.

Duch. Who meets us here? My niece Plantagenet

Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?

Now, for my life, she's wandering to the Tower,

On pure heart's love to greet the tender prince.
Daughter, well met.

Anne. God give your Graces both
A happy and a joyful time of day! 6

Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister!
Whither away?

Anne. No farther than the Tower; and, as I guess,

Upon the like devotion as yourselves,

To gratulate the gentle princes there. ¹⁰

Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all together.

Enter the lieutenant [BRAKENBURY].

And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes.

Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave,

How doth the Prince, and my young son of York?

Brak. Right well, dear madam. By your patience, ¹⁵

I may not suffer you to visit them;

The King hath strictly charg'd the contrary.

Q. Eliz. The King! Who's that?

Brak. [I cry you mercy!] I mean the Lord Protector.

Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title! ²⁰

Hath he set bounds between their love and me?

I am their mother; who shall bar me from them?

Duch. I am their father's mother; I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother;

Then bring me to their sights. I'll bear thy blame ²⁵

And take thy office from thee, on my peril.

Brak. No, madam, no; I may not leave it so.

I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me.
[Exit.]

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence,

And I'll salute your Grace of York as mother

And reverend looker on of two fair queens. ³¹
[To Anne.] Come, madam, you must straight to Westminster.

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. O, cut my lace asunder, that my pent heart

May have some scope to beat, or else I swoon ³⁵
With this dead-killing news!

Anne. Despiteful tidings! O displeasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer. Mother, how fares your Grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone!

Death and destruction dogs thee at thy heels;

Thy mother's name is ominous to children. ⁴¹

If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,

And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.

Go, hie thee, hie thee from this slaughter-house,

Lest thou increase the number of the dead; ⁴⁵

And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,

Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam.

Take all the swift advantage of the hours;

You shall have letters from me to my son ⁵⁰

In your behalf, to meet you on the way.

Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispersing wind of misery!

O my accursed womb, the bed of death!

A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world, ⁵⁵

Whose unavoided eye is murderous.

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.

O, would to God that the inclusive verge

Of golden metal that must round my brow ⁶⁰

Were red-hot steel, to sear me to the brains!

Anointed let me be with deadly venom,

And die, ere men can say, "God save the Queen!"

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;

To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm. ⁶⁵

Anne. No! why? When he that is my husband now

Came to me, as I follow'd Henry's corse,

When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands

Which issued from my other angel husband

And that dear saint which then I weeping follow'd; ⁷⁰

O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,

This was my wish: "Be thou," quoth I, "accurs'd,

For making me, so young, so old a widow!

And, when thou wed'st, let sorrow haunt thy bed;

And be thy wife—if any be so mad— ⁷⁵

More miserable by the life of thee

Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death!"

Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,

Within so small a time, my woman's heart

Grossly grew captive to his honey words ⁸⁰

And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse,

Which hitherto hath held mine eyes from rest;

For never yet one hour in his bed

Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,

But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.

Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick; ⁸⁵

And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu! I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woeful welcomer of glory! ⁹⁰

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!

Duch. [To Dorset.] Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!

[To Anne.] Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!

[To Queen Eliz.] Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me! ⁹⁵

Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,

And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay, yet look back with me unto the Tower.
 Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes
 Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls!
 Rough cradle for such little pretty ones! —401
 Rude ragged nurse, old sullen playfellow
 For tender princes, use my babies well!
 So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [London. The palace.]

Sennet. Enter RICHARD, in pomp, crowned; BUCKINGHAM, CATESBY [a PAGE, and others].

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham!

Buck. My gracious sovereign?

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. (Here he ascendeth the throne. Sound.) Thus high, by thy advice

And thy assistance, is King Richard seated;
 But shall we wear these glories for a day? 5
 Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch,

To try if thou be current gold indeed.

Young Edward lives: think now what I would speak. 10

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would be king.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice renowned lord.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence,
 That Edward still should live! "True, noble prince!" 15

Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull.

Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead;

And I would have it suddenly perform'd.

What say'st thou now? Speak suddenly; be brief. 20

Buck. Your Grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes.

Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some little breath, some pause, dear lord,

Before I positively speak in this. 25
 I will resolve you herein presently. [Exit.]

Cate. [Aside to a stander by.] The King is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools

And unrespective boys; none are for me

That look into me with considerate eyes. 30

High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.
 Boy!

Page. My lord?

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold

Will tempt unto a close exploit of death? 35

Page. I know a discontented gentleman,
 Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit.

Gold were as good as twenty orators,

And will, no doubt, tempt him to anything.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; go, call him hither. [Exit Page.] 41

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham

No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels.

Hath he so long held out with me untir'd,
 And stops he now for breath? Well, be it so.

Enter STANLEY.

How now, Lord Stanley, what's the news? 46

Stan. Know, my loving lord,

The Marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled

To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

[Stands apart.]

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby. Rumour it abroad 51

That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;

I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some mean poor gentleman,

Whom I will marry straight to Clarence' daughter; 55

The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.

Look, how thou dream'st! I say again, give out

That Anne my queen is sick and like to die.

About it; for it stands me much upon

To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me. [Exit Catesby.]

I must be married to my brother's daughter, 61

Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.

Murder her brothers, and then marry her!

Uncertain way of gain! But I am in

So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin! 65
 Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter [Page, with SIR JAMES] TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar'st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine? 70

Tyr. Please you;

But I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, there thou hast it; two deep enemies,

Foes to my rest and my sweet sleep's disturbers

Are they that I would have thee deal upon. 75

Tyrrel. I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,

And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel.

Go, by this token. Rise, and lend thine ear. [Whispers.]

There is no more but so; say it is done, 81
 And I will love thee and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight,

[K. Rich. Shall we hear from thee, Tyrrel, ere we sleep?

Tyr. Ye shall, my lord.] [Exit. 85

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind

The late request that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: well, look unto it. 90

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by
promise,

For which your honour and your faith is pawn'd;

The earldom of Hereford and the movables

Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife. If she convey 95

Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your Highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me, Henry the Sixth
Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,

When Richmond was a little peevish boy. 100
A king, perhaps, [perhaps, —

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could not at that time

Have told me, I being by, that I should kill
him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earl-
dom, — 105

K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was at Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it Rougemont; at which name I started,

Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond. 110

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your Grace in mind

Of what you promis'd me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why let it strike? 115

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke

Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whether you will or no. 120

K. Rich. Tut, tut,]

Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.
[Exeunt all but Buckingham.

Buck. And is it thus? Repays he my deep service

With such contempt? Made I him king for
this?

O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone 125
To Brecknock, while my fearful head is on!

[Exit.

[SCENE III. The same.]

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done,
The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, who I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery, 5

Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs, Melted with tenderness and mild compassion,

Wept like two children in their death's sad story.

"O, thus," quoth Dighton, "lay the gentle babes;"

"Thus, thus," quoth Forrest, "girdling one another 10

Within their alabaster innocent arms.

Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,

Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.

A book of prayers on their pillow lay;

Which once," quoth Forrest, "almost chang'd
my mind; 15

But O! the devil!" — there the villain stopp'd;

When Dighton thus told on: "We smothered
The most replenished sweet work of Nature,

That from the prime creation e'er she framed," Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse; 20

They could not speak; and so I left them
both,

To bear this tidings to the bloody King.

Enter KING RICHARD.

And here he comes. All health, my sovereign
lord!

K. Rich. Kind Tyrrel, am I happy in thy
news?

Tyr. If to have done the thing you gave in charge 25

Beget your happiness, be happy then,

For it is done.

K. Rich. But didst thou see them dead?

Tyr. I did, my lord.

K. Rich. And buried, gentle Tyrrel?

Tyr. The chaplain of the Tower hath buried
them;

But where, to say the truth, I do not know. 30

K. Rich. Come to me, Tyrrel, soon at after-supper,

When thou shalt tell the process of their death.
Meantime, but think how I may do thee good,

And be inheritor of thy desire.

Farewell till then. 35

Tyr. I humbly take my leave. [Exit.

K. Rich. The son of Clarence have I pent up close;

His daughter meanly have I match'd in marriage;

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom,
And Anne my wife hath bid this world good-
night.

Now, for I know the Breton Richmond aims
At young Elizabeth, my brother's daughter, 41

And, by that knot, looks proudly on the crown,
To her go I, a jolly thriving wooer.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. Good or bad news, that thou com'st in so bluntly? ⁴⁵

Rat. Bad news, my lord. Morton is fled to Richmond; And Buckingham, back'd with the hardy Welshmen,

Is in the field, and still his power increaseth.

K. Rich. Ely with Richmond troubles me more near ⁴⁹

Than Buckingham and his rash-levied strength. Come, I have learn'd that fearful commenting Is leaden servitor to dull delay;

Delay leads impotent and snail-pac'd beggary.

Then fiery expedition be my wing, Jove's Mercury, and herald for a king! ⁵⁵

Go, muster men! My counsel is my shield; We must be brief when traitors brave the field.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [IV. Before the palace.]

Enter old QUEEN MARGARET.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow And drop into the rotten mouth of death.

Here in these confines slyly have I lurk'd,

To watch the waning of mine enemies.

A dire induction am I witness to, ⁵

And will to France, hoping the consequence

Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.

Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret; who comes here? [Retires.]

Enter QUEEN ELIZABETH and the DUCHESS OF YORK.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes!

My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets! ¹⁰

If yet your gentle souls fly in the air

And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,

Hover about me with your airy wings

And hear your mother's lamentation!

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right ¹⁵

Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. Somany miseries have craz'd my voice,

That my wee-wearied tongue is still and mute.

Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet.

Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. ²¹

Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs,

And throw them in the entrails of the wolf?

When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done?

Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son. ²⁵

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal living ghost,

Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due by life usurp'd,

Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

[Sitting down.]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood! ³⁰

Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave

As thou canst yield a melancholy seat!

Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here.

Ah, who hath any cause to mourn but we? [Sitting down by her.]

Q. Mar. [Coming forward.] If ancient sorrow be most reverend, ³⁵

Give mine the benefit of seniority,

And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.

If sorrow can admit society, [Sitting down with them.]

[Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine.]

I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him; ⁴⁰

I had a Harry, till a Richard kill'd him:

Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;

Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.

Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;

I had a Rutland too, thou help'st to kill him. ⁴⁵

Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death.

That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes

To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood, ⁵⁰

That foul defacer of God's handiwork,

That excellent grand tyrant of the earth

That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,

Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.

O upright, just, and true-disposing God, ⁵⁵

How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur

Preys on the issue of his mother's body,

And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan!

Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes!

God witness with me, I have wept for thine. ⁶⁰

Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge,

And now I cloy me with beholding it.

Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;

The other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;

Young York he is but boot, because both they

Match not the high perfection of my loss: ⁶⁵

Thy Clarence he is dead that stabb'd my

Edward;

And the beholders of this frantic play,

The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan,

Grey,

Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves. ⁷⁰

Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligencer,

Only reserv'd their factor, to buy souls

And send them thither; but at hand, at hand,

Ensues his piteous and unpitied end.

Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,

To have him suddenly convey'd from hence. ⁷⁵

Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,

That I may live to say, The dog is dead!

Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come

That I should wish for thee to help me curse ⁸⁰

That bottl'd spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad!

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune;

I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen;
 The presentation of but what I was;
 The flattering index of a direful pageant; 35
 One heav'd a-high, to be hurl'd down below;
 A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;
 A dream of what thou wast; a garish flag
 To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
 A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;
 A queen in jest, only to fill the scene. 91
 Where is thy husband now? Where be thy brothers?

Where be thy two sons? Wherein dost thou joy?

Who sues, and kneels, and says, "God save the Queen?"

Where be the bending peers that flattered thee?
 Where be the thronging troops that followed
 thee? 96

Decline all this, and see what now thou art:
 For happy wife, a most distressed widow;
 For joyful mother, one that tails the name;
 For queen, a very catiff crown'd with care; 100
 For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;
 For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;
 For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;
 For one commanding all, obey'd of none.
 Thus hath the course of justice whirl'd about,
 And left thee but a very prey to time; 108
 Having no more but thought of what thou wast,
 To torture thee the more, being what thou
 art.

Thou didst usurp my place, and dost thou not
 Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? 110
 Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke,

From which even here I slip my wearied head,
 And leave the burden of it all on thee.

Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mis-chance;

These English woes shall make me smile in
 France. 115

Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, stay a while,

And teach me how to curse mine enemies!

Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the night, and fast
 the day;

Compare dead happiness with living woe;
 Think that thy babes were sweeter than they were, 120

And he that slew them fouler than he is.
 Bett'ring thy loss makes the bad causer worse;
 Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O, quicken them with thine!

Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine. [Exit. 125

Duch. Why should calamity be full of words?

Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client
 woes,

Airy succeders of intestate joys,
 Poor breathing orators of miseries,

Let them have scope! though what they will impart 130

Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

Duch. If so, then be not tongue-ti'd; go with
 me,

And in the breath of bitter words let's smother

My damned son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

The trumpet sounds; be copious in exclams. 135

Enter KING RICHARD and his train, marching, with drums and trumpets.

K. Rich. Who intercepts me in my expedition?

Duch. O, she that might have intercepted
 thee,

By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
 From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast
 done!

Q. Eliz. Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown, 140

Where should be branded, if that right were
 right,

The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that
 crown,

And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?

Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my children?

Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence? 145

And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

Q. Eliz. Where is the gentle Rivers,
 Vaughan, Grey?

Duch. Where is kind Hastings?

K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike alarum,
 drums!

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women Rail on the Lord's anointed. Strike, I say!

[Flourish. Alarums. 151

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
 Or with the clamorous report of war

Thus will I down your exclamations.

Duch. Art thou my son?

K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, and yourself. 155

Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience.

K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of your condition,

That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

Duch. O, let me speak!

K. Rich. Do then; but I'll not hear.

Duch. I will be mild and gentle in my words.

K. Rich. And brief, good mother; for I am in haste. 161

Duch. Art thou so hasty? I have stay'd for
 thee,

God knows, in torment and in agony.

K. Rich. And came I not at last to comfort
 you?

Duch. No, by the holy rood, thou know'st it
 well, 165

Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.
 A grievous burden was thy birth to me;

Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;
 Thy school-days frightful, desperate, wild, and furious, 170

Thy prime of manhood daring, bold, and ven-turous,

Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody,

More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred.

What comfortable hour canst thou name
That ever grac'd me with thy company?

K. Rich. Faith, none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd your Grace 175

To breakfast once forth of my company.

If I be so disgracious in your eye,

Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.
Strike up the drum.

Duch. I prithee, hear me speak.

K. Rich. You speak too bitterly.

Duch. Hear me a word,

For I shall never speak to thee again. 181

K. Rich. So.

Duch. Either thou wilt die by God's just ordenance,

Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror,

Or I with grief and extreme age shall perish 185

And never more behold thy face again.

Therefore take with thee my most grievous
curse,

Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more

Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!

My prayers on the adverse party fight; 190

And there the little souls of Edward's children

Whisper the spirits of thine enemies

And promise them success and victory.

Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;

Shame serves thy life and doth thy death attend. [Exit. 195]

Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse

Abides in me; I say amen to her.

K. Rich. Stay, madam; I must talk a word with you.

Q. Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal
blood

For thee to slaughter; for my daughters, Richard, 200

They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;

And therefore level not to hit their lives.

K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth,

Virtuous and fair, royal and gracious.

Q. Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live, 205

And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty,

Slander myself as false to Edward's bed,

Throw over her the veil of infamy.

So she may live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is a royal princess. 211

Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not
so.

K. Rich. Her life is safest only in her birth.

Q. Eliz. And only in that safety died her brothers.

K. Rich. Lo, at their birth good stars were opposite. 215

Q. Eliz. No, to their lives ill friends were contrary.

K. Rich. All unavoided is the doom of destiny.

Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny.

My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,

If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life. 220

K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.

Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd

Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.

Whose hand soever lanc'd their tender hearts,

Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction. 225

No doubt the murderous knife was dull and
blunt

Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart

To revel in the entrails of my lambs.

But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,

My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys 230

Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;

And I, in such a desperate bay of death,

Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,

Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.

K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise 235

And dangerous success of bloody wars,

As I intend more good to you and yours

Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face
of heaven,

To be discover'd, that can do me good? 240

K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.

Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?

K. Rich. Unto the dignity and height of fortune,

The high imperial type of this earth's glory.

Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrow with report of
it; 245

Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?

K. Rich. Even all I have; ay, and myself and all

Will I withal endow a child of thine;

So in the Lethe of thy angry soul 250

Thou drown the sad remembrance of those
wrongs

Which thou supposest I have done to thee.

Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness

Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.

K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter. 255

Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.

K. Rich. What do you think?

Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul.

So from thy soul's love didst thou love her
brothers,

And from my heart's love I do thank thee for
it. 260

K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning.

I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her Queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?

K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen. Who else should be? 265

Q. Eliz. What, thou?

K. Rich. Even so. How think you of it?

Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?

K. Rich. That I would learn of you, As one being best acquainted with her humour.

Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?

K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart.

Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers, 271

A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave Edward and York; then haply will she weep. Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret 274

Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,— A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain The purple sap from her sweet brother's body; And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal. If this inducement move her not to love, Send her a letter of thy noble deeds. 280

Tell her thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence, Her uncle Rivers; ay, and, for her sake, Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.

K. Rich. You mock me, madam; this is not the way 284

To win your daughter.

Q. Eliz. There is no other way; Unless thou couldst put on some other shape, And not be Richard that hath done all this.

K. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.

Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee,

Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.

K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended. 291

Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes, Which after hours gives leisure to repent. If I did take the kingdom from your sons, To make amends, I'll give it to your daughter. If I have kill'd the issue of your womb, To quicken your increase, I will beget Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter. A grandam's name is little less in love Than is the doting title of a mother; 300

They are as children but one step below, Even of your mettle, of your very blood; Of all one pain, save for a night of groans Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.

Your children were vexation to your youth, 305 But mine shall be a comfort to your age. The loss you have is but a son being king, And by that loss your daughter is made queen. I cannot make you what amends I would, Therefore accept such kindness as I can, 310

Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul Leads discontented steps in foreign soil, This fair alliance quickly shall call home To high promotions and great dignity. The King, that calls your beauteous daughter wife, 315

Familiarly shall call thy Dorset brother;

Again shall you be mother to a king, And all the ruins of distressful times Repair'd with double riches of content. What! we have many goodly days to see. 320

The liquid drops of tears that you have shed Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl, Advantaging their loan with interest Of ten times double gain of happiness. Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go; 325

Make bold her bashful years with your experience;

Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale; Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys; And when this arm of mine hath chastised 331

The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham, Bound with triumphant garlands will I come And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed; To whom I will retail my conquest won. 335

And she shall be sole victress, Cæsar's Cæsar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? Her father's brother

Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle? Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncle? Under what title shall I woo for thee, 340

That God, the law, my honour, and her love, Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with still lasting war.

K. Rich. Tell her the King, that may command, entreats. 345

Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the King's king forbids.

K. Rich. Say she shall be a high and mighty queen.

Q. Eliz. To wail the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastingly.

Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title "ever" last? 350

K. Rich. Sweetly in force unto her fair life's end.

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

K. Rich. As long as heaven and nature lengthens it.

Q. Eliz. As long as hell and Richard likes of it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low. 355

Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.

Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.

K. Rich. Then plainly to her tell my loving tale.

Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest in too harsh a style. 360

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and too quick.

Q. Eliz. O no, my reasons are too deep and dead;

Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves,

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam ;
that is past.

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till heartstrings break. ³⁶⁵

K. Rich. Now, by my George, my Garter, and my crown, —

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.

K. Rich. I swear —

Q. Eliz. By nothing ; for this is no oath.
Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his lordly
honour ;

Thy Garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue ; ³⁷⁰

Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory.
If something thou wouldst swear to be be-
liev'd,

Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Now, by the world —

Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.

K. Rich. My father's death —

Q. Eliz. Thy life hath it dishonour'd. ³⁷⁵

K. Rich. Then, by myself —

Q. Eliz. Thyself thyself misusest.

K. Rich. Why then, by God —

Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all.

If thou did'st fear to break an oath with Him,
The unity the King my husband made
Thou hadst not broken, nor my brothers died.
If thou hadst fear'd to break an oath by Him, ³⁸¹
The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
Had grac'd the tender temples of my child,
And both the Princes had been breathing here,
Which now, two tender bedfellows for dust, ³⁸⁵
Thy broken faith hath made the prey for worms.

What canst thou swear by now ?

K. Rich. The time to come.

Q. Eliz. That thou hast wronged in the time o'erpast ;

For I myself have many tears to wash
Hereafter time, for time past wrong'd by thee.
The children live, whose fathers thou hast slaughter'd, ³⁹¹

Ungovern'd youth, to wail it with their age ;
The parents live, whose children thou hast
butcher'd,

Old barren plants, to wail it with their age.
Swear not by time to come ; for that thou
hast

Misus'd ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'erpast. ³⁹⁵

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper and repent,
So thrive I in my dangerous affairs
Of hostile arms ; myself myself confound ;
Heaven and fortune bar me happy hours ; ⁴⁰⁰ Day, yield me not thy light, nor, night, thy
rest ;

Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if, with dear heart's love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter !
In her consists my happiness and thine ; ⁴⁰⁵
Without her, follows to myself and thee,
Herself, the land, and many a Christian soul,
Death, desolation, ruin, and decay.
It cannot be avoided but by this ; ⁴¹⁰

It will not be avoided but by this.
Therefore, dear mother, — I must call you
so —

Be the attorney of my love to her.
Plead what I will be, not what I have been ;
Not my deserts, but what I will deserve. ⁴¹⁵
Urge the necessity and state of times,
And be not peevish-fond in great designs.

Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil
thus ?

K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt you to do good.

Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself ?

K. Rich. Ay, if yourself's remembrance wrong yourself. ⁴²¹

Q. Eliz. Yet thou didst kill my children.

K. Rich. But in your daughter's womb I bury them ;

Where in that nest of spicery they will breed
Selves of themselves, to your recomforture. ⁴²⁵

Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will ?

K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.

Q. Eliz. I go. Write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me her mind.

K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss ; and so, farewell. [Exit Queen Elizabeth. ⁴³⁰

Relenting fool, and shallow changing woman !

Enter RATCLIFF [CATESBY following].

How now ! what news ?

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy ; to our shores
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back. ⁴³⁵
'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral ;
And there they hull, expecting but the aid
Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore.

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk ; ⁴⁴⁰

Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby ; where is he ?

Cate. Here, my good lord.

K. Rich. Catesby, fly to the Duke. ^{442 a}

Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste. ^{442 b}

K. Rich. [Ratcliff], come hither. Post to Salisbury.

When thou com'st thither, — [To Catesby.] Dull
unmindful villain,

Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the Duke ? ⁴⁴⁵

Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your Highness' pleasure,

What from your Grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby. Bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power that he can
make,

And meet me suddenly at Salisbury. ⁴⁵⁰

Cate. I go. [Exit.

Rat. What, may it please you, shall I do at Salisbury ?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go ?

Rat. Your Highness told me I should post before.

K. Rich. My mind is chang'd.

Enter LORD STANLEY.

Stanley, what news with you?
Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;

Nor none so bad, but may well be reported.

K. Rich. Hoyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!

What need'st thou run so many miles about
When thou mayst tell thy tale the nearest way?

Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, as you guess?

Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,

He makes for England, here to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? Is the sword unsway'd?

Is the King dead? the empire unpossess'd?

What heir of York is there alive but we?

And who is England's king but great York's heir?

Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?

Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.

K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,

You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes?

Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.

Stan. No, my good lord, therefore mistrust me not.

K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to beat him back?

Where be thy tenants and thy followers?

Are they not now upon the western shore,

Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?

Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.

K. Rich. Cold friends to me! What do they in the north,

When they should serve their sovereign in the west?

Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty King.

Pleaseth your Majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your Grace

Where and what time your Majesty shall please.

K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond;

But I'll not trust thee.

Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful.

I never was nor never will be false.

K. Rich. Go, then, and muster men; but leave behind

Your son, George Stanley. Look your heart be firm,

Or else his head's assurance is but frail.

Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you.

[Exit.]

Enter a MESSENGER.

1. Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,

As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtney, and the haughty prelate
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many moe confederates, are in arms.

Enter another MESSENGER.

2. Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms;

And every hour more competitors
Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter another MESSENGER.

3. Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham—

K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death?

[He striketh him.]

There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.

3. Mess. The news I have to tell your Majesty

Is that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd;
And he himself wand'red away alone,
No man knows whither.

K. Rich. I cry thee mercy;

There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd

Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

3. Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my lord.

Enter another MESSENGER.

4. Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel and Lord Marquis Dorset,

'T is said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
But this good comfort bring I to your Highness,

The Breton navy is dispers'd by tempest.

Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat

Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks

If they were his assistants, yea or no;

Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham

Upon his party. He, mistrusting them,
Hoist'd sail and made his course again for Brittany.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up in arms;

If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter CATESBY.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Buckingham is taken;

That is the best news. That the Earl of Richmond

Is with a mighty power landed at Milford,
Is colder news, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! While we reason here,
A royal battle might be won and lost.
Some one take order Buckingham be brought To Salisbury; the rest march on with me. ⁵⁴⁰
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE [V. Lord Derby's house.]

Enter DERBY and SIR CHRISTOPHER [URSWICK].

Der. Sir Christopher, tell Richmond this from me,
That in the sty of the most deadly boar
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold;
If I revolt, off goes young George's head.
The fear of that holds off my present aid. ⁵
So get thee gone; commend me to thy lord.
Withal say that the Queen hath heartily consented

He should espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
But, tell me, where is princely Richmond now?
Chris. At Pembroke, or at Harford-west, in Wales. ¹⁰

Der. What men of name resort to him?

Chris. Sir Walter Herbert, a renowned soldier;

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley,
Oxford, redoubted Pembroke, Sir James Blunt,
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew, ¹⁵
And many other of great name and worth;
And towards London do they bend their power,
If by the way they be not fought withal.

Der. Well, hie thee to thy lord; I kiss his hand.

My letter will resolve him of my mind. ²⁰
Farewell. [Gives letter, and exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [Salisbury. An open place.]

Enter [the SHERIFF, and] BUCKINGHAM, with halberds, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me speak with him?

Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Grey and Rivers,

Holy King Henry and thy fair son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried ⁵
By underhand corrupted foul injustice,

If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour,

Even for revenge mock my destruction!
This is All-Souls' day, fellow, is it not? ¹⁰

Sher. It is [my lord].

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.

This is the day which, in King Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found

False to his children and his wife's allies; ¹⁵
This is the day wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted;

This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul
Is the determin'd respite of my wrongs.

That high All-Seer, which I dallied with, ²⁰
Hath turn'd my feigned prayer on my head
And given in earnest what I begg'd in jest;
Thus doth He force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points in their masters' bosoms.

Now Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck:
"When he," quoth she, "shall split thy heart with sorrow, ²⁵

Remember Margaret was a prophetess."
Come, lead me, officers, to the block of shame;
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The camp near Tamworth.]

Enter RICHMOND, OXFORD, BLUNT, HERBERT, and others, with drum and colours.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,

Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land

Have we march'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father Stanley ⁵
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.

The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful

vines,
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough

In your embowell'd bosoms, this foul swine ¹⁰
Is now even in the centre of this isle,

Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn.
From Tamworth thither is but one day's march.

In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace ¹⁵
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand men,

To fight against this guilty homicide.

Herb. I doubt not but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends but what are friends for fear, ²⁰

Which in his dearest need will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name, march!

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings;

Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Bosworth Field.]

Enter KING RICHARD, in arms, with NORFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, RATCLIFF [and others].

K. Rich. Here pitch our tent, even here in Bosworth field.

My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

Sur. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk, —
Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks;
ha! must we not? ⁵

Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent! Here will I lie to-night;
But where to-morrow? Well, all's one for that.

Who hath descried the number of the traitors?
Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power. 10

K. Rich. Why, our battalia treble that account;

Besides, the King's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want.
Up with the tent! Come, noble gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground. 15
Call for some men of sound direction;
Let's lack no discipline, make no delay;
For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.]

Enter [on the other side of the field] RICHMOND, SIR WILLIAM BRANDON, OXFORD, DORSET [BLUNT, and others. Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent].

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set,

And, by the bright track of his fiery car, 20
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.

Give me some ink and paper in my tent;
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge, 25
And part in just proportion our small power.
My Lord of Oxford, you, Sir William Brandon, And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me. The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment; Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him, 30

And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the Earl to see me in my tent.

Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me:
Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?

Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much, 35

Which well I am assur'd I have not done,
His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the King.

Richm. If without peril it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with him, 40

And give him from me this most needful note.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good-night, good Captain Blunt.

Come, gentlemen, [Exit Blunt.]

Let us consult upon to-morrow's business. 45

Into my tent; the dew is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.]

Enter [to his tent] KING RICHARD, NORFOLK, RATCLIFF, CATESBY [and others].

K. Rich. What is't o'clock?

Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;
It's nine o'clock.

K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.
Give me some ink and paper.

What, is my beaver easier than it was, 50
And all my armour laid into my tent?

Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.

K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge;

Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.

Nor. I go, my lord. 55

K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.]

K. Rich. [Catesby!]

Cate. My lord?

K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
Before sunrising, lest his son George fall 61
Into the blind cave of eternal night.

[Exit Catesby.]

Fill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.
Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy. 65

Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. Saw'st the melancholy Lord Northumberland?

Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself,

Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers. 71

K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine.

I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is ink and paper ready? 75

Rat. It is, my lord.

K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me, Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent

And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.

[Exeunt Ratcliff [and the other Attendants. Richard sleeps].]

Enter DERBY to RICHMOND in his tent. [Lords and others attending.]

Der. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!

Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford 80

Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?

Der. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,

Who prays continually for Richmond's good.
So much for that. The silent hours steal on, 85

And flaky darkness breaks within the east.

In brief, — for so the season bids us be, —

Prepare thy battle early in the morning,

And put thy fortune to the arbitrement

Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war. 90

I, as I may — that which I would I cannot, —

With best advantage will deceive the time,

And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms;

But on thy side I may not be too forward,

Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George, 95

Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell! The leisure and the fearful time

Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love

And ample interchange of sweet discourse,

Which so long sund'red friends should dwell
upon. 100

God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adieu! Be valiant, and speed well!
Richm. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment.

I'll strive with troubled thoughts, to take a nap, 104

Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow,
When I should mount with wings of victory.
Once more, good-night, kind lords and gentlemen.
[Exeunt all but Richmond.]

O Thou, whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye! 109
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall
The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
Make us thy ministers of chastisement
That we may punish Thee in the victory!
To Thee I do commend my watchful soul 115
Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes.
Sleeping and waking, O, defend me still!
[Sleeps.]

Enter the Ghost of PRINCE EDWARD, son to Henry the Sixth.

Ghost. (To Richard.) Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow!
Think, how thou stabb'dst me in my prime of youth

At Tewksbury. Despair, therefore, and die!
(To Richmond.) Be cheerful, Richmond; for the wronged souls 121
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf.
King Henry's issue, Richmond, comforts thee.

Enter the Ghost of HENRY THE SIXTH.

Ghost. (To Richard.) When I was mortal, my anointed body
By thee was punched full of deadly holes. 125
Think on the Tower and me. Despair, and die!
Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die.
(To Richmond.) Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be king,
Doth comfort thee in sleep. Live, and flourish!

Enter the Ghost of CLARENCE.

Ghost. (To Richard.) Let me sit heavy in thy soul to-morrow! 131
I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair, and
die!

(To Richmond.) Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster, 136
The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee.
Good angels guard thy battle! Live, and flourish!

Enter the Ghosts of RIVERS, GREY, and VAUGHAN.

Ghost of R. (To Richard.) Let me sit heavy in thy soul to-morrow, Rivers, that died at Pomfret! Despair, and
die! 140

Ghost of G. (To Richard.) Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!

Ghost of V. (To Richard.) Think upon
Vaughan, and with guilty fear
Let fall thy lance. Despair, and die!
All. (To Richmond.) Awake, and think our wrongs in Richard's bosom
Will conquer him! Awake, and win the day!

Enter the Ghost of HASTINGS.

Ghost. (To Richard.) Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake, 146
And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on Lord Hastings. Despair, and die!
(To Richmond.) Quiet untroubled soul, awake,
awake!
Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake! 150

Enter the Ghosts of the two young Princes.

Ghosts. (To Richard.) Dream on thy cousins smothered in the Tower.
Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and
death!
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair and die!
(To Richmond.) Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy; 155
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

Enter the Ghost of LADY ANNE.

Ghost. (To Richard.) Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee, 160
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations.
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword. Despair, and die!
(To Richmond.) Thou quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;
Dream of success and happy victory! 165
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

Enter the Ghost of BUCKINGHAM.

Ghost. (To Richard.) The first was I that help'd thee to the crown;
The last was I that felt thy tyranny.
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness! 170
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and
death;
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath!
(To Richmond.) I died for hope ere I could lend thee aid;

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd.
God and good angels fight on Richmond's side,
And Richard fall in height of all his pride! 175
[The Ghosts vanish. King Richard starts out of his dream.]

K. Rich. Give me another horse! Bind up my wounds!
Have mercy, Jesu! — Soft! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me!
The lights burn blue. It is now dead mid-
night, 180
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.

What! do I fear myself? There's none else by.

Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.

Is there a murderer here? No. Yes, I am.

Then fly. What, from myself? Great reason why, ¹⁸⁵

Lest I revenge. What, myself upon myself?

Alack, I love myself. Wherefore? For any good

That I myself have done unto myself?

O, no! alas, I rather hate myself

For hateful deeds committed by myself! ¹⁹⁰

I am a villain: yet I lie, I am not.

Fool, of thyself speak well; fool, do not flatter.

My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,

And every tongue brings in a several tale,

And every tale condemns me for a villain. ¹⁹⁵

Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree;

Murder, stern murder, in the dir'st degree;

All several sins, all us'd in each degree,

Throng to the bar, crying all, Guilty! guilty!

I shall despair. There is no creature loves me;

And if I die, no soul shall pity me. ²⁰¹

Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself

Find in myself no pity to myself?

Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd

Came to my tent; and every one did threat ²⁰⁵

To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter RATCLIFF.

Rat. My lord!

K. Rich. ['Zounds!] who's there?

Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village-cock

Hath twice done salutation to the morn; ²¹⁰

Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour.

K. Rich. [O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream!

What thinkest thou, will our friends prove all true?

Rat. No doubt, my lord.]

K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I fear, —

Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. ²¹⁵

K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night

Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard

Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers

Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.

It is not yet near day. Come, go with me; ²²⁰

Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,

To hear if any mean to shrink from me. [Exeunt.]

Enter the LORDS to RICHMOND, sitting in his tent.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond!

Richm. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentlemen,

That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard here. ²²⁵

Lords. How have you slept, my lord?

Richm. The sweetest sleep and fairest-bodied dreams

That ever ent'red in a drowsy head

Have I since your departure had, my lords.

Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd, ²³⁰

Came to my tent, and cried on victory.

I promise you, my heart is very jocund

In the remembrance of so fair a dream.

How far into the morning is it, lords?

Lords. Upon the stroke of four. ²³⁵

Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen,

The leisure and enforcement of the time

Forbids to dwell upon; yet remember this,

God and our good cause fight upon our side; ²⁴⁰

The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls,

Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces.

Richard except, those whom we fight against

Had rather have us win than him they follow.

For what is he they follow? Truly, gentlemen,

A bloody tyrant and a homicide; ²⁴⁵

One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;

One that made means to come by what he hath,

And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;

A base foul stone, made precious by the foil ²⁵⁰

Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;

One that hath ever been God's enemy.

Then, if you fight against God's enemy,

God will in justice ward you as his soldiers;

If you do sweat to put a tyrant down, ²⁵⁵

You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;

If you do fight against your country's foes,

Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;

If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,

Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors; ²⁶⁰

If you do free your children from the sword,

Your children's children quits it in your age.

Then, in the name of God and all these rights,

Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.

For me, the ransom of my bold attempt ²⁶⁵

Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;

But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt

The least of you shall share his part thereof.

Sound drums and trumpets boldly and cheerfully; ²⁷⁰

God and Saint George! Richmond and victory! [Exeunt.]

Re-enter KING RICHARD, RATCLIFF, CATESBY [Attendants and Forces].

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richmond?

Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.

K. Rich. He said the truth; and what said Surrey then?

Rat. He smil'd and said, "The better for our purpose."

K. Rich. He was in the right; and so indeed it is. [Clock strikes. 275]

Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar.

Who saw the sun to-day?

Rat. Not I, my lord.

K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine, for by the book

He should have brav'd the east an hour ago.

A black day will it be to somebody. 280

Rateliff!

Rat. My lord?

K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;

The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.

I would these dewy tears were from the ground.

Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me 285

More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven

That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter NORFOLK.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.

K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; caparison my horse.

Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power.

I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain, 291

And thus my battle shall be ordered:

My foreward shall be drawn out all in length,

Consisting equally of horse and foot;

Our archers shall be placed in the midst; 295

John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of Surrey,

Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.

They thus directed, we will follow

In the main battle, whose puissance on either side

Shall be well winged with our chiefest horse.

This, and Saint George to boot! What think'st thou, Norfolk? 301

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.

This found I on my tent this morning.

[He sheweth him a paper.]

[K. Rich. Reads.] "Jockey of Norfolk, be not so bold,

For Dickon thy master is bought and sold." 305

A thing devised by the enemy.

Go, gentlemen, every man to his charge.

Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls,

For conscience is a word that cowards use,

Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe; 310

Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.

March on, join bravely, let us to 't pell-mell;

If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.

His oration to his Army.

What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?

Remember whom you are to cope withal; 315

A sort of vagabonds, rascals, and runaways,

A scum of Bretons, and base lackey peasants,

Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth

To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction.

You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest; 320

You having lands, and blest with beauteous wives,

They would restrain the one, distain the other.

And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow,

Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost?

A milk-sop, one that never in his life 325

Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?

Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;

Lash hence these overweening rags of France,

These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;

Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit, 330

For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves.

If we be conquered, let men conquer us,

And not these bastard Bretons; whom our fathers

Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and

thump'd,

And on record, left them the heirs of shame.

Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our

wives? 335

Ravish our daughters? (Drum afar off.) Hark!

I hear their drum.

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!

Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!

Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in

blood; 340

Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

Enter a MESSENGER.

What says Lord Stanley? Will he bring his power?

Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.

K. Rich. Off with his son George's head!

Nor. My lord, the enemy is past the marsh;

After the battle let George Stanley die. 345

K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom.

Advance our standards, set upon our foes;

Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,

Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons! 350

Upon them! Victory sits on our helmets.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Another part of the field.]

Alarum. Excursions. Enter [NORFOLK and forces fighting; to him] CATESBY.

Cate. Rescue, my Lord of Norfolk, rescue, rescue!

The King enacts more wonders than a man,

Daring an opposite to every danger.

His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,

Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death, 355

Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarums. Enter KING RICHARD.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

Cate. Withdraw, my lord; I'll help you to a horse.

K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,

And I will stand the hazard of the die. 360

I think there be six Richmonds in the field;

Five have I slain to-day instead of him.

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Another part of the field.]

Alarum. Enter Richard and Richmond; they fight; Richard is slain. Retreat and flourish. Re-enter RICHMOND, DERBY, bearing the crown, with divers other Lords.

Richm. God and your arms be prais'd, victorious friends;

The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.

Der. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee.

Lo, here, these long-usurped royalties
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal.
Wear it, [enjoy it,] and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say amen to all!

But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?

Der. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town; ¹⁰

Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord Ferrers,
Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as become their births. ¹⁵

Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled

That in submission will return to us;
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red.
Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction, ²⁰
That long have frown'd upon their enmity!
What traitor hears me, and says not amen?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;

The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughtered his own son, ²⁵
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire.
All this divided York and Lancaster,

Divided in their dire division,
O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,

The true succeeders of each royal house, ³⁰
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!
And let their heirs, God, if thy will be so,

Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd
Peace,
With smiling Plenty and fair prosperous days!

Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord, ³⁵
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase
That would with treason wound this fair land's

peace!
Now civil wounds are stopp'd, Peace lives

again;
That she may long live here, God say amen! ⁴¹

[Exeunt.]

THE LIFE OF HENRY THE EIGHTH

A PLAY called Henry VIII or All is True was being played in the Globe Theatre on June 29, 1613, when the theatre caught fire and was burned down. Contemporary descriptions of this piece fit the present history so exactly that there remains little doubt that the Shakespearean drama is meant. We have here, then, a later limit for its composition. Wotton, writing of the burning of the Globe, calls All is True "a new play." The chief reason urged against taking this literally lies in the reference to Elizabeth in III. ii. 50-52, and in the eulogy in V. v. 18-39, 58-63, to which the praise of James may have been added later. But eulogies of the great queen did not cease with her death; and there is much in the treatment of her parents that could hardly have been pleasing to her. In the style and metre of the undoubted Shakespearean part of the drama we find nothing pointing to a date before 1603, but much to the latest years of his activity; and it is a fairly safe conclusion that in the parts of the present play written by him we have the last of his extant work.

No edition of Henry VIII appeared till it was published in the First Folio, and on that version the present text is based.

The chief historical basis for the play is Holinshed's Chronicles. Some details seem to have come direct from Halle; and the scenes presenting the attempt to crush Cranmer (v. i., ii., iii.) are taken from Foxe's Actes and Monuments, better known as The Book of Martyrs. These sources are followed at times almost slavishly, much of the actual diction being derived from the prose narratives. Yet with all this borrowing of detail, much freedom is used in the selection and arrangement of incident, historical time is disregarded, and even the identity of personages is confused.

The characterization of Queen Katherine alone shows any great creative imagination. Though all her acts and much of her language are taken from the Chronicles, the dramatist has bestowed on her a pathetic dignity which elevates her to such a pitch that in spite of her passive rôle she stands out as the real heroine of the play. Wolsey's farewell speech (except III. ii. 455-457) is also invented; but his other important utterances and almost all his actions are based directly on Holinshed, who here drew from a variety of sources varying much in their estimate of the Cardinal. Some details seem to have been suggested by Samuel Rowley's When You See Me You Know Me (printed 1605). The low comedy scenes in the palace yard and Cranmer's closing prophecies are, of course, without historical basis.

This drama is singularly lacking in unity. The material is simply translated into dialogue or pageant; and there results a succession of brilliant stage pictures, sketches of character, and fine speeches, entirely without dramatic coherence. Buckingham, Katherine, the King, Wolsey, and Cranmer hold in succession the centre of the stage, but no causal connection is apparent in the sequence; nor is there consistency in the demand for sympathy with men or factions. This fragmentary quality alone is sufficient to suggest a doubt as to unity of authorship; and examination of the technical qualities of style and metre has confirmed this suspicion. It is now fairly generally, though not universally, conceded that the greater number of scenes are to be credited to John Fletcher, and to Shakespeare only I. i., ii.; II. iii., iv.; III. ii. 1-203; and with less assurance of purity, V. i.

Attempts have been made to deny to Shakespeare any share in the authorship, and to assign it to other authors, especially to Massinger. But various internal reasons, besides the unchallenged appearance of the play in the First Folio, prevent the acceptance of this extreme view.

No speculation on the method of collaboration has resulted in anything more than mere conjecture.

The pronunciation of "Abergavenny" is indicated by the spelling found in the Folio, "Aburgany."

THE PROLOGUE

I COME no more to make you laugh: things
now,

That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those that come to see

Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known

The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye; think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends; then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery;

And, if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

ACT I

SCENE I. [London. An ante-chamber in the palace.]

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK at one door; at the other, the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM and the LORD ABERGAVENNY.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have ye done

Since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your Grace,
Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer
Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely ague
Stay'd me a prisoner in my chamber when
Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Andren.

Nor. 'Twixt Guynes and Arde.
I was then present, saw them salute on horse-
back;

Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung
In their embracement, as they grew together;
Which had they, what four thron'd ones could have weigh'd

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time
I was my chamber's prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost
The view of earthly glory. Men might say,
Till this time pomp was single, but now married

To one above itself. Each following day
 Became the next day's master, till the last
 Made former wonders its. To-day the French,
 All clinkant, all in gold, like heathen gods,
 Shone down the English; and, to-morrow,
 they
 Made Britain India: every man that stood Show'd like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were

As cherubins, all gilt; the madams too,
 Not us'd to toil, did almost sweat to bear
 The pride upon them, that their very labour
 Was to them as a painting. Now this masque
 Was crled incomparable; and the ensuing night
 Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings,
 Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst,
 As presence did present them; him in eye,
 Still him in praise; and, being present both,
 'T was said they saw but one; and no dis-cerner

Durst wag his tongue in censure. When these suns—

For so they phrase 'em—by their heralds challeng'd

The noble spirits to arms, they did perform
 Beyond thought's compass, that former fabulous story,

Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
 That Bevis was believ'd.

Buck.

O, you go far.

Nor. As I belong to worship and affect
 In honour honesty, the tract of everything
 Would by a good discourser lose some life, Which action's self was tongue to. All was royal;

To the disposing of it nought rebell'd,
 Order gave each thing view; the office did
 Distinctly his full function.

Buck.

Who did guide, 's

I mean, who set the body and the limbs
 Of this great sport together, as you guess?

Nor. One, certes, that promises no element
 In such a business.

Buck.

I pray you, who, my lord?

Nor. All this was ord'ed by the good discretion

Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.

Buck. The devil speed him! no man's pie is freed

From his ambitious finger. What had he
 To do in these fierce vanities? I wonder
 That such a keech can with his very bulk
 Take up the rays of the beneficial sun
 And keep it from the earth.

Nor.

Surely, sir,

There's in him stuff that puts him to these
 ends;

For, being not propp'd by ancestry, whose grace
 Chalks successors their way, nor call'd upon
 For high feats done to the crown; neither allied

To eminent assistants; but, spider-like,
 Out of his self-drawing web, he gives us note,
 The force of his own merit makes his way;
 A gift that heaven gives for him, which buys
 A place next to the King.

Aber.

I cannot tell

What heaven hath given him,—let some graver
 eye

Pierce into that; but I can see his pride Peep through each part of him. Whence has he
 that?

If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,
 Or has given all before, and he begins
 A new hell in himself.

Buck.

Why the devil,

Upon this French going out, took he upon him,
 Without the privy o' the King, to appoint Who should attend on him? He makes up the file

Of all the gentry, for the most part such
 To whom as great a charge as little honour
 He meant to lay upon; and his own letter,
 The honourable board of council out,
 Must fetch him in he papers.

Aber.

I do know

Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
 By this so sicken'd their estates, that never
 They shall abound as formerly.

Buck.

O, many

Have broke their backs with laying manors on
 'em

For this great journey. What did this vanity
 But minister communication of
 A most poor issue?

Nor.

Grievingly I think

The peace between the French and us not values
 The cost that did conclude it.

Buck.

Every man,

After the hideous storm that follow'd, was
 A thing inspir'd; and, not consulting, broke
 Into a general prophecy, that this tempest,
 Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded
 The sudden breach on 't.

Nor.

Which is budded out;

For France hath flaw'd the league, and hath attach'd

Our merchants' goods at Bourdeaux.

Aber.

Is it therefore

The ambassador is silenc'd?

Nor.

Marry, is 't.

Aber. A proper title of a peace, and purchas'd
 At a superfluous rate!

Buck.

Why, all this business

Our reverend Cardinal carried.

Nor.

Like it your Grace,

The state takes notice of the private difference

Betwixt you and the Cardinal. I advise you—
 And take it from a heart that wishes towards
 you

Honour and plenteous safety—that you read
 The Cardinal's malice and his potency Together, to consider further that

What his high hatred would effect wants not
 A minister in his power. You know his nature,
 That he's revengeful, and I know his sword Hath a sharp edge; it's long, and, 't may be
 said,

It reaches far, and where 't will not extend,
 Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock

That I advise your shunning.

Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, the purse borne before him, certain of the Guard, and two SECRETARIES, with papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, ha?

Where's his examination?

I. Secr. Here, so please you.

Wol. Is he in person ready?

I. Secr. Ay, please your Grace.

Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham

Shall lessen this big look.

[Exeunt Wolsey and his train.]

Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, and I

Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best

Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book Outworts a noble's blood.

Nor. What, are you chaf'd? Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only

Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in 's looks Matter against me, and his eye revild

Me as his abject object. At this instant He bores me with some trick. He's gone to the

King;

I'll follow and outstare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord,

And let your reason with your choler question What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills

Requires slow pace at first. Anger is like A full hot horse, who being allow'd his way,

Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England Can advise me like you; be to yourself

As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the King; And from a mouth of honour quite cry down

This Ipswich fellow's insolence, or proclaim There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd;

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot That it do singe yourself. We may outrun,

By violent swiftness, that which we run at, And lose by over-running. Know you not,

The fire that mounts the liquor till 't run o'er,

In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advis'd.

I say again, there is no English soul More stronger to direct you than yourself,

If with the sap of reason you would quench, Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir, I am thankful to you; and I'll go along

By your prescription; but this top-proud fellow,

Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions, by intelligence,

And proofs as clear as founts in July when We see each grain of gravel, I do know

To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not "treasonous."

Buck. To the King I'll say 't, and make my vouch as strong

As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox, Or wolf, or both, — for he is equal ravenous

As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief As able to perform 't; his mind and place

Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally — Only to show his pomp as well in France

As here at home, suggests the King our master To this last costly treaty, the interview,

That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glass

Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. Faith, and so it did.

Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning Cardinal

The articles o' the combination drew As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified

As he cried, "Thus let be," to as much end As give a crutch to the dead. But our count-cardinal Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,

Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows, — Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy

To the old dam, treason, — Charles the Emperor,

Under pretence to see the Queen his aunt, — For 't was indeed his colour, but he came

To whisper Wolsey, — here makes visitation. His fears were, that the interview betwixt

England and France might, through their amity,

Breed him some prejudice; for from this league

Peep'd harms that menac'd him. He privily Deals with our Cardinal; and, as I trow, —

Which I do well, for I am sure the Emperor Paid ere he promis'd, whereby his suit was granted

Ere it was ask'd — but when the way was made, And pav'd with gold, the Emperor thus desir'd,

That he would please to alter the King's course, And break the foresaid peace. Let the King

know,

As soon he shall by me, that thus the Cardinal Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases

And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry To hear this of him; and could wish he were Something mistaken in 't.

Buck. No, not a syllable: I do pronounce him in that very shape

He shall appear in proof.

Enter BRANDON, a SERGEANT-AT-ARMS before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. Sir, My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I

Arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo, you, my lord. The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish

Under device and practice.

Bran. I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on ²⁰⁵
The business present. 'Tis his Highness' pleasure
You shall to the Tower.

Buck. It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence; for that dye is on
me
Which makes my whit'st part black. The will
of Heaven

Be done in this and all things! I obey. ²¹⁰
O my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!

Bran. Nay, he must bear you company.
The King [To Abergavenny.]
Is pleas'd you shall to the Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

Aber. As the Duke said,
The will of Heaven be done, and the King's pleasure ²¹⁵
By me obey'd!

Bran. Here is a warrant from The King to attach Lord Montacute, and the bodies

Of the Duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Peck, his chancellor, —

Buck. So, so;
These are the limbs o' the plot. No more, I hope? ²²⁰

Bran. A monk o' the Chartreux.

Buck. O, [Nicholas] Hopkins?

Bran. He.

Buck. My surveyor is false; the o'er-great
Cardinal
Hath show'd him gold; my life is spann'd already.

I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on,
By dark'ning my clear sun. My lord, farewell. [Exeunt. ²²⁵

SCENE II. [The same. The council-chamber.]

Cornets. Enter the KING, leaning on the CARDI-NAL'S shoulder, the Nobles, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL; the Cardinal places himself under the King's feet on his right side.

King. My life itself, and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care. I stood i' the level

Of a full-charg'd confederacy, and give thanks
To you that chok'd it. Let be call'd before us
That gentleman of Buckingham's; in person ^s
I'll hear him his confessions justify,
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.

A noise within, crying, "Room for the Queen!"
Enter QUEEN KATHERINE, ushered by the DUKE OF NORFOLK, and the DUKE OF SUFFOLK; she kneels. The King riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by
him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a suitor.

King. Arise, and take place by us. Half your suit ¹⁰
Never name to us, you have half our power;

The other moiety, ere you ask, is given.

Repeat your will and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your Majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsidered leave your honour, nor ¹⁵
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

King. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance. There have been commissions ²⁰

Sent down among 'em, which hath flaw'd the
heart

Of all their loyalties; wherein, although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter on
Of these exactions, yet the King our master — ²⁵ Whose honour Heaven shield from soil! — even he escapes not

Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

Nor. Not "almost appears,"
It doth appear; for, upon these taxations, ³⁰
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longing, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell'd by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar, ³⁶

And danger serves among them.

King. Taxation!
Wherein? and what taxation? My Lord
Cardinal,

You that are blam'd for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, ⁴⁰
I know but of a single part, in aught Pertains to the state; and front but in that file

Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord?
You know no more than others? But you frame Things that are known alike, which are not wholesome ⁴⁵

To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions,

Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are

Most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear 'em,
The back is sacrifice to the load. They say ⁵⁰
They are devis'd by you; or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.

King. Still exaction!
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bold'ned
Under your promis'd pardon. The subjects' grief ⁵⁶

Comes through commissions, which compels from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied

Without delay ; and the pretence for this Is nam'd, your wars in France. This makes bold mouths ;

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts
freeze

Allegiance in them ; their curses now Live where their prayers did ; and it's come to pass,

This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would your Highness Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.

King. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,
I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice ; and that not pass'd me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am Traduc'd by ignorant tongues, which neither
know

My faculties nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say

'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions, in the fear

To cope malicious censurers ; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow

That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is

Not ours, or not allow'd ; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,

In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State-statues only.

King. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear ;
Things done without example, in their issue

Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission ? I believe, not any.

We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each ?
A trembling contribution ! Why, we take

From every tree, lop, bark, and part o' the timber ;

And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question'd send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has deni'd

The force of this commission. Pray, look to't ;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you.
[To the Secretary, aside.]

Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the King's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons

Hardly conceive of me ; let it be nois'd
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes. I shall anon advise you Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.]

Enter SURVEYOR.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham

Is run in your displeasure.

King. It grieves many.

The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare
speaker ;

To nature none more bound ; his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,

And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove

Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,

They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd list'ning, could not find
His hour of speech a minute ; he, my lady,

Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black As if besmear'd in hell. Sit by us ; you shall hear —

This was his gentleman in trust — of him
Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices, whereof

We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,

Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

King. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the King
Should without issue die, he'll carry it to
To make the sceptre his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergavenny ; to whom by oath he menac'd

Revenge upon the Cardinal.

Wol. Please your Highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.

Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant ; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd Lord Cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

King. Speak on.
How grounded he his title to the crown ?
Upon our fail ? To this point hast thou heard
him

At any time speak aught ?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Henton.

King. What was that Henton ?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor ; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

King. How know'st thou this ?
Surv. Not long before your Highness sped to
France,

The Duke being at the Rose, within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey. I repli'd,

Men fear the French would prove perfidious,
To the King's danger. Presently the Duke Said, 'twas the fear, indeed ; and that he doubted

'T would prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk, "that oft," says he,

"Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment;
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke 158
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd: 'Neither the King nor's
heirs,
Tell you the Duke, shall prosper. Bid him
strive 160
To gain the love o' the commonalty. The Duke Shall govern England.'"

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the Duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o' the tenants. Take good heed

You charge not in your spleen a noble person
And spoil your nobler soul; I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

King. Let him on. 176
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the Duke, by the devil's illusions

The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 't was dangerous for him

To ruminate on this so far, until 180
It forg'd him some design; which, being be-
liev'd,

It was much like to do. He answer'd, "Tush,
It can do me no damage;" adding further
That, had the King in his last sickness fail'd,
The Cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

King. Ha! what, so rank? Ah ha! 186
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

King. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your Highness had reprov'd the Duke
About Sir William Bulmer, —

King. I remember 190
Of such a time; being my sworn servant,
The Duke retain'd him his. But on; what
hence?

Surv. "If," quoth he, "I for this had been committed,"
—As, to the Tower, I thought, — "I would have play'd

The part my father meant to act upon 195
The usurper Richard; who, being at Salisbury, Made suit to come in's presence; which if
granted,

As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him."

King. A giant traitor!
Wol. Now, madam, may his Highness live in freedom, 200

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. God mend all!

King. There's something more would out of thee; what say'st?

Surv. After "the Duke his father," with
"the knife,"

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger, 204
Another spread on 's breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was, were he evil us'd, he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.

King. There's his period,
To sheathe his knife in us. He is attach'd. 210
Call him to present trial. If he may Find mercy in the law, 't is his; if none,
Let him not seek 't of us. By day and night,
He's traitor to the height. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [An ante-chamber in the palace.]

Enter the LORD CHAMBERLAIN and LORD
SANDYS.

Cham. Is't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange mysteries?

San. New customs,
Though they be never so ridiculous,
Nay, let 'em be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English 5

Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;

For when they hold 'em, you would swear directly

Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius, they keep state so. 10

San. They have all new legs, and lame ones.
One would take it,

That never saw 'em pace before, the spavin
Or springhalt reign'd among 'em.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they've worn out Christendom.

Enter SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

How now! 15
What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Lov. Faith, my lord
I hear of none, but the new proclamation
That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is 't for?
Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,

That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors. 20

Cham. I'm glad 'tis there. Now I would pray our monsieus

To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.

Lov. They must either,
For so run the conditions, leave those remnants

Of fool and feather that they got in France, 25
With all their honourable points of ignorance
Pertaining thereunto, as fights and fireworks,

Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom, renouncing clean

The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings, Short blist'rd breeches, and those types of travel, 31

And understand again like honest men,

Or pack to their old playfellows. There, I take it,

They may, "cum privilegio," wear away
The lag end of their lewdness and be laugh'd at.
San. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases

Are grown so catching.
Cham.

What a loss our ladies
Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,
There will be woe indeed, lords; the sly whoresons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies. 40
A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

San. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they are going,

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em. Now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song

And have an hour of hearing; and, by 'r Lady,
Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sandys;
Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

San. No, my lord;
Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,
Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the Cardinal's.
Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true: 51
This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;
His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble;
He had a black mouth that said other of him.

San. He may, my lord; has wherewithal; in
him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine. 60

Men of his way should be most liberal;
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;
But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir

Thomas,

We shall be late else; which I would not be, 65
For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford

This night to be comptrollers.
San. I am your lordship's.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [A Hall in York Place.]

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests. Then enter ANNE BULLEN and divers other Ladies and Gentlemen as guests, at one door; at another door, enter SIR HENRY GUILDFORD.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his Grace

Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates

To fair content and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with merry
One care abroad. He would have all as merry
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome,

Can make good people.

Enter LORD CHAMBERLAIN, LORD SANDYS, and SIR THOMAS LOVELL.

O, my lord, you're tardy;
The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to me.

Cham. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.

San. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the Cardinal 10
But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em. By my life,
They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O, that your lordship were but now confessor

To one or two of these!

San. I would I were;
They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy?

San. As easy as a down-bed would afford it.

Cham. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit?
Sir Harry,

Place you that side; I'll take the charge of
this.

His Grace is ent'ring. Nay, you must not freeze;

Two women plac'd together makes cold
weather.

My Lord Sandys, you are one will keep 'em waking;

Pray, sit between these ladies.

San. By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies.

If I chauce to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?

San. O, very mad, exceeding mad; in love
too;

But he would bite none. Just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.]
Cham. Well said, my lord.

So, now you're fairly seated. Gentlemen, 31
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies

Pass away frowning.

San. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter CARDINAL WOLSEY, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests. That noble lady

Or gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my friend. This, to confirm my welcome;

And to you all, good health. [Drinks.]

San. Your Grace is noble.
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sandys, 40
I am beholding to you; cheer your neighbours.

Ladies, you are not merry. Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

San. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em

Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My Lord Sandys.

San. Yes, if I make my play. ⁴⁶
Here 's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For 't is to such a thing, —

Anne. You cannot show me.

San. I told your Grace they would talk anon.

[Drum and trumpet, chambers discharged.]

Wol. What 's that?

Cham. Look out there, some of ye.

[Exit Servant.]

Wol. What warlike voice,
And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear not; ⁶¹

By all the laws of war you 're privileg'd.

Re-enter SERVANT.

Cham. How now! what is 't?

Serv. A noble troop of strangers,
For so they seem. They 've left their barge and
landed,

And hither make as great ambassadors ⁶⁵
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good Lord Chamberlain,
Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue;

And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him. ⁶⁰

[Exit Chamberlain, attended.] All rise, and tables remov'd.

You have now a broken banquet; but we 'll mend it.

A good digestion to you all; and once more
I shower a welcome on ye. Welcome all!

Hautboys. Enter the KING and others, as masquers, habited like shepherds, usher'd by the LORD CHAMBERLAIN. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! What are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd ⁶⁵

To tell your Grace, that, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no
less,

Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct, ⁷⁰

Crave leave to view these ladies and entreat
An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em

A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take their pleasures.

[They choose Ladies [for the dance].]

The King chooses Anne Bullen.

King. The fairest hand I ever touch'd! O beauty, ⁷⁵

Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Dance.]

Wol. My lord!

Cham. Your Grace?

Wol. Pray, tell 'em thus much from me:
There should be one amongst 'em, by his per-
son,

More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If I but knew him, with my love and duty ⁸⁰
I would surrender it.

Cham. I will, my lord.

[Whispers [the Masquers].]

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess,
There is indeed; which they would have your
Grace

Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see, then.
By all your good leaves, gentlemen; here I 'll make ⁸⁵

My royal choice.

King. Ye have found him, Cardinal.

[Unmasking.]

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord.

You are a churchman, or, I 'll tell you, Cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad ⁸⁹

Your Grace is grown so pleasant.

King. My Lord Chamberlain,
Prithee, come hither. What fair lady 's that?

Cham. An't please your Grace, Sir Thomas
Bullen's daughter, —

The Viscount Rochford, — one of her Highness' ⁹⁰
women.

King. By heaven, she is a dainty one.

Sweetheart,

I were unmannerly to take you out ⁹⁵

And not to kiss you. A health, gentlemen!

Let it go round.

Wol. Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready

I' the privy chamber?

Lov. Yes, my lord.

Wol. Your Grace,
I fear, with dancing is a little heated. ¹⁰⁰

King. I fear, too much.

Wol. There 's fresher air, my lord,
In the next chamber.

King. Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet partner,

I must not yet forsake you; let 's be merry.
Good my Lord Cardinal, I have half a dozen ¹⁰⁵
healths

To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead 'em once again; and then let 's dream

Who 's best in favour. Let the music knock it.
[Exeunt with trumpets.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Westminster. A street.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN at several doors.

1. Gent. Whither away so fast?

2. Gent. O, God save ye!

Even to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

1. Gent. I'll save you That labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony

Of bringing back the prisoner.

2. Gent. Were you there?

1. Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.

2. Gent. Pray, speak what has happen'd.

1. Gent. You may guess quickly what.

2. Gent. Is he found guilty?

1. Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon 't.

2. Gent. I am sorry for 't.

1. Gent. So are a number more.

2. Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

1. Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great
Duke

Came to the bar; where to his accusations

He pleaded still not guilty and alleged

Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.

The King's attorney on the contrary

Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions

Of divers witnesses; which the Duke desir'd

To have brought viva voce to his face;

At which appear'd against him his surveyor;

Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car,

Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,

Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2. Gent. That was he

That fed him with his prophecies?

1. Gent. The same.

All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain

Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not.

And so his peers, upon this evidence,

Have found him guilty of high treason. Much

He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all

Was either pitied in him or forgotten.

2. Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?

1. Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear

His knell rung out, his judgement, he was stirr'd

With such an agony, he sweat extremely,

And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty.

But he fell to himself again, and sweetly

In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2. Gent. I do not think he fears death.

1. Gent. Sure, he does not;

He never was so womanish. The cause

He may a little grieve at.

2. Gent. Certainly

The Cardinal is the end of this.

1. Gent. 'Tis likely,

By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,

Then deputy of Ireland; who remov'd,

Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,

Lest he should help his father.

2. Gent. That trick of state

Was a deep envious one.

1. Gent. At his return

No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,

And generally, whoever the King favours,

The Cardinal instantly will find employment,

And far enough from court too.

2. Gent.

All the commons
Hate him perniciously, and, o' my conscience,
Wish him ten fathom deep. This duke as much
They love and dote on; call him bounteous
Buckingham,

The mirror of all courtesy, —

*Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment; tipstaves before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side: accompanied with SIR THOMAS LOVELL, SIR NICHOLAS VAUX,
Sir [William] Sandys, and common people.*

1. Gent.

Stay there, sir,
And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

2. Gent. Let 's stand close, and behold him.

Buck. All good people,

You that thus far have come to pity me,
Hear what I say, and then go home and lose
me.

I have this day receiv'd a traitor's judgement,
And by that name must die; yet, Heaven bear
witness,

And if I have a conscience, let it sink me,
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!

The law I bear no malice for my death;

'T has done, upon the premises, but justice;

But those that sought it I could wish more Christians.

Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em;
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief,

Nor build their evils on the graves of great
men,

For then my guiltless blood must cry against
'em.

For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the King have mercies

More than I dare make faults. You few that lov'd me

And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave

Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;

And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,

And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.

Lov. I do beseech your Grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart

Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.

Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive
you

As I would be forgiven. I forgive all.
There cannot be those numberless offences

'Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with; no black envy

Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his
Grace;

And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him
You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers

Yet are the King's; and, till my soul forsake, Shall cry for blessings on him. May he live

Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever below'd and loving may his rule be!

And when old Time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!

Lov. To the water side I must conduct your Grace;
Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.

Vaux. Prepare there,
The Duke is coming. See the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas,
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable

And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun.

Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant. I now seal it;

And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for 't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd,
And without trial fell; God's peace be with him!

Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,

Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes me

A little happier than my wretched father.
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes: both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most;

A most unnatural and faithless service.
Heaven has an end in all; yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:
Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels

Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye; never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good people,

Pray for me! I must now forsake ye. The last hour

Of my long weary life is come upon me.

Farewell!

And when you would say something that is sad,

Speak how I fell. I have done; and God forgive me!

1. Gent. O, this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.

2. Gent. If the Duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe; yet I can give you inking
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.

1. Gent. Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith,
sir?

2. Gent. This secret is so weighty, 't will require

A strong faith to conceal it.

1. Gent. Let me have it.
I do not talk much.

2. Gent. I am confident;
You shall, sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation
Between the King and Katherine?

1. Gent. Yes, but it held not;
For when the King once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.

2. Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now; for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain

The King will venture at it. Either the Cardinal,

Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good Queen, possess'd him with a scruple

That will undo her. To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately;
As all think, for this business.

1. Gent. 'Tis the Cardinal;
And merely to revenge him on the Emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpos'd.

2. Gent. I think you have hit the mark; but is 't not cruel

That she should feel the smart of this? The Cardinal

Will have his will, and she must fall.

1. Gent. 'Tis woeful.
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [An ante-chamber in the palace.]

Enter the LORD CHAMBERLAIN, reading this letter:

[Cham.] "My lord, the horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnish'd. They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by [s commission and main power, took 'em from me, with this reason: His master would be serv'd before a subject, if not before the King; which stopp'd our mouths, sir." I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them; He will have all, I think.

Enter, to the Lord Chamberlain, the DUKES OF NORFOLK AND SUFFOLK.

Nor. Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good day to both your Graces.

Suf. How is the King employ'd?

Cham. I left him private,

Full of sad thoughts and troubles.

Nor. What's the cause?

Cham. It seems the marriage with his brother's wife

Has crept too near his conscience.

Suf. No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady.

Nor. 'Tis so.
This is the Cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal.
That blind priest, like the eldest son of Fortune,

Turns what he list. The King will know him one day.

Suf. Pray God he do! he'll never know himself else.

Nor. How holily he works in all his business!
And with what zeal! for, now he has crack'd the league

Between us and the Emperor, the Queen's great nephew,

He dives into the King's soul, and there scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
Fears, and despair; and all these for his marriage.

And out of all these to restore the King,
He counsels a divorce; a loss of her

That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;

Of her that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her

That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,

Will bless the King. And is not this course pious?

Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel!
'Tis most true

These news are everywhere; every tongue speaks 'em,

And every true heart weeps for 't. All that dare

Look into these affairs see this main end,
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day

open
The King's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.

Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;

Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages. All men's honours

Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed.

As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the King please; his curses and his blessings

Touch me alike, they're breath I not believe in.

I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the Pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the King

From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him.

My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The King has sent me elsewhere. Besides,

You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him.
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain; Norfolk draws the curtain, and discovers the King reading pensively.]

Suf. How sad he looks! Sure, he is much afflicted.

King. Who's there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

King. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves

Into my private meditations?

Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences

Malice ne'er meant. Our breach of duty this way

Is business of estate; in which we come
To know your royal pleasure.

King. Ye are too bold.
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business.

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS, with a commission.

Who's there? My good Lord Cardinal? O my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience,
Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To Camp.]

You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom;

Use us and it. [To Wol.] My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would your Grace would give us but an hour

Of private conference.

King. [To Nor. and Suf.] We are busy; go.
Nor. [Aside to Suf.] This priest has no pride in him?

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] Not to speak of.
I would not be so sick, though, for his place.

But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] If it do,
I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] I another.

[Exit Nor. and Suf.]
Wol. Your Grace has given a precedent of wisdom

Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom.

Who can be angry now? What envy reach
you?

The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,
Must now confess, if they have any goodness,

The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms

Have their free voices. Rome, the nurse of judgement,

Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good man,

This just and learned priest, Cardinal Cam-
peius,

Whom once more I present unto your Highness.

King. And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,
And thank the holy conclave for their loves.
They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

Cam. Your Grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,
You are so noble. To your Highness' hand I tender my commission; by whose virtue,
The court of Rome commanding, you, my Lord

Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant
In the unpartial judging of this business.

King. Two equal men. The Queen shall be acquainted

Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your Majesty has always lov'd her

So dear in heart not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law,
Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.

King. Ay, and the best she shall have, and my favour

To him that does best; God forbid else. Cardinal,

Prithee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary.
I find him a fit fellow. [Exit Wolsey.]

Re-enter [WOLSEY, with] GARDINER.

Wol. [Aside to Gard.] Give me your hand.
Much joy and favour to you;

You are the King's now.

Gard. [Aside to Wol.] But to be commanded
For ever by your Grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

King. Come hither, Gardiner.
[Walks and whispers.]

Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace

In this man's place before him?

Wol. Yes, he was.

Cam. Was he not held a learned man?

Wol. Yes, surely.

Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then

Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How! of me?

Cam. They will not stick to say you envi'd him,

And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still; which so griev'd him,

That he ran mad and died.

Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough. For living murderers

There's places of rebuke. He was a fool,
For he would needs be virtuous. That good fellow,

If I command him, follows my appointment;
I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,

We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.

King. Deliver this with modesty to the Queen.
[Exit Gardiner.]

The most convenient place that I can think of
For such receipt of learning is Black-Friars;
There ye shall meet about this weighty business.

My Wolsey, see it furnish'd. O, my lord,
Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!

O, 't is a tender place; and I must leave her.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [An ante-chamber of the Queen's apartments.]

Enter ANNE BULLEN and an OLD LADY.

Anne. Not for that neither. Here's the pang that pinches:

His Highness having liv'd so long with her, and she

So good a lady that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her, — by my life,
She never knew harm-doing — O, now, after
So many courses of the sun enthroned,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than
'T is sweet at first to acquire, — after this process,

To give her the avaunt, it is a pity
Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will, much better
She ne'er had known pomp! Though 't be temporal,

Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 't is a sufferance panging
As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady!
She's a stranger now again.

Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 't is better to be lowly born
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perk'd up in a glistening grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth and maidenhead,
I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, I would,
And venture maidenhead for 't; and so would you,

For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,
Have too a woman's heart, which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty;
Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and which gifts,

Saving your mincing, the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would receive,

If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth.
Old L. Yes, troth, and troth. You would not be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'Tis strange. A three-pence bow'd would hire me,
Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? Have you limbs
To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in truth.
Old L. Then you are weakly made; pluck off a little. 40

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to. If your back Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 't is too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen 45
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing. I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo, who comes
here?

Enter the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were 't worth to know 50

The secret of your conference?
Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking.
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women. There is hope 55
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!
Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady, Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's Ta'en of your many virtues, the King's Majesty 60

Commends his good opinion of you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know 65
What kind of my obedience I should tender.
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallowed, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, 70 Vouchsafe to speak my thanks and my obedience,

As from a blushing handmaid, to his Highness;
Whose health and royalty I pray for.

Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The King hath of you. [Aside.] I have perus'd 75 her well.

Beauty and honour in her are so mingled
That they have caught the King; and who knows yet

But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle? I'll to the King,
And say I spoke with you.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Anne. My honour'd lord.
Old L. Why, this it is; see, see! 81
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtier beggarly, nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate! 85
A very fresh-fish here—fie, fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune!—have your mouth fill'd up

Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.
Old L. How tastes it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no.

There was a lady once, 't is an old story, 90
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt. Have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme, I could O'er mount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year for pure respect! 95
No other obligation! By my life,
That promises mee thousands; Honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess. Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy, 101

And leave me out on 't. Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot. It faints me,
To think what follows.

The Queen is comfortless, and we forgetful 105
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard to her.

Old L. What do you think me?
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [A hall in Black-Friars.]

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Ver-gers, with short silver wands; next them, two SCRIBES, in the habit of doctors; after them, the [ARCH]BISHOP of CANTERBURY alone; after him, the BISHOPS of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHE-STER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a GENTLEMAN USHER bareheaded, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-arms bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. The KING takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The QUEEN takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory: below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Vol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,

Let silence be commanded.

King.

What's the need?

It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd; 4
You may, then, spare that time.

Wol. Be't so. Proceed.
Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry King of England, etc.
King. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katherine Queen of England, come into the court. 11

Crier. Katherine Queen of England, etc.
[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

[Q. Kath.] Sir, I desire you do me right and justice,

And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger, 15

Born out of your dominions, having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance

Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,
In what have I offended you? What cause

Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure, 20
That thus you should proceed to put me off

And take your good grace from me? Heaven
witness,

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;

Ever in fear to kindle your dislike, 25
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry

As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire,

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew 30
He were mine enemy? What friend of mine

That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice

He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife in this obedience 35
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest

With many children by you. If, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,

And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty, 40

Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul't contempt

Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir,

The King, your father, was reputed for 45
A prince most prudent, of an excellent

And unmatch'd wit and judgement; Ferdinand,

My father, King of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince that there had reign'd by many

A year before; it is not to be question'd 50

That they had gather'd a wise council to
them

Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful; wherefore I humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may

Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel 55

I will implore. If not, i' the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,
And of your choice, these reverend fathers;

men
Of singular integrity and learning.

Yea, the elect o' the land, who are assembled 60
To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless

That longer you desire the court; as well

For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the King.

Cam. His Grace
Hath spoken well and justly; therefore, 65

madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed,

And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord Cardinal,
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam? 70

Q. Kath. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that

We are a queen, or long have dream'd so,
certain

The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay,

before, 75
Or God will punish me. I do believe,

Induced by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy, and make my challenge

You shall not be my judge; for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,

Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say 80
again,

I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once

more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not

At all a friend to truth.
Wol. I do profess

You speak not like yourself, who ever yet 85
Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects

Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong.

I have no spleen against you, nor injustice

For you or any. How far I have proceeded, 90
Or how far further shall, is warranted

By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me

That I have blown this coal. I do deny it.

The King is present: if it be known to him 95
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,

And worthily, my falsehood! yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know

That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him 100

It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you; the which

before
His Highness shall speak in. I do beseech

You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, 105
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. You're meek and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,
With meekness and humility; but your heart
Is cramm'd with arrogancy, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his Highness' fa-
vours, 111

Gone slightly o'er low steps and now are mounted
Where powers are your retainers, and your
words,

Domestics to you, serve your will as 't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
you, 115

You tender more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the Pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his Holiness, 120
And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.]

Cam. The Queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by 't: 't is not well.
She's going away.

King. Call her again. 125

Crier. Katherine, Queen of England, come into the court.

Gent. Ush. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? Pray you,
keep your way;

When you are call'd, return. Now, the Lord help!

They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass on. 130

I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants.]

King. Go thy ways, Kate,
That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted, 135
For speaking false in that. Thou art, alone,
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,
The queen of earthly queens. She's noble
born; 141

And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your Highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these ears, — for, where I am robb'd and bound, 146

There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once and fully satisfi'd, — whether ever I Did broach this business to your Highness, or Laid any scruple in your way, which might 150
Induce you to the question on 't? or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least word that might

Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

King. My Lord Cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour, 154
I free you from 't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village-curs, 159
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The Queen is put in anger. You're excus'd;
But will you be more justifi'd? You ever Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never desir'd

It to be stirr'd; but oft have hind' red, oft,
The passages made toward it. On my honour,
I speak my good Lord Cardinal to this point, 164
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to 't,

I will be bold with time and your attention:
Then mark the inducement. Thus it came;
give heed to 't:

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, 174
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador;

Who had been hither sent on the debating
A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary. I' the progress of this business, 178

Ere a determinate resolution, he,
I mean the Bishop, did require a respite;
Wherein he might the King his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometimes our brother's wife. This respite shook 181

The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me,
Yea, with a splitting power, and made to trem-
ble

The region of my breast; which forc'd such
way,

That many maz'd considerations did throng 185
And press'd in with this caution. First, methought

I stood not in the smile of Heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should
Do no more offices of life to 't than 190
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought

This was a judgement on me; that my kingdom,

Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should
not 198

Be gladdened in 't by me. Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood
in

By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer 200
Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that 's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience, — which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well, —
By all the reverend fathers of the land 205
And doctors learn'd. First I began in private

With you, my Lord of Lincoln. You remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.
King. I have spoke long; be pleas'd yourself to say 210

How far you satisfi'd me.

Lin. So please your Highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in 't
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt; 215
And did entreat your Highness to this course
Which you are running here.

King. I then mov'd you,
My Lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons. Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court; 220
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals. Therefore, go on;
For no dislike I' the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drives this forward. 225
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katherine our queen, before the primest creature

That's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your Highness, 230
The Queen being absent, 't is a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day.
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the Queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his Holiness.

King. [Aside.] I may perceive
These Cardinals trifle with me; I abhor 235
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome,
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
Prithee, return. With thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along.—Break up the court! 240

I say, set on.

[Exeunt in manner as they enter'd.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [London. The Queen's apartments.]

The QUEEN and her women, as at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench; my soul grows sad with troubles.
Sing, and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees
And the mountain tops that freeze
Bow themselves when he did sing. 5
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

Everything that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by. 10

In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a GENTLEMAN.

Q. Kath. How now! 15
Gent. An't please your Grace, the two great Cardinals

Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?
Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their Graces
To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour? 20

I do not like their coming. Now I think on't,
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous.

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, WOLSEY and CAM-PEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your Highness!

Q. Kath. Your Graces find me here part of a housewife;
I would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend
lords? 25

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience, 30

Deserves a corner. Would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, so much I am happy
Above a number, if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em, 35
I know my life so even. If your business Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly. Truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,— 41

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in.
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious; 45

Pray, speak in English. Here are some will
thank you,
If you speak truth, for their poor mistress'
sake.

Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord
Cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed
May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady, 50
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his Majesty and you,
So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.
We come not by the way of accusation
To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,
Nor to betray you any way to sorrow; 55

You have too much, good lady; but to know
How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the King and you; and to deliver,
Like free and honest men, our just opinions 60
And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam,
My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,
Zeal and obedience he still bore your Grace,
Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
Both of his truth and him, which was too far, 66
Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,
His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. [Aside.] To betray me. —
My lords, I thank you both for your good wills.
Ye speak like honest men; pray God, ye prove
so!

But how to make ye suddenly an answer, 70
In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,—

More near my life, I fear,—with my weak wit,
And to such men of gravity and learning,
In truth I know not. I was set at work Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking 76

Either for such men or such business.
For her sake that I have been,—for I feel
The last fit of my greatness—good your Graces,
Let me have time and counsel for my cause.
Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless! 80

Wol. Madam, you wrong the King's love
with these fears.

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England
But little for my profit. Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel?
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his Highness'
pleasure, 86

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth; my friends,
They that much weigh out my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here.
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence
In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your Grace 91
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the King's protection;

He's loving and most gracious. 'T will be much
Both for your honour better and your cause; 96
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly.

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,
—my ruin.

Is this your Christian counsel? Out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge 100
That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us.

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! Holy men
I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
But cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye.
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords! Is this your comfort, 106

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,

A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries;
I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye:
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest
at once 110

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing! Woe upon ye

And all such false professors! Would you have
me— 116

If you have any justice, any pity;
If ye be anything but churchmen's habits—
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates
me?

Alas, he's banish'd me his bed already,
His love, too, long ago! I am old, my lords, 120
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen To me above this wretchedness? All your studies

Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—let me speak myself, 126

Since virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true
one?

A woman, I dare say without vain-glory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?

Have I with all my full affections
Still met the King? loved him next Heaven?
obey'd him? 134

Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded! 'T is not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure; 136

And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience.

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself
so guilty,

To give up willingly that noble title 140
Your master wed me to. Nothing but death

Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Wol. Pray, hear me.

Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,

Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but Heaven knows your hearts. 146

What will become of me now, wretched lady!
I am the most unhappy woman living.

Alas, poor wenches, where are now your fortunes!

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me;
No no grave allow'd me. Like the lily, 151
That once was mistress of the field and flour-
ish'd,

I'll hang my head and perish.

Wol. If your Grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest.

You'd feel more comfort. Why should we,
good lady, 165
Upon what cause, wrong you? Alas, our places,

The way of our profession is against it;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly 160
Grow from the King's acquaintance, by this carriage.

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper, 165
A soul as even as a calm; pray, think us
Those we profess, peacemakers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears. A noble
spirit

As yours was, put into you, ever casts 170
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The King loves you;

Beware you lose it not. For us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords; and,
pray, forgive me 175

If I have us'd myself unmannerly.
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.

Pray, do my service to his Majesty;
He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers 180

While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,

Bestow your counsels on me. She now begs,
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Ante-chamber to the King's apartment.]

Enter the DUKE OF NORFOLK, the DUKE OF SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints

And force them with a constancy, the Cardinal
Cannot stand under them. If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces, 5
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the Duke,
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have unconcern'd gone by him, or at least 10
Strangely neglected? When did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures.
What he deserves of you and me I know;
What we can do to him, though now the time 15

Gives way to us, I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the King, never attempt Anything on him; for he hath a witchcraft
Over the King in's tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not;
His spell in that is out. The King hath found 20
Matter against him that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true. 25
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how?

Suf. The Cardinal's letters to the Pope miscarried, 30

And came to the eye o' the King; wherein was
read,

How that the Cardinal did entreat his Holiness
To stay the judgement o' the divorce; for if
It did take place, "I do," quoth he, "perceive
My king is tangled in affection to 35
A creature of the Queen's, Lady Anne Bullen."

Sur. Has the King this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Will this work?

Cham. The King in this perceives him, how he coasts

And hedges his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death. The King already 40
Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!

For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now, all my joy 44
Trace the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to 't!

Nor. All men's!

Suf. There's order given for her coronation.
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature. I persuade me, from her Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall 51

In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But, will the King
Digest this letter of the Cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;

There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal
Campeius 56

Is stolen away to Rome, hath ta'en no leave;
He's left the cause o' the King unhandled, and
Is posted, as the agent of our Cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you 60
The King cried "Ha!" at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him,
And let him cry "Ha!" louder!
Nor. But, my lord,

When returns Cranmer?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions; which Have satisfied the King for his divorce, 55
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be call'd Queen, but Princess Dowager 70
And widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the King's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.
Suf. 'Tis so.

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

The Cardinal!

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody. 75
Wol. The packet, Cromwell,
Gave 't you the King?

Crom. To his own hand, in 's bedchamber.
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently
He did unseal them; and the first he view'd, 80
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.
Wol. Leave me a while. [Exit Cromwell.]
[Aside.] It shall be to the Duchess of Alen- 85
çon,

The French king's sister; he shall marry her.
Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for
him;

There's more in 't than fair visage. Bullen!
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke! 90

Nor. He's discontented.
Suf. May be, he hears the King
Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. [Aside.] The late queen's gentlewo-man, a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the Queen's
queen! 95

This candle burns not clear: 't is I must snuff
it;
Then out it goes. What though I know her virtuous

And well deserving? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung 101
up

An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the King,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He's vex'd at something.

Enter the KING, reading a schedule [and Lov-ELL].

Sur. I would 't were something that would fret the string, 105
The master-cord on 's heart!

Suf. The King, the King!
King. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated

To his own portion! and what expense by the hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,

Does he rake this together! Now, my lords, 110
Saw you the Cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion

Is in his brain; he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight 115
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard, and anon he casts
His eye against the moon. In most strange postures

We have seen him set himself.

King. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in 's mind. This morning 120
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; and wot you what I found
There,—on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household;
which 125

I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's Heaven's will!
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To bless your eye withal.

King. If we did think 130
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still Dwell in his musings; but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[King takes his seat; whispers Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.]

Wol. Heaven forgive me! 135
Ever God bless your Highness!

King. Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind; the which You were now running o'er. You have scarce
time

To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span 140
To keep your earthly audit. Sure, in that I deem you an ill husband, and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which 145
I bear i' the state; and Nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

King. You have said well.
Wol. And ever may your Highness yoke together, 150
 As I will lend you cause, my doing well
 With my well saying!

King. 'Tis well said again;
 And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well;
 And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd
 you;
 He said he did; and with his deed did crown
 His word upon you. Since I had my office, 156
 I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
 Employ'd you where high profits might come
 home,
 But par'd my present havings, to bestow
 My bounties upon you.

Wol. [Aside.] What should this mean?
Sur. [Aside.] The Lord increase this business!

King. Have I not made you 161
 The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell
 me,

If what I now pronounce you have found true;
 And, if you may confess it, say withal,
 If you are bound to us or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess your royal graces, 166
 Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could

My studied purposes requite, which went Beyond all man's endeavours. My endeavours
 Have ever come too short of my desires, 170
 Yet fill'd with my abilities. Mine own ends
 Have been mine so that evermore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and
 The profit of the state. For your great graces
 Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I 175

Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
 My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
 Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
 Till death, that winter, kill it.

King. Fairly answer'd.
 A loyal and obedient subject is 180
 Therein illustrated. The honour of it
 Does pay the act of it, as i' the contrary,
 The foulness is the punishment. I presume
 That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
 My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
 more 185

On you than any, so your hand and heart,
 Your brain, and every function of your power,
 Should, notwithstanding that your bond of
 duty,

As 'twere in love's particular, be more
 To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess 190
 That for your Highness' good I ever labour'd
 More than mine own, that am, have, and will
 be—

Though all the world should crack their duty
 to you,

And throw it from their soul; though perils
 did

Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em, and 195

Appear in forms more horrid, — yet my duty,
 As doth a rock against the chiding flood,

Should the approach of this wild river break,
 And stand unshaken yours.

King. 'Tis nobly spoken.
 Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast, 200
 For you have seen him open 't. Read o'er this;
 [Giving him papers.]

And, after, this; and then to breakfast with What appetite you have.

[Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal

Wolsey: the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.

Wol. What should this mean?
 What sudden anger 's this? How have I reap'd
 it?

He parted frowning from me, as if ruin 205
 Leap'd from his eyes. So looks the chafed lion
 Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him;
 Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper;

I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so!
 This paper has undone me. 'Tis the account 210
 Of all that world of wealth I have drawn to—gether

For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the pope-
 dom

And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence,
 Fit for a fool to fall by! What cross devil
 Made me put this main secret in the packet 215
 I sent the King? Is there no way to cure this?
 No new device to beat this from his brains?
 I know 't will stir him strongly; yet I know
 A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune Will bring me off again. What's this? "To the Pope!" 220

The letter, as I live, with all the business
 I write to 's Holiness. Nay then, farewell!
 I have touch'd the highest point of all my great-
 ness;

And, from that full meridian of my glory,
 I haste now to my setting. I shall fall 225
 Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
 And no man see me more.

Re-enter to Wolsey, the DUKES OF NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the EARL OF SURREY, and the LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Nor. Hear the King's pleasure, Cardinal! who commands you

To render up the great seal presently
 Into our hands; and to confine yourself
 To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's,
 Till you hear further from his Highness.

Wol. Stay!
 Where's your commission, lords? Words cannot carry

Authority so weighty.
Suf. Who dare cross 'em,
 Bearing the King's will from his mouth expressly? 235

Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it,

I mean your malice, know, officious lords,
 I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
 Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy.
 How eagerly ye follow my disgraces, 240
 As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton
 Ye appear in everything may bring my ruin!

Follow your envious courses, men of malice !
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no
doubt,

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal ²⁴⁵
You ask with such a violence, the King,
Mine and your master, with his own hand gave
me,

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life ; and, to confirm his goodness, Tied it by letters-patents. Now, who 'll take it ? ²⁵⁰

Sur. The King, that gave it.

Wol. It must be himself, then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol. Proud lord, thou liest !

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land ²⁵⁵
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law.

The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
With thee and all thy best parts bound together,

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy !

You sent me deputy for Ireland, ²⁶⁰

Far from his succour, from the King, from all That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st
him ;

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else ²⁶⁵
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The Duke by law

Found his deserts. How innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.

If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you

You have as little honesty as honour, ²⁷¹

That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the King, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul, ²⁷⁵

Your long coat, priest, protects you ; thou shouldst feel

My sword i' the life-blood of thee else. My
lords,

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance ?

And from this fellow ? If we live thus tamely,

To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, ²⁸⁰

Farewell nobility ! Let his Grace go forward,

And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All goodness

Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness

Of gleaming all the land's wealth into one,

Into your own hands, Cardinal, by extortion ;

The goodness of your intercepted packets ²⁸⁵

You tout to the Pope against the King. Your goodness,

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.

My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble,

As you respect the common good, the state ²⁹⁰

Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,

Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,

Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles

Collected from his life. I 'll startle you Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench ²⁹⁵

Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise
this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it !

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the King's hand :

But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer

And spotless shall mine innocence arise, ³⁰¹

When the King knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you.

I thank my memory, I yet remember

Some of these articles ; and out they shall.

Now, if you can blush and cry " guilty," Cardinal, ³⁰⁵

You 'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir ;

I dare your worst objections. If I blush,

It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than my head.

Have at you !

First, that, without the King's assent or knowledge, ³¹⁰

You wrought to be a legate ; by which power

You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else

To foreign princes, "Ego et Rex meus"

Was still inscrib'd ; in which you brought the King ³¹⁵

To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that, without the knowledge

Either of king or council, when you went

Ambassador to the Emperor, you made bold

To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission ³²⁰

To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,

Without the King's will or the state's allowance,

A league between his Highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd

Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the King's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance — ³²⁵

By what means got, I leave to your own conscience —

To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways

You have for dignities ; to the mere undoing

Of all the kingdom. Many more there are ; ³³⁰

Which, since they are of you, and odious,

I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord,

Press not a falling man too far ! 't is virtue.

His faults lie open to the laws ; let them,

Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him ³³⁵

So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Sur. Lord Cardinal, the King's further pleasure is,

Because all those things you have done of late

By your power legate within this kingdom

Fall into the compass of a præmunire, ³⁴⁰

That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be Out of the King's protection. This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations 345

How to live better. For your stubborn answer
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The King shall know it, and, no doubt, shall
thank you.

So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal.

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear
me. 350

Farewell! a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes; to-morrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon
him;

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost, 355
And, when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory, 360
But far beyond my depth. My high-blown pride

At length broke under me, and now has left
me,

Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye! 365
I feel my heart new open'd. O, how wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!

There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women
have; 370

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, standing amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell!

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What, amaz'd
At my misfortunes? Can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep, 375

I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your Grace?

Wol. Why, well,
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The King has cur'd me, 380
I humbly thank his Grace; and from these
shoulders,

These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour.
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven! 385

Crom. I am glad your Grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope I have. I am able now, methinks,

Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,
To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer. 390
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst
Is your displeasure with the King.

Wol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden;
But he's a learned man. May he continue 395
Long in his Highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,

When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,

May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on
'em!

What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome, 400

Install'd Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the King hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now 405
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down. O, Cromwell,

The King has gone beyond me! All my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever.

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours, 410
Or gild again the noble troops that waited Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Crom-
well!

I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master. Seek the King!
That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told
him 415

What and how true thou art. He will advance
thee;

Some little memory of me will stir him —
I know his noble nature — not to let Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Crom-
well,

Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord, 421
Must I, then, leave you? Must I needs forgo
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.
The King shall have my service; but my prayers 425

For ever and for ever shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman. 430
Let's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me,
Cromwell;

And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught thee;

Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,

Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.

Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me,
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition!
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?
Love thyself last. Cherish those hearts that hate thee;

Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr! Serve the King!
And, prithee, lead me in.
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the King's. My robe,
And my integrity to Heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell!

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, He would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell
The hopes of court! My hopes in heaven do dwell.

ACT IV

SCENE I. [A street in Westminster.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN meeting one another.

1. Gent. You're well met once again.

2. Gent. So are you.

1. Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2. Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,

The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1. Gent. 'Tis very true; but that time offer'd sorrow.

This, general joy.

2. Gent. 'Tis well. The citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds—

As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward—

In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants and sights of honour.

1. Gent. Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2. Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

1. Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day

By custom of the coronation.

The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be High Steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk,

He to be Earl Marshal. You may read the rest.

2. Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,

I should have been beholding to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katherine,

The Princess Dowager? How goes her business?

1. Gent. That I can tell you too. The Archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

Learned and reverend fathers of his order,

Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off

From Amptill where the Princess lay; to which

She was often cited by them, but appear'd not;

And, to be short, for not appearance and

The King's late scruple, by the main assent

Of all these learned men she was divorc'd,

And the late marriage made of none effect:

Since which she was remov'd to Kimbolton,

Where she remains now sick.

2. Gent. Alas, good lady!

[Trumpets.]

The trumpets sound; stand close, the Queen is coming.

[Hautboys.]

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

1. A lively flourish of Trumpets.

2. Then, two Judges.

3. Lord Chancellor, with the purse and mace before him.

4. Choristers, singing. Music.

5. Mayor of London, bearing the mace. Then Garter, in his coat of arms, and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.

6. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold, on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him, the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.

7. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.

8. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the QUEEN in her robe, in her hair richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

9. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

10. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

Exeunt, first passing over the stage in order and state, and then a great flourish of trumpets.

2. Gent. A royal train, believe me. These I know.

Who's that that bears the sceptre?

1. Gent. Marquess Dorset;
And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2. Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be 40
The Duke of Suffolk?

1. Gent. 'Tis the same: High Steward.

2. Gent. And that my Lord of Norfolk?

1. Gent. Yes.

2. Gent. Heaven bless thee!

[Looking on the Queen.]

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;

Our king has all the Indies in his arms, 45

And more and richer, when he strains that lady.

I cannot blame his conscience.

1. Gent. They that bear

The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.

2. Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all are near her. 50

I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.

1. Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2. Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed;

And sometimes falling ones.

1. Gent. No more of that.

[Exit the last of the procession.]

Enter a third GENTLEMAN.

1. Gent. God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling? 56

3. Gent. Among the crowd i' the Abbey, where a finger

Could not be weng'd in more. I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.

2. Gent. You saw
The ceremony?

3. Gent. That I did.

1. Gent. How was it? 60

3. Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2. Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3. Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream

Of lords and ladies, having brought the Queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off

A distance from her; while her Grace sat down

To rest a while, some half an hour or so, 66

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely

The beauty of her person to the people,—

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man;—which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose 71

As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,

As loud, and to as many tunes. Hats, cloaks,— Doublets, I think,—flew up; and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before. Great-belli'd women, 76

That had not half a week to go, like rams

In the old time of war, would shake the press

And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living

Could say "This is my wife" there; all were woven 80

So strangely in one piece.

2. Gent. But what follow'd?

3. Gent. At length her Grace rose, and with modest paces

Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and saint-like

Cast her fair eyes to heaven and pray'd devoutly;

Then rose again and bow'd her to the people, 88

When by the Archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a queen,

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,

The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her; which perform'd, the choir,

With all the choicest music of the kingdom, 91

Together sung "Te Deum." So she parted,

And with the same full state pac'd back again

To York Place, where the feast is held.

1. Gent. Sir,
You must no more call it York Place, that's
past; 95

For, since the Cardinal fell, that title's lost.

'Tis now the King's, and call'd Whitehall.

3. Gent. I know it;

But 'tis so lately alter'd, that the old name

Is fresh about me.

2. Gent. What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the Queen? 100

3. Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of Winchester,

Newly prefer'd from the King's secretary,
The other, London.

2. Gent. He of Winchester

Is held no great good lover of the Archbishop's,

The virtuous Cranmer.

3. Gent. All the land knows that.

However, yet there is no great breach; when it comes, 106

Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from
him.

2. Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?

3. Gent. Thomas Cromwell;

A man in much esteem with the King, and truly

A worthy friend. The King has made him master 110

O' the jewel house,

And one, already, of the privy council.

2. Gent. He will deserve more.

3. Gent. Yes, without all doubt.

Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which

Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests; 115

Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Kimbolton.]

Enter KATHERINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH, her gentleman usher, and PA-TIENCE, her woman.

Grif. How does your Grace?

Kath. O Griffith, sick to death!
My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the
earth,

Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.
So; now, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st
me,
That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey?
Was dead?

Grif. Yes, madam; but I think your Grace,
Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to 't.

Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died.

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily
For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:
For after the stout Earl Northumberland Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man!
Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester,

Lodg'd in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,

With all his covent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words: "O, father
abbot,

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!"

So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness
Pursu'd him still; and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himself
Foretold should be his last, full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently
on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak
him,

And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one that, by suggestion,
Tied all the kingdom. Simony was fair-play;
His own opinion was his law; if the presence
He would say untruths; and be ever double Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful.
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your High-
ness

To hear me speak his good now?
Kath. Yes, good Griffith;

I were malicious else.

Grif. This Cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading;
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not,

But to those men that sought him, sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
Which was a sin, yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he rais'd in you, Ipswich and Oxford! one of which fell with
him,

Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little;
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.

Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still, and set me lower;
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solemn music.
Grif. She is asleep. Good wench, let's sit down quiet,

For fear we wake her; softly, gentle Patience.

*The vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head;
at which the other four make reverent curtsies.
Then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head; which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order; at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them.
The music continues.*

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,

And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?
Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for.
Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.
Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop

Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness,

And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel

I am not worthy yet to wear. I shall, assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams

Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave, ⁹⁴

They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases.]

Pat. Do you note

How much her Grace is alter'd on the sudden?

How long her face is drawn! How pale she looks,

And of an earthy cold! Mark her eyes!

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. An 't like your Grace, —

Kath. You are a saucy fellow. ¹⁰⁰

Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame,

Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,

To use so rude behaviour. Go to, kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your Highness'

pardon;

My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying ¹⁰⁶

A gentleman, sent from the King, to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith; but this fellow

Let me ne'er see again. [Exit Messenger.]

Enter CAPUCIUS.

If my sight fail not,

You should be lord ambassador from the Emperor,

My royal nephew, and your name Capucius. ¹¹⁰

Cap. Madam, the same; your servant.

Kath. O, my lord,

The times and titles now are alter'd strangely

With me since first you knew me. But, I pray

you,

What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,

First, mine own service to your Grace; the next, ¹¹⁶

The King's request that I would visit you;

Who grieves much for your weakness, and by

me

Sends you his princely commendations,

And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late; ¹²⁰

'T is like a pardon after execution.

That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;

But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.

How does his Highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do! and ever flourish,

When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor

name ¹²⁶

Banish'd the kingdom! Patience, is that letter,

I caused you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam.

[Giving it to Katherine.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver

This to my lord the King.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness ¹³¹

The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter;

The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!

Beseeching him to give her virtuous breed-

ing, —

She is young, and of a noble modest nature, ¹³⁵

I hope she will deserve well, — and a little

To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd

him,

Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition

Is, that his noble Grace would have some pity

Upon my wretched women, that so long ¹⁴⁰

Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully;

Of which there is not one, I dare avow,

And now I should not lie, but will deserve,

For virtue and true beauty of the soul,

For honesty and decent carriage, ¹⁴⁵

A right good husband; let him be a noble;

And, sure, those men are happy that shall have

'em.

The last is, for my men, — they are the poorest,

But poverty could never draw 'em from me —

That they may have their wages duly paid 'em,

And something over to remember me by. ¹⁵¹

If Heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer

life

And able means, we had not parted thus.

These are the whole contents; and, good my lord,

By that you love the dearest in this world, ¹⁵⁵

As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,

Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the

King

To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will,

Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me ¹⁶⁰

In all humility unto his Highness.

Say his long trouble now is passing

Out of this world; tell him, in death I bless'd

him,

For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,

My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience, ¹⁶⁵

You must not leave me yet. I must to bed;

Call in more women. When I am dead, good

wench,

Let me be us'd with honour. Strew me over

With maiden flowers, that all the world may

know

I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me,

Then lay me forth. Although unqueen'd, yet like ¹⁷¹

A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.

I can no more. [Exeunt, leading Katherine.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [London. A gallery in the palace.]

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a

PAGE with a torch before him, met by SIR

THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Page. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir
Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the King, my lord?

Gar. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero

With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems you are in haste. An if there be
No great offence belongs to 't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business. Affairs, that walk,

As they say spirits do, at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks dispatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The Queen's in labour,

They say in great extremity; and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time, and live; but for the stock, Sir
Thomas,

I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,
Hear me, Sir Thomas. You're a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,
'T will not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me, Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,

Beside that of the jewel house, is made master
O' the rolls, and the King's secretary; further,
sir,

Stands in the gap and trade of moe preferments,
With which the time will load him. The Archbishop

Is the King's hand and tongue; and who dare
speak

One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ven-tur'd

To speak my mind of him: and indeed this
day,

Sir, I may tell it you, I think I have Incens'd the lords o' the council, that he is,
For so I know he is, they know he is,
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land; with which they moved

Have broken with the King, who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint, of his great grace
And princely care forseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him, hath commanded
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be convented. He's a rank weed, Sir
Thomas,

And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long. Good-night, Sir Thomas.

Lov. Many good-nights, my lord! I rest your servant. [Exit Gardiner and Page.]

Enter the KING and SUFFOLK.

King. Charles, I will play no more to-night.
My mind's not on 't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before.

King. But little, Charles;
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play.
Now, Lovell, from the Queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the great'st humbleness, and desir'd your Highness

Most heartily to pray for her.

King. What say'st thou, ha?
To pray for her? What, is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made

Almost each pang a death.

King. Alas, good lady!
Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladdening of Your Highness with an heir!

King. 'Tis midnight, Charles;
Prishee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that which company
Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your Highness
A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

King. Charles, good-night.
[Exit Suffolk.]

Enter SIR ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the Archbishop,
As you commanded me.

King. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. Ay, my good lord.

King. 'Tis true; where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your Highness' pleasure.

King. Bring him to us.
[Exit Denny.]

Lov. [Aside.] This is about that which the bishop spake.
I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

King. Avoid the gallery. [Lovell seems to stay.] Ha! I have said. Be gone.
What!

[Exit Lovell and Denny.]
Cran. [Aside.] I am fearful; wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.

King. How now, my lord! you do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. [Kneeling.] It is my duty
To attend your Highness' pleasure.

King. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you. Come, come, give me your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.

I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord, Grievous complaints of you; which, being con-
sider'd,

Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge your-
self

But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take

Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower. You a brother
of us,

It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

Cran. [Kneeling.] I humbly thank your Highness;
And am right glad to catch this good occasion

Most thoroughly to be winnowed, where my chaff

And corn shall fly asunder; for, I know,
There's none stands under more calumnious
tongues

Than I myself, poor man.

King. Stand up, good Canterbury!
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand
up;

Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holidame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd

You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together

Yourselves and your accusers; and to have heard
you,

Without indurance, further.

Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty.
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh
not,

Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.

King. Know you not How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices

Must bear the same proportion; and not ever
The justice and the truth o' the question carries

The due o' the verdict with it. At what ease

Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt

To swear against you? Such things have been done.

You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
Of as great size. When you of better luck,
I mean, in perjurd witness, than your Master,

Whose minister you are, whiles here He liv'd Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to!
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God and your Majesty Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!

King. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail than we give way
to.

Keep comfort to you; and this morning see You do appear before them. If they shall chance,

In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you. If entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. Look, the good man weeps!

He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!

I swear he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. (Exit Cranmer.) He has strangled

His language in his tears.

Enter OLD LADY [LOVELL following].

Gent. (Within.) Come back! What mean
you?

Old L. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring

Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

King. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the Queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Old L. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy. The God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'tis a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger. 'Tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

King. Lovell!

Lov. Sir?

King. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the Queen. [Exit. 170]

Old L. An hundred marks! By this light,
I'll ha' more.

An ordinary groom is for such payment.

I will have more, or scold it out of him.

Said I for this, the girl was like to him?

I will have more, or else unsay 't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exit. 175]

SCENE II. [Lobby before the council-chamber.] [Pursuivants, Pages, etc., attending.] Enter CRANMER, Archbishop of Canterbury.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast? what means this? Ho!
Who waits there? Sure, you know me?

Enter KEEPER.

Keep. Yes, my lord;
But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

Keep. Your Grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter DOCTOR BUTTS.

Cran. So.

Butts. [Aside.] This is a piece of malice. I am glad

I came this way so happily; the King
Shall understand it presently. [Exit.

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts, the King's physician. As he pass'd along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray Heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,

This is of purpose laid by some that hate me—

God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice—

To quench mine honour; they would shame to make me

Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor,
'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures

Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the KING and BUTTS, at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your Grace the strangest sight—

King. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think your Highness saw this many a day.

King. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:
The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury;

Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants,

Pages, and footboys.

King. Ha! 'tis he, indeed.

Is this the honour they do one another?
'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty among 'em,
At least, good manners, as not thus to suffer

A man of his place, and so near our favour,
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,

And at the door too, like a post with packets.

By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery.
Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;

We shall hear more anon. [Ezeunt.]

[SCENE III. The council-chamber.]

A council-table brought in with chairs and stools, and placed under the state. Enter LORD CHANCELLOR; places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for Canterbury's seat. DUKE OF SUFFOLK, DUKE OF NORFOLK, SURREY, LORD CHAMBERLAIN, GARDINER, seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at lower end, as secretary. [KEEPER at the door.]

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary.

Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours,
The chief cause concerns his Grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

Keep. My Lord Archbishop;
And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

Keep. Your Grace may enter now.

CRANMER [enters and] approaches the council-table.

Chan. My good Lord Archbishop, I'm very sorry

To sit here at this present, and behold
That chair stand empty; but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, and capable
Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty

And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,

Have misdeemean'd yourself, and not a little,
Toward the King first, then his laws, in filling
The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains,

For so we are inform'd, with new opinions
Divers and dangerous, which are heresies
And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
Pace 'em not in their hands to make 'em gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits and spur 'em

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,
Out of our easiness and childish pity

To one man's honour, this contagious sickness,
Farewell all physic! And what follows then?

Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole state; as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress

Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,
And with no little study, that my teaching

And the strong course of my authority
Might go one way, and safely; and the end

Was ever, to do well; nor is there living,
 I speak it with a single heart, my lords,
 A man that more detests, more stirs against,
 Both in his private conscience and his place, 40
 Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
 Pray Heaven, the King may never find a heart
 With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships, 45
 That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
 Be what they will, may stand forth face to
 face,
 And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
 That cannot be. You are a counsellor,
 And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you. 50 Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
 We will be short with you. 'Tis his Highness'
 pleasure

And our consent, for better trial of you,
 From hence you be committed to the Tower;
 Where, being but a private man again, 55
 You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
 More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I
 thank you.

You are always my good friend; if your will
 pass,

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
 You are so merciful. I see your end; 61
 'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord,
 Become a churchman better than ambition.

Win straying souls with modesty again,
 Cast none away. That I shall clear myself, 65
 Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
 I make as little doubt as you do conscience
 In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
 But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary, 70
 That's the plain truth. Your painted gloss discovers,

To men that understand you, words and weaknesses.

Crom. My Lord of Winchester, you are a little,

By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,

However faulty, yet should find respect 75
 For what they have been. 'Tis a cruelty
 To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
 I cry your honour mercy. You may, worst
 Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?
Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer 80
 Of this new sect? Ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?
Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest!
 Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.
Crom. Do.

Remember your bold life too.

[Chan.] This is too much. 88
 Forbear for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.
Crom. And I.

[Chan.] Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
 You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;

There to remain till the King's further pleasure 90

Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?
All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,
 But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other
 Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome. 94

Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Enter Guard.

Cran. For me?

Must I go like a traitor thither?
Gar. Receive him,

And see him safe i' the Tower.
Cran. Stay, good my lords,

I have a little yet to say. Look there, my
 lords;

By virtue of that ring, I take my cause
 Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it 100
 To a most noble judge, the King my master.

Cham. This is the King's ring.
Suf. 'Tis no counterfeit.

Suf. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all,

When we first put this dangerous stone a-roll-
 ing,

'T would fall upon ourselves.
Nor. Do you think, my lords,

The King will suffer but the little finger 105
 Of this man to be vex'd?

Cham. 'T is now too certain.
 How much more is his life in value with him?

Would I were fairly out on 't!
Crom. My mind gave me,

In seeking tales and informations 110
 Against this man, whose honesty the devil

And his disciples only envy at,
 Ye blew the fire that burns ye. Now have at ye!

Enter KING, frowning on them; takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to Heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince; 115
 Not only good and wise, but most religious;

One that, in all obedience, makes the Church
 The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,
 His royal self in judgement comes to hear 120
 The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

King. You were ever good at sudden commendations,

Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not
 To hear such flattery now, and in my presence;

They are too thin and bare to hide offences. 125
 To me you cannot reach you play the spaniel,

And think with wagging of your tongue to win me;

But, whatso'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.

[To Cranmer.] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest 130

He, that darcs most, but wag his finger at thee: By all that's holy, he had better starve Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your Grace, —

King. No, sir, it does not please me. I had thought I had had men of some understanding 135

And wisdom of my council; but I find none. Was it discretion, lords, to let this man, This good man, — few of you deserve that title, —

This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy At chamber-door? and one as great as you are? Why, what a shame was this? Did my commission 141

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him, — Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see, More out of malice than integrity, 145 Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean; Which ye shall never have while I live.

Chan. Thus far, My most dread sovereign, may it like your Grace

To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd

Concerning his imprisonment was rather, 150 If there be faith in men, meant for his trial And fair purgation to the world, than malice, I'm sure, in me.

King. Well, well, my lords, respect him; Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it. 155

I will say thus much for him, if a prince May be beholding to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him. Make me no more ado, but all embrace him. Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of 160 Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me; That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,

You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory

In such an honour; how may I deserve it, 165 That am a poor and humble subject to you?

King. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons. You shall have two noble partners with you, the old Duchess of Norfolk and Lady Marquess Dorset. Will these please you? 170 Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you, Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let Heaven Witness how dear I hold this confirmation.

King. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart. 175

The common voice, I see, is verified Of thee, which says thus, "Do my Lord of Canterbury

A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever." Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long To have this young one made a Christian. 180 As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [IV. The palace yard.]

Noise and tumult within. Enter PORTER and his MAN.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals; do you take the court for Paris-garden? Ye rude slaves, leave your gaping.

[Voice.] (Within.) Good master porter, I belong to the ladder. 5

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hang'd, ye rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones; these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads. You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? 11

Man. Pray, sir, be patient. 'Tis as much impossible — Unless we sweep 'em from the door with canons —

To scatter 'em, as 't is to make 'em sleep On May-day morning; which will never be. 15 We may as well push against Paul's, as stir 'em.

Port. How get they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide in?

As much as one sound cudgel of four foot — You see the poor remainder — could distribute, I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir. 21

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,

To mow 'em down before me; but if I spar'd any

That had a head to hit, either young or old, He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker, 25

Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again; And that I would not for a cow, God save her!

[Voice.] (Within.) Do you hear, master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. — Keep the door close, sirrah. 31

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? Or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together. 39

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other penance: that fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and [43] three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that rail'd upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kin-⁵⁰ dling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman; who cried out "Clubs!" when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where [55] she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broom-staff to me; I defid' 'em still; when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, deliver'd such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely. 62

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience but the tribulation of Tower-hill or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Lambo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles that is to come. 70

Enter LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!

They grow still too; from all parts they are coming

As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,

These lazy knaves? Ye have made a fine hand, fellows;

There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these 75
Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,

When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour, We are but men; and what so many may do, Not being turn a-pieces, we have done. 80
An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live, If the King blame me for 't, I'll lay ye all By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads

Clap round fines for neglect. Ye're lazy knaves;

And here ye lie baiting of bombards, when 85
Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound;

They're come already from the christening. Go, break among the press, and find a way out

To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months. 90

Port. Make way there for the princess.
Man. You great fellow,

Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' the camlet, get up o' the rail; I'll peck you o'er the pales else. [Exeunt.

SCENE [V. The palace.]

Enter trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, GARTER, CRANMER, Duke of Norfolk with his marshal's staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing-bowls for the christening-gifts; then four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, etc., train borne by a Lady; then follows the Marchioness Dorset, the other godmother, and Ladies. The troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter KING and Guard.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal Grace, and the good queen, 5

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!

King. Thank you, good Lord Archbishop. What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth,

King.

Stand up, lord.

[The King kisses the child.]

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee! 11

Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran.

Amen.

King. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal.

I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady, 14
When she has so much English.

Cran.

Let me speak, sir,

For Heaven now bids me; and the words I utter
Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.

This royal infant—Heaven still move about her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be— 21

But few now living can behold that goodness—
A pattern to all princes living with her,
And all that shall succeed. Saba was never More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue 25
Than this pure soul shall be. All princely graces,

That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,
Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall nurse her,

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her. 30
She shall be lov'd and fear'd: her own shall bless her;

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,
And hang their heads with sorrow. Good grows with her.

In her days every man shall eat in safety,
Under his own vine, what he plants, and sing 35

The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours.
 God shall be truly known; and those about her
 From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,
 And by those claim their greatness, not by
 blood.

Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when 40

The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,
 Her ashes new create another heir
 As great in admiration as herself;
 So shall she leave her blessedness to one,
 When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness, 45

Who from the sacred ashes of her honour
 Shall star-like rise as great in fame as she was,
 And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant, 49
 Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him.
 Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,
 His honour and the greatness of his name Shall be, and make new nations. He shall flourish,

And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches
 To all the plains about him. Our children's children 55

Shall see this, and bless Heaven.

King. Thou speakest wonders.

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of Eng-
 land,

An aged princess; many days shall see her,
 And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
 Would I had known no more! but she must
 die, 60

She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin,

A most unspotted lily shall she pass
 To the ground, and all the world shall mourn
 her.

King. O Lord Archbishop,
 Thou hast made me now a man! Never, before
 This happy child, did I get anything. 65
 This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me,
 That when I am in heaven I shall desire
 To see what this child does, and praise my Maker. 69

I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,
 And you, good brethren, I am much behold-
 ing;

I have receiv'd much honour by your presence,
 And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way,
 lords.

Ye must all see the Queen, and she must thank
 ye,

She will be sick else. This day, no man think
 Has business at his house; for all shall stay. 75
 This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.]

EPILOGUE

'Tis ten to one this play can never please
 All that are here. Some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
 We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,

They'll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the
 city 5

Abus'd extremely, and to cry, "That's witty!"
 Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,
 All the expected good we're like to hear

For this play at this time, is only in
 The merciful construction of good women; 10

For such a one we show'd 'em. If they smile
 And say 't will do, I know, within a while

All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap
 If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

TRAGEDIES

THE TRAGEDY OF TITUS ANDRONICUS

IN Henslowe's Diary, under the date April 11, 1591, is recorded the performance of a play called "titus and Vespacia," marked "ne," i. e., new, or newly revised. Among the plays in the volume of Englische Comedien und Tragedien (1620), performed by English actors in Germany, there is a tragedy of Tito Andronico, which is apparently a degraded form of some version of the present play. In it Lucius is named Vespasian, and this affords a hint, corroborated by other evidence, that this German play is based on "titus and Vespacia."

In 1641 there appeared in Holland a Dutch play by Jan Vos, entitled Aran en Titus, the plot of which is essentially that of Titus Andronicus. Both this and a lost German play, acted in 1699, of which only a program is preserved, seem to be based on a Dutch translation of an English original. A comparison of the extant German, Dutch, and English plays points to the conclusion that the Shakespearean tragedy was a recasting of two English originals, on which, directly or indirectly, Tito Andronico and Aran en Titus were respectively founded.

On January 23, 159 $\frac{3}{4}$, Henslowe records that a "new" play, "Titus and Ondronicus," was produced by the servants of the Earl of Sussex. On February 6, 159 $\frac{3}{4}$, there was entered in the Stationers' Register to J. Danter "A Noble Roman Historie of Tytus Andronicus." Later in the same year appeared a quarto edition of our Titus Andronicus, "as it was plaide by the Right Honourable the Earle of Darbie, Earle of Pembroke, and Earle of Sussex their servants . . . printed by John Danter." A second quarto with some changes appeared in 1600, and a third quarto, printed from the second, appeared in 1611. On none of these Quartos does the name of Shakespeare appear; nor is there any external evidence to connect the play with him before its inclusion in the First Folio, except its occurrence in Meres's list of Shakespeare's tragedies in Palladis Tamia (1598). The text of the First Folio is derived from the Third Quarto; and the text of the present edition is based on the Second Quarto, the unique copy of the newly discovered First Quarto being inaccessible.

It is not agreed whether Henslowe's "Titus and Ondronicus" was the present play or one of its predecessors; but if the play entered to Danter on February 6, 159 $\frac{3}{4}$, was, as seems most likely, the First Quarto, printed by him in the same year, it places the date of the composition of Titus Andronicus not later than 1593. From the evidence gathered from the German and Dutch versions, it becomes apparent that the question of Shakespeare's authorship narrows itself down to one of the amount of re-writing implied in the re-casting of the older dramatic versions of the story. The main features of the Shakespearean play which cannot be proved to have existed in the earlier dramas are the rivalry between Saturninus and Bassianus for the throne; the funeral of Titus's sons killed in war; the sacrifice of Alarbus; the kidnapping of Lavinia by Bassianus, with the death of Mutius; the sending of young Lucius with presents to the sons of Tamora; and the whole of III. ii., which appears only in the First Folio, and is, perhaps, a later addition. These, with some minor details, and a revision of phraseology and metre which cannot be exactly estimated, seem to indicate the extreme limit of Shakespeare's responsibility. Nevertheless, it cannot be denied that other hands may have worked on the play between the stages represented by the Continental versions and that in which it is here printed; and some students still limit Shakespeare's share to "some master-touches to one or two of the principal characters," accepting the late seventeenth-century tradition, reported by Ravenscroft, that this was all Shakespeare added to the work of "a private author."

Evidences of the authorship of the earlier dramatic versions are purely internal. Attempts have been made to associate the play with nearly every contemporary dramatic author of note; but traces of the style of Peele and Greene point to the possibility of these writers' having had a share in it, although at what stage it is not possible to determine.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Rome. Before the Senate-house. The Tomb of the Andronici appearing.]

Enter the TRIBUNES and Senators aloft, and then enter SATURNINUS and his Followers at one door, and BASSIANUS and his Followers at the other; with drums and trumpets.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms,
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords. 5
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son, 10
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol,
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility; 15
But let desert in pure election shine,
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends
Ambitiously for rule and empery, Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand 20

A special party, have, by common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome.
A nobler man, a braver warrior, 25

Lives not this day within the city walls.

He by the senate is accited home
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent since first he undertook 31
This cause of Rome and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride; five times he hath re-
turn'd

Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field; 35
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat, by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed, 40
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,
That you withdraw you and abate your
strength,

Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness. 45
Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy
In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus and his sons, 50
And her to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends,
And to my fortunes and the people's favour
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd. 55

[Exeunt soldiers [of Bassianus].]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all and here dismiss you all,
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and the cause.
[Exeunt soldiers of Saturninus.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me 60
As I am confident and kind to thee.
Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.
[Flourish. They go up into the Senate-house.]

Enter a CAPTAIN.

Cap. Romans, make way! The good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion, 65
Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour and with fortune is return'd
From where he circumscribed with his sword
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Drums and trumpets sounded, and then enter two of Titus's sons [MARTIUS and MUTIUS], and then two Men bearing a coffin covered with black; then two other sons [LUCIUS and QUINTUS]. Then TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, the Queen of Goths with her [three] sons [Alarbus], DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON; AARON the Moor, and others as many as can be. They set down the coffin, and Titus speaks.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds! 70
Lo, as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught

Returns with precious lading to the bay
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchor-
age,

Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears, 75
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome.
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five and twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that King Priam had, 80
Behold the poor remains, alive and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love,
These that I bring unto their latest home
With burial amongst their ancestors.
Here Goths have given me leave to sheathe my
sword. 85

Titus, unkind and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[They open the tomb.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont, 90
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!

O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,
How many sons hast thou of mine in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more! 95

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner o' the Goths,

That we may hew his limbs and on a pile
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh
Before this earthy prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd, 100
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you, the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror,

Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed, 105
A mother's tears in passion for her son;
And if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me!
Sufficeth not that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs and return, 110
Captive to thee and to thy Roman yoke,
But must my sons be slaught'ed in the streets
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O, if to fight for king and commonweal
Were piety in thine, it is in these, 115
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood!
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them, then, in being merciful;
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

Thrice noble Titus, spare my first-born son! 120
Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.

These are their brethren, whom your Goths beheld

Alive and dead; and for their brethren slain
Religiously they ask a sacrifice.
To this your son is mark'd, and die he must, 125
To appease their groaning shadows that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire
straight;

And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs till they be clean consum'd.
[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.]

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety! 130
Chi. Was never Scythia half so barbarous.

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.
Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threat'ning look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd, but hope withal
The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy 135

With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the Queen of Goths —
When Goths were Goths and Tamora was
queen — 140

To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS [with their swords bloody].

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd

Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the
sky. 145

Remaineth nought but to inter our brethren,
And with loud flarums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in
rest, 150

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,

Here grow no damned drugs; here are no
storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep. 165
In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long,

My noble lord and father, live in fame!
Lo, at this tomb my tributary tears
I render, for my brethren's obsequies; 160
And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy
Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome.
O, bless me here with thy victorious hand,
Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud!

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly re-
serv'd 165

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!
Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days
And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved
brother,

Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome! 170

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother
Marcus.

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your
swords; 175

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness
And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been, 180

Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This palliant of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,

With these our late-deceased emperor's sons. 185

Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness.

What should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day, 190

To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?

Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully, 195

And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,

In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,

But not a sceptre to control the world;
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. 200

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empire.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.
Sat. Romans, do me right.

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them
not

Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor, 205

Andronicus, would thou were shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts!

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good

That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, Prince; I will restore to
thee 210

The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die.

My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks to men 215

Of noble minds is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes
here,

I ask your voices and your suffrages.
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tribunes. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome, 221

The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you; and this suit I
make,

That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope, 225

Reflect on Rome as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this commonweal.

Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say, "Long live our emperor!"

Marc. With voices and applause of every sort, 230

Patricians and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus Rome's great emperor,

And say, "Long live our Emperor Saturnine!"

[A long flourish till they come down.
Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours done
To us in our election this day, 235

I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness;

And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,

Lavinia will I make my empress, 240

Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her spouse.

Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please
thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and in this match

I hold me highly honoured of your Grace: 245

And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,

The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners;

Presents well worthy Rome's imperious lord. 250

Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life!
How proud I am of thee and of thy gifts

Rome shall record, and when I do forget 255

The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To Tamora.] Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor;

To him that, for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly and your followers. 260

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me, of the hue
That I would choose, were I to choose anew. — Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance;

Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome;
Princely shall be thy usage every way. 260

Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes. Madam, he comforts
you

Can make you greater than the Queen of Goths.
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this? 270

Lav. Not I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Romans, let us
go;

Ransomless here we set our prisoners free.
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and
drum. 275

[Flourish. Saturninus courts Tamora in dumb show.]

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine. [Seizing Lavinia.]

Tit. How, sir! Are you in earnest then, my lord?

Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal
To do myself this reason and this right.

Marc. "Suum cuique" is our Roman justice;
This prince in justice seizeth but his own. - 281

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius
live.

Tit. Traitors, avaunt! Where is the Emperor's guard?

Treason, my lord! Lavinia is surpris'd!
Sat. Surpris'd! By whom?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his betroth'd from all the world away. 280

[Exeunt Bassianus and Marcus with Lavinia.]

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence
away,

And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.
[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Mar-tius.]

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.

Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy! 290
Barr'st me my way in Rome?

Mut. Help, Lucius, help!
[Titus kills him.]

[During the fray, exeunt Saturninus, Tamora, Demetrius, Chiron, and Aaron.]

[Re-enter LUCIUS.]

Luc. My lord, you are unjust, and, more than so,

In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine;
My sons would never so dishonour me. 295

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the Emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will; but not to be his wife

That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit.]

Re-enter aloft SATURNINUS with TAMORA and her two sons, and AARON.

Sat. No, Titus, no; the Emperor needs her
not,

Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock. 300

I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once;
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,

Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale,
But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus, 305

Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine,

That said'st I begg'd the empire at thy hands.
Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these?

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece

To him that flourish'd for her with his sword.
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy, 310

One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To ruffle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded
heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, Queen of Goths, 315

That like the stately Phœbe 'mongst her nymphs

Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome,
If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,

Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee Empress of Rome. 320

Speak, Queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?

And here I swear by all the Roman gods,
Sith priest and holy water are so near

And tapers burn so bright and everything
In readiness for Hymenæus stand, 325

I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till from forth this place

I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome
I swear,

If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths, 330

She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon; lords, accompany

Your noble emperor and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine, 335

Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered;
There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt all [but Titus].]

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonoured thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MAR-
TIUS.

Marc. O Titus, see, O, see what thou hast
done! 340

In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed

That hath dishonoured all our family; 345

Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes;
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.

This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified. 350

Here none but soldiers and Rome's servitors
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls.
Bury him where you can; he comes not here.

Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you. 358
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him;
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. } And shall, or him we will accompany.
Mart. }

Tit. "And shall!" What villain was it spake that word?

Quin. He that would vouch it in any place but here. 360

Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite?

Marc. No, noble Titus, but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,

And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast
wounded. 365

My foes I do repute you every one;
So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Luc. He is not with himself; let us withdraw.

Mart. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[Marcus and the sons of Titus kneel.]

Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead, — 370

Mart. Father, and in that name doth nature
speak, —

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed.

Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul, —

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us
all, —

Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter 375
His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous.

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax

That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son 380

Did graciously plead for his funerals.

Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,

Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.

The dismall'st day is this that e'er I saw,

To be dishonoured by my sons in Rome! 385

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[Mutius is put into the tomb.]

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

All. [Kneeling.] No man shed tears for noble
Mutius;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause. 390

[Exeunt all but Marcus and Titus.]

Marc. My lord, to step out of these dreary dumps,

How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus, but I know it is;

Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.
Is she not then beholding to the man 395

That brought her for this high good turn so far?

[Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.]

Flourish. Re-enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and AARON at one door; enter, at the other door, BASSIANUS, LA-VINIA, with others.

Sat. So, Bassianus, you have play'd your prize.

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride!

Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no
more, 401

Nor wish no less; and so, I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have
power,

Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own, 405

My true betrothed love and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all;
Meanwhile I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'T is good, sir; you are very short with
us;

But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you. 410

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may

Answer I must, and shall do with my life.

Only thus much I give your Grace to know:

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here, 415

Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;

That in the rescue of Lavinia

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you and highly mov'd to wrath

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave. 420

Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,

That hath express'd himself in all his deeds

A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds; 424

'T is thou and those that have dishonoured me.

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have lov'd and honoured Saturnine!

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all; 430

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be dishonoured openly
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome
forfend

I should be author to dishonour you! 435

But on mine honour dare I undertake

For good Lord Titus' innocence in all,

Whose fury not dissembled speaks his griefs.

Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;

Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose, 440

Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.

[Aside to Sat.] My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last;

Dissemble all your griefs and discontents.

You are but newly planted in your throne;

Lest, then, the people, and patricians too, 445

Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,

And so supplant you for ingratitude,

Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,

Yield at entreats; and then let me alone:

I'll find a day to massacre them all 450

And raze their faction and their family,

The cruel father and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life,
And make them know what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets and beg for grace in vain.

[Again speaking openly to Sat.]

Come, come, sweet emperor ; — come, Andronicus ; — 456

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart

That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise ; my empress hath prevailed. 459

Tit. I thank your Majesty, and her, my lord. These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,

A Roman now adopted happily,

And must advise the Emperor for his good.

This day all quarrels die, Andronicus ; 465

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,

That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.

For you, Prince Bassianus, I have pass'd

My word and promise to the Emperor

That you will be more mild and tractable. 470

And fear not, lords, and you, Lavinia ;

By my advice, all humbled on your knees,

You shall ask pardon of his Majesty.

[Marcus, Lavinia, and the others kneel.]

[Luc.] We do, and vow to heaven and to his Highness,

That what we did was mildly as we might, 475
Tend'ring our sister's honour and our own.

Marc. That, on mine honour, here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not ; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends ; 479

The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace.

I will not be denied ; sweetheart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake and thy brother's here,

And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,

I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up ! [Marcus and the others rise.] 486

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,

I found a friend, and sure as death I swore

I would not part a bachelor from the priest.

Come, if the Emperor's court can feast two brides,

You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.

This day shall be a love-day, Tamora. 491

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your Majesty

To hunt the panther and the hart with me,

With horn and hound we'll give your Grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gramercy too. 495

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT II

[SCENE I. Rome. Before the palace.]

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot ; and sits aloft,

Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash ;
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn, 5
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach
And overlooks the highest-peering hills ;
So Tamora :

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait, 10
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart and fit thy thoughts -

To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress,
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long

Hast prisoner held, fett' red in amorous chains

And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes 16

Than is Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

Away with slavish weeds and servile thoughts !

I will be bright and shine in pearl and gold

To wait upon this new-made empress. 20

To wait, said I ? To wanton with this queen,

This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,

This siren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,

And see his shipwreck and his commonweal's.

Holloa ! what storm is this ? 25

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years wants wit, thy wit wants edge

And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd ;

And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chir. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all ;

And so in this, to bear me down with braves. 30

'Tis not the difference of a year or two

Makes me less gracious or thee more fortunate.

I am as able and as fit as thou

To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace ;

And that my sword upon thee shall approve, 35

And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. [Aside.] Clubs, clubs ! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,

Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side,

Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends ? 40

Go to ; have your lath glued within your sheath

Till you know better how to handle it.

Chir. Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,

Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave ?

[They draw.]

Aar. [Coming forward.] Why, how now, lords ! 45

So near the Emperor's palace dare you draw,

And maintain such a quarrel openly ?

Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge.

I would not for a million of gold

The cause were known to them it most concerns ; 50

Nor would your noble mother for much more

Be so dishonoured in the court of Rome.

For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I, till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and withal

Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat 55
 That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.
Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd.
 Foul-spoken coward, that thund'rest with thy tongue,
 And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform!
Aar. Away, I say! 60
 Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
 This petty brabble will undo us all.
 Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
 It is to jet upon a prince's right?
 What, is Lavinia then become so loose, 65
 Or Bassianus so degenerate,
 That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
 Without controlment, justice, or revenge?
 Young lords, beware! an should the Empress know
 This discord's ground, the music would not please. 70
Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world;
 I love Lavinia more than all the world.
Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice;
 Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.
Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in Rome 75
 How furious and impatient they be,
 And cannot brook competitors in love?
 I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
 By this device.
Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
 Would I propose to achieve her whom I love. 80
Aar. To achieve her! how?
Dem. Why makes thou it so strange?
 She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
 She is a woman, therefore may be won;
 She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.
 What, man! more water glideth by the mill 85
 Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
 Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know.
 Though Bassianus be the Emperor's brother,
 Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.
Aar. [Aside.] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. 90
Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it
 With words, fair looks, and liberality?
 What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,
 And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?
Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so 95
 Would serve your turns.
Chi. Ay, so the turn were served.
Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.
Aar. Would you had hit it too!
 Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.
 Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools
 To square for this? Would it offend you, then,
 That both should speed? 101
Chi. Faith, not me.
Dem. Nor me, so I were one.
Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar.
 'Tis policy and stratagem must do

That you affect; and so must you resolve 105
 That what you cannot as you would achieve
 You must perforce accomplish as you may.
 Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste
 Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.
 A speedier course than ling'ring languishment
 Must we pursue, and I have found the path. 111
 My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand:
 There will the lovely Roman ladies troop;
 The forest walks are wide and spacious;
 And many unfrequented plots there are 115
 Fitted by kind for rape and villainy.
 Single you thither then this dainty doe,
 And strike her home by force, if not by words.
 This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.
 Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit
 To villainy and vengeance consecrate, 121
 Will we acquaint with all that we intend;
 And she shall file our engines with advice,
 That will not suffer you to square yourselves,
 But to your wishes' height advance you both.
 The Emperor's court is like the house of Fame, 125
 The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears;
 The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull;
 There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns;
 There serve your lust, shadowed from heaven's eye, 130
 And revel in Lavinia's treasury.
Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.
Dem. Sit fas aut nefas, till I find the stream
 To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,
 Per Styga, per manes vehor. [Exeunt. 135

[SCENE II. A forest near Rome.]

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, and his three sons [LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS], making a noise with hounds and horns, and MARCUS.
Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey,
 The fields are fragrant and the woods are green.
 Uncouple here and let us make a bay,
 And wake the Emperor and his lovely bride,
 And rouse the Prince, and ring a hunter's peal
 That all the court may echo with the noise. 6
 Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
 To attend the Emperor's person carefully.
 I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
 But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd. 10
A cry of hounds, and horns winded in a peal.
Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, and Attendants.
 Many good morrows to your Majesty;
 Madam, to you as many and as good.
 I promised your Grace a hunter's peal.
Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords;
 Somewhat too early for new-married ladies. 15
Bas. Lavinia, how say you?
Lav. I say, no;
 I have been broad awake two hours and more.
Sat. Come on, then; horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport. [To Tamora.] Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord, ²⁰
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound, ²⁵

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. A lonely part of the forest.]

Enter AARON [with a bag of gold].

Aar. He that had wit would think that I had none

To bury so much gold under a tree

And never after to inherit it.

Let him that thinks of me so abjectly

Know that this gold must coin a stratagem, ⁵

Which, cunningly effected, will beget

A very excellent piece of villainy.

And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest

[Hides the gold.]

That have their alms out of the Empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad ¹⁰

When everything doth make a gleeful boast?

The birds chant melody on every bush,

The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun,

The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind

And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground.

Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit, ¹⁵

And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,

Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,

As if a double hunt were heard at once,

Let us sit down and mark their yelping noise;

And, after conflict such as was suppos'd ²¹

The wand'ring prince and Dido once enjoy'd,

When with a happy storm they were surpris'd

And certain'd with a counsel-keeping cave,

We may, each wreathed in the other's arms, ²⁵

Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber;

Whiles hounds and horns and sweet melodious birds

Be unto us as is a nurse's song

Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires, ³⁰

Saturn is dominator over mine.

What signifies my deadly-standing eye,

My silence and my cloudy melancholy,

My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls

Even as an adder when she doth unroll ³⁵

To do some fatal execution?

No, madam, these are no venereal signs.

Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,

Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.

Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul, ⁴⁰

Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,

This is the day of doom for Bassianus.

His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day,

Thy sons make pillage of her chastity

And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood. ⁴⁵

Seest thou this letter? Take it up, I pray thee,

And give the King this fatal-plotted scroll.

Now question me no more; we are espied.

Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,

Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction. ⁵⁰

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great Empress; Bassianus comes.

Be cross with him; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoe'er they be.

[Exit.]

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal Empress, ⁵⁵

Unfurnish'd of her well-beseeming troop?

Or is it Dian, habited like her,

Who hath abandoned her holy groves

To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of my private steps!

Had I the power that some say Dian had, ⁶¹

Thy temples should be planted presently

With horns, as was Actæon's; and the hounds

Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,

Unmannerly intruder as thou art! ⁶⁵

Lav. Under your patience, gentle Empress,

'Tis thought you have a goodly gift in horning;

And to be doubted that your Moor and you

Are singled forth to try experiments.

Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day! ⁷⁰

'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, Queen, your swarth Cimmerian

Doth make your honour of his body's hue,

Spotted, detested, and abominable.

Why are you sequest'ed from all your train, ⁷⁵

Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,

And wand'ring hither to an obscure plot,

Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,

If foul desire had not conducted you?

Lav. And, being intercepted in your sport, ⁸⁰

Great reason that my noble lord be rated

For sauciness. I pray you, let us hence,

And let her joy her raven-coloured love;

This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The King, my brother, shall have note of this. ⁸⁵

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long,

Good king, to be so mightily abused.

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter CHIRON and DEMETRIUS.

Dem. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

Why doth your Highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale? ⁹¹

These two have 'tis'd me hither to this place ;
A barren detested vale, you see it is ;
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and
lean,

O'ercome with moss and baleful mistletoe. 95
Here never shines the sun ; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl or fatal raven ;
And when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, here, at dead time of the night, 99
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries
As any mortal body hearing it
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale, 105
But straight they told me they would bind me
here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,
And leave me to this miserable death.
And then they call'd me foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms 110
That ever ear did hear to such effect ;
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children. 115

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Also stabs Bassianus, who dies.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous
Tamora,

For no name fits thy nature but thy own !

Tam. Give me thy poniard ; you shall know, my boys, 120

Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam ; here is more belongs to her.

First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty, 125
And with that painted hope braves your mighti-
ness ;

And shall she carry this unto her grave ?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.
Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust, 130

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours. 135

Lav. O Tamora ! thou bear'st a woman's
face, —

Tam. I will not hear her speak ; away with her !

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam : let it be your glory

To see her tears ; but be your heart to them 140
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam ?

O, do not learn her wrath ; she taught it thee ;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble ;

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny. 145
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike,
[To Chiron.] Do thou entreat her show a woman's pity.

Chi. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard ?

Lav. 'T is true ; the raven doth not hatch a lark.

Yet have I heard, — O, could I find it now ! —
The lion mov'd with pity did endure 151
To have his princely paws par'd all away ;
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests ;

O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no, 155
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful !

Tam. I know not what it means ; away with her !

Lav. O, let me teach thee ! For my father's sake,

That gave thee life when well he might have slain thee,

Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears. 160

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended
me,

Even for his sake am I pitiless.

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain
To save your brother from the sacrifice ;

But fierce Andronicus would not relent. 165
Therefore, away with her, and use her as you
will,

The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place !
For 't is not life that I have begg'd so long ; 170
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'st thou, then ? Fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'T is present death I beg, and one thing
more

That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.

O, keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit 175

Where never man's eye may behold my body.
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee.

No, let them satisfy their lust on thee. 180

Dem. Away ! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace ? no womanhood ? Ah, beastly creature !

The blot and enemy to our general name !

Confusion fall —

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband ; 185

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit ; then exeunt Demetrius and Chiron, dragging off Lavinia.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons : see that you make her sure.

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,

Till all the Andronici be made away.
 Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor, 190
 And let my spleenful sons this trull deflower. [Exit.]

Re-enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before.

Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit
 Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes. 195

Mart. And mine, I promise you; were't not for shame,

Well could I leave our sport to sleep a while.
[Falls into the pit.]

Quin. What, art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,

Whose mouth is covered with rude-growing briars, 199

Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
 As fresh as morning dew distill'd on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me.
 Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother, with the dismall'st object hurt

That ever eye with sight made heart lament!

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the King to find them here, 205

That he thereby may have a likely guess
 How these were they that made away his brother. [Exit.]

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out 209

From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth fear;
 A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints;

My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.
Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,

Aaron and thou look down into this den, 216
 And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart

Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
 The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.

O, tell me who it is; for ne'er till now 220
 Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embred here,
 All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,

In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 't is he? 225

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear
 A precious ring, that lightens all this hole,

Which, like a taper in some monument,
 Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks

And shows the ragged entrails of this pit. 230
 So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus

When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
 O brother, help me with thy fainting hand —

If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath —
 Out of this fell devouring receptacle, 235

As hateful as Cocytus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;

Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
 I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
 Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave. 240
 I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not loose again

Till thou art here aloft or I below.

Thou canst not come to me; I come to thee. 245 [Falls in.]

Enter SATURNINUS with AARON.

Sat. Along with me; I'll see what hole is here,

And what he is that now is leap'd into it.

Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
 Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
 Brought hither in a most unlucky hour 251

To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead! I know thou dost but jest.

He and his lady both are at the lodge
 Upon the north side of this pleasant chase; 255
 'T is not an hour since I left them there.

Mart. We know not where you left them all alive;

But, out, alas! here have we found him dead.

Re-enter TAMORA [with Attendants]; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the King?

Sat. Here, Tamora, though griev'd with killing grief. 260

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound;

Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,

The complot of this timeless tragedy; 265
 And wonder greatly that man's face can fold

In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

[She giveth Saturnine a letter.]
Sat. (Reads.) "An if we miss to meet him handsomely —

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 't is we mean —
 Do thou so much as dig the grave for him. 270

Thou know'st our meaning. Look for thy reward

Among the nettles at the elder-tree
 Which overshades the mouth of that same pit

Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
 Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends."

O Tamora! was ever heard the like? 275
 This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.

Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out
 That should have murdered Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold. 280

Sat. [To Titus.] Two of thy whelps, fell curs of bloody kind,

Have here bereft my brother of his life.
 Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison.

There let them bide until we have devis'd
 Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing! 286

How easily murder is discovered!

Tit. High Emperor, upon my feeble knee I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed, That this fell fault of my accursed sons, 290
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them, —

Sat. If it be prov'd! You see it is apparent. Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord; yet let me be their bail. For, by my father's reverend tomb, I vow 296
They shall be ready at your Highness' will To answer their suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them; see thou follow me.

Some bring the murdered body, some the murderers. 300

Let them not speak a word; the guilt is plain; For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,

That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the King.

Fear not thy sons; they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exeunt. 306

[SCENE IV. Another part of the forest.]

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished; her hands cut off, and her tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,

Who 'twas that cut thy tongue and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so,

An if thy stumps will let thee play the scribe.

Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scrawl. 5

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;

And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.

Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord. 10

[Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron.]

Horns winded. Enter MARCUS from hunting.

Mar. Who is this — my niece? — that flies away so fast?

Cousin, a word; where is your husband?

If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!

If I do wake, some planet strike me down, That I may slumber in eternal sleep! 15

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands Hath lopp'd and hew'd and made thy body bare Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments
Those circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,

And might not gain so great a happiness 20
As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?

Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath. 25
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflowered thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.

Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts, 30
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face
Blushing to be encount'ed with a cloud.

Shall I speak for thee? Shall I say 't is so?

O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind! 35

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, why, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind;

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;
A craftier Tereus, cousin, hast thou met, 41

And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.

O, had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute, 45

And make the silken strings delight to kiss
them,

He would not then have touch'd them for his life!

Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony
Which that sweet tongue hath made,

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell
asleep 50

As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind;

For such a sight will blind a father's eye.
One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;

What will whole months of tears thy father's
eyes? 55

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with
thee.

O, could our mourning ease thy misery!
[Exeunt. 60

ACT III

[SCENE I. Rome. A street.]

Enter Judges, Senators [and Tribunes], with Martius and Quintus, bound, passing on the stage to the place of execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes,
stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;
For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd; 5
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as 't is thought.
For two and twenty sons I never wept, 10
Because they died in honour's lofty bed.

[Lies down; the Judges, etc., pass by him [and exeunt].

For these, tribunes, in the dust I write
My heart's deep languor and my soul's sad
tears.

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite ;
My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain,
That shall distil from these two ancient urns,
Than youthful April shall with all his showers.
In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still ;
In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow
And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, 21
So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter LUCIUS, with his weapon drawn.

O reverend tribunes ! O gentle, aged men !
Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death ;
And let me say, that never wept before, 25
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain.

The tribunes hear you not ; no man is by ;
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you, — Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 't is no matter, man ; if they did
hear,

They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
They would not pity me ; yet plead I must, 35
And bootless unto them.

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones ;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale. 40

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears and seem to weep with me ;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones ; 45

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to
death.

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn ? [Rises.]

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their
death ;

For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd
My everlasting doom of banishment. 51

Tit. O happy man ! they have befriended
thee.

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers ?

Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey 55
But me and mine. How happy art thou, then,
From these devourers to be banished !

But who comes with our brother Marcus here ?

Enter MARCUS and LAVINIA.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep ;
Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break. 60

I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me ? Let me see it,
then.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ay me, this object kills me !

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon
her.

Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight ?

What fool hath added water to the sea,

Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy ?

My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,

And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds. 71

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too ;

For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain ;

And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life ;

In bootless prayer have they been held up, 75

And they have serv'd me to effectless use.

Now all the service I require of them

Is that the one will help to cut the other.

'T is well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands ;

For hands to do Rome service is but vain. 80

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd
thee ?

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her
thoughts,

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,

Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung 85

Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear !

Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed ?

Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park,

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer

That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound. 90

Tit. It was my deer ; and he that wounded
her

Hath hurt me more than had he kill'd me dead.

For now I stand as one upon a rock

Envir'd with a wilderness of sea,

Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave, 95

Expecting ever when some envious surge

Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone,

Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,

And here my brother, weeping at my woes ; 100

But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

It would have madd'd me ; what shall I do

Now I behold thy lively body so ? 105

Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears ;

Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee.

Thy husband he is dead ; and for his death

Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.

Look, Marcus ! ah, son Lucius, look on her ! 110

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey-dew

Upon a gath' red lily almost withered.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because they kill'd her husband ;

Perchance because she knows them innocent. 115

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.

No, no, they would not do so foul a deed ;
 Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.
 Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips, 120
 Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.
 Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
 And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,
 Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks
 How they are stain'd, as meadows yet not dry
 With miry slime left on them by a flood ? 125
 And in the fountain shall we gaze so long Till the fresh taste be taken from that clear-
 ness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears ?
 Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine ? 130
 Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows
 Pass the remainder of our hateful days ?
 What shall we do ? Let us that have our tongues

Plot some device of further misery,
 To make us wond'ring at in time to come. 135
Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears ; for, at your grief,

See how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.
Marc. Patience, dear niece. Good Titus, dry
 thine eyes.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus ! brother, well I wot

Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine, 140
 For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia, I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark ! I understand her signs.

Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
 That to her brother which I said to thee : 145
 His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
 Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
 O, what a sympathy of woe is this,
 As far from help as Limbo is from bliss !

Enter AARON the Moor.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the Emperor 150
 Sends thee this word, — that, if thou love thy sons,

Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
 Or any one of you, chop off your hand
 And send it to the King ; he for the same
 Will send thee hither both thy sons alive ; 155
 And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O gracious emperor ! O gentle Aaron !
 Did ever raven sing so like a lark
 That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise ?
 With all my heart, I'll send the Emperor 160
 My hand.

Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off ?
Luc. Stay, father ! to that noble hand of thine,

That hath thrown down so many enemies, 164
 Shall not be sent. My hand will serve the turn.
 My youth can better spare my blood than you ;
 And therefore mine shall save my brothers'
 lives.

Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
 And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
 Writing destruction on the enemy's castle ? 170

O, none of both but are of high desert.
 My hand hath been both idle ; let it serve
 To ransom my two nephews from their death ;
 Then have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go along, 175

For fear they die before their pardon come.

Marc. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go !

Tit. Sirs, strive no more : such with'red herbs as these

Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy
 son, 180

Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Marc. And, for our father's sake and mother's care,

Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you ; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe. 185

Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exeunt [Lucius and Marcus].]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron ; I'll deceive them
 both.

Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. [Aside.] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,

And never, whilst I live, deceive men so ; 190

But I'll deceive you in another sort,

And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[Cuts off Titus's hand.]

Re-enter LUCIUS and MARCUS.

Tit. Now stay your strife ; what shall be is dispatch'd.

Good Aaron, give his Majesty my hand.
 Tell him it was a hand that warded him 195
 From thousand dangers ; bid him bury it :
 More hath it merited ; that let it have.

As for my sons, say I account of them
 As jewels purchas'd at an easy price ; 200

And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus ; and for thy hand

Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.

[Aside.] Their heads, I mean. O, how this villainy

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it ! 204

Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,

Aaron will have his soul black like his face.

[Exit.]

Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
 And bow this feeble ruin to the earth ;

If any power pities wretched tears,

To that I call ! [To Lav.] What, would thou kneel with me ? 210

Do, then, dear heart ; for Heaven shall hear our prayers ;

Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim,
 And stain the sun with fog, as sometime

clouds

When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Marc. O brother, speak with possibility, 215
 And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom ?

Then be my passions bottomless with them.

Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes. 221
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth overflow?

If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swollen
face?

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? 225
I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow!
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth;
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd; 230
For why my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then give me leave, for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a MESSENGER, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid 235
For that good hand thou sent'st the Emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent
back,
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd,
That woe is me to think upon thy woes 240
More than remembrance of my father's death.

[Exit.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal, 245
But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat!
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe! [Lavinia kisses Titus.] 250

Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfort-less

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?

Marc. Now, farewell, flattery; die, Andronicus.

Thou dost not slumber; see, thy two sons'
heads, 255

Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here,
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah, now no more will I control thy griefs. 260
Render off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal
sight

The closing up of our most wretched eyes.
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha! 265

Marc. Why dost thou laugh? It fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed.

Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes
And make them blind with tributary tears; 270
Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threaten me I shall never come to bliss
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again
Even in their throats that have committed
them. 275

Come, let me see what task I have to do.
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.
The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I bear. 281
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things!

Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight;
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay. 285
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there;
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exeunt [Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia].

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father,
The woeful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome. 290
Farewell, proud Rome; till Lucius come again,
He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister;
O, would thou wert as thou tofore hast been!
But now nor Lucius nor Lavinia lives 295
But in oblivion and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturnine and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power, 300
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

[Exit.

[SCENE II. A room in Titus's house. A banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS.

Tit. So, so; now sit; and look you eat no
more

Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.

Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreath knot;
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our
hands, 5

And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine

Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
Who, when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh, 10
Then thus I thump it down.

[To Lavinia.] Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,

Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with
groans; 15

Or get some little knife between thy teeth,

And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall
May run into that sink, and soaking in Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears. 30

Marc. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay

Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.
What violent hands can she lay on her life? 25

Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands,
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,

How Troy was burnt and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands

Lest we remember still that we have none. 30

Fie, fie, how frantically I square my talk,
As if we should forget we had no hands

If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.

Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says; 35

I can interpret all her martyr'd signs:
She says she drinks no other drink but tears

Brew'd with her sorrow, mash'd upon her cheeks.

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect 40

As begging hermits in their holy prayers.
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to

heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,

But I of these will wrest an alphabet
And by still practice learn to know thy mean-
ing. 45

Young Luc. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments.

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears, 50

And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

[Marcus strikes the dish with a knife.]
What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Marc. At that that I have kill'd, my lord;
a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my
heart;

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny. 55

A deed of death done on the innocent
Becomes not Titus' brother. Get thee gone;

I see thou art not for my company.

Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. "But!" How, if that fly had a father and mother? 60

How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buzz lamenting doings in the air!

Poor harmless fly,
That, with his pretty buzzing melody,

Came here to make us merry! and thou hast
kill'd him. 65

Marc. Pardon me, sir, it was a black ill-favour'd fly.

Like to the Empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd
him.

Tit. O, O, O,

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed. 70

Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor

Come hither purposely to poison me. —
There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.

Ah, sirrah! 75

Yet, I think, we are not brought so low,
But that between us we can kill a fly

That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Marc. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought
on him,

He takes false shadows for true substances. 80

Tit. Come, take away. Lavinia, go with
me.

I'll to thy closet, and go read with thee
Sad stories chanced in the times of old.

Come, boy, and go with me; thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read when mine begin to dazzle. [Exeunt. 85

ACT IV

[SCENE I. Rome. Titus's garden.]

Enter young LUCIUS, and LAVINIA running after him, and the boy flies from her, with his books under his arm. Then enter TITUS and MARCUS.

Young Luc. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt
Lavinia

Follows me everywhere, I know not why.
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes.

Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt. 5

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee
harm.

Young Luc. Ay, when my father was in Rome she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius; somewhat doth she mean.

[Marc.] See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee; 10

Somewhither would she have thee go with her.
Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons than she hath read to thee
Sweet poetry and Tully's Orator.

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee
thus? 15

Young Luc. My lord, I know not, I, nor can
I guess,

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her;
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft

Extremity of griefs would make men mad,
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy 20

Ran mad for sorrow. That made me to fear;
Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,
And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;

Which made me down to throw my books, and
fly, — 25

Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt;

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over with her stumps the books which Lucius has let fall.]

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means
this? 80

Some book there is that she desires to see.
Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.
But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens 85
Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.
Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there were more than one

Confederate in the fact. Ay, more there was;
Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. 40

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth
so?

Young Luc. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphoses;
My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! so busily she turns the leaves!
Help her. 45

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason and his rape;
And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note how she quotes
the leaves. 50

Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was,
Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?
See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt—
O, had we never, never hunted there!— 55
Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,
By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Marc. O, why should nature build so foul a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies? 60

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none
but friends,

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed;
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Marc. Sit down, sweet niece; brother, sit down by me. 65

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!
My lord, look here; look here, Lavinia.

[*He writes his name with his staff,
and guides it with feet and mouth.*]

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,
This after me. I have writ my name 70
Without the help of any hand at all.

Curs'd be that heart that forc'd us to this shift!

Write thou, good niece; and here display at last

What God will have discovered for revenge.

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows
plain, 75

That we may know the traitors and the truth!
[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]

Tit. O, do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ?

"Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius."

Marc. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora

Performers of this heinous, bloody deed? 80

Tit. *Magni Dominator poli,
Tam lentus audis scelera? tam lentus vides?*

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord; although I
know

There is enough written upon this earth
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts, 85

And arm the minds of infants to exclains.
My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel;

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's
hope;

And swear with me, as, with the woeful fere
And father of that chaste dishonoured dame,
Lord Junius Brutus sware for Lucrece' rape, 91
That we will prosecute by good advice
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'T is sure enough, an you knew how. 95
But if you hunt these bear-whelps, then beware!

The dam will wake; and, if she wind you
once,

She's with the lion deeply still in league,
And hurls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when he sleeps will she do what she
list. 100

You are a young huntsman, Marcus; let alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by. The angry northern wind
Will blow these sands, like Sibyl's leaves, abroad, 105

And where's your lesson, then? Boy, what say you?

Young Luc. I say, my lord, that if I were a
man,

Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe

For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Marc. Ay, that's my boy! Thy father hath full oft 110

For his ungrateful country done the like.

Young Luc. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy
Shall carry from me to the Empress' sons 115
Presents that I intend to send them both.
Come, come; thou'lt do my message, wilt thou
not?

Young Luc. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my house; 120

Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court.

Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be waited on.
[Exeunt [Titus, Lavinia, and young Lucius].]

Marc. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan

And not relent or not compassion him?

Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart
Than foemen's marks upon his batt'rd shield;
But yet so just that he will not revenge.
Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus!

[Exit.]

[SCENE II. The same. A room in the palace.]

Enter AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, at one door; and at another door, young LUCIUS, and another, with a bundle of weapons, and verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius;
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Young Luc. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,

I greet your honours from Andronicus.

[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods confound you both!

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius. What's the news?

Young Luc. [Aside.] That you are both decipher'd, that's the news,

For villains mark'd with rape. — May it please you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me
The goodliest weapons of his armoury

To gratify your honourable youth,
The hope of Rome; for so he bid me say;

And so I do, and with his gifts present
Your lordships, that, whenever you have need,

You may be armed and appointed well:
And so I leave you both — [Aside] like bloody villains.

[Exeunt [young Lucius and Attendant].]

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and written round about.

Let's see:
[Reads.] "Integer vita, scelerisque purus,

Non eget Mauri jaculis, nec arcu."

Chi. O, 't is a verse in Horace; I know it well.

I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just; a verse in Horace; right, you have it.

[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!
Here's no sound jest! The old man hath found their guilt;

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with

lines
That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick.

But were our witty empress well afoot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit;

But let her rest in her unrest a while. —
And now, young lords, was't not a happy star

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,

Captives, to be advanced to this height?

It did me good, before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good to see so great a lord

Basely insinuate and send us gifts.

Aar. Had he not reason, Lord Demetrius?
Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go and pray to all the gods

For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. [Aside.] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

Dem. Why do the Emperor's trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the Emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a NURSE, with a blackamoor Child.

Nur. Good morrow, lords.
O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?

Aar. Well, more or less, or ne'er a whit at all,

Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O gentle Aaron, we are all undone!
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep!

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven's eye.

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace!

She is delivered, lords; she is delivered.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean, she is brought a-bed.

Aar. Well, God give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she is the devil's dam; a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue!

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.

The Empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,

And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. 'Zounds, ye whore! is black so base a hue?

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone her.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!

Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live. 80

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must; the mother wills it so.

Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man but I

Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point. 85

Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon dispatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.]

Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shone so brightly when this boy was got,

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point 91

That touches this my first-born son and heir!

I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus

With all his threat'ning band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war, 95

Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!

Ye white-lim'd walls! ye alehouse painted signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue,

In that it scorns to bear another hue; 100

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.

Tell the Empress from me, I am of age

To keep mine own, excuse it how she can. 105

Dem. Will thou betray thy noble mistress thus?

Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself,

The vigour and the picture of my youth.

This before all the world do I prefer;

This mangle all the world will I keep safe, 110

Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever sham'd.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The Emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy. 115

Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.

Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of thy heart!

Here's a young lad fram'd of another leer;

Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father, 120

As who should say, "Old lad, I am thine own."

He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed

Of that self-blood that first gave life to you,

And from that womb where you imprisoned were

He is enfranchised and come to light. 125

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the Empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice. 130

Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you;
Keep there. Now talk at pleasure of your safety. [They sit.]

Dem. How many women saw this child of his? 135

Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league,

I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor,

The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.

But say, again, how many saw the child? 140

Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself;

And no one else but the delivered empress.

Aar. The Empress, the midwife, and yourself.

Two may keep counsel when the third's away.

Go to the Empress, tell her this I said. 145

[He kills her.]

Weke, weke! so cries a pig prepared to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst thou this?

Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy.

Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,

A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? No, lords, no;

And now be it known to you my full intent. 150

Not far, one Muli lives, my countryman;

His wife but yesternight was brought to bed;

His child is like to her, fair as you are.

Go pack with him, and give the mother gold, 155

And tell them both the circumstance of all;

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd,

And be received for the Emperor's heir,

And substituted in the place of mine

To calm this tempest whirling in the court; 160

And let the Emperor dandle him for his own.

Hark ye, lords; you see I have given her physic,

[Pointing to the Nurse.]

And you must needs bestow her funeral;

The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.

This done, see that you take no longer days, 165

But send the midwife presently to me.

The midwife and the nurse well made away,

Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air

With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora. 170

Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt [Dem. and Chi., bearing off the Nurse's body].]

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,

And secretly to greet the Empress' friends.

Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence; 175

For it is you that puts us to our shifts.

I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave, and bring you up ¹⁷⁹
To be a warrior, and command a camp.—[Exit.]

[SCENE III. The same. A public place.]

Enter TITUS, bearing arrows with letters at the ends of them: with him, MARCUS, young LU-CIUS, [PUBLIUS, SEMPRONIUS, CAIUS] and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come; kinsmen, this is the way.

Sir boy, let me see your archery.

Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there
straight.

Terras Astræa reliquit;

Be you rememb' red, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled. ⁵

Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Happily you may catch her in the sea;
Yet there's as little justice as at land.

No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it;
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade, ¹¹

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth;
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition.

Tell him, it is for Justice and for aid, ¹⁵
And that it comes from old Andronicus,

Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.

Ah, Rome! Well, well; I made thee miserable

What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me. ²⁰

Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,

And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd,

This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her
hence;

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for Justice.

Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case, ²⁵

To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lords, it highly us concerns

By day and night to attend him carefully,

And feed his humour kindly as we may,

Till time beget some careful remedy. ³⁰

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.

Join with the Goths; and with revengeful war

Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,

And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters! ³⁵

What, have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you
word,

If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall.

Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd.

He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or somewhere else, ⁴⁰

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below,

And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.

Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we, ⁴⁵

No big-bon'd men fram'd of the Cyclops' size;
But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back,
Yet wrung with wrongs more than our backs can bear.

And, with there's no justice in earth nor hell,

We will solicit heaven and move the gods ⁵⁰

To send down Justice for to wreak our wrongs.

Come, to this gear. You are a good archer,

Marcus; [He gives them the arrows.

"Ad Jovem," that's for you; here, "Ad Apollinem;"

"Ad Martem," that's for myself;

Here, boy, to Pallas; here, to Mercury; ⁵⁵

To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine,

You were as good to shoot against the wind.

To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.

Of my word, I have written to effect;

There's not a god left unsolicited. ⁶⁰

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court;

We will afflict the Emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O,

well said, Lucius!

Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.

Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the ⁶⁵

moon;

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha!

Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?

See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Marc. This was the sport, my lord. When ⁷⁰

Publius shot,

The Bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock

That down fell both the Ram's horns in the court;

And who should find them but the Empress' villain?

She laugh'd; and told the Moor he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present. ⁷⁵

Tit. Why, there it goes; God give his lordship joy!

Enter a CLOWN, with a basket, and two pigeons

in it.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is

come.

Sirrah, what tidings? Have you any letters?

Shall I have justice? What says Jupiter? ⁸⁰

Clo. O, the gibbet-maker! he says that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hang'd till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee? ⁸⁵

Clo. Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else. ⁹⁰

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven! alas, sir, I never came there. God forbid I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men. ⁹⁵

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the Emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the Emperor with a grace? 90

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither; make no more ado, But give your pigeons to the Emperor.

By me thou shalt have justice at his hands. Hold, hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges. 105

Give me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir. 106

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver up your pigeons, and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir; see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir, let me alone. 114

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration; For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant. And when thou hast given it the Emperor,

Knock at my door, and tell me what he says. Clo. God be with you, sir; I will. [Exit. 120

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.

[SCENE IV. The same. Before the palace.]

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON [Lords, and others]; SATURNINUS brings the arrows in his hand that Titus shot at him.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these! Was ever seen

An emperor in Rome thus overborne, Troubled, confronted thus; and, for the extent Of equal justice, us'd in such contempt?

My lords, you know, [as know] the mightful gods, 5

However these disturbers of our peace Buzz in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd,

But even with law, against the wilful sons Of old Andronicus. And what an if

His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits, 10 Shall we be thus afflicted in his wrecks,

His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness? And now he writes to heaven for his redress.

See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury; This to Apollo; this to the god of war; 15

Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome! What's this but libelling against the senate,

And blazoning our injustice everywhere? A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?

As who would say, in Rome no justice were. 20 But if I live, his feigned ecstasies

Shall be no shelter to these outrages; But he and his shall know that justice lives

In Saturninus' health; whom, if he sleep, He'll so awake as he in fury shall. 25

Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives. Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts, Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,

The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons, 34 Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep and scarr'd his heart;

And rather comfort his distressed plight Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempts. (Aside.) Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all; 35 But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick.

Thy life-blood out, if Aaron now be wise, Then is all safe, the anchor in the port.

Enter CLOWN.

How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak with us?

Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be imperial. 40

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the Emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you god-den. I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.

[Saturninus reads the letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently. 45

Clo. How much money must I have?

Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd. Clo. Hang'd! by 'r lady, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit [guarded].

Sat. Despiteful and intolerable wrongs! 50 Shall I endure this monstrous villainy?

I know from whence this same device proceeds.

May this be borne? As if his traitorous sons, That died by law for murder of our brother,

Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully! Go, drag the villain hither by the hair; 55

Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege. For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-man;

Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,

In hope thyself should govern Rome and me. 60

Enter Nuntius ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius?

Æmil. Arm, my lords! Rome never had more cause.

The Goths have gather'd head; and with a power

Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil, They hither march amain, under conduct 65

Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus; Who threatens, in course of this revenge, to do

As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths? These tidings nip me, and I hang the head. 70

As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms,

Ay, now begins our sorrows to approach. 'T is he the common people love so much;

Myself hath often heard them say, When I have walked like a private man, 75

That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully, And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor. Tam. Why should you fear? Is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succour him. 80

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.

Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing
And is not careful what they mean thereby,
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings— 85
He can at pleasure stint their melody;
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus
With words more sweet, and yet more danger- 90
ous,

Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep,
Whenas the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will; 95
For I can smooth and fill his aged ears
With golden promises; that, were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.
[To Æmilius.] Go thou before, be our ambas- 100
sador.

Say that the Emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably;
And if he stand on hostage for his safety, 105
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually. [Exit.]

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the art I have
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again, 111
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successantly, and plead to him. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

[SCENE I. Plains near Rome.]

Enter LUCIUS with an army of GOTHs, with drums and [colours].

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful
friends,

I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signifies what hate they bear their emperor,

And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles wit- 5
ness,

Imperious and impatient of your wrongs,
And wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

[L.] Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,

Whose name was once our terror, now our com- 10
fort,

Whose high exploits and honourable deeds
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt,
Be bold in us; we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day

Led by their master to the flow' red fields, 15
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

[All the Goths.] And as he saith, so say we all
with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you
all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a GOTH, leading of AARON with his Child in his arms.

[2.] Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops
I stray'd 20

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;
And, as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.

I made unto the noise; when soon I heard 25
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:
"Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy dam!

Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor. 30
But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,

They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace!"—even thus he rates
the babe,—

"For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;
Who, when he knows thou art the Empress'
babe, 35

Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake."
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon
him,

Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him
hither,

To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the incarnate
devil 40

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand;
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye,
And here's the base fruit of her burning lust.
Say, wall-eyed slave, whither wouldst thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face? 45
Why dost not speak? What, deaf? Not a
word?

A halter, soldiers! Hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of royal
blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good. 50
First hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.
Get me a ladder.

[A ladder brought, which Aaron is made to ascend.]

Aar. Lucius, save the child,

And bear it from me to the Empress.

If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear. 55

If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more but "Vengeance rot you
all!"

Luc. Say on; an if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee! Why, assure thee,
Lucius,
'T will vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason, villainies,
Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd.
And this shall all be buried in my death
Unless thou swear to me my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? Thou believ'st no god:

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious

And hast a thing within thee called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath; for that I know
An idiot holds his bauble for a god

And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,

To that I'll urge him. Therefore thou shalt vow

By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
That thou adorest and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish and bring him up;
Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my God I swear to thee I will.

Aar. First know thou, I begot him on the Empress.

Luc. O most insatiate and luxurious woman!
Aar. Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of charity

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.
'T was her two sons that murdered Bassianus;
They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
And cut her hands, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd and cut and trimm'd, and 't was Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them.

That coddling spirit had they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set;
That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.
I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole
Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;

I wrote the letter that thy father found,
And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,
Confederate with the Queen and her two sons;

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,
And, when I had it, drew myself apart

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pried me through the crevice of a wall
When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his;
And when I told the Empress of this sport,
She swoonded almost at my pleasing tale,
And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.

[1.] Goth. What, canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day — and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse —

Wherein I did not some notorious ill,
As kill a man, or else devise his death,

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it,
Accuse some innocent and forswear myself,

Set deadly enmity between two friends,
Make poor men's cattle break their necks,

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

And set them upright at their dear friends' door,

Even when their sorrows almost was forgot;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,

Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
"Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead."

Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly as one would kill a fly,

And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die

So sweet a death as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,

To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,

But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

[Enter a GOth.]

[3.] Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome

Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome, Æmilius! What's the news from Rome?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,

The Roman Emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,

He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,

And they shall be immediately delivered.

[1.] Goth. What says our general?
Luc. Æmilius, let the Emperor give his pledges
 Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
 And we will come. March away. 105
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Rome. Before Titus's house.]

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habili-
 ment,
 I will encounter with Andronicus
 And say I am Revenge, sent from below
 To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
 Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps
 To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge; 6
 Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,
 And work confusion on his enemies.

[They knock.]

TITUS [above] opens his study door.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
 Is it your trick to make me ope the door 10
 That so my sad decrees may fly away
 And all my study be to no effect?
 You are deceiv'd; for what I mean to do
 See here in bloody lines I have set down;
 And what is written shall be executed. 15

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my talk,

Wanting a hand to give it action?
 Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou would'st talk with me. 20

Tit. I am not mad, I know thee well enough;
 Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care;

Witness the tiring day and heavy night;

Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well 25

For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.

Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not
Tamora;

She is thy enemy, and I thy friend.

I am Revenge, sent from the infernal kingdom
 To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind 31

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.

Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;

Confer with me of murder and of death.

There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place, 35

No vast obscurity or misty vale,

Where bloody murder or detested rape

Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to
 me, 41

To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to
 thee. 44

Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;
 Now give some surance that thou art Revenge,
 Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels;
 And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
 And whirl along with thee about the globes.
 Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet,
 To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away, 51
 And find out murderers in their guilty caves;
 And when thy car is loaden with their heads,
 I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
 Trot, like a servile footman, all day long, 55
 Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
 Until his very downfall in the sea;
 And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
 So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with
 me. 60

Tit. Are these thy ministers? What are they call'd?

Tam. Rape and Murder; therefore called so,
 'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of
 men.

Tit. Good Lord, how like the Empress's sons they are!

And you, the Empress! but we worldly men 65
 Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee;
 And, if one arm's embracement will content
 thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by.

[Exit above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy.
 What'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits, 71

Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,

For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;

And, being credulous in this mad thought,

I'll make him send for Lucius his son; 75

And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,

I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,

To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,

Or, at the least, make them his enemies.

See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

[Enter TITUS below.]

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for
 thee. 81

Welcome, dread Fury, to my woeful house;
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.

How like the Empress and her sons you are!

Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor; 85

Could not all hell afford you such a devil?

For well I wot the Empress never wages

But in her company there is a Moor;

And, would you represent our queen aright,

It were convenient you had such a devil. 90

But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with
 him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,
 And I am sent to be reveng'd on him. 95

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong,

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome;

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,

Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer. 100

Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap

To find another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him; he's a ravisher.

Go thou with them; and in the Emperor's court

There is a queen, attended by a Moor; 105

Well mayst thou know her by thine own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee.

I pray thee, do on them some violent death;

They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do. 110

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,

To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son,

Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house;

When he is here, even at thy solemn feast, 115

I will bring in the Empress and her sons,

The Emperor himself and all thy foes;

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,

And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.

What says Andronicus to this device? 120

Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius;

Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him

Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths. 125

Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are.

Tell him the Emperor and the Empress too

Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.

This do thou for my love; and so let him,

As he regards his aged father's life. 130

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.]

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,

And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;

Or else I'll call my brother back again, 135

And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to her sons.] What say you, boys? Will you abide with him

Whiles I go tell my lord the Emperor

How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?

Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair, 140

And tarry with him till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all though they suppose me mad,

And will o'erreach them in their own devices.

A pair of cursed hell-hounds and their dam!

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure; leave us here. 145

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus! Revenge now goes

To lay a plot to betray thy foes.

Tit. I know thou dost; and, sweet Revenge, farewell. [Exit Tamora.]

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do. Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine! 151

[Enter PUBLIUS and others.]

Pub. What is your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The Empress's sons, I take them, Chiron, Demetrius. 155

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd.

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name;

And therefore bind them, gentle Publius.

Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them. 160

Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,

And now I find it; therefore bind them sure,

And stop their mouths if they begin to cry. [Exit Titus. Publius, etc., lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.]

Chi. Villains, forbear! we are the Empress's sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

Stop close their mouths, let them not speak a word. 165

Is he sure bound? Look that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS with a knife, and Lavinia with a basin.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.

Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me,

But let them hear what fearful words I utter.

O villains, Chiron and Demetrius! 170

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud,

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.

You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,

My hand cut off and made a merry jest; 175

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,

Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say if I should let you speak?

Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace. 180

Hark, wretches! how I mean to martyr you.

This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,

Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The basin that receives your guilty blood.

You know your mother means to feast with me, 185

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.

Hark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust

And with your blood and it I'll make a paste,

And of the paste a coffin I will rear. 190

And make two pasties of your shameful heads,

And bid that strumpet, your unhallowed dam,

Like to the earth swallow her own increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,

And this the banquet she shall surfeit on ;
For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd. 195

And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come,
Receive the blood ; and when that they are dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small
And with this hateful liquor temper it ; 200
And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet ; which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.

[He cuts their throats.
So, now bring them in, for I'll play the cook,
And see them ready against their mother comes. 205

[Exeunt [bearing the dead bodies].]

[SCENE III. Court of Titus's house.]

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and GOTHs [with AARON prisoner].

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 't is my father's mind
That I repair to Rome, I am content.

[I.] Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous
Moor,

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil ; 5
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the Empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings.

And see the ambush of our friends be strong ;
I fear the Emperor means no good to us. 10

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine
ear,

And prompt me, that my tongue may utter
forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart !
Luc. Away, inhuman dog ! unhallo'd slave !

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in. 15
[Exeunt Goths, with Aaron.] Flourish
[within].

The trumpets show the Emperor is at hand.

Sound trumpets. Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with [ÆMILIUS,] Tribunes, [Senators] and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament moe suns than one ?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun ?

Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle ;

These quarrels must be quietly debated. 20
The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome.

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will. 25 [Hautboys. A table brought in. [The company sit down.]]

Sound trumpets. Enter TITUS like a cook, placing the meat on the table ; Lavinia with a veil over her face ; [young LUCIUS and others].

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord ; welcome,
dread queen ;

Welcome, ye warlike Goths ; welcome, Lucius ;
And-welcome, all ! Although the cheer be poor,

'T will fill your stomachs ; please you eat of it.
Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus ?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all
well. 31

To entertain your Highness and your empress.
Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your Highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the Emperor, resolve me this : 35
Was it well done of rash Virginus

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflower'd ?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.
Tit. Your reason, mighty lord ? 40

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her
shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual ;
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant

For me, most wretched, to perform the like. 45
Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee ;
And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die !

[Kills Lavinia.]

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind ?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woeful as Virginus was, 50
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage ; and it now is done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd ? Tell who did
the deed.

Tit. Will 't please you eat ? Will 't please your Highness feed ?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter
thus ? 55

Tit. Not I ; 't was Chiron and Demetrius.
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue ;

And they, 't was they, that did her all this
wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently.
Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie ; 60

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred.

'T is true, 't is true ; witness my knife's sharp point. [Stabs Tamora.]

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed ! [Kills Titus.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bled ? 65

There 's need for meed, death for a deadly
deed !

[Kills Saturninus. A great tumult.
Lucius, Marcus, and others go up into the balcony.]

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproars sever'd, as a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O, let me teach you how to knit again 70
This scatt' red corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body;
Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
And she whom mighty kingdoms curtsy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate castaway, 75
Do shameful execution on herself.
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
[To Lucius.] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as erst our ancestor, 80

When with his solemn tongue he did discourse
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear
The story of that baleful burning night
When subtle Greeks surpris'd King Priam's
Troy;

Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears, 85
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.

My heart is not compact of flint nor steel;
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,
But floods of tears will drown my oratory. 90
And break my utterance, even in the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration.
Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him
speak. 95

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to
you

That cursed Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother,
And they it were that ravished our sister.
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded; 100
Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel
out

And sent her enemies unto the grave.
Lastly, myself unkindly banished,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out
To beg relief among Rome's enemies, 105
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend.
I am the turned forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood;
And from her bosom took the enemy's point, 111
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.
Alas, you know I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just and full of truth. 115
But, soft! methinks I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise. O, pardon me;
For when no friends are by, men praise themselves.

Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold the
child:

[Pointing to the Child in the arms of an Attendant.]

Of this was Tamora delivered, 120
The issue of an irreligious Moor,

Chief architect and plotter of these woes.

The villain is alive in Titus' house,
And as he is, to witness this is true.
Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge 125
These wrongs unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
Now you have heard the truth, what say you,
Romans?

Have we done aught amiss? Show us wherein,
And, from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronic 131
Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.
Speak, Romans, speak; and if you say we shall, 135

Lo, hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of
Rome,

And bring our Emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our Emperor; for well I know
The common voice do cry it shall be so. 140

[All.] Lucius, all hail, Rome's royal Emperor!

Marc. Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house,
[To Attendants.]

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful slaught'ring death,
As punishment for his most wicked life. 145
[Exeunt Attendants.]

LUCIUS, MARCUS, and the others descend.

[All.] Lucius, all hail, Rome's gracious governor!

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; may I govern
so,

To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her
woe!

But, gentle people, give me aim a while,
For nature puts me to a heavy task. 150
Stand all aloof, but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk.
O, take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,
[Kissing Titus.]

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd
face,

The last true duties of thy noble son! 155

Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips.
O, were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them!

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us 159

To melt in showers; thy grandsire lov'd thee
well.

Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy. 165
In that respect, then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender
spring,

Because kind nature doth require it so;
Friends should associate friends in grief and
woe.

Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave; 170
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.

Young Luc. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again!
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth. 175

[Re-enter Attendants with AARON.]

A Roman. You sad Andronici, have done with woes.
Give sentence on this execrable wretch
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him;

There let him stand and rave and cry for food. 180

If any one relieves or pities him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom.
Some stay to see him fast'ned in the earth.

Aar. Ah, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?

I am no baby, I, that with base prayers 185
I should repent the evils I have done.

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will.
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul. 190

Luc. Some loving friends convey the Emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave.

My father and Lavinia shall forthwith

Be closed in our household's monument.

As for that ravenous tiger, Tamora, 195

No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weeds;

No mournful bell shall ring her burial;

But throw her forth to beasts and birds to prey.

Her life was beastly, and devoid of pity;

And, being so, shall have like want of pity. 200

See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,

By whom our heavy haps had their beginning.

Then, afterwards, to order well the state,

That like events may ne'er it ruin.

[Exeunt.]

THE TRAGEDY OF ROMEO AND JULIET

THE First Quarto of Romeo and Juliet appeared in 1597, printed, it is inferred from internal evidence, from copy made up on the basis of a shorthand writer's imperfect report taken at the theatre. The title-page of this edition states that "it hath been often (with great applause) plaid publicquely, by the right Honourable the L. of Hunsdon his servants." This proves it to have been on the stage between July, 1596, and April, 1597, the months during which the "Lord Hunsdon's servants" were so named. Further evidence of date is purely internal, the most definite being the Nurse's reference to the earthquake of eleven years before (i. iii. 23, 35). If, as is often assumed, this refers to the earthquake of 1580, it places the play in its first form as early as 1591; but the ground of the inference is very weak. The frequency of rime, especially alternate, the lyrical quality of the poetry, and the abundance of verbal quibbling, also point to an early date; but in the absence of any external evidence, or of an authentic copy of the play in its first form, no certain statement can be made as to exact date.

The Second Quarto, published in 1599, claims to be "newly corrected, augmented, and amended," and a comparison of this text with that of the First Quarto confirms this, indicating that the play was subjected to revision and enlargement by Shakespeare about 1597-98, though not all the additional passages in the Second Quarto are due to the revision. The Third Quarto (1609) was printed from the Second, the Fourth (undated) from the Third, and the Fifth (1637) from the Fourth. The First Folio text follows the Third Quarto, so that the Second Quarto is the chief authority, and forms the basis of the present edition.

The device of escaping from an unwelcome marriage by means of a sleeping potion is found as early as the mediæval Greek romance of Abrocomas and Anthia by Xenophon of Ephesus. Massuccio (1476) tells a tale having many points of similarity to the present tragedy; but the earliest known version which is an undoubted direct ancestor of Shakespeare's plot is the history of Romeo and Giulietta narrated by Luigi da Porto, and published in Venice about 1530. The progress of the story towards the Shakespearean form continues through a version in Bandello's Novelle (1554), Boisteau's translation of the same (1559), the English poem of Romeus and Juliet by Arthur Brooke (1562), and Painter's translation of Boisteau in his Palace of Pleasure (1567). In Brooke's address "To the Reader" he states that he "saw the same argument lately set forth on stage;" but no copy of the play alluded to is known to have survived in English. About 1630, however, Jacob Struijs wrote a Romeo and Juliette in Dutch hexameters; and an attempt has been made to prove that this drama is an adaptation of a lost play used by Shakespeare as a basis, and perhaps that to which Brooke refers.

The main lines of the dramatic action and of the chief characters were thus already laid down before Shakespeare worked on the story; and he borrowed also a large amount of detail, especially from the version by Brooke. The episode of the Apothecary and the order of events in the catastrophe go back to Boisteau, but to this last Shakespeare himself added the death of Paris at Juliet's tomb. The Nurse as a great comic figure is first developed by Brooke. The death of Mercutio is due to the old dramatist, but the elaboration of his character and his wit are Shakespeare's, as are also the reducing of Juliet's age from sixteen to fourteen and the opening of the action with the conflict of the factions. The genius of Shakespeare is more pervasive in the extraordinarily intense quality of the great lyric speeches, and in the representation of the growth and enriching of the lovers in passion and character.

The story was dramatized, before Shakespeare, in Italy, Spain, and France, as well as in England; and many collateral versions in narrative form exist. Shakespeare's tragedy was produced in a corrupt German version in the seventeenth century; and it has been adapted and translated by many hands and in many countries. In Shakespeare's own time the story passed from legend into "history," and the events were stated to have actually occurred in Verona in the first years of the fourteenth century.

PROLOGUE

Two households, both alike in dignity,

In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,

From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,

Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.

From forth the fatal loins of these two foes

A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;

Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows

Doth with their death bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,

And the continuance of their parents' rage,¹⁰
Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,

Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;

The which if you with patient ears attend,

What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Verona. A public place.]

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, of the house of Capulet, with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, on my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being mov'd.

Gre. But thou art not quickly mov'd to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.¹⁰

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand; therefore, if thou art mov'd, thou run'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand. I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.¹⁶

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. 'Tis true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall; therefore I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.²²

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters and us their men.

Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show myself a tyrant. When I have fought with the men, I will be cruel with the maids; I will cut off their heads.²⁸

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am able to stand; and 'tis known I am a pretty piece of flesh.³⁵

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John. Draw thy tool; here comes two of the house of Montagues.

Enter two other serving-men [ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR].

Sam. My naked weapon is out. Quarrel, I will back thee.⁴⁰

Gre. How! turn thy back and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin. 45

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is disgrace to them, if they bear it. 50

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. [Aside to Gre.] Is the law of our side, if I say ay? 55

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; but I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? No, sir. 60

Sam. But if you do, sir, I am for you. I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter BENVOLIO.

Gre. Say "better"; here comes one of my master's kinsmen. 65

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men. Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. [They fight. 70

Ben. Part, fools!

Put up your swords; you know not what you do. [Beats down their swords.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?

Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace. Put up thy sword, 75

Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace! I hate the word

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee.

Have at thee, coward! [They fight.

Enter three or four Citizens. [and OFFICERS], with clubs or partisans.

Off. Clubs, bills, and partisans! Strike! Beat them down! 80

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET in his gown, and LADY CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this? Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch! why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword, I say! Old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me. 85

Enter MONTAGUE and LADY MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet, — Held me not, let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter PRINCE, with his train.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel, — Will they not hear? — What, ho! you men, you beasts, 90

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage With purple fountains issuing from your veins, On pain of torture, from those bloody hands Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince. 95 Three civil brawls, bred of an airy word, By thee, old Capulet, and Montague, Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets, And made Verona's ancient citizens Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments, 100 To wield old partisans, in hands as old, Cank'red with peace, to part your cank'red hate;

If ever you disturb our streets again Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace. For this time, all the rest depart away. 105 You, Capulet, shall go along with me; And, Montague, come you this afternoon, To know our farther pleasure in this case, To old Free-town, our common judgement-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men depart. 110 [Exeunt [all but Montague, Lady Montague, and Benvolio].

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach. I drew to part them. In the instant came 115 The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd, Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears, He swung about his head and cut the winds, Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn. While we were interchanging thrusts and blows, Came more and more and fought on part and part, 120

Till the Prince came, who parted either part. La. Mon. O, where is Romeo? Saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the wor- 125 shipp'd sun

Peer'd forth the golden window of the east, A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad; Where, underneath the grove of sycamore That westward rooteth from the city's side, So early walking did I see your son. 130 Towards him I made, but he was ware of me And stole into the covert of the wood. I, measuring his affections by my own, Which then most sought where most might not be found,

Being one too many by my weary self, Pursued my humour not pursuing his, 135 And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,

Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs ;

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun 140
Should in the farthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night. 146
Black and portentous must this humour prove Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause ?

Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means ? 151

Mon. Both by myself and many other friends ;

But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself — I will not say how true —
But to himself so secret and so close, 155
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows 160
grow,

We would as willingly give cure as know.

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. See, where he comes ! So please you, step aside ;

I'll know his grievance, or be much deny'd.

Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay

To hear true shrift. Come, madam, let's away. [Exeunt [Montague and Lady].] 165

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young ?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay me ! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast ?

Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours ?

Rom. Not having that which, having, makes them short. 170

Ben. In love ?

Rom. Out —

Ben. Of love ?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view, 175
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof !

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,

Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will !
Where shall we dine ? O me ! What fray was here ?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all. 180

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.

Why, then, O brawling love ! O loving hate !

O anything, of nothing first create !

O heavy lightness ! serious vanity !

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms ! 185

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health !

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is !

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh ?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what ?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression. 191

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest

With more of thine. This love that thou hast shown

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own. 195

Love is a smoke made with the fume of sighs ;

Being purg'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes ;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears.

What is it else ? A madness most discreet,

A choking gall, and a preserving sweet. 200

Farewell, my coz.

Ben. Soft ! I will go along.

Am if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have left myself ; I am not here.

This is not Romeo ; he's some otherwhere.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love ? 205

Rom. What, shall I groan and tell thee ?

Ben. Groan ! why, no ;

But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will, —

Ah, world ill urg'd to one that is so ill !

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman. 210

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good mark-man ! And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit you miss. She'll not be hit

With Cupid's arrow ; she hath Dian's wit ; 215

And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
'Gainst Love's weak childish bow she lives un-harm'd.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms,

Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold. 220

O, she is rich in beauty, only poor
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will still live chaste ?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste ;

For beauty starv'd with her severity 225
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.

She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,

To merit bliss by making me despair.

She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow

Do I live dead that live to tell it now. 230

Ben. Be rul'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes ;

Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way

To call hers, exquisite, in question more. 235

These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' brows

Being black puts us in mind they hide the fair;
 He that is stricken blind cannot forget
 The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.
 Show me a mistress that is passing fair, 240
 What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
 Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair?

Farewell! Thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. A street.]

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and the Clown [a SERVANT].

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I,
 In penalty alike; and 't is not hard, I think,
 For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
 And pity 't is you liv'd at odds so long. 5
 But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before.

My child is yet a stranger in the world;
 She hath not seen the change of fourteen years.
 Let two more summers wither in their pride, 10
 Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.

The earth hath swallowed all my hopes but she,
 She is the hopeful lady of my earth; 15
 But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
 My will to her consent is but a part;
 An she agree, within her scope of choice
 Lies my consent and fair according voice.
 This night I hold an old accustomed feast, 20
 Whereto I have invited many a guest,
 Such as I love; and you, among the store
 One more, most welcome, makes my number
 more.

At my poor house look to behold this night
 Earth-treading stars that make dark heaven
 light. 25

Such comfort as do lusty young men feel
 When well-apparell'd April on the heel
 Of limping winter treads, even such delight
 Among fresh female buds shall you this night
 Inherit at my house; hear all, all see, 30
 And like her most whose merit most shall be.
 Which on more view of, many, mine being one,
 May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
 Come, go with me. [To Servant.] Go, sirrah, trudge about

Through fair Verona; find those persons out Whose names are written there, and to them
 say 35

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.
 [Exeunt [Capulet and Paris].]

Serv. Find them out whose names are written here! It is written, that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned. — In good time. 45

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man, one fire burns out another's burning,

One pain is less'n'd by another's anguish;
 Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning;
 One desperate grief cures with another's languish.

Take thou some new infection to thy eye, 50
 And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plaitain-leaf is excellent for
 that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is; 55

Shut up in prison, kept without my food, Whipp'd and tormented and — God-den, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' god-den. I pray, sir, can you read?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery. 60

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book. But, I pray, can you read anything you see?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly. Rest you merry!

Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. 65

[Reads.] "Signior Martino and his wife and daughters; County Anselme and his beauteous sisters; the lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio and his lovely nieces; Mercutio and his brother Valentine; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; my fair niece Rosaline;
 Livia; Signior Valencio and his cousin Tybalt;
 Lucio and the lively Helena." 74

A fair assembly: whither should they come?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither?

Serv. To supper; to our house.

Rom. Whose house?

Serv. My master's. 80

Rom. Indeed, I should have ask'd you that before.

Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking. My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush a cup of wine. Rest you merry! 85

[Exit.]

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
 Supps the fair Rosaline whom thou so loves,
 With all the admired beauties of Verona.

Go thither; and, with unattainted eye, 90
 Compare her face with some that I shall show,
 And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires; 95

And these, who, often drown'd, could never
 die,

Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars!
 One fairer than my love! The all-seeing sun
 Ne'er saw her match since first the world began.

Ben. Tut, you saw her fair, none else being by,
Herself pois'd with herself in either eye; 100
But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love against some other maid
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well that now seems best.

Rom. I'll go along no such sight to be shown, 108
But to rejoice in splendour of mine own.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. A room in Capulet's house.]

Enter LADY CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? Call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead at twelve year old,

I bade her come. What, lamb! What, lady-bird!
God forbid!—Where's this girl? What, Juliet!

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now! Who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will? 6

La. Cap. This is the matter.—Nurse, give leave a while,

We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again;

I have rememb'ed me, thou'st hear our counsel.
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age. 10

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,—
And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,—

She is not fourteen. How long is it now
To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight and odd days. 15

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—
Were of an age. Well, Susan is with God;
She was too good for me. But, as I said, 20
On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen;
That shall she, marry; I remember it well.
'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;
And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it—

Of all the days of the year, upon that day. 25
For I had then laid wormwood to my dug;
Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;
My lord and you were then at Mantua;—
Nay, I do bear a brain;—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple
Of my dug and felt it bitter, pretty fool, 31
To see it tetchy and fall out wi' the dug!
Shake, quoth the dove-house; 't was no need,

I trow,
To bid me trudge.

And since that time it is eleven years; 36
For then she could stand high-lone; nay, by the rood,

She could have run and waddled all about;
For even the day before, she broke her brow;
And then my husband—God be with his soul!
'A was a merry man—took up the child. 40
"Yea," quoth he, "dost thou fall upon thy
face?"

Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more
wit;

Wilt thou not, Jule?" and, by my holiday,
The pretty wretch left crying and said, "Ay."
To see, now, how a jest shall come about! 45
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it. "Wilt thou not,
Jule?" quoth he;

And, pretty fool, it stinted and said, "Ay."
La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam; yet I cannot choose but laugh, 50

To think it should leave crying and say, "Ay."
And yet, I warrant, it had upon it brow
A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;
A perilous knock; and it cried bitterly.
"Yea," quoth my husband, "fall'st upon thy
face?" 55

Thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to
age;

Wilt thou not, Jule?" It stinted and said,
"Ay."

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd.
An I might live to see thee married once, 61
I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that "marry" is the very theme

I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your dispositions to be married? 65

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,

I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now;
younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem, 70
Are made already mothers. By my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief:
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! Lady, such a
man 75

As all the world—why, he's a man of wax.

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? Can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast; 80
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;

Examine every married lineament
 And see how one another lends content,
 And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies 85
 Find written in the margin of his eyes.
 This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
 To beautify him, only lacks a cover.
 The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride
 For fair without the fair within to hide. 90
 That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,
 That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;
 So shall you share all that he doth possess,
 By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less! nay, bigger; women grow by men. 95

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move;
 But no more deep will I endart mine eye 98
 Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter SERVANT.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper serv'd up, you call'd, my young lady ask'd for, the nurse curs'd in the pantry, and everything in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight. [Exit.

La. Cap. We follow thee. Juliet, the County stays. 105

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. A street.]

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six other Maskers, Torch-bearers.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
 Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity.
 We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a scarf,
 Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath, 5
 Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;
 [Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
 After the prompter, for our entrance;]
 But let them measure us by what they will,
 We'll measure them a measure and be gone. 10

Rom. Give me a torch. I am not for this ambling;

Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes

With nimble soles; I have a soul of lead 15
 So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
 And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore pierc'd with his shaft
 To soar with his light feathers, and so bound 20
 I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe.
 Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden
 love;

Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? It is too rough, Too rude, too boisterous, and it pricks like thorn. 25

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love
 down. —

Give me a case to put my visage in,

[Puts on a mask.]

A visor for a visor! what care I 30

What curious eye doth quote deformities?

Here are the beetle brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock and enter; and no sooner in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me; let wantons light of
 heart 35

Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels,

For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase:

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on.

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word. 40

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the
 mire

Of this sir-reverence love, wherein thou stickest
 Up to the ears. Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay
 We waste our lights in vain, light lights by
 day. 45

Take our good meaning, for our judgement sits
 Five times in that ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask;

But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask? 50

Rom. I dream'd a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been
 with you.

She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes
 In shape no bigger than an agate-stone 55

On the fore-finger of an alderman,

Drawn with a team of little atomies

Over men's noses as they lie asleep;

Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs,

The cover of the wings of grasshoppers, 60

Her traces of the smallest spider web,

Her collars of the moonshine's watery beams,

Her whip of cricket's bone, the lash of film,

Her waggoner a small grey-coated gnat,

Not half so big as a round little worm 65

Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid;

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut

Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,

Time out o' mind the fairies' coachmakers.

And in this state she gallops night by night 70

Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love;

On courtiers' knees, that dream on curtsies

straight;

O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;

O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,

Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,

Because their breath with sweetmeats tainted
are. 75

Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit;
And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail
Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep, 80
Then he dreams of another benefice,
Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon 85
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,
And being thus frighted swears a prayer or two
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab
That plats the manes of horses in the night,
And bakes the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, 90
Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.
This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage.
This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace! 95
Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True, I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy,
Which is as thin of substance as the air
And more inconstant than the wind, who woos
Even now the frozen bosom of the north, 101
And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind you talk of blows us from ourselves.

Supper is done, and we shall come too late. 105

Rom. I fear, too early; for my mind mis-gives

Some consequence yet hanging in the stars
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels, and expire the term
Of a despised life clos'd in my breast 110
By some vile forfeit of untimely death.
But He that hath the steerage of my course
Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen!

Ben. Strike, drum.

[They march about the stage.
[Ereunt.]

[SCENE V. A hall in Capulet's house.]

[Musicians waiting.] Enter SERVING-MEN, with napkins.

[1.] Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher! He scrape a trencher!

[2.] Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwash'd too,
'tis a foul thing. 6

[1.] Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou loves me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Antony and Potpan! 11

[2.] Serv. Ay, boy, ready.

[1.] Serv. You are look'd for and call'd for, for ask'd for and sought for, in the great chamber.

[3.] Serv. We cannot be here and there too.

Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [They retire.] 17

Enter [CAPULET, with JULIET and others of his house, meeting] the Guests and Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! Ladies that have their toes

Unplagu'd with corns will walk a bout with you.
Ah, my mistresses, which of you all 20

Will now deny to dance? She that makes dainty,

She, I'll swear, hath corns. Am I come near ye now?

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day
That I have worn a visor and could tell

A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear, 25
Such as would please; 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis
gone.

You are welcome, gentlemen! Come, musicians, play.

[Music plays, and they dance.]

A hall, a hall! give room! and foot it, girls.
More light, you knaves; and turn the tables 30

up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.

Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet,

For you and I are past our dancing days.
How long is 't now since last yourself and I

Were in a mask?

[2.] Cap. By 'r lady, thirty years. 35

Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much.

'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,

Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

[2.] Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more. His son is 40

elder, sir;
His son is thirty.

Cap. Will you tell me that?

His son was but a ward two years ago.
Rom. [To a Serving-man.] What lady's that which doth enrich the hand

Of yonder knight?

Serv. I know not, sir. 45

Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!

It seems she hangs upon the cheek of night
As a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear;

Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows, 50

As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.
The measure done, I'll watch her place of

stand,
And, touching hers, make blessed my rude hand.

Did my heart love till now? Forswear it, sight!
For I ne'er saw true beauty till this night. 55

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.

Fetch me my rapier, boy. What dares the slave
Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,

To f leer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin, 60

To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.
Cap. Why, how now, kinsman! wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe,
A villain that is hither come in spite
To scorn at our solemnity this night. 65

Cap. Young Romeo is it?

Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone,
'A bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth. 70
I would not for the wealth of all this town
Here in my house do him disparagement;
Therefore be patient, take no note of him;
It is my will, the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast. 75

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest.
I'll not endure him.

Cap. He shall be endur'd.
What, Goodman boy! I say, he shall; go to!
Am I the master here, or you? Go to! 80 You'll not endure him! God shall mend my soul!

You'll make a mutiny among my guests!
You will set cock-a-hoop! You'll be the man!

Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.

Cap. Go to, go to;
You are a saucy boy. Is 't so, indeed? 85
This trick may chance to scath you; I know
what.

You must contrary me! Marry, 'tis time. —
Well said, my hearts! — You are a princex; go;
Be quiet, or — More light, more light! — for
shame!

I'll make you quiet. — What, cheerly, my hearts! 90

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler
meeting
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greet-
ing.

I will withdraw; but this intrusion shall
Now seeming sweet convert to bitt' rest gall.

[Exit.

Rom. [To Juliet.] If I profane with my un-worthiest hand 95

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this:
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand

To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.
Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,

Which mannerly devotion shows in this; 100
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,

And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.
Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do; 105

They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.

Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd.
[Kissing her.]

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly
urg'd!

Give me my sin again. [Kissing her again.

Jul. You kiss by the book.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word
with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house, 115

And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous.

I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;

I tell you, he that can lay hold of her

Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt. 120

Ben. Away, be gone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.

Is it e'en so? Why, then, I thank you all; 125

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good-night.

More torches here! Come on then, let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;

I'll to my rest.

[All but Juliet and Nurse begin to go out.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is yond gentleman? 130

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not. 135

Jul. Go, ask his name. — If he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding-bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
The only son of your great enemy. 139

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

Prodigious birth of love it is to me
That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?

Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
Of one I dane'd withal.

[One calls within, "Juliet."

Nurse. Anon, anon! 145

Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone.
[Exeunt.]

[ACT II]

[PROLOGUE]

[Enter] CHORUS.

[Chor.] Now old Desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young Affection gapes to be his heir;

'That fair for which love groan'd for and would
die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.

Now Romeo is belov'd and loves again,
 Alike bewitched by the charm of looks,
 But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
 And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks.
 Being held a foe, he may not have access To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
 And she as much in love, her means much less
 To meet her new-beloved anywhere.
 But passion lends them power, time means, to
 meet,
 Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet.
 [Exit.]

[SCENE I. A lane by the wall of Capulet's orchard.]

Enter ROMEO, alone.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is
 here?
 Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.
 [He climbs the wall, and leaps down within it.]

Enter BENVOLIO with MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!
 Mer. He is wise;
 And, on my life, hath stol'n him home to bed.
 Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall.

Call, good Mercutio.
 Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.
 Romeo! humours! madman! passion! lover!
 Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh!
 Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;
 Cry but "Ay me!" pronounce but "love"
 and "dove";

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
 One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,
 Young Abraham Cupid, he that shot so trim,
 When King Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid!
 He heareth not, he stirreth not, he moveth not;
 The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
 By her high forehead and her scarlet lip,
 By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,
 That in thy likeness thou appear to us!

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger
 him.

Mer. This cannot anger him; 't would anger
 him

To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle,
 Of some strange nature, letting it there stand
 Till she had laid it and conjur'd it down.

That were some spite; my invocation
 Is fair and honest; in his mistress' name
 I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,

To be consorted with the humorous night.
 Blind is his love and best befits the dark.

Mer. If Love be blind, Love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,

And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit
 As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone.
 O, Romeo, that she were, O, that she were
 An open et cetera, thou a poperin pear!
 Romeo, good-night; I'll to my truckle-bed;
 This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep.
 Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 't is in vain
 To seek him here that means not to be found.
 [Exeunt [Ben. and Mer.].

[SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

ROMEO advances from the wall.]

Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound.

[Juliet appears above at her window.]

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun.
 Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
 Who is already sick and pale with grief
 That thou, her maid, art far more fair than
 she.

Be not her maid, since she is envious;
 Her vestal livery is but sick and green,
 And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.
 It is my lady, O, it is my love!
 O, that she knew she were!

She speaks, yet she says nothing; what of that?
 Her eye discourses; I will answer it. —
 I am too bold, 't is not to me she speaks.

Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
 Having some business, do entreat her eyes
 To twinkle in their spheres till they return.

What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
 The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven
 Would through the airy region stream so bright
 That birds would sing and think it were not
 night.

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
 O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
 That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ay me!
 Rom. She speaks!

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
 As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
 As is a winged messenger of heaven
 Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes
 Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him
 When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds
 And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou
 Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
 Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
 And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside.] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'T is but thy name that is my enemy;
 Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
 What's Montague? It is nor hand, nor foot,
 Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
 Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!

What's in a name? That which we call a rose
By any other word would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd, 45
Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, doff thy name,
And for thy name which is no part of thee
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word.
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd; 50
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou that thus bescreen'd in night
So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am.
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself, 55
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred
words
Of thy tongue's uttering, yet I know the sound.
Art thou not Romeo and a Montague? 60

Rom. Neither, fair maid, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here. 65

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no stop to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder
thee. 70

Rom. Alack, there lies more peril in thine
eye

Than twenty of their swords! Look thou but sweet,

And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee
here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes;

And but thou love me, let them find me here.
My life were better ended by their hate,

Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By Love, that first did prompt me to inquire; 80

He lent me counsel and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far

As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest
sea,

I should adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face, 85

Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek
For that which thou hast heard me speak tonight.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke; but farewell compliment!
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say

"Ay," 90
And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear'st,

Thou mayst prove false. At lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully;
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won, 95
I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,—
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou mayst think my 'haviour
light;

But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true Than those that have more cunning to be strange. 101

I should have been more strange, I must confess,

But that thou overheard'st, ere I was ware,
My true love's passion; therefore pardon me,
And not impute this yielding to light love, 105
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon,

That monthly changes in her circled orb, 110
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love—

Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy in
thee, 116

I have no joy of this contract to-night;
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden,

Too like the lightning, which doth cease to
be

Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good-night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening
breath, 121

May prove a beauteous flower when next we
meet.

Good-night, good-night! as sweet repose and
rest

Come to thy heart as that within my breast!

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-
night? 126

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it;

And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? For what purpose, love? 130

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.

And yet I wish but for the thing I have.
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,

My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite. 135

[Nurse] calls within.
I hear some noise within; dear love, adieu!

Anon, good nurse! Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again.

[Exit, above.]

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream, 140
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

[Re-enter JULIET, above.]

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good-night indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,

By one that I'll procure to come to thee, ¹⁴⁴
Where and what time thou wilt perform the rite;

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay
And follow thee my lord throughout the world.

[Nurse.] (Within.) Madam!

Jul. I come, anon. — But if thou mean'st not well, ¹⁵⁰

I do beseech thee —

[Nurse.] (Within.) Madam!

Jul. By and by, I come: —
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief.
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul —

Jul. A thousand times good-night! ¹⁵⁵
[Exit [above].]

Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love, as schoolboys from their books,

But love from love, toward school with heavy looks. [Retiring.]

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist! O, for a falconer's
voice,

To lure this tassel-gentle back again! ¹⁶⁰

Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;

Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies,

And make her airy tongue more hoarse than
mine,

With repetition of my [Romeo's name.]

Romeo!

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name.

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night, ¹⁶⁵

Like softest music to attending ears!

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear?

Jul. What o'clock to-morrow

Shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty year till then. ¹⁷⁰

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember
it.

Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand
there,

Rememb'ring how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget, ¹⁷⁵

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee
gone; —

And yet no farther than a wanton's bird;

That lets it hop a little from her hand,

Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves, ¹⁸⁰

And with a silken thread plucks it back again,

So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would I were thy bird.

Jul. Sweet, so would I;

Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good-night, good-night! Parting is such sweet sorrow, ¹⁸⁵

That I shall say good-night till it be morrow.

[Exit, above.]

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!

Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell,

His help to crave, and my dear hap to tell. ¹⁹⁰

[Exit.]

[SCENE III. Friar Laurence's cell.]

Enter FRIAR [LAURENCE], with a basket.

Fri. L. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night,

Chequ'ring the eastern clouds with streaks of
light,

And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels

From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels.

Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye, ⁴

The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,

I must up-fill this osier cage of ours

With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers.

The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;

What is her burying grave, that is her womb; ¹⁰

And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find,

Many for many virtues excellent,

None but for some, and yet all different.

O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies ¹⁵

In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities;

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give,

Nor aught so good but, strain'd from that fair
use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse. ²⁰

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;

And vice sometime's by action dignified.

Enter ROMEO.

Within the infant rind of this weak flower

Poison hath residence and medicine power;

For this, being smelt, with that part cheers ²⁵
each part;

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.

Two such opposed kings encamp them still

In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will;

And where the worse is predominant,

Full soon the canker death eats up that plant. ³⁰

Rom. Good morrow, father.

Fri. L. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?

Young son, it argues a distempered head

So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed.

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye, ³⁵

And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;

But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth
reign;

Therefore thy earliness doth me assure

Thou art up-rous'd with some distemperature;

Or if not so, then here I hit it right, 41
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin! Wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father?
No! 45

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son; but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.

I have been feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me, 50

That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies.

I bear no hatred, blessed man, for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift; 55

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift.
Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet.
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine 60

By holy marriage. When and where and how We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,

I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day.

Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis, what a change is here! 65

Is Rosaline, that thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? Young men's love then lies

Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine

Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline! 70
How much salt water thrown away in waste,

To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,

Thy old groans yet ring in mine ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit 75

Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet.
If e'er thou wast thyself and these woes thine,

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline.
And art thou chang'd? Pronounce this sentence

then:

Women may fall, when there's no strength in men. 80

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide me not. Her I love now 85

Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. L. O, she knew well

Thy love did read by rote that could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,

In one respect I'll thy assistant be; 90
For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. A street.]

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be? Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad. 5

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet, Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter. 10

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo! he is already dead; stabb'd with a white wench's black eye; run through the ear with a love song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft: and is he a man to encounter Tybalt? 17

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats. O, he's the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song; keeps time, distance, and proportion; he rests his minim [²² rests, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button; a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hai!]

Ben. The what? 25

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantosies; these new tuners of accent! "By Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man! a very good whore!" Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these perdona-mi's, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bones! their bones! 37

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring: O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in. Laura to his lady was a kitchen-wench, marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her; Dido a dowdy; Cleopatra a gipsy; Helen and [⁴³ Hero hildings and harlots; Thisbe, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose. Signior Romeo, bonjour! There's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you? 50

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy. 55

Mer. That's as much as to say, such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning, to curtsy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.

Rom. A most courteous exposition. 60

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right. 63

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flower'd.

Mer. Sure wit! Follow me this jest now till thou hast worn out thy pump, that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-sole'd jest, solely singular for the singleness! 70

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits faint.

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match. 74

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose chase, I am done, for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose? 80

Rom. Thou wast never with me for anything when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not, then, well serv'd in to a sweet goose? 86

Mer. O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!

Rom. I stretch it out for that word "broad"; which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose. 91

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? Now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo, now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature; for this drivelling love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole. 97

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desir'st me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large. 102

Mer. O, thou art deceiv'd; I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer. 105

Rom. Here's goodly gear!

Enter NURSE and her man [PETER].

A sail, a sail!

Mer. Two, two; a shirt and a smock.

Nurse. Peter! 110

Peter. Anon!

Nurse. My fan, Peter.

Mer. Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer face.

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen. 115

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell ye; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you! 120

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said; "for himself to mar," quoth 'a! Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo? 125

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him than he was when you sought him. I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well. 130

Mer. Yea, is the worst well? Very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.

Ben. She will indite him to some supper. 135

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent. [Sings.] 140

"An old hare hoar,
And an old hare hoar,
Is very good meat in lent;
But a hare that is hoar,
Is too much for a score, 145

When it hoars ere it be spent."

Romeo, will you come to your father's? We'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, [singing] "lady, lady, lady." 151

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.]

Nurse. I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month. 157

Nurse. An 'a speak anything against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates.—And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure? 164

Peter. I saw no man use you at his pleasure; if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out. I warrant you, I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side. 169

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vex'd, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave! Pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bid me inquire you out; what she bid me say, I will keep to myself. But first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say; for the gentlewoman is young, and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be off'ed to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing. 181

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee—

Nurse. Good heart, and, i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman. 186

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? Thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise 191
Some means to come to shrift this afternoon;
And there she shall at Friar Laurence' cell
Be shriv'd and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny. 195

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? Well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse;—behind the abbey wall

Within this hour my man shall be with thee, 200
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;

Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.

Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.

Farewell; commend me to thy mistress. 205

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,

"Two may keep counsel, putting one away"? 210

Rom. I warrant thee, my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord! when 't was a little prating thing,—O, there is a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, 215 as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter? 220

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? Both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for the—No; I know it begins with some other letter—and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it. 227

Rom. Commend me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit Romeo.] Peter!

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Before, and apace. [Exeunt. 232

[SCENE V. Capulet's orchard.]

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;

In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so.
O, she is lame! Love's heralds should be thoughts,

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams 5

Driving back shadows over louring hills;
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw Love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill
Of this day's journey, and from nine till twelve
Is three long hours, yet she is not come. 11

Had she affections and warm youthful blood,
She would be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,

And his to me; 15

But old folks, marry, feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter NURSE [and PETER].

O God, she comes! O honey nurse, what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. 20

[Exit Peter.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O Lord, why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news

By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am a-weary, give me leave a while.
Fie, how my bones ache! What a jaunce have I had! 25

Jul. I would thou hadst my bones, and I thy news.

Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste! Can you not stay a while?

Do you not see that I am out of breath? 30

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath

To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? Answer to that; 35

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance.
Let me be satisfied, is 't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man. Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for 40 a hand, and a foot, and a body, though they be not to be talk'd on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; serve God. What, have you din'd at home? 46

Jul. No, no! But all this did I know before.
What says he of our marriage? What of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! What a head have I!

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces. 50

My back o' t' other side,—O, my back, my back!

Beshrew your heart for sending me about
To catch my death with jauncing up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.

Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love? 35

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentleman, and a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome, and, I warrant, a virtuous, — Where is your mother?

Jul. Where is my mother! why, she is within; 60

Where should she be? How oddly thou repleist!

"Your love says, like an honest gentleman, 'Where is your mother?'"

Nurse. O God's lady dear! Are you so hot? Marry, come up, I trow;

Is this the poultice for my aching bones? 65
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil! — Come, what says Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day?

Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to Friar Laurence's cell; 70

There stays a husband to make you a wife. Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks, They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.

Hie you to church; I must another way, To fetch a ladder, by the which your love 75

Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is dark. I am the drudge and toil in your delight,

But you shall bear the burden soon at night. Go; I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! Honest nurse, farewell. [Exeunt. 80]

[SCENE VI. Friar Laurence's cell.]

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. L. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,

That after hours with sorrow chide us not!

Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,

It cannot countervail the exchange of joy That one short minute gives me in her sight. 5

Do thou but close our hands with holy words, Then love-devouring Death do what he dare;

It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. L. These violent delights have violent ends,

And in their triumph die, like fire and powder, Which as they kiss consume. The sweetest 11

honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness

And in the taste confounds the appetite;

Therefore love moderately; long love doth so;

Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow. 15

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady. O, so light a foot Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint.

A lover may bestride the gossamer That idles in the wanton summer air,

And yet not fall; so light is vanity. 20

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor,

Fri. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else is his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy Be heap'd like mine and that thy skill be more

To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath 25

This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both

Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, 30

Braggs of his substance, not of ornament. They are but beggars that can count their worth;

But my true love is grown to such excess I cannot sum up sum of half my wealth.

Fri. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work; 35

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone Till Holy Church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.]

[ACT III]

[SCENE I. A public place.]

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, and men.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire. The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,

And, if we meet, we shall not scape a brawl, For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring. 4

Mer. Thou art like one of these fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table and says, "God send me no need of thee!" and by the operation of the second cup draws him on the drawer, when indeed there is no need. 10

Ben. Am I like such a fellow?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy, and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to? 15

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other.

Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason 20 but because thou hast hazel eyes. What eye but such an eye would spy out such a quarrel?

Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat, and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast 25 quarrell'd with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before

Easter? with another, for tying his new 30 shoes with old riband? And yet thou wilt tutor me for quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter. 35

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Enter TYBALT, Petruchio, and others.

Ben. By my head, here comes the Capulets.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.
Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den; a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us?
 Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consortest with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us minstrels? An thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords. Here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance.

Zounds, consort! Here's wounds.
Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men.

Either withdraw unto some private place,
 Or reason coldly of your grievances,
 Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir; here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery.

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;

Your worship in that sense may call him man.

Tyb. Romeo, the love I bear thee can afford No better term than this: thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage To such a greeting. Villain am I none;

Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest, I never injured thee, But love thee better than thou canst devise Till thou shalt know the reason of my love; And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission! Alla stoccata carries it away.

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher by the ears? Make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.

Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage!
 Tybalt, Mercutio, the Prince expressly hath Forbid this bandying in Verona streets.

Hold, Tybalt! Good Mercutio!

[Tybalt under Romeo's arm thrusts Mercutio, and flies.]

Mer. I am hurt.
 A plague o' both your houses! I am sped.

Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben. What, art thou hurt?
Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 't is enough.

Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 't will serve. Ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am pepper'd, I warrant, for this world. A plague o' both your houses!

'Zounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!

Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint. A plague o' both your houses! They have made worms' meat of me. I have it,

And soundly too. Your houses!

[Exeunt [Mercutio and Benvolio].]

Rom. This gentleman, the Prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt In my behalf; my reputation stain'd With Tybalt's slander,—Tybalt, that an hour Hath been my cousin! O sweet Juliet, Thy beauty hath made me effeminate

And in my temper soft'ned valour's steel!

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead!

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds, Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on moe days doth depend;

This but begins the woe others must end.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Rom. Alive, in triumph! and Mercutio slain!

Away to heaven, respective lenity, And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again, That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul Is but a little way above our heads, Staying for thine to keep him company. Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom. This shall determine that.

[They fight; Tybalt falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away, be gone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain.
Stand not amaz'd; the Prince will doom thee death

If thou art taken. Hence, be gone, away! 140
Rom. O, I am fortune's fool!

Ben. Why dost thou stay?
[Exit Romeo.]

Enter CITIZENS.

1. Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1. Cit. Up, sir, go with me;
I charge thee in the Prince's name, obey. 145

Enter PRINCE, MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their WIVES, and all.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble Prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl.
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio. 150

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother's child!

O Prince! O cousin! husband! O, the blood is spilt

Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou art true,
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.

O cousin, cousin! 155

Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay!

Romeo that spoke him fair, bid him bethink
How nice the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure; all this uttered 160
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,

Could not take trace with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast,

Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point, 165
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats Cold death aside, and with the other sends

It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it. Romeo he cries aloud,

"Hold, friends! friends, part!" and, swifter than his tongue, 170

His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm

An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled;

But by and by comes back to Romeo, 175
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,

And to 't they go like lightning, for, ere I Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt
slain,

And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die. 180

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague;
Affection makes him false; he speaks not true.
Some twenty of them fought in this black
strife,

And all those twenty could but kill one life.

I beg for justice, which thou, Prince, must give;
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live. 186

Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?

Mon. Not Romeo, Prince, he was Mercutio's
friend;

His fault concludes but what the law should end, 190

The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence
Immediately we do exile him hence.

I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a-bleed-
ing;

But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine 195
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.

I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears nor prayers shall purchase out abuses;

Therefore use none. Let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last. 200

Bear hence this body and attend our will.
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.]

Enter JULIET, alone.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phœbus' lodging; such a waggoner

As Phaethon would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately. 4

Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night,
That runaway's eyes may wink; and, Romeo,

Leap to these arms! Untalk'd of and unseen
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites,

And by their own beauties; or, if love be blind,
It best agrees with night. Come, civil night, 10

Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,

Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods.
Hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks,

With thy black mantle; till strange love grow
bold, 15

Think true love acted, simple modesty.
Come, night; come, Romeo; come, thou day

in night;
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night,

Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.
Come, gentle night, come, loving, black-brow'd
night, 20

Give me my Romeo; and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,

And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night,

And pay no worship to the garish sun. 25

O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it, and, though I am sold,

Not yet enjoy'd. So tedious is this day
As is the night before some festival

To an impatient child that hath new robes 30
And may not wear them. O, here comes my nurse,

Enter NURSE, with cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue that speaks

But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.

Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? The cords

That Romeo bid thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords. 35
[Throws them down.]

Jul. Ay me! what news? Why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah, well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!

Alack the day! he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can, 41
Though heaven cannot. O Romeo, Romeo!
Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? Say thou but ay,
And that bare vowel I shall poison more 46
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice.
I am not I, if there be such an ay;
Or those eyes shut, that makes thee answer ay.
If he be slain, say ay; or if not, no. 50

Brief sounds determine of my weal or woe.
Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes, —

God save the mark! — here on his manly breast.
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse!
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood, 55
All in gore-blood; I swooned at the sight.

Jul. O, break, my heart! poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;
And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier! 60

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slauht' red, and is Tybalt dead? 65
My dearest cousin, and my dearer lord?
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?
Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished. 70
Jul. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day, it did!

Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flow'ring face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave? 75
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! volkish ravenous lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!
O nature, what hadst thou to do in hell, 80
When thou didst bower the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust, 85
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.
Ah, where's my man? Give me some aqua
vita;

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue
For such a wish! he was not born to shame. 91
Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O, what a beast was I to chide at him! 95

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,

When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?

But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin? 100

That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband.

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain; 105

And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband.

All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's death,

That murd' red me; I would forget it fain;
But, O, it presses to my memory 110

Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
"Tybalt is dead, and Romeo — banished."

That "banished," that one word "banished," Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there; 115

Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why follow'd not, when she said, "Tybalt's dead,"

Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both, 120

Which modern lamentation might have mov'd?
But with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,

"Romeo is banished," to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,

All slain, all dead. "Romeo is banished!"
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound, 125

In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.

Where is my father and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse.

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears?
Mine shall be spent, 130

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords. Poor ropes, you are beguil'd,

Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd.

He made you for a highway to my bed,
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed. 138
Come, cords, come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed;

And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
Nurse. Hie to your chamber. I'll find Romeo

To comfort you; I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night. 140
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O, find him! Give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Friar Laurence's cell.]

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, ROMEO [following].

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man:
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? What is the Prince's doom? 4

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. L. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company.

I bring thee tidings of the Prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the Prince's doom?

Fri. L. A gentler judgement vanish'd from his lips, 10

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha, banishment! Be merciful, say death;

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death. Do not say banishment!

Fri. L. Here from Verona art thou banished. 15

Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,

But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death; then "banished" 20

Is death mis-term'd. Calling death "banishment,"

Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!

Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,

Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment.

This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy. Heaven is here,

Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog 30

And little mouse, every unworthy thing,

Live here in heaven and may look on her;

But Romeo may not. More validity,

More honourable state, more courtship lives

In carrion-flies than Romeo; they may seize 35

On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand
And steal immortal blessing from her lips,
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished. 40

This may flies do, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished:

And say'st thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground

knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean, 45

But "banished" to kill me? — "Banished"?

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it. How hast thou the heart,

Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd, 50

To mangle me with that word "banished"?

Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me a little speak.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy, 55
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet "banished"? Hang up philosophy!

Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,

It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more. 60

Fri. L. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. L. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel.

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love, 65
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,

Doting like me and like me banished
Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,

Taking the measure of an unmade grave. 70

[Knocking within.]
Fri. L. Arise; one knocks. Good Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,

Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes. [Knocking.]

Fri. L. Hark, how they knock! Who's there? Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken. — Stay a while! — Stand up;

[Knocking.] 75
Run to my study. — By and by! — God's will,
What simpleness is this! — I come, I come!

[Knocking.]
Who knocks so hard? Whence come you?

What's your will?

Enter NURSE.

Nurse. Let me come in, and you shall know my errand.

I come from Lady Juliet.

Fri. L. Welcome, then. 80
Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
 Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. L. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
 Just in her case! O woeful sympathy! 85
 Piteous predicament! Even so lies she,
 Blubb'ring and weeping, weeping and blub-
 b'ring.

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man.
 For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand,
 Why should you fall into so deep an O? 90

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir! Death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? How is it with
 her?

Doth she not think me an old murderer,
 Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy 95
 With blood removed but little from her own?
 Where is she? and how doth she? and what says

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
 And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries, 101
 And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,
 Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
 Did murder her, as that name's cursed hand Murder'd her kinsman. O, tell me, friar, tell 105
 me,

In what vile part of this anatomy
 Doth my name lodge? Tell me, that I may sack

The hateful mansion.

*[He offers to stab himself, and the Nurse snatches the dagger
 away.]*

Fri. L. Hold thy desperate hand!
 Art thou a man? Thy form cries out thou art;
 Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts de- 110
 note

The unreasonable fury of a beast.
 Unseemly woman in a seeming man,
 And ill-beseeming beast in seeming both,
 Thou hast amaz'd me! By my holy order,
 I thought thy disposition better temper'd. 115 Hast thou slain Tybalt? Wilt thou slay thy-
 self,

And slay thy lady that in thy life lives,
 By doing damned hate upon thyself?
 Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do
 meet 120

In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst lose.

Fie, fie, thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy
 wit;

Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,
 And usest none in that true use indeed
 Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy
 wit. 125

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,

Digressing from the valour of a man;
 Thy dear love sworn but hollow perjury, Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love, 130
 Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
 Like powder in a skilless soldier's flask,
 Is set a-fire by thine own ignorance,
 And thou dismemb'rd with thine own defence.
 What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive, 135
 For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead:
 There art thou happy. Tybalt would kill thee,
 But thou slewest Tybalt: there art thou happy.
 The law that threat'ned death becomes thy
 friend

And turns it to exile: there art thou happy. 140
 A pack of blessings light upon thy back;
 Happiness courts thee in his best array;
 But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
 Thou putt'st upon thy fortune and thy love.
 Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
 Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed; 145
 Ascend her chamber; hence! and comfort her.
 But look thou stay not till the watch be set,
 For then thou canst not pass to Mantua, 149
 Where thou shalt live till we can find a time
 To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
 Beg pardon of the Prince, and call thee back
 With twenty hundred thousand times more
 joy

Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.
 Go before, nurse; commend me to thy lady; 155
 And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
 Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto.
 Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all the night

To hear good counsel. O, what learning is! 160
 My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

*[Nurse offers to go in, and turns
 again.]*

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you,
 sir.

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this! [Exit Nurse.] 165

Fri. L. Go hence; good-night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set,
 Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence.
 Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
 And he shall signify from time to time 170
 Every good hap to you that chances here.
 Give me thy hand; 't is late. Farewell; good-
 night.

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
 It were a grief, so brief to part with thee.

Farewell. [Exeunt.] 175

[SCENE IV. A room in Capulet's house.]

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily
 That we have had no time to move our daughter.

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt
dearly,
And so did I. Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late, she 'll not come down to-night;
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no times to woo.

Madam, good-night; commend me to your daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;

To-night she 's mewed up to her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender

Of my child's love. I think she will be rul'd
In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt it
not.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;

And bid her—mark you me?—on Wednesday next—

But, soft! what day is this?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,

O' Thursday let it be, — o' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl.

Will you be ready? Do you like this haste?

We 'll keep no great ado, — a friend or two;

For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,

It may be thought we held him carelessly,

Being our kinsman, if we revel much;

Therefore we 'll have some half a dozen friends,

And there an end. But what say you to Thurs-
day?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were
to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone; o' Thursday be
it, then.

Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed;

Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.

Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!

Afore me! it is so very late that we May call it early by and by. Good-night.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Capulet's orchard.]

Enter ROMEO and JULIET, aloft.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near
day.

It was the nightingale, and not the lark,

That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear;

Nightly she sings on yond pomegranate-tree.

Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,

No nightingale. Look, love, what envious streaks

Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east.

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day

Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops.

I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yond light is not day-light, I know it, I;

It is some meteor that the sun exhales,

To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,

And light thee on thy way to Mantua;
Therefore stay yet; thou need'st not to be gone.

Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to
death;

I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

I 'll say you grey is not the morning's eye,

'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow;

Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat

The vaulty heaven so high above our heads.

I have more care to stay than will to go.

Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.

How is 't, my soul? Let's talk; it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is! Hie hence, be gone, away!

It is the lark that sings so out of tune,

Straining harsh discords and unpleasing sharps.

Some say the lark makes sweet division;

This doth not so, for she divideth us.

Some say the lark and loathed toad change
eyes;

O, now I would they had chang'd voices too!

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray,

Hunting thee hence with hunt's-up to the day.

O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

Rom. More light and light; more dark and dark our woes!

Enter NURSE [from the chamber].

Nurse. Madam!

Jul. Nurse?

Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to your chamber.

The day is broke; be wary, look about.

[Exit.]

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life
out.

Rom. Farewell, farewell! One kiss, and I 'll descend. [He goeth down.]

Jul. Art thou gone so? Love, lord, ay, husband, friend!

I must hear from thee every day in the hour,

For in a minute there are many days.

O, by this count I shall be much in years

Ere I again behold my Romeo!

Rom. [From below.] Farewell!

I will omit no opportunity

That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever meet again?

Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve

For sweet discourses in our times to come.

Jul. O God, I have an ill-divining soul!

Methinks I see thee, now thou art below,

As one dead in the bottom of a tomb.

Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eyes do you;

Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu!

[Exit.]

Jul. O Fortune, Fortune! all men call thee fickle;

If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him

That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, Fortune;

For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,

But send him back.

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. Ho, daughter! are you up?

Jul. Who is't that calls? It is my lady mother.

Is she not down so late, or up so early?

What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither?

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?

What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?

An if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live;

Therefore, have done. Some grief shows much of love,

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend

Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss, I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo.

Jul. [Aside.] Villain and he be many miles asunder. —

God pardon him! I do, with all my heart; And yet no man like he doth grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer lives.

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.

Would none but I might venge my cousin's death!

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not;

Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,

Where that same banish'd runagate doth live, Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram,

That he shall soon keep Tybalt company; And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied With Romeo, till I behold him — dead —

Is my poor heart, so for a kinsman vex'd. Madam, if you could find out but a man

To bear a poison, I would temper it That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,

Soon sleep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors To hear him nam'd, and cannot come to him,

To wreak the love I bore my cousin [Tybalt] Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy time.

What are they, beseech your ladyship?

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;

One who, to put thee from thy heaviness, Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,

That thou expects not nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,

The gallant, young, and noble gentleman, The County Paris, at Saint Peter's Church,

Shall happily make thee there a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's Church and Peter too,

He shall not make me there a joyful bride. I wonder at this haste; that I must wed

Ere he that should be husband comes to woo. I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,

I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear, It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,

Rather than Paris. These are news indeed!

La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself,

And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and NURSE.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;

But for the sunset of my brother's son It rains downright.

How now! a conduit, girl? What, still in tears?

Evermore show'ring? In one little body Thou counterfeits a bark, a sea, a wind:

For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea, Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is, Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs; Who, raging with thy tears, and they with them,

Without a sudden calm, will overset Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife!

Have you delivered to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would the fool were married to her grave!

Cap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife.

How! will she none? Doth she not give us thanks?

Is she not proud? Doth she not count her blest, Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought

So worthy a gentleman to be her bride?

Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful that you have.

Proud can I never be of what I hate; But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this?

"Proud," and "I thank you," and "I thank you not;"

And yet "not proud." Mistress minion, you, Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds, But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next, To go with Paris to Saint Peter's Church,

Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. Out, you green-sickness carrion! Out, you baggage!

You tallow-face!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word. 160
Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient
wretch!

I tell thee what: get thee to church o' Thurs-
day,

Or never after look me in the face.

Speak not, reply not, do not answer me!

My fingers itch. Wife, we scarce thought us blest 165

That God had lent us but this only child;

But now I see this one is one too much,

And that we have a curse in having her.

Out on her, hilding!

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so. 170

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? Hold your tongue,

Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O, God ye god-den.

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!

Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl; 175

For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad.

Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,

Alone, in company, still my care hath been

To have her match'd; and having now provided 180

A gentleman of noble parentage,

Of fair demesnes, youthful and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts,

Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a
man;

And then to have a wretched puling fool, 185

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender

To answer, "I'll not wed; I cannot love,

I am too young; I pray you, pardon me."

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you.

Graze where you will, you shall not house with
me. 190

Look to 't, think on 't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise.

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die in the streets,

For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good. 195

Trust to 't, bethink you; I'll not be forsworn.
[Exit.]

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That sees into the bottom of my grief?

O, sweet my mother, cast me not away! 200

Delay this marriage for a month, a week;

Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed

In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak
a word.

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. 205
[Exit.]

Jul. O God!—O nurse, how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;

How shall that faith return again to earth,

Unless that husband send it me from heaven

By leaving earth? Comfort me, counsel me!
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems 211

Upon so soft a subject as myself!

What say'st thou? Hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here it is.

Romeo is banish'd; and all the world to nothing, 215

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge
you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.

Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,

I think it best you married with the County.

O, he's a lovely gentleman! 220

Romeo's a dishclout to him. An eagle, madam,

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye

As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,

I think you are happy in this second match,

For it excels your first; or if it did not, 225

Your first is dead; or 't were as good he were,

As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speak'st thou from thy heart?

Nurse. And from my soul too; else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. What?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much. 230

Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,

Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence's cell,

To make confession and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done. [Exit.]

Jul. Ancient damnation! O most wicked
fiend! 235

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,

Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue

Which she hath prais'd him with above compare

So many thousand times? Go, counsellor;

Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.

I'll to the friar, to know his remedy; 241

If all else fail, myself have power to die.

[Exit.]

[ACT IV]

[SCENE I. Friar Laurence's cell.]

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? The time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;

And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.

Fri. L. You say you do not know the lady's mind.

Uneven is the course, I like it not. 5

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's
death,

And therefore have I little talk of love,

For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous

That she do give her sorrow so much sway, 10

And in his wisdom hastes our marriage

To stop the inundation of her tears;

Which, too much minded by herself alone,
 May be put from her by society.
 Now do you know the reason of this haste. 15
Fri. L. [Aside.] I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.
 Look, sir, here comes the lady toward my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady and my wife!
Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.
Par. That may must be, love, on Thursday next. 20
Jul. What must be shall be.
Fri. L. That's a certain text.
Par. Come you to make confession to this father?
Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.
Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.
Jul. I will confess to you that I love him. 25
Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love me.
Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price, Being spoke behind your back, than to your
 face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with
 tears.
Jul. The tears have got small victory by
 that, 30
 For it was bad enough before their spite.
Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.
Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth;
 And what I spake, I spake it to my face.
Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slan-der'd it. 35
Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.
 Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
 Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. L. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.
 My lord, we must entreat the time alone. 40
Par. God shield I should disturb devotion!
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse ye;
 Till then, adieu; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit.]
Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so,
 Come weep with me, past hope, past care, past
 help! 45

Fri. L. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;
 It strains me past the compass of my wits.
 I hear thou must, and nothing may prorogue it,
 On Thursday next be married to this County.
Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hearest of
 this, 50
 Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it.
 If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,
 Do thou but call my resolution wise,
 And with this knife I'll help it presently.
 God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our
 hands; 55

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo's seal'd,
 Shall be the label to another deed,
 Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
 Turn to another, this shall slay them both.
 Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time, 60
 Give me some present counsel, or, behold,
 'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
 Shall play the umpire, arbitrating that

Which the commission of thy years and art
 Could to no issue of true honour bring. 65
 Be not so long to speak; I long to die
 If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.
Fri. L. Hold, daughter! I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution
 As that is desperate which we would prevent. 70
 If, rather than to marry County Paris,
 Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
 Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
 A thing like death to chide away this shame,
 That cop'st with Death himself to scape from
 it; 75

And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.
Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
 From off the battlements of any tower,
 Or walk in thievish ways, or bid me lurk
 Where serpents are; chain me with roaring
 bears, 80

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house,
 O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling
 bones,
 With reeky shanks and yellow chapless skulls;
 Or bid me go into a new-made grave
 And hide me with a dead man in his shroud, —
 Things that, to hear them told, have made me
 tremble; 85

And I will do it without fear or doubt,
 To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.
Fri. L. Hold, then. Go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris. Wednesday is to-morrow. 90
 To-morrow night look that thou lie alone;
 Let not the nurse lie with thee in thy chamber.

Take thou this vial, being then in bed,
 And this distilling liquor drink thou off;
 When presently through all thy veins shall
 run

A cold and drowsy humour; for no pulse
 Shall keep his native progress, but surcease;
 No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest;
 The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
 To pale ashes, thy eyes' windows fall, 100
 Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;
 Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
 Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like
 death:

And in this borrowed likeness of shrunk death
 Thou shalt continue two and forty hours, 105
 And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
 Now, when the bridegroom in the morning
 comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou
 dead.

Then, as the manner of our country is,
 In thy best robes uncovered on the bier 110
 Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault
 Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
 In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,
 Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift,
 And hither shall he come; and he and I 115
 Will watch thy waking, and that very night
 Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
 And this shall free thee from this present
 shame:

If no inconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it. 120

Jul. Give me, give me! O, tell not me of fear!

Fri. L. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford. 125

Farewell, dear father! [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Hall in Capulet's house.]

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, NURSE, and SERVING-MEN, two or three.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.

[Exit 1. Servant.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so? 5

2. Serv. Marry, sir, 't is an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers; therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, be gone. [Exit 2. Servant.]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time. 10
What, is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her.

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look. 15

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition

To you and your behests, and am enjoin'd

By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here, 20

And beg your pardon. Pardon, I beseech you!
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the County; go tell him of
this;

I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's
cell; 25

And gave him what becomed love I might,

Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on't; this is well;
stand up.

This is as't should be. Let me see the County;

Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither. 30

Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar,

All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments
As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow? 35

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her; we'll to church to-morrow. [Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision;
'T is now near night.

Cap. Tush, I will stir about,
And all things shall be well, I warrant thee,
wife; 40

Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her.

I'll not to bed to-night; let me alone;

I'll play the housewife for this once. What, ho!

They are all forth. Well, I will walk myself

To County Paris, to prepare up him 45

Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light,

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Juliet's chamber.]

Enter JULIET and NURSE.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best; but, gentle
nurse,

I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;

For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of
sin. 5

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy, ho? Need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow.

So please you, let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you; 10

For, I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good-night.

Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.
[Exeunt [Lady Capulet and Nurse.]]

Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again.

I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, 15

That almost freezes up the heat of life.

I'll call them back again to comfort me.

Nurse! — What should she do here?

My dismal scene I needs must act alone.

Come, vial. 20

What if this mixture do not work at all?

Shall I be married then to-morrow morning?

No, no; this shall forbid it. Lie thou there.

[Laying down her dagger.]

What if it be a poison, which the friar

Subtly hath minist' red to have me dead, 25

Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,

Because he married me before to Romeo?

I fear it is; and yet, methinks, it should not,

For he hath still been tried a holy man.

How if, when I am laid into the tomb, 30

I wake before the time that Romeo

Come to redeem me? There's a fearful point!

Shall I not then be stifled in the vault,

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes
in,

And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?

Or, if I live, is it not very like, 35

The horrible conceit of death and night,

Together with the terror of the place, —
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for this many hundred years, the bones

Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth, Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they
say,

At some hours in the night spirits resort; —
Alack, alack, is it not like that I, 45
So early waking, what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the
earth,

That living mortals, hearing them, run mad; —
O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears, 50
And madly play with my forefathers' joints,
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud,
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's
bone

As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
O, look! methinks I see my cousin's ghost 55
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point. Stay, Tybalt, stay!
Romeo, I come! This do I drink to thee.

[She falls upon her bed, within the curtains.]

[SCENE IV. Hall in Capulet's house.]

Enter LADY CAPULET and NURSE.

La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfew-bell hath rung, 't is three o'clock.
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica; 5
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go,
Get you to bed. Faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit! What! I have watch'd ere now

All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time; 11

But I will watch you from such watching now.
[Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!

Enter three or four [SERVING-MEN,] with spits, logs, and baskets.

Now, fellow,

What's there?

1. Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1. Serv.]
Sirrah, fetch drier logs: 15

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.
2. Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,

And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.]

Cap. Mass, and well said; a merry whore-son, ha!

Thou shalt be logger-head. Good faith, 't is day. [Music within. 20]

The County will be here with music straight,
For so he said he would. I hear him near.

Nurse! Wife! What, ho! What, nurse, I say!

Re-enter NURSE.

Go waken Juliet, go and trim her up;
I'll go and chat with Paris. Hie, make haste,
Make haste; the bridegroom he is come already. 25

Make haste, I say. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Juliet's chamber.]

[Enter NURSE.]

Nurse. Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! — Fast, I warrant her, she. —

Why, lamb! why, lady! fie, you slug-a-bed!
Why, love, I say, madam! sweetheart! why, bride!

What, not a word? You take your pennyworths now;

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant, 5

The County Paris hath set up his rest
That you shall rest but little. God forgive me!
Marry, and amen, how sound is she asleep!
I needs must wake her. Madam, madam,
madam!

Ay, let the County take you in your bed; 10
He'll fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be?

[Draws back the curtains.]

What, dress'd, and in your clothes! and down
again!

I must needs wake you, Lady! lady! lady!
Alas, alas! Help, help! my lady's dead!

O, well-a-day, that ever I was born! 15
Some aqua vite, ho! My lord! my lady!

Enter LADY CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me, O me! My child, my only
life,

Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! 20
Help, help! Call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd, she's dead;
alack the day!

La. Cap. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead, she's dead!

Cap. Ha! let me see her. Out, alas! she's cold; 25

Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;
Life and these lips have long been separated.
Death lies on her like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woeful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail, 31
Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and PARIS, with MUSICIANS.

Fri. L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.
O son! the night before thy wedding-day 35
Hath Death lain with thy wife. There she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded. I will die
And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's. 40

Par. Have I thought long to see this morn-ing's face

And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage! 45

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,

And cruel Death hath catch'd it from my sight!

Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful
day!

Most lamentable day, most woeful day, 50
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!

O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this.

O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited,
slain! 55

Most detestable Death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd,
kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why cam'st thou now 60
To murder, murder our solemnity?

O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!
Dead art thou! Alack! my child is dead;

And with my child my joys are buried.

Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! Confusion's cure lives not 65

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath
all,

And all the better is it for the maid.
Your part in her you could not keep from death,

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life. 70
The most you sought was her promotion,

For 't was your heaven she should be advanc'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd

Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?

O, in this love, you love your child so ill, 75
That you run mad, seeing that she is well.

She's not well married that lives married long;
But she's best married that dies married
young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corpse; and, as the custom is, 80

In all her best array bear her to church;
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival,

Turn from their office to black funeral; 85
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change,
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary. 90

Fri. L. Sir, go you in; and, madam, go with
him;
And go, Sir Paris; every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The heavens do lour upon you for some ill;
Move them no more by crossing their high
will. 95

[Exeunt [Capulet, Lady Capulet,
Paris, and Friar].

1. Mus. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah, put up, put
up;

For, well you know, this is a pitiful case. 100

1. Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended. 101

Enter [PETER].

Pet. Musicians, O, musicians, "Heart's ease, Heart's ease!" O, an you will have me live, play "Heart's ease."

1. Mus. Why "Heart's ease?" 105

Pet. O, musicians, because my heart itself plays "My heart is full of woe." O, play me some merry dump to comfort me.

1. Mus. Not a dump we; 'tis no time to play now. 110

Pet. You will not, then?

1. Mus. No.

Pet. I will then give it you soundly.

1. Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith, but the gleek;
I will give you the minstrel. 115

1. Mus. Then will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets;
I'll re you, I'll fa you. Do you note me? 121

1. Mus. An you re us and fa us, you note
us.

2. Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit! I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger. Answer me like men: 127

"When gripping grief the heart doth wound,
[And doleful dumps the mind oppress,]

Then music with her silver sound" — 130

why "silver sound"? Why "music with her silver sound"? What say you, Simon Catling?

1. Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound. 134

Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

2. Mus. I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Pretty too! What say you, James Soundpost?

3. Mus. Faith, I know not what to say. 140

Pet. O, I cry you mercy; you are the singer.
I will say for you. It is "music with her silver sound," because musicians have no gold for sounding:

"Then music with her silver sound
With speedy help doth lend redress." 145

[Exit.

1. Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same!

2. Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here, tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. 150

[Exeunt. 150

[ACT V]

[SCENE I. Mantua. A street.]

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,

My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne,
And all this day a unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts. 5

I dreamt my lady came and found me dead —
Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think! —

And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd, 10
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy!

Enter BALTHASAR, his man, booted.

News from Verona! — How now, Balthasar!
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? that I ask again; 15
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill.

Her body sleeps in Capel's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, 20
And presently took post to tell it you.
O, pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? Then I defy you, stars!
Thou know'st my lodging; get me ink and paper, 25

And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience.
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd:
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. 30
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter; get thee gone
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight. [Exit Balthasar.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means. O mischief, thou art swift 35

To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!

I do remember an apothecary, —
And hereabouts 'a dwells, — which late I noted
In tatt'ed weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks, 40

Sharp misery had worn him to the bones.
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes, 45
Green earthen pots, bladders and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scattered, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said,
"An if a man did need a poison now, 50
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a catiff wretch would sell it him."
O, this same thought did but forerun my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house. 55
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter APOTHECARY.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thou art
poor.

Hold, there is forty ducats. Let me have
A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear 60
As will disperse itself through all the veins
That the life-weary taker may fall dead,
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb. 65

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare and full of wretched-
ness,

And fear'st to die? Famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes, 70
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back;
The world is not thy friend nor the world's
law;

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will. 75
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off; and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls, 80

Doing more murder in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou mayest not sell.

I sell thee poison; thou hast sold me none.
Farewell! Buy food, and get thyself in flesh.
Come, cordial and not poison, go with me 85
To Juliet's grave; for there must I use thee.

[Exeunt.

[SCENE II. Verona. Friar Laurence's cell.]

Enter FRIAR JOHN.

Fri. J. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE.

Fri. L. This same should be the voice of Friar John.

Welcome from Mantua! What says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

Fri. J. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,

One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Fri. L. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?

Fri. J. I could not send it,—here it is again,—

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Fri. L. Unhappy fortune! By my brotherhood,

The letter was not nice but full of charge
Of dear import, and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

Fri. J. Brother, I'll go and bring it thee. [Exit.]

Fri. L. Now must I to the monument alone;
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake.
She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.]

[SCENE III. A churchyard; in it a tomb belonging to the Capulets.]

Enter PARIS, and his PAGE with flowers and sweet water [and a torch].

Par. Give me thy torch, boy. Hence, and stand aloof.

Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,
But thou shalt hear it. Whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. [Aside.] I am almost afraid to stand alone
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. [Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew,—

O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones—
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans.

The obsequies that I for thee will keep Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep.

[The Page whistles.]
The boy gives warning something doth approach.

What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies and true love's rite?

What, with a torch! Muffle me, night, a while. [Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a torch, a mattock, and a crow of iron.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.

Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light. Upon thy life, I charge thee,

Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my lady's face;
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger

A precious ring, a ring that I must use
In dear employment; therefore hence, be gone.
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I farther shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs.

The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far
Than empty tigers or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble ye.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.
Take thou that;
Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. [Aside.] For all this same, I'll hide me hereabout.
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,

Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,
And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,

That murder'd my love's cousin, with which grief,

It is supposed, the fair creature died;
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies. I will apprehend him.

[Comes forward.]
Stop thy unhallowed toil, vile Montague!

Can vengeance be pursued further than death?

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee.
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man.
Fly hence, and leave me; think upon these gone,

Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth,
Put not another sin upon my head,
By urging me to fury: O, be gone!

By heaven, I love thee better than myself;
For I come hither arm'd against myself.
Stay not, be gone; live, and hereafter say
A madman's mercy bid thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations,
And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? Then have at thee, boy! [They fight. 70]

Page. O Lord, they fight! I will go call the watch. [Exit.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.] If thou be merciful,

Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face.

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris! 75

What said my man, when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode? I think

He told me Paris should have married Juliet.

Said he not so? Or did I dream it so?

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet, 80

To think it was so? O, give me thy hand,

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave.

A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth,

For here lies Juliet, and her beauty makes 85

This vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying Paris in the tomb.]

How oft when men are at the point of death

Have they been merry! which their keepers call

A lightning before death. O, how may I 90

Call this a lightning? O my love! my wife!

Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,

Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty.

Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet

Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks, 95

And death's pale flag is not advanced there.

Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?

O, what more favour can I do to thee,

Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain

To sunder his that was thine enemy? 100

Forgive me, cousin! Ah, dear Juliet,

Why art thou yet so fair? Shall I believe

That unsubstantial Death is amorous,

And that the lean abhorred monster keeps

Thee here in dark to be his paramour? 105

For fear of that, I still will stay with thee,

And never from this palace of dim night

Depart again. Here, here will I remain

With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O,

here

Will I set up my everlasting rest, 110

And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars

From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look your last!

Arms, take your last embrace! and, lips, O you

The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss

A dateless bargain to engrossing death! 115

Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!

Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on

The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!

Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true apothecary! 119

Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies.]

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE, with lantern, crow, and spade.

Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft

to-night

Have my old feet stumbled at graves! Who's

there?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,

What torch is yond, that vainly lends his light To grubs and eyeless skulls? As I discern, 120

It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,

One that you love.

Fri. L. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo. 125

Fri. L. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. L. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir.

My master knows not but I am gone hence;

And fearfully did menace me with death

If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay, then; I'll go alone. Fear comes upon me: 135

O, much I fear some ill unthrifty thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,

I dreamt my master and another fought,

And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. Romeo!

[Advances.]

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains

The stony entrance of this sepulchre? 141

What mean these masterless and gory swords

To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enters the tomb.]

Romeo! O, pale! Who else? What, Paris too?

And steep'd in blood? Ah, what an unkind 145

hour

Is guilty of this lamentable chance!

The lady stirs. [Juliet rises.]

Jul. O comfortable friar! where is my lord?

I do remember well where I should be,

And there I am. Where is my Romeo? 150

[Noise within.]

Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come from that nest

Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep.

A greater power than we can contradict

Hath thwarted our intents. Come, come away.

Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead; 155

And Paris too. Come, I'll dispose of thee

Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.

Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;

Come, go, good Juliet [Noise again.] I dare no longer stay. [Exit Fri. Lau.]

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.

What's here? A cup, clos'd in my true love's

hand? 161

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end.

O churl! drunk all, and left no friendly drop

To help me after? I will kiss thy lips;

Haply some poison yet doth hang on them, 165

To make me die with a restorative.

Thy lips are warm.

Enter WATCH, with the PAGE of Paris.

I. Watch. Lead, boy; which way?

Jul. Yea, noise? Then I'll be brief. O happy dagger!

[Snatching Romeo's dagger.]

This is thy sheath (Stabs herself); there rust, and let me die. ¹⁷⁰

[Falls on Romeo's body, and dies.]

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1. Watch. The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard.

Go, some of you, whoe'er you find attach.

[Exeunt some.]

Pitiful sight! here lies the County slain;
And Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead, ¹⁷⁸
Who here hath lain this two days buried.

Go, tell the Prince; run to the Capulets;

Raise up the Montagues; some others search.

[Exeunt others.]

We see the ground whereon these woes do
lie;

But the true ground of all these piteous woes

We cannot without circumstance descry. ¹⁸¹

Re-enter [some of the WATCH, with] BALTHASAR.

2. Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

1. Watch. Hold him in safety till the Prince come hither.

Re-enter another WATCHMAN, with FRIAR LAURENCE.

3. Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps.

We took this mattock and this spade from him. ¹⁸⁵

As he was coming from this churchyard side.

1. Watch. A great suspicion. Stay the friar too.

Enter the PRINCE [and Attendants].

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning rest?

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad? ¹⁹⁰

La. Cap. Oh! the people in the street cry
Romeo,

Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run,

With open outcry, toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in our ears?

1. Watch. Sovereign, here lies the County
Paris slain; ¹⁹⁵

And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,

Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

1. Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd
Romeo's man,

With instruments upon them, fit to open ²⁰⁰
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heavens! O wife, look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en, — for, lo, his house
Is empty on the back of Montague, —

And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom!

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell, ²⁰⁵

That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE [and others].

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early
up,

To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead tonight; ²¹⁰

Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath.

What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in
this,

To press before thy father to a grave? ²¹⁵

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,

Till we can clear these ambiguities,

And know their spring, their head, their true descent;

And then will I be general of your woes,

And lead you even to death. Meantime forbear, ²²⁰

And let mischance be slave to patience.

Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place ²²⁴

Doth make against me, of this direful murder;

And here I stand, both to impeach and purge

Myself condemned and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale. ²³⁰

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;

And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful
wife.

I married them; and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death

Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city, ²³⁵

For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd and would have married her perforce

To County Paris. Then comes she to me,
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some mean ²⁴¹

To rid her from this second marriage,

Or in my cell there would she kill herself

Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,

A sleeping potion; which so took effect

As I intended, for it wrought on her ²⁴⁵

The form of death. Meantime I writ to Romeo,
That he should hither come as this dire night,

To help to take her from her borrowed grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.

But he which bore my letter, Friar John, ²⁵⁰

Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight

Return'd my letter back. Then all alone

At the prefixed hour of her waking,

Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;

Meaning to keep her closely at my cell, ²⁵⁵

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo;

But when I came, some minute ere the time

Of her awakening, here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.

She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, ²⁶⁰

And bear this work of heaven with patience.

But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;

And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
 But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
 All this I know; and to the marriage 285
 Her nurse is privy; and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
 Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,
 Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy
 man. 270

Where's Romeo's man? What can he say to
 this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's
 death;

And then in post he came from Mantua
 To this same place, to this same monument.

This letter he early bid me give his father, 275
 And threat'ned me with death, going in the vault,

If I departed not and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it.
 Where is the County's page, that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah, what made your master in this place?
Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave; 281

And bid me stand aloof, and so I did.
 Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb,

And by and by my master drew on him;
 And then I ran away to call the watch. 285

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,

Their course of love, the tidings of her death.
 And here he writes that he did buy a poison

Of a poor 'pothecary, and therewithal
 Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet. 290

Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!
 See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,

That Heaven finds means to kill your joys with love.

And I for winking at your discords too 294
 Have lost a brace of kinsmen. All are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand.
 This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
 Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more;
 For I will raise her statue in pure gold;

That whiles Verona by that name is known, 300
 There shall no figure at such rate be set
 As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo's by his lady's lie,
 Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings; 305

The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head.
 Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;

Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
 For never was a story of more woe 309

Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.]

THE TRAGEDY OF JULIUS CÆSAR

THE tragedy of Julius Cæsar was first printed in the Folio of 1623. The earlier limit for the date of its composition is presumably fixed by its absence from the list given in Meres's Palladis Tamia in 1598; and a later limit is found in an allusion to the speeches of Brutus and Antony to the citizens in John Weever's Mirror of Martyrs, published in 1601. But Weever states in his Dedication that his work "some two years ago was made fit for the print"; and this piece of evidence is strengthened by an apparent reference in Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour (1599). In this play (III. i.) Clove, a talker of fustian, is made to quote, "reason long since is fled to animals," which may, perhaps, derive its point from Julius Cæsar, III. ii. 109. With the date thus suggested, 1599, the metrical tests and the characteristics of style are in sufficient agreement; and few modern critics place the play later than 1601. An argument has been based on the use of the word "eternal" in I. ii. 160. In 1600, it is urged, Shakespeare was still using "infernal" in such passages, but after that date he substituted "eternal," apparently out of deference to the Puritan agitation which culminated in legislation against profanity and other abuses on the stage. But this loses its force when it is observed that the change may here, as in other instances, have been made at a later date, and that it is by no means certain that Shakespeare wished to say "infernal."

The history of Julius Cæsar had been treated on the Elizabethan stage before Shakespeare wrote his tragedy, but it has not yet been shown that he made use of any earlier version, though some scholars have argued that the present play is the result of the combination of two earlier dramas dealing respectively with the death and the avenging of Julius Cæsar. The evidence from an extant Dutch play of foreign origin has not yet been brought to bear on the problem. It is not questioned, however, that Shakespeare drew heavily on Plutarch's lives of Cæsar, Brutus, and Antony, which he read in Sir Thomas North's translation of Amyot's French version. A large portion of the play consists merely of North's language turned into blank verse, with that subtle heightening of the imaginative quality which Shakespeare habitually added to his sources; and much that has puzzled readers in the unheroic character of Cæsar finds its explanation in the text of Plutarch. Cæsar's great exploits are narrated in Plutarch's Life, but in the earlier part which Shakespeare did not use; and the later section taken alone conveys very much the same impression of Cæsar's pomposity and weaknesses as is given by the earlier part of the play. The characters of Casca and Lepidus are hardly hinted at by Plutarch. Cassius is strengthened by changing him from a man who was "too familiar with his friends, and would jest too broadly with them," to one who smiles seldom, and by the omission of the petty causes of his hatred of Cæsar. Brutus is still more idealized. Several details that might have taken from his dignity are omitted, and the boy Lucius is invented that by the picture of their relations might be emphasized the tenderness of Brutus's disposition. The soliloquy of Brutus in which the workings of his mind before the assassination are laid bare, the scene in the orchard, that in which the conspirators bathe their arms in Cæsar's blood, and the speech of Antony over Cæsar's dead body are wholly Shakespeare's; while the orations of Brutus and Antony at Cæsar's funeral are elaborated from the slightest hints.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Rome. A street.]

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and certain COMMONERS over the stage.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home!

Is this a holiday? What! know you not, Being mechanical, you ought not walk Upon a labouring day without the sign Of your profession? Speak, what trade art thou?

Car. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?

You, sir, what trade are you?

Cob. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

Cob. A trade, sir, that I hope I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Flav. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

Cob. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me; yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Cob. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Cob. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl. I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with all. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather have gone upon my handiwork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

Cob. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Cæsar and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome

To grace in captive bonds his chariot-wheels? You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,

To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops, Your infants in your arms, and there have sat

The live-long day, with patient expectation, To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome;

And when you saw his chariot but appear

Have you not made a universal shout, That Tiber trembled underneath her banks

To hear the replication of your sounds Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire?

And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?

Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees, Pray to the gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen, and, for this fault,
Assemble all the poor men of your sort;
Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.

[Exeunt all the Commoners.]

See, wh'er their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I. Disrobe the images
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so?
You know it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about
And drive away the vulgar from the streets;
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing

Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men
And keep us all in servile fearfulness.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. A public place.]

Enter CÆSAR; ANTONY, for the course; CALPURNIA, Portia, Decius, Cicero, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA; [a great crowd following, among them] a SOOTHSAYER: after them Marullus and Flavius.

Cæs. Calpurnia!

Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks.

Cæs. Calpurnia!

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way
When he doth run his course. Antonius!

Ant. Cæsar, my lord?

Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calpurnia; for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says, "Do this," it is perform'd.

Cæs. Set on; and leave no ceremony out.

[Flourish.]

Sooth. Cæsar!

Cæs. Ha! who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still; peace yet again!

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?

I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry "Cæsar!" Speak; Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that?

Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.

Cas. Fellow, come from the throng; look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him.
Pass.

[Sennet. Exeunt all but Brutus and Cassius.]

Cas. Will you go see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I.

Cas. I pray you, do.

Bru. I am not gamesome; I do lack some part

Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late;
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have.
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand

Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd. If I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours;

But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd—

Among which number, Cassius, be you one—
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;

By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried

Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.

Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just;
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,

Where many of the best respect in Rome,
Except immortal Cæsar, speaking of Brutus
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,

That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear;

And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself

That of yourself which you yet know not of.

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus.
Were I a common laughor, or did use

To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know

That I do fawn on men and hug them hard
And after scandal them, or if you know

That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish and shout.]

Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people
Choose Cæsar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so. ⁸¹

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him
well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good, ⁸⁵
Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour. ⁹¹
Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men

Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be as live to be ⁹⁵
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Cæsar, so were you;
We both have fed as well, and we can both
Endure the winter's cold as well as he; ¹⁰⁰

For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tiber chafing with her shores,
Cæsar said to me, "Dar'st thou, Cassius, now
Leap in with me into this angry flood,

And swim to yonder point?" Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in ¹⁰⁵
And bade him follow; so indeed he did.

The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews, throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy;

But ere we could arrive the point propos'd, ¹¹⁰
Cæsar cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink!"
I, as Aeneas, our great ancestor,

Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tiber

Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man ¹¹⁵
Is now become a god, and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body
If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.

He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him, I did mark ¹²⁰
How he did shake—'tis true, this god did shake.

His coward lips did from their colour fly,
And that same eye whose bend doth awe the
world

Did lose his lustre; I did hear him groan.
Ay, and that tongue of his that bade the Romans ¹²⁵

Mark him and write his speeches in their
books,

Alas, it cried, "Give me some drink, Titinius,"
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me
A man of such a feeble temper should

So get the start of the majestic world ¹³⁰
And bear the palm alone. [Shout. Flourish.]

Bru. Another general shout!
I do believe that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world ¹³⁵

Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

Men at some time are masters of their fates;
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, ¹⁴⁰
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

Brutus and Cæsar: what should be in that "Cæsar"?

Why should that name be sounded more than
yours?

Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well; ¹⁴⁵

Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with 'em,
"Brutus" will start a spirit as soon as "Cæsar."

Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd! ¹⁵⁰

Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great
flood,

But it was fam'd with more than with one
man?

When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,

That her wide walls encompass'd but one man? ¹⁵⁵

Now is it Rome indeed and room enough,
When there is in it but one only man.

O, you and I have heard our fathers say
There was a Brutus once that would have brook'd

The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome ¹⁶⁰
As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;

What you would work me to, I have some aim.

How I have thought of this and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present, ¹⁶⁵

I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said

I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time

Both meet to hear and answer such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this: ¹⁷⁰

Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome

Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us. ¹⁷⁵

Cas. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter CÆSAR and his train.

Bru. The games are done and Cæsar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sleeve;

And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you ¹⁸⁰
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,

And all the rest look like a chidden train.
Calpurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero 185
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.
Cæs. Antonius! 190

Ant. Cæsar?

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat,

Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights.
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look,
He thinks too much; such men are dan- 195
gerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar; he's not dangerous;

He is a noble Roman and well given.

Cas. Would he were fatter! but I fear him
not.

Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid 200
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks Quite through the deeds of men. He loves no plays

As thou dost, Antony; he hears no music;
Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort 205
As if he mock'd himself and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at anything.

Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,
And therefore are they very dangerous. 210

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd
Than what I fear; for always I am Cæsar.
Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Sennet. Enter Cæsar and all his train (but Casca).]

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me? 215

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd
to-day

That Cæsar looks so sad.

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you
not?

Bru. I should not then ask Casca what had chanc'd. 219

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him; and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fel a-shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too. 225

Cas. They shouted thrice; what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted. 231

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle
Casca. 234

Casca. I can as well be hang'd as tell the manner of it. It was mere foolery; I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown —yet 't was not a crown neither, 't was one of these coronets—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he of- 240 fered it to him again; then he put it by again;

but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time; he put it the third time by; and still as he refus'd it, the rabblement hooted and clapp'd their chapp'd hands and threw 245 up their sweaty night-caps and uttered such a deal of stinking breath because Cæsar refus'd the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar, for he swoonded and fell down at it; and for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and receiving the bad air. 252

Cas. But, soft, I pray you; what, did Cæsar swoond?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like; he hath the falling sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you and I
And honest Casca, we have the falling sick- 258
ness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that, but I am sure Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not clap him and hiss him, according as he pleas'd and displeas'd them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true
man.

Bru. What said he when he came unto himself? 264

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refus'd the crown, he pluck'd me ope his doublet and offer'd them his throat to cut. An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues. And so he fell. 270
When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said anything amiss, he desir'd their worships to think it was his infirmity.
Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried,
"Alas, good soul!" and forgave him with all their hearts. But there's no heed to be 276 taken of them; if Cæsar had stabb'd their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay. 280

Cas. Did Cicero say anything?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect? 283

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smil'd at one another and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too.
Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it. 291

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promis'd forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive and your mind hold and your dinner worth the eating. 296

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be!
He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now in execution 301

Of any bold or noble enterprise,

However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,

Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite. 306

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave
you;

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,

I will come home to you; or, if you will,

Come home to me, and I will wait for you. 310

Cas. I will do so; till then, think of the world. [Exit Brutus.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,

Thy honourable metal may be wrought

From that it is dispos'd; therefore it is meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes;

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd? 315

Cæsar doth bear me hard, but he loves Brutus.

If I were Brutus now and he were Cassius,

He should not humour me. I will this night,

In several hands, in at his windows throw, 320

As if they came from several citizens,

Writings all tending to the great opinion

That Rome holds of his name; wherein ob-scurely

Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at;

And after this let Cæsar seat him sure, 325

For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.

[SCENE III. The same. A street.]

Thunder and lightning. Enter [from opposite sides] CASCA [with his sword drawn] and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca; brought you Cæsar
home?

Why are you breathless, and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes like a thing unfirm? O Cicero,

I have seen tempests when the scolding winds

Have riv'd the knotty oaks, and I have seen 330

The ambitious ocean swell and rage and foam

To be exalted with the threat'ning clouds;

But never till to-night, never till now,

Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. 340

Either there is a civil strife in heaven,

Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,

Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you anything more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave—you know him well by sight— 350

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn

Like twenty torches join'd, and yet his hand,

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides—I ha' not since put up my sword—

Against the Capitol I met a lion, 360

Who glaz'd upon me, and went surly by Without annoying me; and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw

Men all in fire walk up and down the streets. 365

And yesterday the bird of night did sit

Even at noon-day upon the market-place,

Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,

"These are their reasons; they are natural";

For, I believe, they are portentous things 370

Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time;

But men may construe things after their fashion

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves. 375

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius

Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good-night then, Casca; this disturbed sky

Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. 40
[Exit Cicero.

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this!

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace
so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults. 45

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,

Submitting me unto the perilous night,

And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,

Have har'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;

And when the cross blue lightning seem'd to
open 50

The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble

When the most mighty gods by tokens send 55

Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life

That should be in a Roman you do want,

Or else you use not. You look pale and gaze

And put on fear and cast yourself in wonder, 60

To see the strange impatience of the heavens;

But if you would consider the true cause

Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,

Why birds and beasts from quality and kind,

Why old men, fools, and children calculate, 65

Why all these things change from their ordinance

Their natures and preformed faculties

To monstrous quality, why, you shall find

That Heaven hath infus'd them with these spirits,

To make them instruments of fear and warning 70

Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man

Most like this dreadful night,

That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars

As doth the lion in the Capitol, 75

A man no mightier than thyself or me

In personal action, yet prodigious grown

And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean; is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is; for Romans now 80

Have thews and limbs like to their ancestors,

But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,

And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits; Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-morrow 85

Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;

And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,

In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius. 90

Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;

Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat;

Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,

Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,

Can be retentive to the strength of spirit; 95

But life, being weary of these worldly bars,

Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

If I know this, know all the world besides,

That part of tyranny that I do bear

I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.

Casca. So can I; 100

So every bondman in his own hand bears

The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant then?

Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf,

But that he sees the Romans are but sheep; 105

He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.

Those that with haste will make a mighty fire

Begin it with weak straws: what trash is Rome,

What rubbish and what offal, when it serves

For the base matter to illuminate 110

So vile a thing as Cæsar! But, O grief,

Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak this

Before a willing bondman; then I know

My answer must be made. But I am arm'd,

And dangers are to me indifferent. 115

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such a man

That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, — my hand.

Be factions for redress of all these griefs,

And I will set this foot of mine as far 119

As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.

Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already

Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans

To undergo with me an enterprise

Of honourable-dangerous consequence;

And I do know, by this they stay for me 125
In Pompey's porch; for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible. 130

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close a while, for here comes one in haste.

Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait; He is a friend. Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate 135
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this!

There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are. O Cassius, if you could 140

But win the noble Brutus to our party —

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper,

And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this

In at his window; set this up with wax 145

Upon old Brutus' statue. All this done,

Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.

Is Decius Brutus and Trebonius there?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber; and he's gone

To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie 150

And so bestow these papers as you bade me.

Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre. [Exit Cinna.

Come, Casca, you and I will yet ere day
See Brutus at his house. Three parts of him

Is ours already, and the man entire 155

Upon the next encounter yields him ours.

Casca. O, he sits high in all the people's hearts;

And that which would appear offence in us,

His countenance, like richest alchemy,

Will change to virtue and to worthiness. 160

Cas. Him and his worth and our great need of him

You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and ere day

We will awake him and be sure of him. [Exeunt.

ACT II

[SCENE I. Rome.]

Enter BRUTUS in his orchard.

Brutus. What, Lucius, ho!

I cannot by the progress of the stars
Give guess how near to day. Lucius, I say!

I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly.
When, Lucius, when! Awake, I say! What,

Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius.
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord. [Exit.]
Bru. It must be by his death; and for my part, 10

I know no personal cause to spurn at him
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there 's the question.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder,
And that craves wary walking. Crown him? —
that; — 15

And then, I grant, we put a sting in him
That at his will he may do danger with.
The abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins
Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Cæsar,

I have not known when his affections sway'd 20
More than his reason. But 't is a common proof
That lowliness is young Ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back, 25
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may; Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel

Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus: that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities; 31
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,

And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found 36
This paper, thus seal'd up; and I am sure
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

[Gives him the letter.]
Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides of March? 40

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me
word.

Luc. I will, sir. [Exit.]

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air
Give so much light that I may read by them. 45
[Opens the letter and reads.]

"Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake, and see thy-
self!

Shall Rome, etc. Speak, strike, redress!"

"Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake!"

Such instigations have been often dropp'd

Where I have took them up. 50

"Shall Rome, etc." Thus must I piece it out:

Shall Rome stand under one man's awe?

What, Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome

The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.

"Speak, strike, redress!" Am I entreated 55

To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee
promise,

If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fifteen days.

[Knocking within.]
Bru. 'T is good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. [Exit Lucius.] 64

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma or a hideous dream. 68
The Genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of a man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 't is your brother Cassius at the door, 70

Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are moe with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears

And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them 75
By any mark of favour.

Bru. Let 'em enter.

[Exit Lucius.]

They are the faction. O Conspiracy, Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by
night,

When evils are most free? O, then by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough 80
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, Conspiracy!

Hide it in smiles and affability;
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough 85
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter the conspirators, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIVS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest.
Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all
night.

Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man
here 90

But honours you; and every one doth wish
You had but that opinion of yourself
Which every noble Roman bears of you.

This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this,
Metellus Cimber. 94

Bru. They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? 100

[They whisper.]

Dec. Here lies the east; doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines

That fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd. 105

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises, Which is a great way growing on the south, Weighing the youthful season of the year.

Some two months hence up higher toward the north

He first presents his fire; and the high east 110 Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath! If not the face of men,

The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse, — If these be motives weak, break off betimes, 115

And every man hence to his idle bed;

So let high-sighted tyranny range on,

Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,

As I am sure they do, bear fire enough 120

To kindle cowards and to steel with valour The melting spirits of women, then, countrymen,

What need we any spur but our own cause,

To prick us to redress? what other bond

Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word, 125

And will not palter? and what other oath

Than honesty to honesty engag'd,

That this shall be, or we will fall for it?

Swear priests and cowards and men cautelous,

Old feeble carrions and such suffering souls 130

That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear

Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain

The even virtue of our enterprise,

Nor the insuppressible mettle of our spirits,

To think that or our cause or our performance

Did need an oath; when every drop of blood 135

That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,

Is guilty of a several bastardy,

If he do break the smallest particle

Of any promise that hath pass'd from him. 140

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound

him?

I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O, let us have him, for his silver hairs

Will purchase us a good opinion 145

And buy men's voices to commend our deeds;

It shall be said, his judgement rul'd our hands;

Our youths and wildness shall no whit appear,

But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O, name him not; let us not break with him. 150

For he will never follow anything

That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out.

Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cæsar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd. I think it is not meet, 155

Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar, Should outlive Cæsar. We shall find of him A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means, As he improve them, may well stretch so far As to annoy us all; which to prevent, 160 Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,

To cut the head off and then hack the limbs,

Like wrath in death and envy afterwards;

For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar. 165

Let's be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.

We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar,

And in the spirit of men there is no blood;

O, that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,

And not dismember Cæsar! But, alas, 170

Cæsar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,

Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;

Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,

Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds;

And let our hearts, as subtle masters do, 175

Stir up their servants to an act of rage,

And after seem to chide 'em. This shall make

Our purpose necessary and not envious;

Which so appearing to the common eyes,

We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. 180

And for Mark Antony, think not of him;

For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm

When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas.

Yet I fear him;

For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar —

Bru. Alas, good Cassius, do not think of him. 185

If he love Cæsar, all that he can do

Is to himself, take thought and die for Cæsar;

And that were much he should, for he is given

To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him; let him not

die; 190

For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

[Clock strikes.]

Bru. Peace! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'T is time to part.

Cas.

But it is doubtful yet

Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day, or no;

For he is superstitious grown of late, 195

Quite from the main opinion he held once

Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.

It may be these apparent prodigies,

The unaccustom'd terror of this night,

And the persuasion of his augurers, 200

May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that. If he be so resolv'd,

I can o'ersway him; for he loves to hear

That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,

And bears with glasses, elephants with holes, 205

Lions with toils, and men with flatterers;

But when I tell him he hates flatterers

He says he does, being then most flattered.

Let me work;

For I can give his humour the true bent, 210

And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch

him.

Bru. By the eighth hour; is that the uttermost?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then. 214

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard, Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey. I wonder none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him. He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;

Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him. 220

Cas. The morning comes upon 's. We'll leave you, Brutus, And, friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember

What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily.

Let not our looks put on our purposes, 225
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits and formal constancy.
And so good morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus.]

Boy! Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the honey-heavy dew of slumber. 230
Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord!
Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?

It is not for your health thus to commit 235
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You've ungently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed; and yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing, with your arms across; 240
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,

And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot.
Yet I insisted; yet you answer'd not, 245

But with an angry walture of your hand
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience
Which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal
Hoping it was but an effect of humour, 250

Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep,
And could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition, 254
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.

Por. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health,

He would embrace the means to come by it.

Bru. Why, so I do. Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical 261
To walk unbraced and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What, is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,

To dare the vile contagion of the night, 265
And tempt the rheumy and unpurg'd air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of; and upon my knees 270
I charm you, by my once commended beauty,
By all your vows of love and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy, and what men to-night 275
Have had resort to you; for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted I should know no secrets 281
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort or limitation,
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the 285 suburbs

Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Bru. You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. 290

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman; but withal
A woman that Lord Brutus took to wife.

I grant I am a woman; but withal
A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter. 295

Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose 'em.

I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound 300
Here, in the thigh; can I bear that with patience,

And not my husband's secrets?

Bru. O ye gods!
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

[Knocking within.]

Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in a while,
And by and by thy bosom shall partake 305
The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the character of my sad brows,
Leave me with haste. [Exit Portia.]

Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter LUCIUS with LIGARIUS.

Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you. 310

Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble
tongue.

Bru. O, what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief! Would you were not sick! 315

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness! Soul of Rome! 321
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible; 325
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Bru. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Bru. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,

I shall unfold to thee, as we are going 330
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you,
To do I know not what; but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on. [Thunder.

Bru. Follow me, then. [Exit.

[SCENE II. Cæsar's house.]

Thunder and lightning. Enter CÆSAR, in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night.
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,
"Help! ho! they murder Cæsar!" Who's within?

Enter a SERVANT.

Serv. My lord?

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice &
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter CALPURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth. The things that threaten'd me 10

Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see

The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies,
Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and
seen, 15

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;

And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their
dead;

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of
war, 20

Which drizzl'd blood upon the Capitol;

The noise of battle hurl'd in the air,

Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan,

And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use, 25

And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided
Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions
Are to the world in general as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die there are no comets
seen; 30

The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths;

The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,

It seems to me most strange that men should
fear, 35

Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter SERVANT.

What say the augurers?

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth
to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast. 40

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice;

Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.

No, Cæsar shall not; Danger knows full well
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he. 45

We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;

And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.

Do not go forth to-day; call it my fear 50
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.

We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house,
And he shall say you are not well to-day.

Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not well; 55
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Cæsar, all hail! good morrow, worthy
Cæsar;

I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy
time 60

To hear my greetings to the senators
And tell them that I will not come to-day.

Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, falser;
I will not come to-day. Tell them so, Decius.

Cal. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie? 65

Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell greybeards the truth?

Decius, go tell them Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some
cause,

Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so. 70

Cæs. The cause is in my will; I will not
come;

That is enough to satisfy the senate.
But for your private satisfaction,

Because I love you, I will let you know:
Calpurnia here, my wife, stays me at home. 75

She dreamt to-night she saw my statuë,
Which, like a fountain with an hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling and did bathe their hands in it;
And these does she apply for warnings and por-
tents 80

And evils imminent, and on her knee
Hath begg'd that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision fair and fortunate.
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes, 85
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood, and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calpurnia's dream is signified. 90

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded
it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say;

And know it now. The senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar.

If you shall send them word you will not
come, 95

Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock

Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
"Break up the senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams."

If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
"Lo, Cæsar is afraid?" 101
